[9806] — S. 395 — Dacoity — TI parade — Identification of accused by one witness only — Other witness who was also present at the crime scene not participating — Investigation, held, not vitiated — Accused punished under S. 395 IPC, for commission of dacoity at the house of PWs 1 and 3 (wife and husband) who were locked in bathroom — Only PW 3 identifying appellant — PW 1 not participating in TI parade — PW 3 specifically denying that the accused had been shown to him before TI parade — Appellant's conviction maintained — Sentence of 10 years' RI and fine also did not warrant any interference — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Paras 10 and 12). Mohd. Kalam v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 11 SCC 352: AIR 2008 SC 1813: 2008 Cri LJ 2602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1247; Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 631: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269, relied on [9807] — S. 395 — Dacoity committed in complainant's house in early hours of evening — Although there is some consistency in the testimony of the prosecution witnesses, held on facts and in the circumstances, the complainant falsely implicated his neighbour, the appellant, in the crime due to enmity and hence the conviction cannot be sustained. Lakshman Prasad v. State of Bihar, 1981 Supp SCC 22: 1981 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 1981 SC 1388: 1981 Cri LJ 1010.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1981]

[9808] — S. 395 — Dacoity in temple — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction confirmed — PW 14 (Special Executive Magistrate), who supervised test identification parade (TI parade), proved identification memos in his deposition — He deposed that all possible precautions were taken in conduct of TI parade — There is no challenge to his testimony — Regarding substantive evidence, appellants identified by inmates of temple in court — Being inmates, their presence in temple at the time of incident was natural — There was sufficient light for enabling them to identify dacoits — Prosecution also examined large number of witnesses to adduce link evidence to the effect that right from arrest of accused persons till being lodged in jail, faces of suspects were kept veiled and nowhere did opportunity to see them arise — Again, grounds on which A-3 and A-6 were given benefit of doubt, did not, in any manner, affect credibility of evidence of PWs 2, 3 and 9 in court or TI parade insofar as appellants (A-2, A-4 and A-5) are concerned — Further, prosecution explanation for delay in TI parade, that suspects, including appellants, were arrested on different dates and last of such arrest being of A-4, TI parade was held only thereafter, is acceptable and it cannot be said that TI parade suffered from any undue and unexplained delay — Hence, held, conviction recorded by trial court and confirmed by High Court do not suffer from any factual or legal infirmity — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Paras 15 to 21). Ram Babu v. State of U.P., (2010) 5 SCC 63.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-2010]

[9809] — S. 395 — Disposal of appeal by High Court on merits in absence of accused appellant's counsel and upholding conviction under S. 395 and sentence of 10 years of rigorous imprisonment — Propriety — In view of the large number of convicts (12 in this case) and the severity of the sentence, held, it was advisable for the High Court to appoint an amicus curiae in such a case — Omission to do so, held, ended in miscarriage of justice as the High Court had taken into account a set of legally forbidden material such as the statements made by witnesses to the investigating officer particularly when the investigating officer had not been examined — Such flaws might have been averted if a counsel was appointed to argue for the appellants — Hence, matter remitted to High Court for disposal of the appeal afresh in accordance with law — Moreover, in the peculiar facts of the case, direction given to the High Court that if the counsel for the accused appellants did not appear, it should appoint an advocate at State's cost to argue for the accused — Practice and procedure — Appearance of party or counsel — Proper course for the appellate court in case of absence of appellant's counsel in criminal appeal involving a large number of persons and a severe sentence — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 386, 374, 303, 304 and 162

All the twelve appellants were convicted by the Sessions Court under Section 395 of the Penal Code and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for 10 years each. They filed an appeal before the High Court. On the date of hearing their counsel did not turn up and, therefore, the High Court heard the counsel for the State alone and dismissed the appeal on merits. Allowing the instant appeal,

Held :

When the counsel engaged by the appellants in a criminal appeal does not turn up there is no obligation on the court of appeal to wait for him or even to adjourn the case awaiting his presence. However, if the counsel is absent there is nothing in law which precludes the court of appeal from appointing another counsel at the State's expense to assist the court. It is a matter of prudence that the court may, in an appropriate case, appoint a counsel at the State's expense to argue for the cause of the accused. Of course it is for the court to determine, on a consideration of the conspectus of the case, whether it does or does not require such legal assistance. There can be appeals which could be disposed of unassisted by counsel to put forth the favourable features for the accused. But if the sentence imposed by the judgment impugned in the appeal is of a substantial range it is advisable to seek the assistance of a legal talent. (Paras 4, 5 and 9)

On the fact situation of the instant case it has to be held that there was miscarriage of justice as the High Court proceeded to decide the appeal unaided by the arguments of an advocate or an amicus curiae. The stake involved in the appeal for the large number of convicted persons is obviously very high, particularly in view of the sentence of rigorous imprisonment for 10 years imposed on each of them. Hence any supercilious dealing of their case will be at the risk of a serious miscarriage of justice. (Paras 6 and 8)

The High Court has taken into account a set of legally forbidden materials in reaching the conclusion. It is trite that whatever a witness had stated to the investigating officer cannot be used as evidence. Section 162 CrPC, which incorporated the aforesaid prohibition, permits such statements to be used only for the limited purpose of contradicting the witness in certain circumstances. Moreover, in the instant case the investigating officer has not been examined. If a counsel was appointed to argue for the accused (when the counsel engaged by the accused did not turn up) the High Court might have averted such a legal infirmity. (Paras 11 and 12). Rishi Nandan Pandit v. State of Bihar, (1999) 8 SCC 644: AIR 1999 SC 3850.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-1999]

Bani Singh v. State of U.P., (1996) 4 SCC 720: 1996 SCC (Cri) 848, relied on

Ram Naresh Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1987 SC 1500: 1987 Cri LJ 1856, held overruled

[Ed.: The Supreme Court remitted the case to the High Court for disposal of the appeal afresh. On the peculiar facts of the case the Supreme Court directed the High Court that in case no counsel for the accused turned up, it should appoint an advocate at State cost to argue for the accused appellants. (Para 13).]

[9810] — S. 395 — Evidence — No rule of law that eyewitnesses cannot recognise the dacoits whom they had seen committing the dacoity at night — Only that courts have to be extremely cautious. Delhi Admn. v. Bal Krishan, (1972) 4 SCC 659: AIR 1972 SC 3: 1972 Cri LJ 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and D.G. Palekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-1971]

[9811] — S. 395 — Five named accused charged for dacoity but two of them acquitted — Held, in such a situation the conviction of the other three accused for dacoity cannot stand — Hence their conviction altered to that under S. 392, IPC. Om Prakash v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 SCC (Cri) 696: AIR 1998 SC 1220.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-1998]

[9812] — S. 395 — Highway robbery — Accused clearly identified by victims in T.I. parade as well as in trial court as one of the participants in the robbery and assault — Accepting the victim's testimony on sound and convincing reasons, accused convicted under S. 395 and sentenced to 4 years' RI by trial court — Held, High Court erred in setting aside the trial court's order and acquitting the accused in perfunctory, superficial and casual manner — Conviction and sentence recorded by trial court upheld. State of Haryana v. Uttam, (1987) 3 SCC 485: 1987 SCC (Cri) 606.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1987]

[9813] — S. 395 — Sentence — Three year's RI awarded by trial court — High Court acquitting the accused persons and they remaining on bail for long after undergoing a substantial part of the imprisonment — But Supreme Court restoring order of conviction and sentence passed by trial court — In view of long lapse of the time during which accused got married and now well settled, sentence of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone but a fine of Rs 3000 imposed on each of the accused. State of Rajasthan v. Sukhpal Singh, (1983) 1 SCC 393: 1983 SCC (Cri) 213: AIR 1984 SC 207.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and V.D. Tulzapurkar, J. [Date of decision: 16-12-1982]

[9814] — S. 395 — Sentence — Appellants, youngmen — Fear caused by exploding cracker — No attempt to cause injury to anyone — On the facts and circumstances sentence reduced to one and a half years already undergone by them. Kusho Mahton v. State of Bihar, 1980 Supp SCC 344: 1981 SCC (Cri) 279: AIR 1980 SC 788: 1980 Cri LJ 313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-1980]

[9815] — S. 395 — Sentence — Dacoity — Enhancement by High Court, held, justified

In the dacoity, property of more than six thousand rupees in value had been looted, the victims of the dacoity had been injured, the dacoits had used guns and had, in fact, fired at persons who had chased them. In any event, dacoity is a serious offence and the maximum sentence which could be passed under S. 395 of the Indian Penal Code is a sentence of imprisonment for life.

There is no justification for the Supreme Court to say that the grounds given by the High Court for enhancing the sentence were inadequate and required interference by Supreme Court in an appeal by special leave. Phuchar Jha v. State of Bihar, Cr. A. No. 2 of 1957.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-1957]

[9816] — S. 395 — Sentence — Five years' RI not adequate — High Court justified in enhancing the sentence of 5 years' RI to 10 years' RI. Sarjug Rai v. State of Bihar, AIR 1958 SC 127: 1958 SCR 768: 1958 Cri LJ 268, 269.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Sinha and J.L. Kapur, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1957]

[9817] — S. 395 — Sentence — Offence of a technical nature — Officers of Sales Tax Department making a search — Accused snatching papers seized and thereby committing dacoity — Sentence reduced from 2 years' RI to imprisonment of 1 month already undergone. Sheonath Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1968 SC 1517: (1969) 1 SCR 150: (1968) 22 STC 488: 1969 Cri LJ 37, 40.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and R.S. Bachawat, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1968]

[9818] — S. 395 — Sentence under, reduced by taking a lenient view — Relatively insignificant loot and all appellant-accused presently grown old — Twenty-eight years already elapsing since offence took place and appellants suffering for all those years — Although all appellants might have been present during dacoity, but had caused no injury to any witnesses — Considering overall circumstances, held, appellants deserve lenient treatment — Hence, sentence awarded by High Court reduced to three years — Appellants' bail bonds cancelled and they directed to surrender and serve remaining sentence (Paras 4 and 5). Ram Sunder Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2009) 16 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2009]

[9819] — S. 395 — Sentence warranted — Dacoity in temple — Appellant-accused convicted under S. 395 and sentenced to five years' RI — Appellants' plea that as incident took place 30 years back and they had already undergone half the sentence, their sentence be reduced to that already undergone — Tenability — Held, dacoity is a daredevil act — Most of the time, a serious crime like dacoity is committed by unknown persons and it is very difficult to trace them and still more difficult to secure their conviction — As a matter of fact, looking to the nature of crime and the manner in which appellants looted temple properties, graver punishment was warranted — In any case, sentence of five years' RI awarded by trial court and confirmed by High Court, calls for no interference (Para 22). Ram Babu v. State of U.P., (2010) 5 SCC 63.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-2010]

[9820] — S. 395 — SLP — Interference with findings of HC — Practice — Accused in dacoity case acquitted by HC under S. 395 IPC — Complainant (appellant in the present case) applying to HC for return of property, which was the subject matter of the dacoity, as belonging to him — HC declining the request on the ground that ownership was not established — In appeal to SC, held the court was not inclined to interfere with the finding of HC — However, in case the appellant chose to claim the property by way of a regular suit, the findings of HC would not come in his way in establishing his ownership — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 452 and 454. Devi Lal v. Chandan Singh, 1994 SCC (Cri) 157.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and P.B. Sawant, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1992]

[9821] — S. 395 — Test identification parade — Paper make-up of accused — Moles, cuts and scars on face and body of appellant covered with pieces of paper — Ten undertrials with similar paper coverings mixed with appellant and all the eleven made to close their eyes for the purpose of identification parade — Possibility of appellant being shown to witnesses while taking him away from police station to jail not eliminated by prosecution — Held, manner in which identification parade conducted not satisfactory — Paper make-up on the faces of the participants, to such an extent, has rendered the identification parade wholly unreliable — It would not be safe to convict the appellant on the basis of the identification evidence — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9. Chaman v. State of U.P., 1993 Supp (1) SCC 403: 1993 SCC (Cri) 212: AIR 1992 SC 601.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-1991]

[9822] — S. 395 — TI parade — Sustainability of conviction on basis of — Accused (seven in number) alleged to have broken glasses of the office of a petrol pump, beaten up the complainant's party with lathis and snatched Rs 10-12 thousand from the cash-box — A-1 & A-6 (appellants) identified in TI parade — Trial court finding evidence of PWs cogent and credible and convicting all the accused — High Court, in appeal, convicting the accused-appellants under S. 395, but acquitting the co-accused — Discussing the evidentiary value of TI parade based on case law, held, in the instant case appellants were identified by PWs 1 and 11 and no infirmity was noticed in their evidence — Moreover, all requisite formalities with regard to test identification parade were adopted and followed — High Court's judgment sustainable (Paras 7, 2 and 3). Heera v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 175: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 461: AIR 2007 SC 2425: (2007) 56 AIC 119 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-6-2007]

Matru v. State of U.P., (1971) 2 SCC 75: 1971 SCC (Cri) 391; Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 631: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269, relied on [9823] — S. 395 — Three accused convicted and sentenced to ten years' RI whereas other five accused, whose acquittal by trial court reversed, sentenced to eight years' RI by High Court without assigning any reasons — Proper course would be to award a uniform sentence of seven years to all accused convicted by the High Court. Lachhman Ram v. State of Orissa, (1985) 2 SCC 533: 1985 SCC (Cri) 263: AIR 1985 SC 486: 1985 Cri LJ 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1985]

[9824] — Ss. 395 and 120-B — Threatening and illegal demand of money — Charges framed under S. 120-B r/w S. 307 r/w Ss. 34, 307 r/w Ss. 114, 307 r/w Ss. 149, 387 r/w Ss. 34, 143, 144, 147, 148 and 506(ii), 353 r/w S. 114 IPC and Ss. 3(2)(ii), 3(3), 3(5), 5 and 6, TADA Act and S. 25(1-B)(a), S. 5 r/w S. 27, Arms Act — Appellants along with five other accused persons charged under the aforesaid sections for threatening and illegally demanding Rs 10 lakhs from builders which was finally settled at Rs 5 lakhs — PW 7, who was threatened to meet the said demand informing the police officials about the same and getting the appellants arrested on spot — Trial court appreciating the prosecution evidence convicting the appellants only under Ss. 395 and 120-B and acquitting the others of all the charges framed against them — In absence of any illegality in the findings recorded or the evidence appreciated by the trial court, held, impugned judgment was not liable to be interfered with. Babu Kuttan R. Pillai v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 9 SCC 409.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2000]

[9825] — Ss. 395, 216, 224, 147, 201 and 332 — Conviction under for gaming — Sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Long lapse of time — Trivial injuries caused to policemen by stone pelting for disruption of cock-fight — Held, in circumstances of case severe punishment not called for — Sentence reduced to punishment already undergone but fine imposed under S. 395 increased

The case does not call for a severe punishment. The background in which the incident occurred, the minor injuries caused to some of the policemen and the circumstances in which the crowd pelted stones at the police party betray frustration for not being able to enjoy the cock-fight rather than any real desire to attack the police party. In the special circumstances of the case and having regard to the passage of time the ends of justice will be met if substantive sentence awarded to each appellant under each count is reduced to punishment already undergone and increase the fine imposed under S. 395 IPC to Rs 750. Ajab v. State of Maharashtra, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 601: 1989 SCC (Cri) 602: AIR 1989 SC 827: (1989) 1 Crimes 725: 1989 Cri LJ 954.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1989]

[9826] — Ss. 395, 300 and 307 — Dacoity in dark night — Murder of five persons and injuries to three — Assailants wearing masks and could not be identified by the injured witnesses — Approver arrested in connection with another case complaining against police in his bail application that he was being forced to be an approver though he knew nothing about the crime — Subsequently the approver showing his intention of becoming approver after about 3 years of the incident — Arrest of the approver found unnatural and his self-confessed participation in crime without taking any active part not acceptable — Conviction set aside

On July 3, 1984 between 7.30 p.m. and 10 p.m. a dacoity was committed on a highway in which 5 persons were killed and 3 injured. There was no clue as to the culprits in the case and no arrest was made. None of the injured witnesses could throw light on the identity of their assailants or those who had committed the murders as according to them assault had been committed by some men wearing masks in the darkness of the night. Since the investigation did not yield any results, demonstrations against police inaction were held and both the public and the press continued to blame the police for their inaction. The approver was arrested on July 7, 1984 in connection with some other case and his confessional statement was recorded on July 21, 1984. After waiting for more than two years after his arrest and the statement made by him under S. 164 CrPC, while the approver was in the judicial lock-up, he submitted an application to the District and Sessions Judge, on January 17, 1987 seeking bail and in that application he said that he was being forced to become an eyewitness in the case although he knew nothing about the crime. Bail was, however, declined and he continued to remain in custody. According to the prosecution case, on April 1, 1987, the accused suddenly and of his own decided to become an approver and to make a disclosure of all facts, about which he had said in his application dated January 17, 1987 that he knew nothing. The approver was granted pardon. Remaining eight accused were tried for offences under Ss. 302, 307, 342/149 and Ss. 395 and 396 IPC. The trial Court accepting the testimony of the approver and other prosecution evidence convicted all the eight accused. On appeal the High Court acquitted 3 of them and conviction of remaining 5 accused was maintained. Allowing their appeal by special leave

A careful analysis of the statement of the approver given at the trial in the present case coupled with the circumstances under which he came to be arrested, the averments in his application for grant of bail and other circumstances has created an impression that the approver is a planted witness and his testimony is not at all worthy of reliance and credence. The investigating agency appears to have created false evidence and fabricated false clues insofar as the testimony of the approver is concerned. From all the attendant circumstances it becomes clear that the approver is not a reliable witness; his arrest was intrinsically unnatural and his self-confessed participation in the crime without taking any active part in it not acceptable. The approver has claimed to be a spectator of every fact and of every moment but asserted that he did not participate in the assault at any stage and remained standing at a distance taking care of the clothes of some of the co-accused. His statement is almost of an exculpatory nature. His statement as a whole does not inspire confidence. His story is not worthy of credence. No reliance can be placed on his untrustworthy and unreliable evidence and in that view of the matter no opinion can be expressed about the effect of the alleged non-compliance with the provisions of S. 306(4) read with S. 307 CrPC, as after grant of pardon no statement of the approver was recorded till he appeared at the trial as a prosecution witness. It is only after the grant of pardon that the status of an accused is changed into that of a witness and the law enjoins upon the courts to record the statement of the approver immediately after pardon is granted to him so that he may consider himself bound by that statement and failure to do so at the trial would render him liable for prosecution. That exercise was not performed in this case.

The entire story regarding arrest of the approver appears to be a police concoction and padding with a view to silence the large discontent against the police on account of its inaction to apprehend culprits, who were responsible for committing five murders on the highway, besides causing injuries to three witnesses. The investigating agency failed to apprehend the real criminals and created false evidence and fabricated false clues in the present case to somehow or the other secure the conviction of the appellants and save its image in the face of the severe attack about its incapacity to apprehend the real culprits by the public and the media. The prosecution has not been able to prove the case against any of the appellants beyond a reasonable doubt and therefore, their conviction is not sustainable. Rampal Pithwa Rahidas v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 851: 1994 Cri LJ 2320: (1994) 1 Crimes 1017.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[9827] — Ss. 395, 391 and 390 — Applicability of S. 395 — Held, applicable only when an offence under S. 390 is made out and the number of assailants reaches the statutory minimum — On facts, since the offence did not fall within the scope of S. 390, held, S. 395 was not attracted (Para 4). Krishna Gopal Singh v. State of U.P., 2000 SCC (Cri) 93: AIR 2000 SC 3616.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1999]

[9828] — Ss. 395 and 396 — Train dacoity — Victim's testimony in court identifying accused- appellant corroborated by his correct identification of the accused in T.I. parade held properly — Special leave petitions of co-accused persons already dismissed by Supreme Court and they serving out their sentences of life imprisonment — Conviction under Ss. 395 and 396 and sentence of life imprisonment accepting the victim's evidence, held, rightly affirmed by High Court. Shiv Charan v. State of Haryana, 1986 Supp SCC 508: 1987 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1987 SC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1986]

[9829] — Ss. 395, 396 and 397 — Dacoity — Identification — Duty of prosecution to hold test identification at the earliest — But no time limit can be fixed — Dacoity in which 4 persons killed in gruesome and callous manner — Test identification held after 3 months of occurrence but within 24 hours of their arrest — Held, identification evidence reliable — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

This has always been a ground in dacoity cases to challenge the identification by witnesses at a test identification by claiming that the police officer had shown the suspects to the witnesses before they were put up for test identification. Before accepting the identification by the witnesses at a test identification, the court has to first consider the objection to such identification. Although, this task is not very easy, but the court has to examine on the basis of the materials on record as to whether actually the suspects, who were to be put up for test identification, had already been shown to the witnesses. In the instant case the police officer went to District Jail of another district and took custody of the appellants and lodged in sub-jail of the district to which the case belonged on the next day. Same day the test identification was held in which as many as 11 persons participated and they correctly identified the appellants, although they had been mixed up with 11 others at the time of the test identification. If the police officer wanted to first get the appellants identified by the witnesses, in normal course, it was not expected that he would have held the test identification within 24 hours of their arrest. There was no difficulty in fixing the test identification on any later date and in the meantime, the appellants could have been shown to the witnesses. But the promptness with which the test identification was held, after the appellants were taken into custody in connection with the present case, is a circumstance, which satisfies the conscience of the Court about the genuineness and fairness of the test identification. When the appellants were produced before the Magistrate for being remanded to custody, it was specifically mentioned in the order-sheet that they had been produced Baparda i.e. their faces had been concealed. This precaution was necessary, so that the witnesses may not see the appellants, while being produced for remand before the Magistrate.

In the present case test identification was held after 3 months of the occurrence. It is true that with lapse of time, the memory of the witnesses, who have seen the culprits at the time of the commission of the dacoity gets dimmer and dimmer, and the earliest the test identification is held, it inspires more faith about the fairness of the test identification. But no time-limit can be fixed for holding a test identification, after which the investigating officer will be debarred from putting the suspects for test identification. While accepting the position that such test identifications should be held at the earliest, at the same time it cannot be ignored that it is an not always within the reach of the investigating officer or up to him to hold such test identification. Any test identification can be held only if some persons are arrested, who are suspected to have participated in the dacoity in question. The position will be different where in spite of such suspects being in custody, the test identification is postponed, there being no reasonable cause for the same. Once the investigating officer suspects that persons arrested are accused in connection with a particular dacoity, they should be put up for test identification at the earliest. It is an imperative duty on the part of the investigating officer to put up such suspects at test identification without any delay. That gives sanctity to the test identification.

As the appellants were put on test identification within 24 hours of their arrest in connection with the present case, the identification made by the witnesses cannot be rejected merely on the ground that it was not possible for them to identify after lapse of a period of three months. This was not an ordinary case of dacoity; for commission thereof, four persons were killed, one of them being a lady. The gruesome and callous manner, in which the dacoity was committed by the culprits must have left a deep impression on the minds of the witnesses, who had occasion to see such culprits in the electric light during the course of commission of assault, firing and removal of the articles from the house in question. This deep impression will also include the facial impression of the culprits, which in normal course must not have been erased only within a period of three months. Brij Mohan v. State of Rajasthan, (1994) 1 SCC 413: 1994 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1994 SC 739: 1994 Cri LJ 922: (1994) 1 Crimes 288.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1993]

[9830] — Ss. 395, 396, 397 and 449 — Identification — Reliability of evidence — Strangers allegedly committing dacoity in a house during night time arrested after three months and put for identification 22 days later — None of their features even suggestively mentioned in FIR or case diary — None of the eyewitnesses admitting to have recognised the dacoits inside the house — in such circumstances, trial court's rejection of the evidence regarding the identification parade of the accused, held, reasonable — Hence, participation of the accused in dacoity, held, doubtful — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9. Narayan Singh v. State of M.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 62: 1994 SCC (Cri) 232.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1993]

[9831] — Ss. 395, 396, 397 and 449 — Participation of accused in dacoity — Evidence regarding identification of accused not reliable — Held on facts accused's participation doubtful. Narayan Singh v. State of M.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 62: 1994 SCC (Cri) 232.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1993]

[9832] — Ss. 395 and 397 — Accused brandishing deadly weapons, threatening with dire consequences and taking away fish from the tank of the complainants — Courts below accepting the prosecution case in toto — Conviction of the first three accused-appellants under Ss. 395/397 and their sentence of 7 years' RI and that of the remaining accused-appellants under S. 395 and with sentence of 3 years' RI, held would be justified. Gedda Raminaidu v. State of A.P., (1980) 1 SCC 676: 1980 SCC (Cri) 322: AIR 1980 SC 2127: 1980 Cri LJ 1477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1980]

[9833] — Ss. 395, 397 and 450 — Bank dacoity — Identification — Accused persons identified by witnesses in test identification parade — Allegation that photographs of accused persons already shown to the witnesses — No suggestion made in the cross-examination of eyewitness that identification was based on photographs — Held, identification rightly believed by trial court as well as High Court — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

It may be that some photographs may have been shown to the witness regarding some arrested persons but that by itself does not affect his evidence particularly when it is not put to him specifically that he had seen the photographs of this appellant and his identification was on the basis of those photographs. The trial court as well as the High Court have relied on this witness and there is nothing wrong, more particularly because he has stoutly denied the suggestions regarding the accused persons being shown to him earlier when they were in the custody. (Para 19). Pravin v. State of M.P., (2008) 16 SCC 166: AIR 2008 SC 1846: 2008 Cri LJ 2980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2008]

[9834] — Ss. 395, 397 and 450 — Bank dacoity in broad daylight — Identification — Accused persons got identified by witnesses in test identification parade — Identification parade questioned by appellant-accused — No reference of test identification parade in the substantive evidence of witness — Identification in the court, whether inconsequential — Held, in the absence of proper cross-examination of witnesses who were Bank employees, about identifying the accused in court and fact that incident took place in broad daylight where witnesses spent some time with accused persons, and also that evidence of Magistrate before whom identification took place remained unrebutted, no error committed by courts below in accepting the evidence — Defects in identification of accused, held, not substantial in facts and circumstances of the case — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

The mainstay of the defence was that the investigation was not fair in this case inasmuch as the police had shown the accused persons to the identifying witnesses. It is true that in his substantive evidence PW 1 did not speak about his identifying the appellant-accused in the identification parade but it cannot be forgotten that there is a clear-cut evidence of the Magistrate who conducted the parade confirming such identification. There is practically no cross-examination of this witness. (Para 28)

There is no significant cross-examination of the witness at all as regards the evidence and more particularly his identification of the accused in the court. He had very specifically identified the appellant herein. Very significantly, no question has been put to this witness. It is not suggested as if the accused had covered their faces. There is no challenge also to the story that the dacoits had pointed revolver at him. In the absence of any substantial cross-examination, there was no error on the part of trial court and the High Court in accepting the evidence of this witness particularly about his identification. The witness had full opportunity in broad daylight to be with the accused and the incident itself was so significant that it would undoubtedly make a dent on his memory. He was after all an educated bank officer holding a responsible position of a Branch Manager. Since his evidence about knowing the appellant-accused was not at all challenged, the courts below were right in accepting the evidence. (Para 16)

Even if the test identification parade is ignored, there is nothing suggested to the witness in his cross-examination to challenge his identification in the court. It is true that identification, for the first time in the court, is inconsequential. However, the fact that in this case all these witnesses were the bank employees who had undergone a traumatic experience of a broad daylight dacoity cannot be forgotten. They were with the dacoits for substantial time. The dacoits had also not covered their faces. Identification in the peculiar facts of this case by witnesses would be acceptable in spite of the so-called defects shown by the defence in holding the identification. (Paras 18 and 33). Pravin v. State of M.P., (2008) 16 SCC 166: AIR 2008 SC 1846: 2008 Cri LJ 2980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2008]

[9835] — Ss. 395, 397 and 450 — Delay in holding test identification parade, effect of — Some accused persons absconding — Held, delay is insignificant specially when no question regarding delay asked from investigating officer who could have explained the delay, during his cross-examination — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

The delay in holding the identification parade was not of any significance. As the other accused persons are still at large and, therefore, test identification parade could not have been conducted in respect of only some of the accused. Again the question of delay was never raised by way of cross-examination and no explanation was called for from the investigating officer. Had the question been asked, the witness would have answered the same. (Paras 29 and 30). Pravin v. State of M.P., (2008) 16 SCC 166: AIR 2008 SC 1846: 2008 Cri LJ 2980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2008]

Pramod Mandal v. State of Bihar, (2004) 13 SCC 150: 2005 SCC (Cri) 75; Bharat Singh v. State of U.P., (1973) 3 SCC 896: 1973 SCC (Cri) 574; State of Rajasthan v. Sukhpal Singh, (1983) 1 SCC 393: 1983 SCC (Cri) 213, relied on

[9836] — Ss. 395, 397 and 450 — Recovery of crime articles — No explanation by accused as to the possession of gun, a bag which belonged to a witness as well as huge sum of money — Held, lends support to fair investigation, and recovery of articles rightly believed

It is significant to note that recovery of Rs 40,000 from the possession of the appellant-accused (in a case relating to a daylight bank dacoity) which recovery has been accepted by the trial and the appellate courts. The recovery of the slips as also of the gun which was brandished against the witness is also no less significant. There is no explanation given by the accused as to how a huge sum of Rs 40,000 and Dena Bank slips and the other bank documents could be recovered from him. It cannot again be forgotten that the stolen property was recovered from the possession of the appellant. It would, therefore, be justified in using the presumption raised by Section 114 of the Evidence Act. There is also supporting and corroborating evidence of the recovery of the other materials like the bag of witness which was recovered during the investigation. This discovery of the bag is also extremely significant because there was no reason for this bag, which contained the private documents of witness, to be recovered from the accused. That also lends credence to the fairness of the investigation by the police. (Paras 28, 32 and 33). Pravin v. State of M.P., (2008) 16 SCC 166: AIR 2008 SC 1846: 2008 Cri LJ 2980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2008]

State of Rajasthan v. Sukhpal Singh, (1983) 1 SCC 393: 1983 SCC (Cri) 213, followed

Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859, relied on [9837] — Ss. 395, 397, 467, 468 and 471 — Anticipatory bail when warranted — Different versions given in three different complaints pertaining to same alleged occurrence — Besides, allegations with regard to offences under Ss. 395, 397, 467, 468 and 471 IPC sought to be added at later stage of investigation — Held, no interference with grant of anticipatory bail to respondents called for — CrPC, 1973, S. 438 (Paras 19 to 21). Pravinbhai Kashirambhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 7 SCC 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2010]

State of U.P. v. Amarmani Tripathi, (2005) 8 SCC 21: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1960 (2), relied on

Puran v. Rambilas, (2001) 6 SCC 338: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1124; CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305; Animireddy Venkata Ramana v. Public Prosecutor, (2008) 5 SCC 368: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 600; State v. Anil Sharma, (1997) 7 SCC 187: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1039; Anil Kumar Tulsiyani v. State of U.P., (2006) 9 SCC 425: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 565, considered

[9838] — Ss. 395 and 400 — Charge of committing dacoity along with others at night — Appellant accused identified for the first time in court in Test identification parade taking place

seven years after the occurrence — Held, evidence of identification doubtful — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9. Veerpal v. State of Haryana, 1986 Supp SCC 733: 1987 SCC (Cri) 227.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and K.N. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-1986]

[9839] — Ss. 395, 411 and 412 — Stolen property recovered from the accused — Connection between dacoity and recovery — Criteria and resumption — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114

If there is other evidence to connect an accused with the crime itself, however small, the finding of the stolen property with him is a piece of evidence which connects him further with the crime. There is then no question of presumption. The evidence strengthens the other evidence already against him. It is only when the accused cannot be connected with the crime except by reason of possession of the fruits of crime that the presumption may be drawn.

If the gap of time is too large, the presumption that the accused was concerned with the crime itself gets weakened. The presumption is stronger if the discovery of the fruits of crime is immediately after the crime is committed. Shivappa v. State of Mysore, (1970) 1 SCC 487: 1970 SCC (Cri) 215: AIR 1971 SC 196: 1971 Cri LJ 260.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1970]

[9840] — Ss. 395 and 412 — Factum of recovery of articles made very soon after the dacoity at the instance of the accused persons in the presence of police officers and panch witnesses who deposing to the same — Held on facts, itself sufficient for conviction under S. 412 as well as S. 395 with the aid of S. 114 Evidence Act, 1872. Lachhman Ram v. State of Orissa, (1985) 2 SCC 533: 1985 SCC (Cri) 263: AIR 1985 SC 486: 1985 Cri LJ 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1985]

[9841] — Ss. 395, 427, 506 Pt. II and S. 34 — Consideration of application under Ss. 451 and 457 CrPC — Directions that can be issued at stage of — Application for interim custody of animals filed during pendency of applicant's complaint under various provisions of IPC, accusing certain persons, of illegally and with help of police, taking over possession of applicants' animals during transportation thereof in trucks — Trial court not having named any police officer as errant — Direction issued to State Government at this stage before final disposal of complaint, to take departmental action for illegal or unauthorised actions, if any, on the part of any police officer, held, harsh as well as uncalled for — Hence, set aside — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 451 and 457

In the order passed by the Additional CJM no officer has been named at all. Whether search and seizure of the goats and sheep was illegal or not can be effectively gone into only at the stage of final disposal of the trial and not at interim stage when the court hears an application under Section 451 read with Section 457 CrPC for interim custody of the muddammal. Direction to the State Government to initiate appropriate departmental action against erring police officer for illegal or unauthorised actions at the interim stage is harsh as well as not called for on the facts of the case. Therefore, the said direction also deserves to be set aside. (Para 44). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

[9842] — Ss. 395, 427, 506 Pt. II and S. 34 — Disputes under — If can be decided in writ petition — Writ petitioner accusing appellant herein of taking possession of livestock and trucks illegally before FIR was lodged while the latter averring that he was handed over custody of the animals by police consequent to FIR — Such highly contentious disputes, held, not resolvable in petition under Art. 226 — Constitution of India, Art. 226

In the instant case, the assertion made by Appellant 1 was that he had been handed over custody of goats and sheep by the police after registration of FIR whereas the case of Respondents 1 to 6 was that Appellant 1 had taken possession of the livestock and trucks illegally before the FIR was lodged and had acted in a high-handed manner. Such a highly contentious dispute cannot and could not be resolved in a petition under Article 226 of the Constitution. (Paras 40 and 41)

Thus, there was no justification at all in directing Appellant 1 to pay the sum specified towards compensation and costs to each of Respondents 1 to 6 and to pay to Respondent 8 herein (the pinjrapole) the cost of maintenance and treatment of the animals in question on behalf of Respondents 1 to 6. (Para 42). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

[9843] — Ss. 395, 427, 506 Pt. II and S. 34 — Quashment of FIR at the instance of third party — Impermissibility — FIR against drivers and cleaners, but not against owners, of trucks for filling animals in trucks in a cruel manner and carrying them for slaughter contrary to statutory prohibition — Consequently, animals seized — Owners of trucks filing complaint against First Informant and police but not seeking quashment of FIR — They also seeking custody of seized animals but trial court rejecting that request and therefore they filing writ petition — Quashment of FIR in such writ petition, held, impermissible — Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, S. 11(1)(d) — Bombay Animal Preservation Act, 1954 (72 of 1954), Ss. 5, 6 and 8 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 154, 155, 451 and 457 — Constitution of India, Art. 226

Respondents 1 to 6, who had filed writ petition before the High Court, were not accused. Therefore, they could not have prayed for and, in fact, had not prayed to quash the FIR filed by Appellant 1 and the proceedings pursuant thereto. Prayer for quashing the FIR could have been made only by the accused, who had been named therein. But none of them had chosen to invoke jurisdiction of the High Court either under Section 482 CrPC or under Article 226 of the Constitution to get the FIR quashed. The quashing of FIR at the instance of third parties is unknown to law. Further, it is well settled that neither power under Section 482 CrPC nor jurisdiction under Article 226 can be exercised by the High Court to quash the complaint if prima facie commission of offences is made out. (Paras 20 and 19)

Even before the investigation could be completed and report submitted to the competent court by the investigating agency, the High Court arrived at a premature conclusion that no offences under Section 279 IPC and under Sections 5, 6 and 8 of the Bombay Animal Preservation Act, 1954 were made out against the accused and quashed the criminal proceedings. Such a relief to the accused, who had not approached the High Court for quashing the FIR, could not have been granted in a petition filed by the owners of goats and sheep seeking custody of the livestock notwithstanding wide amplitude of power available under Article 226 of the Constitution. (Para 22). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

Dosukhan Samdakhan Sindhi v. State of Gujarat, 2009 Cri LR 101 (Mah & Guj), reversed

[9844] — Ss. 395, 447 and 506 — Applicability — Demand of illegal gratification of Rs 10,000 by appellant public servants from a shopkeeper (complainant) — On refusal to pay the same, appellants ransacking his shop and taking away the goods — Threatening him with dire consequences — Held, court below was justified in holding that S. 197 CrPC was not applicable in such a case — Appellants not entitled to protection under S. 197 CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 197 (Para 13). S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096: AIR 2004 SC 4174: (2004) 3 KLT 505.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2004]

— S. 395 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 307 and 395 r/w 149

[9845] — S. 395 r/w Ss. 397 and 396 — Trial court convicting the accused under S. 395 r/w Ss. 397 and 396 IPC along with S. 3 r/w S. 25 of the Arms Act — On appeal, High Court acquitted all the accused giving them benefit of doubt in the matter of identification of the accused persons, of recovery of articles at their instance and of identity of articles and ornaments as there was inconsistency in the evidence — Held, High Court was right in concluding that the prosecution failed to prove its case beyond reasonable doubt — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27 (Paras 2 to 5 and 19). State of Rajasthan v. Netrapal, (2007) 4 SCC 45: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 187: 2007 Cri LJ 1783.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2007]

[9846] — Ss. 395/149 — If charge under S. 395 can be established applying S. 149 is mere surplusage. Musa Khan v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 1 SCC 733: 1977 SCC (Cri) 164: AIR 1976 SC 2566: 1976 Cri LJ 1987.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, V.R. Krishna Iyer and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1976]

[9847] — Ss. 395/149 and 384/149 — Where no articles or moveables of the victims were looted but money extorted, the conviction under Ss. 384/149 was the proper one. Vishnu Shiv Ram Bhoir v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 3 SCC 365: 1979 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 1979 SC 1943: 1979 Cri LJ 1305.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1979]

[9848] — Ss. 395/397/376 — Dacoity — Acquittal justified — Eight accused armed with deadly weapons alleged to have caused dacoity in house of S — Two of the accused also alleged to have raped two young inmates of the house — Three accused were declared proclaimed absconders and charges against them proved — Trial court relying on evidence of witnesses, PWs 1, 2, 3, 5 and 8 and finding appellant-Accused 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6 guilty under S. 395 r/w S. 397 — Allegations of rape were not held to be established — High Court dismissing the appeal filed thereagainst merely referring to certain conclusions of the trial court without analysing the evidence and various submissions made by the appellants and basing its findings on surmises, contrary to factual scenario: (i) High Court noting that a telephonic message was given by a stranger regarding dacoity whereas evidence showing that information was given by PW 1 and the accused were not strangers and were practically neighbours of the informant and his family; (ii) it also observing that there was no intention to falsely implicate the accused persons because of enmity and there was no reason as to why dignity of two young girls would be put at stake by alleging rape; but as found by trial court there was no material to substantiate the plea of rape; (iii) High Court noting that the evidence of PWs 1, 2, 3, 5 and 8 stood fully corroborated by the medical evidence but evidence of PW 4 was clearly contrary to the medical evidence; (iv) it recording that accused A was absconding; whereas evidence showed that IO had arrested A on the day FIR was lodged — Moreover, FIR was lodged long after the incident and in fact law was already set in motion after the telephonic message had been received — Aforesaid infirmities in the background of admitted animosity between the parties render prosecution version unacceptable — Appellants acquitted (Paras 3, 4, 5, 7, 11, 12 and 13). Abdul Gafur v. State of Assam, (2007) 12 SCC 627: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 2008 SC 607: 2008 Cri LJ 800.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2007]

— Ss. 395/398 See also Ss. 397 and 395/398

— S. 396 See also Ss. 120-B, 121, 132, 302, 307 and 396

See also Ss. 147, 149, 302, 323, 395 and 396

See also Ss. 148, 302, 323, 324, 395 and 396

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 364, 396 and 120-B

See also Ss. 395 and 396

See also Ss. 395, 396 and 397

See also Ss. 395, 396, 397 and 449

See also Ss. 395 r/w Ss. 397 and 396

See also Ss. 396 r/w Ss. 34 and 201 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 411 and 396

See also Ss. 412 and 396

[9849] — S. 396 — Arrest of accused in appeal from acquittal — Power of High Court under S. 390 CrPC — Held, High Court has the power to rearrest the accused pending disposal of appeal against acquittal — On facts, appellant and five others acquitted by trial court for offences under S. 396 IPC r/w Ss. 3 and 35 of Arms Act, 1959 — In appeal, High Court noting that in test identification parade and trial, PW 18 correctly identified the accused persons — Forensic science laboratory report confirmed foot moulds taken were of the accused and seized hair from hands of deceased tallied with that of accused in DNA test — Finding that trial court had not considered evidence in proper perspective, High Court directed arrest of two accused persons and release of others on bail pending disposal of appeal — Held, no infirmity in the order warranting interference — Arms Act, 1959, Ss. 3 and 35 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 390 and 378 (Paras 13, 16 and 17). Amin Khan v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 3 SCC 776: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 749: 2009 Cri LJ 2266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2009]

[9850] — S. 396 — Belated identification parade — Offence of dacoity — Test identification parade held two months and twenty days after arrest of appellant — No explanation given for the delay — Identifying witnesses making only omnibus statements that they saw the appellant committing dacoity — Not associating their memory with any overt act or weapon in the hands of the appellant — Proceedings of identification parade also not inspiring confidence — Held, the gross delay in holding the identification parade made the prosecution case doubtful — Even on overall view of the evidence, the prosecution had not made out a case against the appellant beyond reasonable doubt — Hence conviction under S. 396 and sentence of life imprisonment imposed on the appellant by the lower courts set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9. Chotey Lal v. State of U.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 144.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and P.B. Sawant, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-1992]

[9851] — S. 396 — Conviction under — Sessions Judge not giving reasons for not awarding death sentence — Effect of not convicting under S. 302 — Interference by High Court justified

The trial Court awarded the sentence of imprisonment for life without giving any reasons at all for adopting that course. It is true that the appellants were not convicted in the present case for the offence of murder simpliciter under S. 302, IPC but that is immaterial. The conviction of the appellants under S. 396, IPC was not based on constructive liability as members of the gang of dacoits. There was clear finding by the Court of Session which has been upheld by the High Court that each of these appellants committed a cold-blooded murder by shooting two inmates of the house simply with the object of facilitating commission of dacoity by them. Those persons were shot and killed even though they had not even tried to put up any resistance. The offence under S. 396, IPC was therefore, no less heinous than an offence under S. 302, IPC. In these circumstances when the Court of Session gave no reason at all for not awarding the sentence of death and for sentencing them to imprisonment for life only, it cannot be held that the High Court was not justified in interfering with that order. Iman Ali v. State of Assam, AIR 1968 SC 1464: (1968) 3 SCR 610: 1969 Cri LJ 23, 25.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, J.M. Shelat and V. Bhargava, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-1968]

[9852] — S. 396 — Conviction under, not possible in view of unreliability of evidence regarding identification of the accused in T.I. parade — High Court not justified in interfering under S. 378, Criminal Procedure Code with the order of acquittal passed by the trial Court. Wakil Singh v. State of Bihar, 1981 Supp SCC 28: 1981 SCC (Cri) 634: AIR 1981 SC 1392: 1981 Cri LJ 1014.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1981]

[9853] — S. 396 — Dacoity — Acquittal by High Court for offences under S. 396 IPC — Doubts regarding conviction — Deceased's party on inimical terms with named accused persons — First oral information by PW 3 (village chowkidar) only against unknown persons — Later addition of accused persons (inimical to deceased party) in written report of PW 2 (member of deceased party) — No witnesses speaking about A (respondent-Accused 4) — Known inimical accused persons did not try to cover their face during dacoity though unknown persons covered their face — Interference with acquittal of A (respondent-Accused 4) for offences under S. 396 IPC, held, is not warranted — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

On 9-5-1973, about 16-17 dacoits successfully decamped with cash, jewellery, ornaments, firearms, etc. after committing dacoity for about 2-3 hours in the house of RD, HP and HL (deceased). During the course of commission of dacoity, HL, M and SM sustained injuries, of whom HL died. While the dacoity was in operation, the matter was reported orally at Police Station by village chowkidar RR (PW 3) on the same day at 1.30 p.m. wherein none was named. Head Moharrir F (PW 1) recorded the report and registered case under Sections 395/397 IPC. Station Officer Y (PW 29) took up investigation and he immediately proceeded to the scene of occurrence. He met injured HL, M and SM on the way and sent them for medical examination. When the injured persons were being taken to hospital, HL succumbed to his injuries. The constable who was escorting the injured then gave information at the police station about the death of HL, whereupon case was converted to one under Section 396 IPC.

When the IO reached the place of occurrence, HP (PW 2) handed over to him a list of stolen articles and also a report giving out details of commission of dacoity in his house wherein he named three persons, namely, A (respondent-Accused 4), J and B. The IO recorded the statements of witnesses on 10-5-1973, arrested named as well as some unknown persons during the course of investigation and recovered some stolen articles from A(respondent-Accused 4) and the other accused. In order to further its version, the prosecution examined 29 witnesses. Placing reliance on the testimony of HP (PW 2), RL (PW 7), SS (PW 11) and SR (PW 12), the trial court directed conviction under Section 396 IPC and acquittal under Section 314 IPC.

The challenge in this appeal is to the judgment of a Division Bench High Court setting aside the conviction of A (respondent-Accused 4) for the offence punishable under Section 396 IPC.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Interference in the appeal against acquittal of A (respondent-Accused 4) for offences under Section 396 IPC is not warranted. Though the judgment of the High Court is not happily worded and some of its reasons are not legally supportable, the ultimate conclusion is a possible view. The enmity aspect was lost sight of by the trial court while convicting the accused persons under Section 396 IPC. The accused persons were admittedly on inimical terms with HP (PW 2) and it was a specific case that accused *B*had absconded and did not face trial. He was on inimical terms with the deceased and HP (PW 2). A (respondent-Accused 4) happened to be brother-in-law of B. The High Court also referred to the fact that while some of the alleged dacoits covered their faces to conceal the identity; the three named accused persons did not try to cover their faces. (Paras 12, 6 and 8)

Originally three persons were named as accused and reference was made to 9 unknown persons. One of them died during trial, and one died during pendency of the appeal before the High Court. In any event, for a long time no witness supposedly spoke about A (respondent-Accused 4). Though the village chowkidar, RR (PW 3) reported the matter to the police station, no one was named as accused and the case was registered against unknown persons. Only when a written report was submitted by HP

(PW 2) to the IO, name of the A (respondent-Accused 4) was indicated along with B and J. It was pointed out that though HP (PW 2) was shouting that three named persons were committing dacoity, in the report submitted by Village Chowkidar RR (PW 3), the names were not given. Ram Lakhan (PW 4) in his evidence admitted that he never mentioned the names of the three persons whose names appeared in the report given by HP (PW 2). (Paras 5 and 6)

With reference to the evidence of SS, the High Court noticed that she did not know A (respondent-Accused 4), yet stated as if she was acquainted with him. Her statement in the cross-examination was highlighted by the High Court. Similar was the position regarding SR (PW 12). The IO stated that when he was going to the place of occurrence, he met the deceased and two other persons (M and SM), who received injuries in the occurrence. He talked with them and he sent them for medical examination. But till that time, the names of A (respondent-Accused 4), B and J were not disclosed. Primarily, on these premises the High Court directed acquittal. (Para 7)

It is pointed out that the witnesses on hearing about the dacoity had rushed to the police station and had no occasion to know the names of the accused persons. The parameters for dealing with an appeal against the judgment of acquittal have been laid down by the Supreme Court in several cases. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused committed any offence or not. (Paras 10 and 11). State of U.P. v. Awdhesh, (2008) 16 SCC 238.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2008]

Krishnan v. State, (2003) 7 SCC 56: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1577, relied on

Glanville Williams: 'The Mathematics of Proof II'; Sweet and Maxwell: Criminal Law Review, 1979, p. 340 (342), cited

[9854] — S. 396 — Dacoity — Proof of participation — Statement of accused under — Reliance on inculpatory part of admission — Statement of accused that he was caught by village people who were chasing the dacoits and was taken to the village on suspicion — Inculpatory part of his admission that he was caught by the village people and that he made a confession before the Mukhia cannot be rejected merely because exculpatory part of his admission that he was arrested on suspicion is found to be false — General denial of his participation in dacoity could not set at naught admission of independent facts — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 24 — CrPC, 1973, S. 313. State of Bihar v. Anirudh Thakur, (1998) 9 SCC 616: AIR 1998 SC 921.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-1998]

[9855] — S. 396 — Dacoity at night causing injuries to inmates of the house, death of one of them and looting of property — Dacoits 25-30 in number — Identification of five accused-appellants among them, who were known to PWs (2 and 11) being of the same village, by flashing torches, held on facts, doubtful — Their participation in the crime, in absence of any corroboration by evidence regarding recovery of the crime weapons or looted articles from them also doubtful — Hence their conviction under S. 396 cannot be sustained

Seeing the formidable force of the dacoits and their number the PWs (2 and 11) would have been so nonplussed that they would not have dared to betray their presence by switching on and off their torches especially when they were unarmed and were no match to the might of the dacoits. These two witnesses do not claim that they could identify the dacoits by means other than their torches. This part of the story of the prosecution obviously does not inspire confidence. Further, PW 11 was injured on the head before he ran for safety. That was enough to shake and frighten him. But before the receipt of such injury he claims to have switched on his torch first and to have seen in the first glimpse the appellants and others. But his flash of the torch was met instantaneously with numerous torch flashes by the dacoits and it was like daylight as said by PW 1. It is difficult in this situation to believe PW 11 that he could in a split second have such a perception so as to identify all the five appellants and some others. It is obvious and natural that behind a lit torch darkness prevails hiding the identity of the torch-bearer and persons situated close. So identity of the dacoits was not possible by PW 11. Moreover it is ununderstandable that when the dacoits had chosen dark hours for committing the dacoity, obviously to take advantage of the darkness, and when they were 25-30 in number, most of them unknown persons, where was the need for the appellants to be in the forefront to risk themselves for identification. This view is apart from the opinion of the High Court that muffling of faces and concealment of identity by dacoits is not universally practised. Thus in the facts and circumstances of the case, the participation of the appellants in the crime is doubtful because of the failure of the prosecution to lead convincing evidence about the identity of the appellants as dacoits. There is even no corroboration in the form of recovery of firearms and other weapons, or of the looted articles from the appellants, so as to lend some assurance to the participation of the appellants in the crime. It may well be that the motive asserted by the prosecution (relating to the dispute about a pond) may have given cause to PW 11 to assume that the appellants were responsible for the dacoity committed in his house and for PW 2 to entertain that belief in a sweep. Therefore, the conviction of the appellants under S. 396 cannot be sustained. Munni Singh v. State of Bihar, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 395: 1993 SCC (Cri) 142.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1992]

[9856] — S. 396 — Dacoity with murder — Trial court taking the view that there was legal and reliable evidence to substantiate the prosecution case that dacoity had taken place in the house of informant and in the course of the dacoity husband of the informant and another person had been killed — Held, this shows commission of dacoity with murder — S. 396 attracted (Para 13). Sanatan Rana v. State of Jharkhand, (2005) 12 SCC 596: 2005 Cri LJ 4162: AIR 2005 SC 3532.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2005]

[9857] — S. 396 — Dacoity with murder — Death sentence — When not justified — Appellant killing the deceased by firing a shot established — But evidence as to why and under which circumstances he fired that shot found inconsistent — Facts and circumstances of the case not justifying the inference that the case is a rarest of rare case — Sentence reduced to imprisonment for life (Para 6). Jagdish Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 9 SCC 99: 1999 SCC (Cri) 464.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1999]

[9858] — S. 396 — Dacoity with murder — Identification of accused — Prosecution case against appellant, one of the accused, solely based on evidence of TI parade held before Magistrate seven weeks after the incident — Credibility of identification of appellant by PWs — Incident took place at night at the house of deceased — Appellant not known to PWs — Dacoits had covered their face with a cloth — Even assuming that eyes and nose of the dacoits could have been seen to some extent despite the mask, identification of an unknown masked dacoit in the dim glow of a lantern and flash of torchlight, held, was not reasonably possible and therefore doubtful — Moreover, there was no recovery of any looted property nor was there any corroborating evidence linking the appellant to the crime — Four co-accused already acquitted by trial court and identification of three other accused disbelieved by High Court and therefore, they also acquitted — Having regard to facts and circumstances of the case, held, evidence regarding identification of appellant not reliable — Hence appellant entitled to acquittal. Umesh Kamat v. State of Bihar, (2005) 9 SCC 200: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1218: AIR 2005 SC 726: 2005 Cri LJ 908.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-2005]

Tahir Mohd. v. State of M.P., 1993 Supp (2) SCC 697: 1993 SCC (Cri) 760, relied on

[9859] — S. 396 — Dacoity with murder at night — Appreciation of evidence — Infirmities in prosecution case — Manner of dacoity and participation of accused doubtful — Long-standing dispute between parties — False implication — Likelihood of — Discrepancy between alleged eyewitness' version regarding weapons used by accused in the crime and medical evidence, according to which the corresponding injuries sustained by the victims not caused by those weapons — Discrepancy between evidence of alleged eyewitnesses and investigating officer regarding manner in which door was opened by the accused for entering into victims' room — Delay in recording statements of two PWs by police, on facts, created a strong doubt to accept their evidence that they were eyewitnesses — Though these PWs claimed to have suffered injuries in the incident, investigating officer did not say that next morning when he visited the place of occurrence, he found any injury on them — Identification of accused persons in light of a lantern was doubtful — Accused persons included an old man aged about 74 years as well as a boy aged 13 years — Accused neighbours of the informant with whom family of the informant having long-standing dispute — Held, possibility of false implication of accused persons on account of long-standing enmity utilising the incident of dacoity cannot be ruled out — High Court rightly acquitted the accused — Identification at night —

Identification by lantern light — Telltale signs of — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 161 and 154 (Paras 12 to 21). Shrishti Narain Jha v. Bindeshwar Jha, (2009) 6 SCC 457: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1091.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[9860] — S. 396 — Dacoity with murder committed by breaking open door at midnight — Husband killed and wife and others receiving injuries — FIR lodged without delay — Testimony of the wife, as corroborated by other eyewitnesses, reliable — Accused-appellants having old enmity with deceased and his associates — Held on facts, conviction of the appellants proper — Mere fact that none of the looted properties could be recovered from any of the appellants, immaterial. Om Prakash v. State of U.P., (1983) 2 SCC 358: 1983 SCC (Cri) 475: AIR 1983 SC 431: 1983 Cri LJ 831: 1983 ALJ 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1983]

[9861] — S. 396 — Identification in court corroborated by identification in TI parade by the same PW — Moreover, dacoity having taken place in the house for about 25 minutes in the house in which the PW sustained several injuries while resisting the dacoits, he had ample opportunity to clearly notice the appearance and physical features of the accused as there was sufficient light — Held on facts, genuineness and truthfulness of testimony of the PW cannot be doubted — Conviction can be based on the testimony of that PW alone

It was submitted on behalf of the State that even in the absence of the test identification parade the conviction of the appellant would be fully justified on the basis of the evidence of PW 4 alone who identified him in court. In this case, however, his identification in court was corroborated by his identification in the test identification parade.

Held :

There is considerable force in the submission. This is not a case where the testimony of PW 4 in court is not corroborated by an earlier identification in test identification proceeding. Since there was no irregularity or unfairness in the holding of the test identification parade, it must be held that the evidence of PW 4 was amply corroborated by the result of the test identification proceeding. Moreover, the occurrence did take place in the house of PW 5. PW 4 was an eyewitness, being a relative of PW 5, residing with him. There was sufficient light to enable the witnesses to identify the dacoits. The presence of PW 4 cannot be disputed because he bore the brunt of the attack by the dacoits having suffered three incised wounds and two other injuries. No reason has been suggested why this witness should have falsely implicated the appellant. The dacoity took place for about 25 minutes and PW 4, being in the forefront of the defence, had ample opportunity to notice the appearance and physical features of the culprits. So far as the appellant is concerned, PW 4 categorically stated that he had attempted to hit him with an iron rod. This fact he also stated before the Magistrate who conducted the test identification proceeding. Therefore, there is no reason to suspect the truthfulness and credibility of this witness. He appears to be a witness on whom the Court can place implicit reliance. The courts below have found his evidence to be reliable after critical scrutiny of his testimony. The traumatic experience of that fateful day in which a young girl lost her life within his view, must have left the faces of the assailants imprinted in his memory which certainly would not have diminished or got erased within a period of only 30 days. There is, therefore, no reason to doubt either the genuineness of the test identification proceeding or the veracity of the witness. (Para 23). Pramod Mandal v. State of Bihar, (2004) 13 SCC 150: 2005 SCC (Cri) 75.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2004]

[9862] — S. 396 — Identification of accused at night — Culprits known to the witnesses — Presence of two electric poles near the place of occurrence established — High Court erred in holding that as the accused were in khaki uniform and wearing hats they could not be identified by the eyewitnesses — FIR lodged while dacoity was being committed in the village — First informant stating in the FIR that he had identified two of the dacoits because of electric lights — Held, in the circumstances of the case, High Court was not justified in holding that the witnesses could not identify the culprits. State of U.P. v. Bhoora, (1998) 1 SCC 128: 1998 SCC (Cri) 265: AIR 1998 SC 254: 1998 All LJ 86: 1998 Cri LJ 478.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-10-1997]

[9863] — S. 396 — In case of dacoity at night court should examine evidence of test identification parade carefully — For admissibility of such evidence, the accused should be unknown to the prosecution witness before the test identification and the test identification should be held with reasonable promptitude after the occurrence — Facts that accused residing in village in the close vicinity of the village of the prosecution witness and that accused and the prosecution witness had been students of the same institution indicated that accused were known to the prosecution witness — Moreover test identification parade held four months after the occurrence of dacoity with murder — Hence evidence of test identification unreliable — Accused entitled to benefit of doubt

The evidence establishing the identity of the culprits assumes particular materiality in a case, as here, of a dacoity occurring in the darkness of the night. The evidence of the test identification would then call for a careful scrutiny. In the present case the fact that the prosecution witness could reasonably be expected to have known some of the accused-appellants as residents of villages in close vicinity of his village and as students of the same institution in which he was a student is a statable probability and that his feigned ignorance of any prior familiarity with identity of the accused becomes irreconcilable with what are incidents of ordinary human intercourse. The omission to disclose their identity in the FIR would raise a reasonable doubt about their complicity in the crime. Moreover, there was a serious lapse on the part of the prosecution in putting up the suspected culprits for a test identification after a lapse of four months after their arrest without any explanation for the delay. The benefit of this wholly unexplained lack of promptitude in holding the test identification enures to the accused-appellants. The evidence of test identification lacks the requisite element of reassurance to support the conviction. A reasonable doubt therefore, arises. Hari Nath v. State of U.P., (1988) 1 SCC 14: 1988 SCC (Cri) 14: AIR 1988 SC 345: 1988 Cri LJ 422.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and M.N. Venkatachaliah, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1987]

[9864] — S. 396 and Ss. 141 to 143 & 149 — When can less than five accused persons be convicted under S. 396 for dacoity, after acquittal of some of the accused out of total number of five or more accused charged initially — Held, less than five accused can be convicted when complicity of five or more persons is proved or not disputed but some of them had been given benefit of doubt only because their identity could not be established — But when they were acquitted because of doubt in regard to their participation in the crime, remaining accused less than five in number cannot be convicted

For recording conviction of an offence of dacoity, there must be five or more persons. In absence of such finding, an accused cannot be convicted for an offence of dacoity. In a given case, however, it may happen that there may be five or more persons and the factum of five or more persons is either not disputed or is clearly established, but the court may not be able to record a finding as to identity of all the persons said to have committed the dacoity and may not be able to convict them and order their acquittal observing that their identity is not established. In such case, conviction of less than five persons—or even one—can stand. But in absence of such finding, less than five persons cannot be convicted for an offence of dacoity. A similar situation arises in dealing with cases of "unlawful assembly" as defined in Section 141 IPC and the liability of every member of such unlawful assembly for an offence committed in prosecution of common object under Section 149 IPC. (Paras 21 and 22)

In this case there were six accused. Out of those six accused, two were acquitted by the trial court without recording a finding that though offence of dacoity was committed by six persons, identity of two accused could not be established. They were simply acquitted by the court. Therefore, as per settled law, four persons could not be convicted for an offence of dacoity, being less than five which is an essential ingredient for commission of dacoity. Moreover, all of them were acquitted for an offence of criminal conspiracy punishable under Section 120-B IPC as also for receiving stolen property in the commission of dacoity punishable under Section 412 IPC. The conviction of the appellant herein for an offence punishable under Section 396 IPC, therefore, cannot stand and must be set aside. (Para 35). Raj Kumar v. State of Uttaranchal, (2008) 11 SCC 709: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 888: (2008) 5 All LJ 637.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-2008]

Ram Lakhan v. State of U.P., (1983) 2 SCC 65: 1983 SCC (Cri) 339; Saktu v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 202: 1973 SCC (Cri) 307; Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1953 SC 364: 1954 SCR 145; Mohan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 174: 1962 Supp (3) SCR 848; Krishna Govind Patil v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1413: (1964) 1 SCR 678; Ram Bilas Singh v. State of Bihar, (1964) 1 SCR 775; Maina Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 2 SCC 827: 1976 SCC (Cri) 332; Ram Dular Rai v. State of Bihar, (2003) 12 SCC 352: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 408, relied on

Ram Shankar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 441; Shyam Behari v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 320; Ramdeo Rai Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1990) 2 SCC 675: 1990 SCC (Cri) 413; Anshad v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 4 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1204, distinguished [9865] — Ss. 396 and 302 — Dacoity with murder — Death sentence — When not justified — Trial court holding the appellant individually responsible for the death of only one of the two deceased persons — High Court wrongly proceeding on the basis that the trial court held the appellant individually responsible for killing two innocent persons — Judgment of the High Court to that extent vitiated — Finding of the trial court that the appellant was leader of the dacoits not supported by evidence on record — Held, in the circumstances of the case, courts below not justified in differentiating the case of the appellant from that of other accused — Death sentence reduced to imprisonment for life — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3) (Para 5). Jagdish Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 9 SCC 99: 1999 SCC (Cri) 464.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1999]

[9866] — Ss. 396 and 302 — Incongruities in prosecution version — Dacoity and murder at midnight — Though the incident occurring on the night of August 1 during which the eyewitnesses claiming to have identified the accused-appellants but no case registered against appellants next day and written complaint which became the basis of FIR reaching the Magistrate only on Aug. 3 and as such the argument that the case against the appellants was registered only on Aug. 3 cannot be ruled out — Names of appellants not mentioned in any of the papers prepared by investigating officer including general diary on Aug. 2 and police also raiding the house of appellants only on Aug. 3 from which it could be reasonably presumed that the investigating officer had not come to know appellants' names till then — Neither any article which was alleged to have been robbed nor any weapon used in the dacoity and murder recovered — Appellants surrendering in court on their own initiative but investigating officer not interrogating them — Even though according to prosecution case appellants killed one of the victims because he had seen them but why appellants had come to commit the dacoity without covering their faces not explained — Man who was said to have set fire to the haystack in the light of which the appellants were identified, not examined — Held on facts, involvement of appellants in the crime doubtful and it was possible that names of appellants were mentioned by PWs out of suspicion — If the inmates of the robbed house could not identify any of the dacoits but later they suspected that the appellants were behind the dacoity, there can certainly be the possibility of implicating the appellants out of suspicion. Rang Bahadur Singh v. State of U.P., (2000) 3 SCC 454: 2000 SCC (Cri) 703: AIR 2000 SC 1209: 2000 Cri LJ 1718: 2000 All LJ 860.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.C. Lahoti, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-3-2000]

[9867] — S. 396 and S. 302 r/w S. 149 — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction set aside — Appellant-accused variously armed alleged to have entered the house of deceased at about 11 p.m. and assaulted inmates of the house — A-2 alleged to have fired at the deceased resulting in his death — Animosity between parties and litigation pertaining to land dispute pending between them — PWs 5, 6, 7 and 9 were the eyewitnesses and closely related to deceased, their relations with appellants being inimical — They stating that they had seen the incident and recognised the appellants either in the torchlight or in the lantern light which was burning at their house — But, neither the torch nor the lantern was seized by the IO during the course of investigation, nor were they produced before the court — Hence, identification of appellants in such circumstances difficult to believe — PW 2, who was related to the deceased and reached the place of occurrence immediately after the incident, stating that PW 9 (informant) and others had specifically told him that they did not identify the persons who had committed the dacoity — PW 7 also stating that the persons who had committed dacoity at their residence had tied gamochha on their faces — Moreover, eyewitnesses categorically stating that guns and country-made pistols were used by appellant-accused in commission of the crime but no pellets, cartridges or bullets seized from place of occurrence and neither the gun or country-made pistol recovered from appellant-accused by IO — Besides, no pellet or cartridge was found in the body of deceased by the doctor — Further, prosecution had alleged that PW 9 had received an head injury and was examined by the doctor but no medical evidence produced in regard thereto — Besides, all the eyewitnesses have categorically stated that the deceased was injured by the use of firearm, whereas the medical evidence specifically indicates that no firearm injuries were found — Moreover, IO stating that neither any bloodstained clothes were produced before him, nor any list of stolen articles given, nor the fact that kerosene had been poured on PW 6 told to him — In the light of the fact that there was a previous enmity between the parties and the eyewitnesses examined are related to the deceased and are interested witnesses; and that in the absence of the lantern or the torch, the prosecution case is full of doubts, and as such the appellant-accused are entitled to benefit of doubt (Paras 4, 14, 19 to 22, 27 and 28). Kapildeo Mandal v. State of Bihar, (2008) 16 SCC 99: AIR 2008 SC 533: 2008 Cri LJ 730.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2007]

Mohinder Singh v. State, AIR 1953 SC 415: 1950 SCR 821; Mani Ram v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (2) SCC 289: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1242; Thaman Kumar v. State of Union Territory of Chandigarh, (2003) 6 SCC 380: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1362, considered and relied on

Ramanand Yadav v. Prabhu Nath Jha, (2003) 12 SCC 606: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 526; Mange v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 349: 1979 SCC (Cri) 985; State of U.P. v. Krishna Gopal, (1988) 4 SCC 302: 1988 SCC (Cri) 928, relied on

[9868] — Ss. 396, 302/34 and 149 — Dacoity with murder — Murder committed by one of the dacoits during the commission of dacoity — Liability of other members of the gang — Held, all the other dacoits are liable under S. 396 although they may have no participation in the murder — Prosecution need not establish that the other dacoits shared the common intention or common object with the person who committed the murder

Under Section 396, if anyone of the dacoits "commits murder in so committing dacoity" everyone of the dacoits is liable to be punished either with death or imprisonment for life or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to 10 years. If a dacoit in the progress of, and in pursuance of, the commission of a dacoity commits a murder, all of his companions, who are participating in the commission of the same dacoity may be convicted under this section, although they may have no participation in the murder beyond the fact of participation in dacoity. It is not necessary that the murder should have been within the contemplation of all or some of them when the dacoity was planned, nor is it necessary that they should have actually taken part in, or abetted, its commission. Indeed they may not have been present at the scene of murder, or may not have known even that murder was going to be, or had in fact been, committed. But nonetheless they all will be liable for enhanced punishment, provided a person is in fact murdered by one of the members of the gang in the commission of the dacoity.

It is not necessary for the prosecution in such a case to establish either any common intention envisaged in Section 34 or common object contemplated in Section 149 of IPC. If one of the dacoits committed murder during the commission of dacoity all the other members of the gang will be liable to be punished under Section 396 and then it would be immaterial that the other dacoits did not share the intention with the person who committed murder. Kalika Tiwari v. State of Bihar, (1997) 4 SCC 445: 1997 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 1997 SC 2186: 1997 Cri LJ 2531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-1997]

[9869] — Ss. 396 and 394 — 12 persons, out of 16, committed to Sessions acquitted — No finding by the High Court that the appellants committed dacoity with others numbering more than 16 — Validity of conviction under S. 396

The learned Additional Sessions Judge had found that accused Chottan, Taru Mahton and Shorai Mahton along with the others numbering more than 16 committed dacoity in the house of Budhan. If this finding is accepted conviction under S. 396 was not wrong. But as there is no such finding by the High Court we are converting the conviction to one under S. 394, IPC. Chottan Mahton v. State of Bihar, (1969) 3 SCC 727.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, R.S. Bachawat and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1969]

[9870] — Ss. 396 and 395 — Dacoity at midnight — Delay in holding TI parade and in recovery/identification of stolen property — Effect — Held, in such cases it takes time for the prosecution to collect evidence — It is also likely that witnesses fear dacoits and shirk to come out and support the prosecution case — Hence, delay in holding test identification parade, or delay in recovery or identification of stolen property not fatal to prosecution (Para 9). Narayan Prasad v. State of M.P., (2005) 13 SCC 247: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 2006 SC 204: 2006 Cri LJ 123.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arun Kumar and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-2005]

[9871] — Ss. 396 and 395 — Dacoity with murder — Appreciation of evidence — Recovery witnesses turning hostile — Accused identified by the complainant (husband of the deceased) at the TI parade — Test identification memos identifying stolen articles recovered from various places, pursuant to disclosure made by accused, proved — Recovery effected at the instance of accused not claimed by them, except one N who claimed that those were purchased by him under receipt — No possibility of planting the case against accused by the police — Testimony of the prosecution witnesses found creditworthy and held, taken together establishes guilt of accused, despite recovery witnesses turning hostile (Para 9). Narayan Prasad v. State of M.P., (2005) 13 SCC 247: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 2006 SC 204: 2006 Cri LJ 123.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arun Kumar and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-2005]

[9872] — Ss. 396, 395, 391, 390 & 302 — Murder during retreat after fruitless dacoity — Dacoity ended on retreat when no property carried away — Dacoits attempting robbery but required to flee without any booty on a hue and cry being raised and chase given by villagers — Murder of one of the chasing villagers — Held, not covered by S. 396 but S. 302 even though charge under S. 396 framed

Accused and his companions numbering more than five persons attempted to commit dacoity. Since a large number of villagers collected they took to their heels without collecting any property. Villagers chased them. During the course of the chase the accused shot and killed one of the villagers. It was contended by the appellant that an offence under S. 396 was not committed since they were not carrying any stolen property and so the murder was not part of the dacoity.

Held :

On a plain reading of S. 391, it would appear that in order that a dacoity can be said to have been committed it is necessary that five or more persons conjointly commit a robbery or attempt to commit a robbery. If a robbery was committed, the dacoits would have the booty with them but if the matter rested only with an attempt to commit a robbery there would be no question of the dacoits having any booty with them. There was in the circumstance of the present case a clear attempt at robbery but it did not comprise the carrying away or attempting to carry away property obtained by theft. No theft was committed nor were the dacoits engaged in carrying away or attempting to carry away the property obtained by the theft so that the transaction of dacoity stopped short at the mere attempt to commit robbery. The transaction of dacoity had ended the moment the dacoits took to their heels and another and a separate transaction took place when the appellant shot at M and, therefore, the appellant could not be convicted of having committed the offence under S. 396, IPC.

But the appellant, on facts, is liable to be convicted for murder. The charge under S. 396, comprised of two ingredients — (1) the commission of the dacoity, and (2) the commission of the murder in so committing the dacoity. The first ingredient was proved without any doubt and was not challenged by the learned counsel for the appellant. The second ingredient also was proved in any event as regards the commission of the murder because the attention of the accused was focussed not only on the commission of the offence while committing the dacoity but also on the individual part which he took in the commission of that murder. So far as he was concerned, he knew from the charge which was framed against him that he was sought to be made responsible not only for the commission of the dacoity but also for the commission of the murder in committing such dacoity. The evidence which was led on behalf of the prosecution specifically implicated him and he was named by the prosecution witnesses as the person who shot at M. His examination under S. 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code also brought out that point specifically against him and he was questioned in that behalf. Both the Courts below recorded their concurrent findings of fact in regard to the part taken by the appellant in the commission of the murder of M. Under these circumstances it could not be urged that the appellant could not be convicted of the offence under S. 302, Indian Penal Code if such a charge could be made out against him. Therefore the appellant can be held guilty under S. 302, IPC and convicted for the same. Shyam Behari v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 320: 1957 Cri LJ 416, 418, 419.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, Syed Jafer Imam, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1956]

AIR 1955 All 420: 1955 Cri LJ 1144 and AIR 1932 Cal 818: 33 Cri LJ 722, approved

For conviction under S. 302, W. Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: 1956 Cri LJ 291, followed

Distinguished in Raj Kumar v. State of Uttaranchal, (2008) 11 SCC 709*

[9873] — Ss. 396, 395 and 397 — Test identification parade — Fairness — Bus robbery and murder of one passenger committed by masked men in a hilly terrain area at night in insufficient light — Accused arrested on the evening of June 3 but kept in police station till June 5 when remand order obtained from court and Test identification parade held on June 18 — Accused with fetters on their legs connected with an iron rod mixed up with unfettered undertrial prisoners — Held, Test identification parade unfair and evidence unreliable — Entire prosecution case being based on this evidence, the accused entitled to benefit of doubt — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9. Tahir Mohd. v. State of M.P., 1993 Supp (2) SCC 697: 1993 SCC (Cri) 760: AIR 1993 SC 931: 1993 Cri LJ 193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, Kuldip Singh and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1992]

[9874] — Ss. 396, 397, 450 and 397/149 — Death sentence — When not justified — Dacoity — Death of 4 persons — Appellants, armed with firearms, remaining outside the house and causing death of two persons outside the house — Occurrence taking place more then a decade ago — Held, death sentence not warranted. Brij Mohan v. State of Rajasthan; (1994) 1 SCC 413: 1994 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1994 SC 739: 1994 Cri LJ 922: (1994) 1 Crimes 288.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1993]

[9875] — Ss. 396, 397, 450 and 397/149 — Identification — Dacoity at night — Prosecution to satisfy that witnesses were in a position to identify the culprits — Claim of identification by witnesses has to be examined with reference to the circumstances of a particular case — Village having electric connections in houses and on road — Non-mention of source of light in FIR and statements made by witnesses during investigation not fatal to prosecution case — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

In cases relating to dacoity, the identification by the witnesses is the main evidence, as such the prosecution has to satisfy, that the witnesses were in a position to identify the culprits, during the commission of the dacoity. This claim is later tested at the test identification, which although not a substantive evidence but is a mode to verify the claim of the witnesses before they identify the accused persons in court. Any such claim that the witnesses identified the culprits during the commission of the crime, has to be examined by the court with reference to the circumstances of a particular case. The court has to be satisfied that there was not only ample opportunity for the witnesses to identify the culprits but they had identified them with the help of some light either in the house or outside.

In the present case, all the witnesses have asserted that electric light was there in the house, as well as on the road, when the dacoity was committed. The claim of the witnesses regarding identification of the culprits in the electric light, cannot be rejected merely on the ground that this fact was not mentioned in the first information report or in the statements made during investigation. It appears that as the village had electricity in the houses and on roads, the informant as well as the witnesses proceeded on the assumption that they were not required to disclose the means of identification by them because that was not at all a relevant fact, necessary to be mentioned, in the first information report or in their statements before the police. In villages where there is no electricity and a claim is made regarding identification of the culprits during commission of dacoity, witnesses are expected to disclose the source of light by which they have identified the culprits during the night. Brij Mohan v. State of Rajasthan, (1994) 1 SCC 413: 1994 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1994 SC 739: 1994 Cri LJ 922: (1994) 1 Crimes 288.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1993]

[9876] — S. 396 or Ss. 411/412 — If conviction for dacoity under S. 396, sustainable — Only evidence is recovery of some stolen clothes from appellant — Presumption under S. 114, Illustration (a) — Applicability of S. 412, IPC — Conviction altered to one under S. 411, IPC

That the presumption arising under S. 114, Illustration (a) of the Evidence Act can only make Sheonath guilty of either theft or as receiver of stolen property. (S. 411, IPC)

The recovery of only two articles from him, absence of his name in the FIR and non-identification of him by the eyewitnesses, point only to the conclusion that he was not a participant in the dacoity.

Sheonath cannot be guilty of S. 412, IPC as the prosecution failed to prove that he knew or had reason to believe that the property had been transferred to him by the commission of dacoity. Sheonath v. State of U.P., (1969) 3 SCC 116: 1970 SCC (Cri) 15: AIR 1970 SC 535: 1970 Cri LJ 601.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and P. Jaganmohan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-1969]

[9877] — Ss. 396 and 412 — Dacoity — Prosecution case mainly based on uncorroborated testimony of four witnesses who claimed to have seen the occurrence — Their testimony found to be unreliable and untrustworthy — Held, conviction cannot be based solely on such testimony of the witnesses. Mahmood v. State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 35: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1157: AIR 2000 SC 1059: 2000 Cri LJ 1442.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2000]

Prem Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 1 SCC 805: 1976 SCC (Cri) 194, relied on [9878] — Ss. 396 and 412 — Dacoity with murder and recovery of looted articles — Occurrence taking place during dark night — Witnesses claiming to have identified the accused from a distance of 150 feet with the help of light emanating from straw-fire at a distance of 80 feet and also the torches carried by the accused — Evidence not acceptable — No satisfactory evidence also produced to connect the accused-respondent so as to incriminate him with offence under S. 412 — Hence reversal of trial courts judgment and acquittal recorded by High Court need not be interfered with. State of U.P. v. Hardeo, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 473: 1993 SCC (Cri) 261: AIR 1992 SC 1854.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1992]

[9879] — Ss. 396 and 436 r/w S. 34 — Testimony of sole witness when could be relied upon to convict the accused — Dacoity and murder — Appellants assaulting the father-in-law and the husband of PW 6 and setting fire to dalan in which they were sleeping — Conviction based on evidence of sole eyewitness, PW 6 — Evidence of PW 6 assailed on the ground that she was suffering from mental illness and therefore she could not have identified the appellants and that too in the dead of night — Facts brought before the court that the investigation was not properly conducted by PW 7 for which departmental proceedings were initiated against him and that the FIR was forwarded to court very late — PW 6 not only saw the appellants, who were her neighbours, in the light of burning flames of dalan but also heard them at the time of occurrence — Evidence showing that PW 6 got relieved of the psychological problems after her treatment — Hence, when the courts below accepted the evidence of PW 6 as competent and truthful, held on facts, there is no need to look for any other evidence to prove the guilt of the convicted accused persons — Arms Act, 1959, S. 27

The appellants along with some others barged into the house of K with an intention of causing dacoity and in the said process caused the death of K and his son S by assaulting them and ultimately setting fire to the dalan in which the deceased were sleeping. The prosecution, during the course of trial, had relied upon the evidence of PW 6, who is the wife of deceased S and the sole eyewitness to the incident. The trial court placing reliance on the evidence of PW 6 convicted the appellants under Sections 396, 436 r/w Section 34 IPC and Section 27 of the Arms Act. Aggrieved by the said conviction and its confirmation by the High Court, the appellants, 3 out of the 5 accused persons convicted by the trial court, had challenged the judgment of the courts below on the ground that the courts below had erred in placing reliance on the evidence of PW 6 as the incident in question had occurred in the dead of night without there being any light to identify the assailants and so the appellants as well as the other convicted accused persons, who were the neighbours of K and were not having cordial relations with K, were falsely implicated in the murder in question. Further, it was contended by the appellants that since PW 6 was suffering from mental illness, her evidence could not have been relied upon by the courts below for convicting them.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

Even assuming that the evidence of all other prosecution witnesses is doubtful in view of the contradictions found in their evidence, if the evidence of PW 6, the sole eyewitness to the incident, is acceptable as competent and truthful, there is no need to look for any other evidence to prove the guilt of the convicted accused persons. (Para 4)

It is possible that having seen the gruesome incident in which PW 6 lost her husband and father-in-law, she could have suffered a shock which might have given rise to certain psychological problems and this could have happened only after the incident in question. But there is evidence to the effect that PW 6 got relieved of the said problem after she got treatment in the hospital. (Para 4)

PW 6 identified the appellants by seeing their faces in the light of burning flames of dalan as well as hearing them when they prevented her from providing water to her father-in-law. (Para 4)

Having perused the evidence of PW 6, it is evident that she was competent to give evidence in the court and her evidence is trustworthy enough to be relied upon. In spite of the lengthy cross-examination, nothing material to discard her evidence has been made out. The inconsistencies pointed out in her examination are trivial in nature and are not so grave or substantial to have any adverse effect on the prosecution case. (Para 4). Sumesh Lal v. State of Bihar, (2002) 3 SCC 27: 2002 SCC (Cri) 511: AIR 2002 SC 968: 2002 Cri LJ 1477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-2002]

[9880] — Ss. 396, 506, 341 and 379 — Conviction under, whether justified — Theft of vehicle and use thereof in committing robbery with murder — Testimony of PWs reliable and acceptable — Accused identified through TI parade — Recovery of crime object made on the basis of information given by accused — Conclusion of trial court convicting the accused, as affirmed by High Court, held on facts, does not suffer from any infirmity hence, no interference therewith called for. Amitsingh Bhikamsingh Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 2 SCC 310: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 582: AIR 2007 SC 676: (2007) 50 AIC 6 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1168.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-2007]

[9881] — S. 396 r/w Ss. 34 and 201 r/w S. 34 — Sentence — Pre-planned dacoity with cold-blooded and cruel murder of four persons committed by accused — Bodies buried with a view to cause evidence of crime to disappear — Sentence of lie imprisonment and of six years' RI (to run concurrently) imposed by trial court and confirmed by High Court in appeal — In the circumstances, plea for reduction of the sentences to the period already undergone rejected by Supreme Court. Lalli v. State of W.B., (1986) 2 SCC 409: 1986 SCC (Cri) 174: AIR 1986 SC 990: 1986 Cri LJ 1083: 1986 ALJ 768.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Madon and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1986]

[9882] — Ss. 396/34 — Sentence — Dacoity with murder — In view of long lapse of time and also because of facts and circumstances of the case, death sentence not called for — Judgment and order of trial court restored but sentence reduced to imprisonment for life. State of U.P. v. Bhoora, (1998) 1 SCC 128: 1998 SCC (Cri) 265: AIR 1998 SC 254: 1998 All LJ 86: 1998 Cri LJ 478.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-10-1997]

[9883] — Ss. 396/149 — Circumstantial evidence — Murder of driver and cleaner of a lorry carrying fertilizer — Boarding of five accused persons in the lorry established from the facts that the accused persons sustained injuries when the lorry met with an accident and they had got themselves admitted in hospital for treatment — Pursuant to disclosure statements made by the accused, incriminating materials such as wrist-watch belonging to the deceased driver, the fertilizer bags and a wooden katta (alleged to have been used in murdering both the deceased) stained with human blood, recovered — However, in their statements under S. 313 CrPC accused denying these established facts in toto and offering a false answer — Held, this denial provided an additional link in the chain of circumstances to complete the chain — The chain of circumstances unerringly led to the only conclusion of guilt of the accused (Paras 9 to 14). Anthony D'Souza v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 1 SCC 259: 2003 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 2003 SC 258.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, Brijesh Kumar and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-10-2002]

[9884] — Ss. 396/149 or Ss. 396/34 — Murder of driver and cleaner of a lorry — Out of five accused trial of one juvenile accused was splited and tried separately from the remaining four accused-appellants — Evidence of owner of the lorry showing that the juvenile accused had disclosed to him that all the five accused had participated in murder of the deceased persons — Held, trial court was right in convicting the four accused appellants under S. 396 r/w S. 149 and High Court erred in convicting them instead under S. 396 r/w S. 34 (Para 17). Anthony D'Souza v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 1 SCC 259: 2003 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 2003 SC 258.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, Brijesh Kumar and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-10-2002]

— S. 397 See also Ss. 149, 300 and 397

See also Ss. 149, 326/34, 324/34, 427/34, 450 and 392, 395 and 397

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 363, 366, 376, 397 and 302

See also Ss. 380, 392, 397 and 414

See also Ss. 392, 394 and 397

See also Ss. 392 and 397

See also Ss. 392 and 397 and 302

See also Ss. 392, 397 and 394

See also Ss. 392, 397 and 452 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 392/34, 397 and 302

See also Ss. 394, 395, 397 and 411

See also Ss. 394 and 397

See also Ss. 395, 396 and 397

See also Ss. 395, 396, 397 and 449

See also Ss. 395 and 397

See also Ss. 395, 397, 400 and 302

See also Ss. 395, 397 and 450

See also Ss. 396, 395 and 397

See also Ss. 396, 397, 450 and 397/149

See also Ss. 449, 458, 459, 392, 397, 302, 307

[9885] — S. 397 — Applicability — Use of deadly weapon — Proof of — Word "uses" occurring in S. 397 — Construction of — If the weapon with which the offender was armed was within the vision of the victim so as to be capable of creating terror in the mind of the victim, held, that is sufficient to satisfy the word "uses" for the purposes of S. 397 — It need not be further shown to have been actually used for cutting, stabbing, shooting, as the case may be (Para 8). Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 3 SCC 116: 2004 SCC (Cri) 687: AIR 2004 SC 1253: 2004 Cri LJ 936: (2004) 3 MPLJ 361: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-2003]

Phool Kumar v. Delhi Admn., (1975) 1 SCC 797: 1975 SCC (Cri) 336, followed

Followed in Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641

[9886] — S. 397 — Applicability of — Weapons used in offence, if, were deadly — Mere allegation of use of "bamboo sticks" and "lathis" without any other description, held, is not enough to make the weapons lethal or deadly — In absence of any grievous hurt having been inflicted or attempted to be inflicted on the inmates, sentence of appellants reduced to rigorous imprisonment for 4 years. Dhanai Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2001) 10 SCC 657: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1040: AIR 2000 SC 3602 (1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-7-2000]

[9887] — S. 397 — Appropriate sentence under — Reduction by High Court of minimum sentence of 7 years' RI awarded by trial court to period already undergone, of four months and twenty-four days, held, impermissible — Sentence restored to 7 years' RI — Order of High Court strongly deprecated — Held, it cannot be understood how High Court reduced period of sentence to less than the minimum prescribed under the statute — This shows either complete non-application of mind or passing of the order for extraneous considerations. State of M.P. v. Phool Chand, (2005) 12 SCC 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-2005]

[Ed.: See also (2005) 8 SCC 1 and 8, in this regard.]

[9888] — S. 397 — "Knife", held, is a deadly weapon for the purposes of (Para 9). Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 3 SCC 116: 2004 SCC (Cri) 687: AIR 2004 SC 1253: 2004 Cri LJ 936: (2004) 3 MPLJ 361: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-2003]

[9889] — S. 397 — Offence under, whether proved — Complaint not alleging robbery — Questions put to the accused not relating to commission of robbery — Suggestion relating to commission of robbery not made even while recording of statement of accused under S. 313 CrPC — Therefore, commission of robbery, on facts, per Ganguly, J., was not proved

Per Ganguly, J.

From the question put to the appellant, it cannot be said that he committed robbery. But the High Court reached a finding that the appellant committed robbery. Conviction on charges of robbery was not proved and on the alleged conviction on robbery no sentence was awarded to the appellant. The appellant has to be convicted on other charges. However, his conviction does not automatically lead to his death sentence. Instead of death sentence a sentence of rigorous imprisonment for life will serve the ends of justice. With the aforesaid modification of the sentence, the appeal needs to be dismissed to the extent indicated above. (Paras 60 to 62, 119 and 120)

In the complaint, which was filed by the father of the deceased girl, there is no allegation of robbery. In the evidence led in this case and on which adverse circumstances have been formulated against the appellant, it appears that the deceased girl went with the appellant on her own. In the circumstances noted against the appellant, there is no allegation of robbery against the appellant. In his statement under Section 313, the accused was not told that he has committed robbery. Only in some of the questions it was put to him that the deceased girl was wearing golden earrings and silver anklets. It was never put to him that he has committed any robbery. Even then the High Court after assessment of the evidence in this case and while confirming the death sentence reached its finding that the appellant has committed robbery. (Paras 60 and 61). Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 5 SCC 740: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat[1] and A.K. Ganguly[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

[9890] — S. 397 — Robbery or dacoity with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt — Applicability — "Offender" — Five accused, including the appellant R and three Sikhs, variously armed alleged to have entered the temple where complainant was working as a priest, tied him with a rope and ran away with the donation box which contained cash of about Rs 5000 — Held, "offender" refers to culprit who actually used deadly weapon — Other accused are not vicariously liable for acts of co-accused under S. 397 — Further held, use of weapon by offender for creating terror in mind of victim is sufficient — It need not be further shown to have been actually used for cutting, stabbing or shooting, as the case may be — In instant case no injury was inflicted — Evidence of complainant on basis of which conviction was recorded not consistent as regards weapon carried by appellant — Besides, S. 397 contemplates something more than merely being armed with deadly weapon — Hence, conviction of appellant under S. 397 unsustainable (Paras 19 to 22). Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 330: AIR 2007 SC 3234: (2007) 58 AIC 72 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 4709.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2007]

Phool Kumar v. Delhi Admn., (1975) 1 SCC 797: 1975 SCC (Cri) 336; Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 3 SCC 116: 2004 SCC (Cri) 687, followed

[9891] — S. 397 — Sentence — Appellant technically guilty of the offence — Minimum sentence of 7 years' RI impossible — Because of the several mitigating circumstances court recommending executive clemency under S. 432, CrPC, 1973. Ram Shankar v. State of M.P., 1980 Supp SCC 470: 1981 SCC (Cri) 378: AIR 1981 SC 644: 1981 Cri LJ 162.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1980]

[9892] — S. 397 and S. 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Aquittal by High Court — Interference, if warranted — Murder and theft of earstuds and gold chain worn by deceased — Prosecution case based on circumstantial evidence viz. accused had shown two eartops to PW 3 at bus-stop, had mentioned about the eartops and chain to PW 2 and the dead body was recovered from his field on the basis of disclosure statement made by him — Circumstances found by High Court either not established or found insufficient to prove the guilt of the accused — Held, Supreme Court would not interfere with findings of the High Court based on proper appreciation of evidence, particularly in an appeal against acquittal. State of Kerala v. V. Baby, (2005) 11 SCC 270: AIR 2005 SC 3010: 2005 Cri LJ 2565.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2005]

[9893] — Ss. 397 and 302 — Robbery — Where credible evidence exists on record to establish guilt of the accused, it is not necessary to find out the motive of the crime (Para 7). State of Karnataka v. David Rozario, (2002) 7 SCC 728: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1852: AIR 2002 SC 3272.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2002]

[9894] — Ss. 397 and 302 — Robbery with murder — Only electronic article stolen leaving articles of higher value untouched — In view of credible evidence of recovery of the stolen article and weapon of murder, conviction by trial court restored

The plea that for an article of very small value, no one would kill an old lady, particularly when the articles of higher value were not touched, is really based on suppositions. Robbery can be made of articles which are easy to be disposed of. Articles of a particular category, for example, electronic goods may be preferred. It is on record that the accused-respondents were arrested in another case of theft of a TV set. Without going into the merits of that case, it can only be said by way of illustration that there may be fascination for selling goods of a particular category which are easy to carry and are easily disposable. In view of the credible evidence on record, it is not necessary to fathom as to what was in the mind of the accused or find out why valuable articles were not lifted. (Para 7)

The High Court was clearly in error in directing the acquittal. The impugned order of the High Court is set aside, and that of the trial court is restored. (Para 7) . State of Karnataka v. David Rozario, (2002) 7 SCC 728: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1852: AIR 2002 SC 3272.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2002]

[9895] — Ss. 397 and 302 — Robbery with murder — Proof of — Fact discovered in consequence of information received from accused — Information must be given by accused while in custody of police — Such information which results in discovery of a fact should be recorded and proved — Discovery of an object is not discovery of fact — Expressions "fact discovered", "so much of such information" — Meaning — Object of the provision — It is based on the doctrine of confirmation by subsequent events — Prosecution case not only based on evidence in terms of S. 27 but also on other evidence — On facts held, accused liable to be convicted under S. 302 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27

The deceased, whose children were residing abroad, was staying alone in her house. On the evening of 20-12-1986, the fateful day, the deceased's maidservant saw the deceased sitting on a chair with a head injury which was bleeding. She was admitted to hospital where she died. Information was gathered by the investigating officer about one tape recorder of foreign make, gifted to the deceased by her daughter, which was missing from the house. Some days after the date of the incident the accused persons were arrested in another case of theft of a TV set. Accused 2 led the investigating officer and others to a shop where PW 21 the owner of the shop was asked by A-2 to bring the tape recorder which he had sold to him after redeeming the same from the pawnbroker PW 8. PW 21 stated that in the evening of 21-12-1986 A-2 had approached him with an offer that he and A-1 intended to sell a tape recorder which was pledged with PW 8. They also showed him the pawn ticket. He gave Rs 240 to one of the accused and the other one was asked to sit in the shop so that the first one could go and bring the tape recorder. After finding that the same was in good condition the extra amount of Rs 15 was given to them. Thereafter, Ext. P-18 was prepared and it was signed by one of the accused on the stamp paper and was attested by the other. He identified the tape recorder which was sold by the accused. PW 8 who runs a pawnbroker shop stated that the accused were frequently visiting his shop and on 20-12-1986 they pledged a tape recorder which was redeemed on 21-12-1986. Sale receipt was produced. PW 16 is an employee of PW 8 who stated that the tape recorder was pledged on 22-12-1986 and was redeemed by A-1. Evidence showed that the tape recorder belonged to the deceased. On the basis of the information given by the accused persons recovery was made of the weapon i.e. an iron rod. The evidence also showed that the deceased was wrapped in a shawl, when she first found her bleeding on account of injuries. The weapon used in the assault for causing injuries on the deceased and the bloodstained shawl were sent for forensic examination. Forensic reports disclosed that the blood group found on the weapon was the same as was found on the shawl. The trial court on the basis of evidence on record found the accused guilty under Section 302 r/w Section 34 and Section 392 r/w Section 34 IPC. They were sentenced to imprisonment for life and 5 years' RI respectively for the aforesaid two offences. The High Court set aside the conviction.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court was clearly in error in directing the acquittal. The impugned order of the High Court is set aside, and that of the trial court is restored. (Para 7)

The first question is whether the evidence relating to recovery is sufficient to fasten guilt on the accused. Section 27 of the Evidence Act is by way of proviso to Sections 25 to 26 and a statement even by way of confession made in police custody which distinctly relates to the fact discovered is admissible in evidence against the accused. The words "so much of such information" as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered, are very important and the whole force of the section concentrates on them. Clearly the extent of the information admissible must depend on the exact nature of the fact discovered to which such information is required to relate. The ban as imposed by the preceding sections was presumably inspired by the fear of the legislature that a person under police influence might be induced to confess by the exercise of undue pressure. If all that is required to lift the ban be the inclusion in the confession of information relating to an object subsequently produced, it seems reasonable to suppose that the persuasive powers of the police will prove equal to the occasion, and that in practice the ban will lose its effect. (Para 5)

The object of the provision i.e. Section 27 was to provide for the admission of evidence which but for the existence of the section could not in consequence of the preceding sections, be admitted in evidence. Under Section 27 as it stands in order to render the evidence leading to discovery of any fact admissible, the information must come from any accused in the custody of the police. The requirement of police custody is productive of extremely anomalous results and may lead to the exclusion of much valuable evidence in cases where a person, who is subsequently taken into custody and becomes an accused, after committing a crime meets a police officer or voluntarily goes to him or to the police station and states the circumstances of the crime which lead to the discovery of the dead body, weapon or any other material fact, in consequence of the information thus received from him. This information which is otherwise admissible becomes inadmissible under Section 27 if the information did not come from a person in the custody of a police officer or did come from a person not in the custody of a police officer. The statement which is admissible under Section 27 is the one which is the information leading to discovery. Thus, what is admissible being the information, the same has to be proved and not the opinion formed on it by the police officer. In other words, the exact information given by the accused while in custody which led to recovery of the articles has to be proved. It is, therefore, necessary for the benefit of both the accused and the prosecution that information given should be recorded and proved and if not so recorded, the exact information must be adduced through evidence. The basic idea embedded in Section 27 of the Evidence Act is the doctrine of confirmation by subsequent events. The doctrine is founded on the principle that if any fact is discovered as a search made on the strength of any information obtained from a prisoner, such a discovery is a guarantee that the information supplied by the prisoner is true. The information might be confessional or non-inculpatory in nature but if it results in discovery of a fact, it becomes a reliable information. (Para 5)

It is now well settled that recovery of an object is not discovery of a fact envisaged in the section. The "fact discovered" envisaged in the section embraces the place from which the object was produced, the knowledge of the accused as to it, but the information given must relate distinctly to that effect. No doubt, the information permitted to be admitted in evidence is confined to that portion of the information which "distinctly relates to the fact thereby discovered". But the information to get admissibility need not be so truncated as to make it insensible or incomprehensible. The extent of information admitted should be consistent with understandability. Mere statement that the accused led the police and the witnesses to the place where he had concealed the articles is not indicative of the information given. (Para 5)

This is not a case where the prosecution case rests only on the evidence in terms of Section 27 of the Evidence Act. That was only one of the pieces of evidence. It is, therefore, not necessary to decide the question as to whether conviction can be recorded only on the basis of such recovery. (Para 7). State of Karnataka v. David Rozario, (2002) 7 SCC 728: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1852: AIR 2002 SC 3272.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2002]

Delhi Admn. v. Bal Krishan, (1972) 4 SCC 659: AIR 1972 SC 3; Mohd. Inayatullah v. State of Maharashtra, (1976) 1 SCC 828: 1976 SCC (Cri) 199; Pulukuri Kottaya v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 67: 48 Cri LJ 533: 74 IA 65; State of Maharashtra v. Damu, (2000) 6 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088, relied on [9896] — Ss. 397 and 342 — Evidence corroborated and charge proved by presence of fingerprints. Phool Kumar v. Delhi Admn., (1975) 1 SCC 797: 1975 SCC (Cri) 336: AIR 1975 SC 905: (1975) 3 SCR 917: 1975 Cri LJ 778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-1975]

[9897] — Ss. 397 and 395 — Identification of torch and currency notes, recovered from accused's possession, not satisfactorily proved as forming part of the corpus delicti — Accused could not be identified in TI parade — In the circumstances, conviction under Ss. 397 and 395 set aside. Bhure Khan v. State of M.P., (1982) 2 SCC 445: 1982 SCC (Cri) 469: AIR 1982 SC 948(2): 1982 Cri LJ 818.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1982]

[9898] — Ss. 397 and 395/398 — Dacoity — Absence of material to show that the appellants participated in the dacoity or caused injuries to the inmates of the house including the witnesses — Explanation given by the accused not liable to be rejected outright — No recovery effected from them — Conviction set aside. Latel v. State of M.P., AIR 1994 SC 763: 1994 Cri LJ 1122.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-1992]

[9899] — Ss. 397 and 398 — Words "uses" in S. 397 and "is armed" in S. 398 — Distinction

The anomaly created by the use of the words "uses" in S. 397 and "is armed" in S. 398 is resolved if the two terms are given identical meaning. There seems to be a reasonable explanation for the use of the two different expressions in the sections. When the offence of robbery is committed by an offender being armed with a deadly weapon which was within the vision of the victim so as to be capable of creating a terror in his mind, the offender must be deemed to have used that deadly weapon in the commission of the robbery. On the other hand, if an offender was armed with a deadly weapon at the time of attempting to commit a robbery, then the weapon was not put to any fruitful use because it would have been of use only when the offender succeeded in committing the robbery.

If the deadly weapon is actually used by the offender in the commission of the robbery such as in causing grievous hurt, death or the like then it is clearly used. But even if the weapon was used for the purpose of producing such an impression upon the mind of a person that he would be compelled to part with his property, that would amount to 'using' the weapon within the meaning of S. 397.

Here the appellant was carrying a deadly weapon open to the view of the victims sufficient to frighten or terrorise them. Any other overt act, such as, brandishing of the knife or causing of grievous hurt with it was not necessary to bring the offender within the ambit of S. 397. Phool Kumar v. Delhi Admn., (1975) 1 SCC 797: 1975 SCC (Cri) 336: AIR 1975 SC 905: (1975) 3 SCR 917: 1975 Cri LJ 778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-1975]

Chandra Nath v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Oudh 103: 33 Cri LJ 926; Nagar Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Lah 35: 34 Cri LJ 45; Inder Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Lah 522: 36 Cri LJ 253 and Govind Dipaji More v. State, AIR 1956 Bom 353: 1956 Cri LJ 700, approved

State v. Chand Singh, AIR 1970 P & H 532: ILR (1970) 2 P & H 108 (FB), overruled

Followed in Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641*

[9900] — Ss. 397 and 412 — Connection with the dacoity, held, not established by mere recovery of empty cartridges from scene of occurrence after six days which cartridges could have been fired from appellant's licensed gun — But articles recovered at the instance of the appellant were connected with the dacoity — Conviction and sentence altered to that under S. 412. Chhote Lal Singh v. State of M.P., (1979) 1 SCC 131: 1978 SCC (Cri) 572: AIR 1978 SC 1390: 1978 Cri LJ 1411.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-1978]

[9901] — S. 397 r/w S. 34 — Conviction under — Legality — Provision under S. 397, held, postulates only the individual act of the accused to be relevant to attract S. 397 — It inevitably negates the use of the principle of constructive or vicarious liability engrafted in S. 34 — Where all the accused were wielding a deadly weapon of their own, held, it fulfilled the ingredients of S. 397 — So, conviction under S. 397 r/w S. 34 altered to S. 397 (Para 9). Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 3 SCC 116: 2004 SCC (Cri) 687: AIR 2004 SC 1253: 2004 Cri LJ 936: (2004) 3 MPLJ 361: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-2003]

Shravan Dashrath Datrange v. State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cri LJ 1196 (Bom), distinguished on facts

[9902] — S. 397 r/w S. 392 — Plea bargaining — Neither the trial court nor the High Court has the jurisdiction to bypass on the basis of a plea-bargain the minimum sentence prescribed by law — Contention rejected that it was not open to trial court to enhance the sentence for conviction under Ss. 392 r/w 397 Penal Code, 1860 to rigorous imprisonment for seven years because the practice of plea-bargaining had been adopted at the trial — High Court was within jurisdiction in confirming the minimum sentence of 7 years awarded by the trial court— CrPC, 1973, Ss. 229, 241 and 368, 399 and 401 (Para 4). Kirpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (1999) 5 SCC 649: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1025.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-1999]

Thippaswamy v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 1 SCC 194: 1983 SCC (Cri) 160, distinguished [9903] — S. 397 r/w Ss. 395 & 396, S. 307 r/w S. 34 and S. 376 — Appreciation of evidence — Guilt established — A-1 to A-6 variously armed, alleged to have brutally murdered five members of a family and raped two (one being a young girl aged 15 years) — Testimonies of PWs 1 & 8, who survived the brutal attempt found cogent and credible — Minor discrepancies of trivial nature found inconsequential — TI parade held following due formalities, wherein all the accused identified — Medical evidence establishing allegations of rape — Hence, held, conviction of accused sustainable. Ankush Maruti Shinde v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 6 SCC 667: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 308.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-2009]

[9904] — S. 397 r/w Ss. 395 & 396, S. 307 r/w S. 34 and S. 376 — Sentence — Death sentence — "Rarest of rare" category — Aggravating circumstances — Five members of family brutally murdered, who were unknown to accused, and against whom they had no animosity — Some of the victims were of tender age, who were defenceless against the attack which was without any provocation — Minor girl aged about 15 years was dragged to open field, gang-raped, and done to death — Held, case falls under "rarest of rare" category and all the six accused deserve death sentence — There was no reason to adopt a different yardstick for A-2, A-3 & A-5 who were convicted for murder and sentenced to life imprisonment, and A-1, A-4 and A-6 convicted for rape and murder and sentenced to death

A-1 to A-6 were alleged to have entered house of T at about 10.30 p.m. on 5-6-2003 and threatened family members demanding money and valuables from them. The accused also snatched ornaments worn by them. Thereafter they went out of hut and consumed liquor. After some time they re-entered the hut, armed variously to rob further. They started assaulting the family members, and tied hands and legs of all, except PWs 1 and 8. Three of the dacoits then dragged S, a young girl aged fifteen years out of the hut to a guava garden and gang-raped her. She was brought back dead in naked condition with injuries on her body. PW 8 was also dragged towards the well and raped by one. She was brought back grievously injured. The dacoits thereafter raised the volume of recorder, put on their shoes and walked on the injured, who were unconscious, thinking that all of them were dead. However, PWs 1 and 8 survived, who were eyewitnesses to occurrence. In the occurrence five persons were murdered and two raped.

The accused were convicted under Section 307 read with Section 34, Section 397 read with Sections 395 & 396 and sentenced to death. The High Court by impugned judgment while upholding conviction and death sentence of A-1, A-2 & A-4, sentence in respect of A-3, A-5 & A-6 was altered to life imprisonment with fine. A-1, A-2 & A-4 were also convicted under Section 376(2)(g), while A-3, A-5 & A-6 were acquitted thereunder. High Court held that those who were guilty of rape and murder deserved death sentence, while those who were convicted for murder only were to be awarded life sentence. The High Court noted that the whole incident was extremely revolting, shocking the collective conscience of the community, and the aggravating circumstances outweighed the mitigating circumstances in case of Accused 1, 2 and 4; but held that in the case of others the sentence was to be altered to life sentence.

The accused filed criminal appeals, while State filed appeals challenging alteration of sentence from death to life imprisonment, and also acquittal of three accused under Section 376(2)(g).

Dismissing appeals filed by accused, and allowing appeals filed by the State,

Held :

TI parade of A-1 to A-5 was held on 25-7-2003. PW 1 had identified all the five accused persons, PW 8 had identified A-1, A-3, A-4 and A-5. Subsequently, A-6 was arrested on 7-10-2004 and the TI parade was held immediately thereafter where PWs 1 and 8 identified him. It is to be noted that first TI parade was held on 25-7-2003 in the jail premises where all the five accused persons were made to stand in a queue in the parade hall. PW 25 who was the Magistrate and conducted the TI parade clearly stated that he found the dummies to be acceptable and respectable persons selected by the police, and they were assessed by him and found to be reliable. There is no reason discernible to discredit their evidence. (Paras 19 and 20)

Further, if potholes were to be ferreted out from the proceedings of the Magistrate holding such parades, possibly no TI parade could escape from one or two lapses. If a scrutiny is made from that angle alone and the result of the parade is treated as vitiated every TI parade would become unusable. TI parades are not primarily meant for the court. They are meant for investigation purposes. The object of conducting TI parade is twofold. First is to enable the witnesses to satisfy themselves that the person whom they suspect is really the one who was seen by them in connection with the commission of the crime. Second is to satisfy the investigating authorities that the suspect is the real person whom the witnesses had seen in connection with the said occurrence. (Para 21)

Further, PWs 1 and 8 were the two eyewitnesses to the occurrence. Few discrepancies of trivial and minor nature in their evidence cannot be a reason to discard their evidence. Evidence of PWs 9 and 15 (medical officers) clearly establish allegations of rape. PWs 1 and 8 were grievously injured and were under medical treatment for one and one-and-a-half months respectively. The medical evidence clearly shows that if they had not received medical treatment, both of them would have died. (Paras 22 and 24 to 26)

The murders were not only cruel, brutal but were diabolic. Five members of a family were brutally murdered, they were not known to the accused and there was no animosity towards them. Four of the victims were of tender age, defenceless and the attack was without any provocation. Some of them were so young that they could not resist any attack by the accused. A minor girl of about fifteen years was dragged to the open field, gang-raped and done to death. Hence, there can be no doubt that the case at hand falls under the rarest of rare category. There was no reason to adopt a different yardstick for A-2, A-3 and A-5. In fact, A-3 was the main person. He assaulted PW 1 and took the money from the deceased. Therefore, A-2, A-3 & A-5 also awarded death sentence. In essence all the six accused persons deserve death sentence. (Paras 32, 33 to 35). Ankush Maruti Shinde v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 6 SCC 667: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 308.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-2009]

Amitsingh Bhikamsingh Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 2 SCC 310: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 582; Malkhan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247; Devender Pal Singh v. State of (NCT of Delhi), (2002) 5 SCC 234: 2002 SCC (Cri) 978; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559; Bantu v. State of U.P., (2008) 11 SCC 113: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 353; Union of India v. Devendra Nath Rai, (2006) 2 SCC 243: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 487, relied on

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580, followed

— S. 397 r/w S. 396 See also Ss. 397 r/w Ss. 395 and 396, S. 307 r/w S. 34 and S. 376

— Ss. 397/120-B See also under Ss. 299 to 304

— Ss. 397/149 See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 396, 397, 450 and 397/149

[9905] — Ss. 397/511 and 307 — Robbery with attempt to cause death — Appellants demanding money from the witnesses and on their refusal firing at them — Witnesses neither injured nor the appellants succeeding in taking any money from them — Evidence of prosecution witnesses corroborated by recovery of a pistol along with empties and missed cartridges — Held, guilt established — Offence falls under S. 397/511 and not under S. 397 simpliciter — Sentence of 10 years' RI reduced to minimum sentence of 5 years' RI prescribed under S. 3, TADA Act — Arms Act, 1959, S. 25 — TADA Act, 1987, S. 3. Sukhwinder Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 727: AIR 1994 SC 764: 1994 Cri LJ 1117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1993]

— S. 398 See also Ss. 120-B, 398 or 302

See also Ss. 302/34, 457(1), 398, 120-B and 449

See also Ss. 397 and 398

[9906] — Ss. 398 and 307 — Appellant along with his companions, entering the house of the complainant, ransacking the house as if committing robbery and causing injuries with a big knife to the inmates of the house — Some of the injuries found to be serious and on vital parts — No property removed from the house and nothing belonging to the complainants recovered from the accused — Held, in the circumstances, conviction under S. 398 not sustainable — Mere scattering of the articles of the house presenting a scene of ransacking not enough — But in view of number and nature of injuries and weapon used sentence of 3 years' RI for offence under S. 307 awarded by the lower court cannot be reduced. Chinnadurai v. State of T.N., 1995 Supp (3) SCC 686: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1147: AIR 1996 SC 546.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1995]

[9907] — S. 398 and S. 307 r/w S. 34 — Sentence of life imprisonment — Imposition of — Leniency in sentence — Prayer for — Appellant naxalites in a large group attacking police station to commit dacoity of arms and ammunition and to kill policemen — Held, such activities have to be dealt with with a strong hand — Plea for leniency not acceptable — Arms Act, 1959, S. 3 r/w S. 25 — TADA Act, 1987, Ss. 3 and 4 (Para 8). Kishore v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 12 SCC 569.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arun Kumar and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-2005]

[9908] — S. 399 — Preparation to commit dacoity — Dialogue between two accused, one reminding the other of the sequence to be followed in the operation i.e. first to loot the belongings and then to abduct the victim — Dialogue overheard by a police officer who was then in guise of a tea vendor — Held, it cannot be said to be an artificial introduction of a dialogue — Hence reliance can be placed on evidence of the police officer and on that basis conviction under S. 399 justified (Paras 9 and 10). Chandrasekhar Sureshchandra Bhatt v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 10 SCC 582: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1504.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2000]

[9909] — Ss. 399 and 402 — Appellant sentenced to five years' imprisonment under Ss. 399 and 402 IPC — Occurrence took place twenty-nine years ago — Appellant remained in custody for a period of more than six months — Appeal allowed in part — Sentence of imprisonment reduced to that undergone — Arms Act, 1959, S. 25(1)(a) — Constitution of India, Art. 21. Nasir v. State of U.P., (2010) 13 SCC 251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2009]

[9910] — Ss. 399 and 402 — Assembling and making preparation to commit dacoity — Held, not proved by mere fact of assembling by eight persons in a school compound near a market place at 1 a.m. and recovery of a gun and cartridges from them — Though possibility of intention to commit some other offence present, the conviction under Ss. 399 and 402 cannot stand. Chaturi Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1979) 3 SCC 430: 1979 SCC (Cri) 502: AIR 1979 SC 1412: 1979 Cri LJ 1090.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-1979]

[9911] — Ss. 399 and 402 — Attempt to commit dacoity — Appreciation of evidence — Glaring inconsistencies found in prosecution case — Discrepancies also found in examination-in-chief and cross-examination of PW — Non-examination of material witnesses by prosecution for untenable reasons and alleged arrest of accused on the spot without any resistance on their part giving rise to adverse inference — Having regard to other contradictions, circumstances of the case and evidence on record showing that order of acquittal of accused was reasonably possible — Held, no interference with the conclusion arrived at by High Court called for (Para 11). State of U.P. v. Punni, (2008) 11 SCC 153: AIR 2008 SC 932: (2008) 62 AIC 122 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1028: (2008) 105 Cut LT 361.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2008]

Kashiram v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 71: 2002 SCC (Cri) 68; Kunju Muhammed v. State of Kerala, (2004) 9 SCC 193: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1425, distinguished [9912] — Ss. 399 and 402 — Dacoity — Conviction also under S. 25(a) of Arms Act — Appeal allowed by High Court — Supreme Court reversing High Court — Sessions Judge's verdict upheld. State of U.P. v. Rajju, (1971) 3 SCC 174: 1971 SCC (Cri) 263: AIR 1971 SC 708: 1971 Cri LJ 642.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, V. Bhargava and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-1971]

[9913] — Ss. 399 and 402 — Disposal of appeal by High Court without hearing appellant's counsel — Held, one appeal against conviction and sentence of imprisonment is the sine qua non for deprivation of the liberty of a citizen — Since counsel of appellant not appearing before court due to their failure to notice the date of hearing, one more chance to argue the appeal afforded to appellant — Matter remitted for disposal afresh — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 386 and 374. Ajay v. State of Haryana, (2001) 10 SCC 182.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-2001]

[9914] — Ss. 399 and 402 — Making preparation and assembling for purpose of committing dacoity — Allegation that the accused persons were planning to rob a petrol pump and for that purpose they assembled in a Dharamshala with arms and ammunition — Evidence of Head Constable that he had gone near the Dharamshala and heard conversation amongst the accused found unreliable — Conviction of appellants for offences under Ss. 399 and 402 set aside — However, as regards possession of arms and ammunition evidence of all the witnesses found consistent — Hence their conviction under S. 5 TADA Act and S. 25 Arms Act maintained — TADA Act, 1987 — S. 5 — Arms Act, 1959 — S. 25. Suleman v. State of Delhi, (1999) 4 SCC 146: 1999 SCC (Cri) 515: AIR 1999 SC 1707.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1999]

[9915] — Ss. 399 and 402 — Trial for more than one offence — Different offences committed in a series of acts constituting one transaction — Held, S. 220 CrPC is an enabling provision and no illegality is committed where court chooses to try the offences separately — Arms Act, 1959, S. 25 — TADA Act, 1987, Ss. 5 and 3 — CrPC, 1973, S. 220. Mohinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 7 SCC 390: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1638: AIR 1999 SC 211.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1998]

[9916] — Ss. 399, 402 and 307/149 & 148 — Arms Act, 1959 — S. 25(1)(a) — Allegation of making preparations to commit dacoity in a village — A-6 and A-7 belonging to the same village — Attack on police party not alleged against them — Recovery of only a stick from possession of A-7 and an unlicensed firearm from A-6 — Held, A-7 entitled to acquittal of all the charges — But conviction of A-6 under S. 25(1)(a) of Arms Act confirmed — However, in view of old age and long lapse of time sentence reduced to the period already undergone. Nasru v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (2) SCC 493: 1994 SCC (Cri) 51.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1993]

[9917] — Ss. 399 and 500 — Bailable offence — Forfeiture/Cancellation of bail granted by Magistrate under S. 482 CrPC on ground of violation of principles of natural justice — Bail cancelled on ground that complainant's right of being heard not complied with by Magistrate while granting bail — Sustainability — Magistrate in an alleged offence under Ss. 399 and 500 IPC for defamatory remarks made by accused against complainant on a TV channel granting bail the very same day by noticing that offences alleged to have been committed were bailable — High Court cancelling bail on the ground that opportunity of hearing was not given to the complainant, held, unsustainable — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482, 436 and 81

The respondent filed a complaint case against the appellant-accused on the ground that the appellant-accused gave a defamatory interview against him on a TV channel. When the appellant-accused approached the Magistrate for grant of bail, the same was granted the very same day without hearing the respondent complainant by noticing that the offences alleged to have been committed were bailable offences under Sections 499 and 500 IPC. The High Court in a Section 482 CrPC petition filed by the respondent complainant cancelled the bail of the appellant-accused on the ground that the principles of natural justice had not been followed in as much as the complainant was not heard on the issue of grant of bail. Aggrieved thereagainst, the appellant-accused invoked the remedy under Article 136 of the Constitution of India.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The bail granted to the appellant for alleged commission of bailable offence could not have been cancelled by the High Court on the ground that the respondent complainant was not heard by the Magistrate while granting bail and that the principles of natural justice were violated. Principles of natural justice are not a "mantra" to be applied in a vacuum in all cases. The question as to what extent, the principles of natural justice are required to be complied with, will depend upon the facts of the case. They are not required to be complied with when it will lead to an empty formality. Therefore, the order of the High Court cancelling the bail granted to the appellant is hereby set aside and the order passed by the Magistrate is restored. (Paras 19 to 21)

The right to claim bail granted by Section 436 CrPC in a bailable offence is an absolute and indefeasible right. In bailable offences there is no question of discretion in granting bail as the words of Section 436 are imperative. As soon as it appears that the accused person is prepared to give bail, the police officer or the court before whom he offers to give bail, is bound to release him on such terms as to bail as may appear to the officer or the court to be reasonable. It would even be open to the officer or the court to discharge such person on his executing a bond as provided in Section 436 instead of taking bail from him. (Paras 10 and 9)

The only choice available to the officer or the court is as between taking a simple recognizance of the accused and demanding security with surety. The persons contemplated by Section 436 cannot be taken into custody unless they are unable or willing (sic unwilling) to offer bail or to execute personal bonds. There is no manner of doubt that bail in a bailable offence can be claimed by the accused as of right and the officer or the court, as the case may be, is bound to release the accused on bail if he is willing to abide by reasonable conditions which may be imposed on him. (Para 10). Rasiklal v. Kishore, (2009) 4 SCC 446: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 338: AIR 2009 SC 1341: (2009) 2 ECrN 1045 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2009]

State Bank of Patiala v. S.K. Sharma, (1996) 3 SCC 364: 1996 SCC (L&S) 717; Karnataka SRTC v. S.G. Kotturappa, (2005) 3 SCC 409: 2005 SCC (L&S) 484, relied on [9918] — Ss. 399/402 — Appellant a young man and student convicted under — On facts, held, to be a fit case where instead of imprisonment the appellant should be released on probation on furnishing surety bonds — U.P. First Offenders Probation Act, 1938 (6 of 1938). Moti Lal v. State of U.P., (1979) 4 SCC 343: 1979 SCC (Cri) 979: AIR 1979 SC 1690: 1979 ALJ 982: 1980 Cri LJ 800.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1979]

— S. 400 See also Ss. 395, 397, 400 and 302

See also Ss. 395 and 400

— S. 401 See also Ss. 410 and 401

— S. 402 See also Ss. 399 and 402

See also Ss. 399, 402 and 307/149 and 148

— S. 403 See also Ss. 120-A, 120-B, 403 and 477-A

See also Ss. 196, 199, 120-B, 403, 406 and 418

See also Ss. 378, 403, 405, 415 and 425

See also Ss. 405, 420, 403 and 415

See also Ss. 410, 411, 403 and 405

See also Ss. 461, 379, 403, 342, 166 and 167

[9919] — S. 403 — Criminal misappropriation of property — Accused collected an amount as entry fee for crossword competition being a service of such competition business — Spent a portion of the amount collected on advertisement, etc., and appropriated the balance to meet the losses of the previous crossword competitions — Held, accused is not guilty under S. 403, IPC

The accused used to carry on prize competitions as the proprietor of the "Lotus Cross Word". Certain persons who paid moneys in connection with the prize competition complained that they had not received their prize money though it had been announced that they had competed for the prize offered. It was found that the accused had collected more than rupees one lakh from the public and after spending about rupees nineteen thousand on advertisement, etc., had saved a little over ninety-six thousand rupees. He spent this amount in making payments to the claimants of the previous competitions and in this way meeting the losses of those competitions. The persons participating in competition filed the complaint.

Held :

There was no specific provision in any statute or other law that the money collected by way of entry fees, should be reserved for payment to the prize winners in that very competition. There being no duty to make appropriation in a particular way, the appellant could not be held guilty of having misappropriated the amount which was the net collection of the competition. There is no evidence that the accused appropriated any amount out of this collection to his own personal use. Whatever amount he had been collecting, he had been applying to running his business. The appellant cannot be criminally liable for being reckless or unwise in carrying on his business. Thus misappropriation has not been made out either on evidence or as a matter of law. Ramaswamy Nadar v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 56: 1958 SCR 739: 1958 Cri LJ 228, 231.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, P. Govinda Menon and J.L. Kapur, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1957]

[9920] — S. 403 — Dishonest misappropriation — Ingredients of

Per majority (Agrawal and Pasayat, JJ.)

To establish the charge of criminal breach of trust, the prosecution is not obliged to prove the precise mode of conversion, misappropriation or misapplication by the accused of the property entrusted to him or over which he has dominion. The principal ingredient of the offence being dishonest misappropriation or conversion which may not ordinarily be a matter of direct proof, entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property entrusted if proved, may, in the light of other circumstances, justifiably lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion. (Para 365)

Per Shah, J. (dissenting)

What is punishable under Section 403 is dishonest misappropriation or conversion to his own use any movable property. Further, as per the Explanation, dishonest misappropriation for the time being or for a short time is also misappropriation within the meaning of the section. Hence, for establishing the offence it is required to be proved that:

1. The property belongs to a person other than the accused,

2. The accused appropriated the said property or converted it to his own use, and,

3. He did so "dishonestly" — that is to say, with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one or wrongful loss to another person. (Para 258). Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869: AIR 2003 SC 2748.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah[1], B.N. Agrawal[2] and Arijit Pasayat[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2003]

Jaikrishnadas Manohardas Desai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 889: 1960 Cri LJ 1250, relied on

[9921] — S. 403 — Dishonest misappropriation of movable property — Ingredients of the offence — Property in question must belong to a person other than the accused so as to constitute offence under S. 403

The basic requirements for attracting the section are: (i) the movable property in question should belong to a person other than the accused; (ii) the accused should wrongly appropriate or convert such property to his own use; and (iii) there should be dishonest intention on the part of the accused. Here again the basic requirement is that the subject-matter of dishonest misappropriation or conversion should be someone else's movable property. When NEPC India owns/possesses the aircraft, it obviously cannot "misappropriate or convert to its own use" such aircraft or parts thereof. Therefore Section 403 is also not attracted. (Para 20). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[9922] — S. 403 — Dishonest misappropriation of property — Partner choosing to use partnership assets for his own purposes — Does not commit misappropriation

It is obvious that an owner of property, in whichever way he uses his property and with whatever intention will not be liable for misappropriation and that would be so even if he is not the exclusive owner thereof. A partner has, undefined ownership along with the other partners over all the assets of the partnership. If he chooses to use any of them for his own purposes he may be accountable civilly to the other partners. But he does not thereby commit any misappropriation. Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433: (1965) 2 SCR 429: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 431, 434.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1964]

[9923] — S. 403 — Essential ingredients of offence under

In order to sustain a conviction under S. 403, Indian Penal Code, the prosecution has to prove (1) that the property said to have been misappropriated, belonged to the complainant or to someone other than the accused, (2) that the accused misappropriated that property and converted it to his own use, and (3) that he did so dishonestly. If any one of these three elements is wanting, the prosecution must be held to have failed in bringing the charge of misappropriation home to the accused. Surendra Bahadur Singh v. State of U.P., Crl. Appeal No. 59 of 1955.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Sinha and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-1957]

Ramaswamy Nadar v. State of Madras, 1958 SCR 739: AIR 1958 SC 56: 1958 Cri LJ 228, followed

[9924] — S. 403 — Misappropriation — What is

A person can be said to have misappropriated some property including money, if he has used it in a way different from what he was bound to do by virtue of a contract or as a result of a legal relationship created through some process of law. Surendra Bahadur Singh v. State of U.P., Crl. Appeal No. 59 of 1955.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Sinha and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-1957]

[9925] — Ss. 403 and 405 — Territorial jurisdiction to investigate offences under — Magistrate's direction under S. 156(3) CrPC to police for conducting investigation in a case involving criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust — Magistrate's territorial jurisdiction if restricted by S. 181(4) CrPC — Held, direction for investigation given by Magistrate under S. 156(3) CrPC is not restricted by territorial limit laid down in S. 181(4) CrPC — Direction for investigation under S. 156(3) CrPC can therefore be given by Magistrate irrespective of territorial limit for enquiry or trial under S. 181(4) CrPC — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 156(3) and 181(4) (Paras 25 and 26). Rasiklal Dalpatram Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 1 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

[9926] — Ss. 403, 405 and 415 r/w S. 34 — Abuse of the process of law — Ingredients of offence not in the complaint — Allegation against appellant that lesser salary was being paid to the complainant with signatures for higher amount — Complaint petition itself stating bona fide reasons for deductions such as repayment at the time of retirement, etc. — Contradictory stand by the complainant in S. 33-C(2) petition under Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 — High Court's conclusion that deductions were made without any rhyme or reason, held, was without any basis — The complaint was nothing but an abuse of the process of law — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

A complaint was filed on 13-1-2006 alleging commission of offence punishable under Sections 403, 405 and 415 read with Section 34 IPC. The Judicial Magistrate took cognizance and issued process. In fact, the respondent had filed petition in terms of Section 33-C(2) of the ID Act and also filed writ petition claiming parity in salary which was disposed of by giving the direction to consider the respondent's case. In the petition under Section 33-C(2) the respondent had stated that lesser amounts were paid and signatures for higher amounts were taken. The High Court by the impugned order dismissed the 482 CrPC petition.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The complaint was nothing but an abuse of the process of law. Close reading of the complaint reveals that the ingredients of Sections 403, 405 and 415 IPC did not exist. The statements made in the complaint were contrary to the averments made in the petition in terms of Section 33-C(2), ID Act. High Court came to the conclusion that deductions were made without any rhyme and reason and without any basis. That was not the case of the complainant. On the other hand, it tried to make out a case that the deduction was made with an object. It was stated in the complaint that the complainant was given to understand that certain amounts were being deducted for repayment at the time of retirement or cessation of his job. In the writ petition before the High Court there was no mention about any deduction. In the notice issued on 23-11-2004, there was no mention about it either. (Paras 9, 7 and 3). K.L.E. Society v. Siddalingesh, (2008) 4 SCC 541: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 1071: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 455: AIR 2008 SC 1702: (2008) 64 AIC 124 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866, relied on

[9927] — Ss. 403, 406, 420 and 120-B — Essential ingredients of S. 403 — Held, words "dishonestly" and "misappropriate" used in S. 403 are the necessary ingredients of the said section — Neither of these ingredients satisfied where a contractor having received payments for works completed failed to pay his sub-contractor, the complainant — Order taking cognizance of the offences under Ss. 403, 406, 420 and 120-B IPC, held, was therefore not proper — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 190(1)(a), 200 and 204

Bokaro Steel Plant awarded a contract of certain works to TCPL company. But, TCPL instead getting the said work done by the complainant company after entering into a separate contract with it. On completion of the said work, TCPL failed to pay the balance amount due under the contract to the complainant. Hence, a complaint under Sections 403, 406, 420 and 120-B IPC was filed against the appellants alleging therein that TCPL misappropriated the money received from Bokaro Steel Plant instead of paying it to the complainant company. The Magistrate concerned took cognizance of the alleged offences and issued summons to the appellants. The High Court declined to interfere in the said order.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Section 403 IPC uses the words "dishonestly" and "misappropriate". These are necessary ingredients of an offence under the said section. (Para 7)

The rights and obligations of the parties i.e. the complainant and TCPL are to be governed by the contract between them for which the contract between TCPL and Bokaro Steel (SAIL) has no relevance. Therefore, even if Bokaro Steel has made the payment to TCPL under its contract with the latter, it will not give rise to plea of misappropriation of money because that money is not money or movable property of the complainant. Thus, it cannot be said that there is any dishonest intention on the part of the appellants nor can it be said that TCPL or the appellants have misappropriated or converted the movable property of the complainant to their own use. (Paras 6 and 8)

Since the basic ingredients of Section 403 are not satisfied, the impugned orders of the High Court as well as of the Chief Judicial Magistrate are hereby ordered to be quashed. (Para 8). U. Dhar v. State of Jharkhand, (2003) 2 SCC 219: 2003 SCC (Cri) 490: AIR 2003 SC 974: 2003 Cri LJ 1224.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2003]

[9928] — Ss. 403 and 409 — Partner's dominion over partnership property — When entrustment liable to action under S. 409 — Use for one's own purpose not liable under S. 403 — Partnership Act, 1932 — S. 15

Upon the plain reading of S. 405, IPC it is obvious that before a person can be said to have committed criminal breach of trust it must be established that he was either entrusted with or entrusted with dominion over property which he is said to have converted to his own use or disposed of in violation of any direction of law, etc.

Every partner has dominion over property by reason of the fact that he is a partner. This is a kind of dominion which every owner of property has over his property. But it is not dominion of this kind which satisfies the requirements of S. 405. In order to establish "entrustment of dominion" over property to an accused person the mere existence of that person's dominion over property is not enough. It must be further shown that his dominion was the result of entrustment. Therefore, the prosecution must establish that dominion over the assets or a particular asset of the partnership was, by a special agreement between the parties, entrusted to the accused person. If in the absence of such a special agreement a partner receives money belonging to the partnership he cannot be said to have received it in a fiduciary capacity or in other words cannot be held to have been "entrusted" with dominion over partnership properties.

Also a partner has undefined ownership along with the other partners over all the assets of the partnership. If he chooses to use any of them for his own purposes he may be accountable civilly to the other partners. But he does not thereby commit any misappropriation. Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433: (1965) 2 SCR 429: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 431.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1964]

However, see AIR 1962 SC 1821 not noticed in this case. The former case followed in (1970) 1 SCC 521

— S. 403 Expln. 1 See also Ss. 409, 405, 403 Explns. 1 and 21

[9929] — S. 403 Expln. 1 and S. 409 — Criminal misappropriation for some time — Deposit of money after detection of crime — Effect

It is no answer to a charge of criminal misappropriation that the money was subsequently, after the matter had been reported to the higher authorities, disbursed for the purpose for which it had been entrusted. According to Explanation I to S. 403, Indian Penal Code, a dishonest misappropriation for a time only is "misappropriation" within the meaning of that section. Khandu Sonu Dhobi v. State of Maharashtra, (1972) 3 SCC 786: 1972 SCC (Cri) 854: AIR 1972 SC 958: (1972) 3 SCR 510: 1972 Cri LJ 593.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, P. Jaganmohan Reddy and H.R. Khanna , JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1972]

— S. 403 Expln. 2 See also Ss. 409, 405, 403 Explns. 1 and 2

— S. 404 See also Ss. 302 and 404

See also Ss. 302, 404 and 201

See also Ss. 302/34, 396, 460 and 404

See also Ss. 376, 302 and 404

See also Ss. 394, 404 and 218

See also Ss. 411 and 404

[9930] — Ss. 404 and 201 — Conviction — Recovery of cash and jewellery of deceased from possession of accused 1 not proved — Pledging of some ornaments to pawn broker and recovery of cash and jewellery from the person of the accused after his arrest in the shop of the pawn broker also not proved beyond reasonable doubt — No independent corroboration adduced — On a conspectus of facts and circumstances of the case as well as assessment of evidence, held, prosecution failed to prove charges under S. 404 read with S. 201 against accused 1 and under S. 404 against accused 2 — Hence orders of conviction passed by High Court as well as trial court set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27. Mallela Seetharmaiah v. State of A.P., 1989 Supp (1) SCC 74: 1989 SCC (L&S) 177: AIR 1989 SC 421: 1989 Cri LJ 968.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and N.D. Ojha, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1988]

[9931] — Ss. 404 and 302 — Removal of deceased's ornaments after committing his murder — Recoveries allegedly made pursuant to the statement of the accused — Even assuming that evidence led by the prosecution is reliable, still, considering its nature it cannot be made the sole basis for conviction even for the offence under S. 404. Preetam v. State of M.P., (1996) 10 SCC 432: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1343: AIR 1997 SC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1996]

Ss. 405-409: CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST

Synopsis

(1) Generally — Nature, Scope and Applicability 813
(2) Ss. 405-409 and other provisions 813
(3) The charge and Ss. 405-409 815
(4) Ingredients of criminal breach of trust 818
  (i) Broadly 818
  (ii) Dishonest intention — Mens rea — Civil dispute(s) only 823
  (iii) Property — What is 826
  (iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property 829
  (v) Misappropriation, use, disposal, etc. 839
  (vi) Temporary deprivation or retention of property/Suffering of loss 844
  (vii) Violation of direction of law or express or implied legal contract 846
  (viii) Wilfully suffers another to commit criminal breach of trust 851
(5) Vicarious or constructive liability — Offences by company 852
(6) Default in payment of employee's EPF or ESI contribution by employer (S. 405 Explns.) 856
(7) Criminal breach of trust by clerk or servant, etc. (S. 408) 858
(8) Criminal breach of trust by public servant (S. 409) — Corruption cases 861
  (i) Broadly 861
  (ii) Relative scope vis-à-vis Prevention of Corruption Act 873
  (iii) Sanction for prosecution 874
  (iv) Instances 878
  (v) Sentence 889
(9) Criminal breach of trust by banker, merchant, factor, broker or agent, etc. (S. 409) 892
(10) Criminal breach of trust re dowry articles/stridhan 900
(11) Criminal breach of trust by partner 905
(12) Trial, Proof and Other issues 906
  (i) Acquittal justified 906
  (ii) Appeal/Revision 906
  (iii) Appreciation of evidence and proof 908
  (iv) Bail 909
  (v) Circumstantial evidence 911
  (vi) Double jeopardy 911
  (vii) Expert evidence 912
  (viii) Investigation, Cognizance, Summons, etc. 912
  (ix) Joint trial/Re-trial/Consolidation/Transfer of cases 915
  (x) Jurisdiction 917
  (xi) Limitation 918
  (xii) Other issues 919
  (xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings 919
  (xiv) Witnesses 933
(13) Sentence/Fine/Compensation/Other punishment/relief 934

— S. 405 See also Ss. 120-B, 405, 409 and 420
See also Ss. 378, 403, 405, 415 and 425
See also Ss. 378 and 405
See also Ss. 403 and 405
See also Ss. 403, 405 and 415 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 410, 411, 403 and 405
See also Ss. 415, 420, 405, 409 and 120-B
See also Ss. 420, 120-B and 405
See also Ss. 420, 415, 405 and 406
See also Ss. 420, 463 and 405
— S. 406 See also Ss. 52, 420, 406, 466, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 108, 109 r/w Ss. 405, 406 and 420
See also Ss. 120-B, 406 and 420
See also Ss. 120-B, 406, 420 and 384
See also Ss. 120-B r/w Ss. 467, 471, 420, 406, 409, 465, 162, 163, 167, 201 and 109
See also Ss. 177, 181, 193, 406, 465, 474 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 193, 209, 406, 468, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 196, 199, 120-B, 403, 406 and 418
See also Ss. 200, 406, 420, 468, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 304-B, 406 and 498-A r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 323, 406 and 498-A

See also Ss. 403, 406, 420 and 120-B
See also Ss. 405 and 406
See also Ss. 420 and 406
See also Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B
See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420, 415, 405 and 406
See also Ss. 465, 468, 471, 209 and 406
See also Ss. 498-A and 406
See also Ss. 498-A, 406 and 34
See also Ss. 498-A, 406 and 120-B
See also Ss. 498-A, 406, 323, 506, 148 and 149
See also S. 498-A and Ss. 406, 341, 323 & 120-B and Ss. 3 & 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961
See also Ss. 498-A, 406, 420 and 315
See also Ss. 498-A/323 and 406
See also Ss. 504, 498-A and 406
— S. 406 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 498-A, 342, 506 and 406 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 498-A and 406 r/w S. 34
— Ss. 406/420/120-B See also Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379
— S. 407 See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471
— S. 408 See also Ss. 120-B, 109 and 408, 409, 467 and 471
See also Ss. 477-A and 408
— S. 409 See also Ss. 21, 161 to 171 and 409
See also Ss. 25 and 409
See also Ss. 120-B, 109 and 408, 409, 467 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 120-A, 409 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 405, 409 and 420
See also Ss. 120-B and 409
See also Ss. 120-B, 409 and 277-A
See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 420, 465, 468, 471, 477-A, 101 and 34
See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 467 and 471 r/w S. 120
See also Ss. 120-B, 409 and 477-A
See also Ss. 120-B, 477-A and 409
See also Ss. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 409, 467 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B r/w Ss. 467, 471, 420, 406, 409, 465, 162, 163, 167, 201 and 109
See also Ss. 161, 165 and 409
See also Ss. 403 Expln. 1 and S. 409
See also Ss. 405, 409 and 34
See also Ss. 408, 409 r/w 109, 420 and 420/511 r/w S. 120-B
See also Ss. 415, 420, 405, 409 and 120-B
See also Ss. 418, 409 and 166 r/w S. 114
See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420, 477-A, 468, 109 and 409
See also Ss. 467 and 409
See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 420, 409 and 218
See also Ss. 468, 471, 409, 420 and 120-B
See also Ss. 477-A and 409

(1) Generally — Nature, Scope and Applicability

[9932] — Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A — Nature of offences under — Held, offences under aforesaid sections are triable by a Magistrate, First Class and as all these offences are punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding two years, cases have to be tried as warrant cases (Para 17). K. Neelaveni v. State, (2010) 11 SCC 607: AIR 2010 SC 3191: 2010 Cri LJ 2819: (2010) 2 ECrN 541 (SC): (2010) 88 AIC 58 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2010]

(2) Ss. 405-409 and other provisions

[9933] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Quashing of FIR — Scope of jurisdiction of High Court — Tests — Offences of fraud, cheating, etc. alleged — Whether offences alleged in FIR prima facie made out — Whether criminal proceedings initiated only to cause harassment to accused and continuance thereof would amount to abuse of process of court — Disputed question of fact not required to be gone into by Court — But documents of unimpeachable character can be taken into consideration — Although Court should not encourage the practice of initiating criminal proceedings when large number of disputes could ordinarily be determined by civil courts, but Court cannot go beyond its jurisdiction to interfere with the criminal proceedings otherwise genuine — Plausible defence of accused not good enough for exercise of inherent powers — FIR lodged by appellant on charges under Ss. 406, 420 and 436 IPC alleging that blank cheques were issued by appellant to respondents which were later fraudulently used by respondents — Respondents after issuing notice on appellant filed complaint petition under Ss. 138 and 141 of Negotiable Instruments Act alleging dishonour of certain cheques issued by appellant and also filed application under S. 482 for quashing of FIR — Quashing application allowed by High Court taking the view that FIR was lodged only to pre-empt respondents from filing the complaint petition — Held, on facts, High Court erred in going into merits of the case and interfering with the criminal proceedings — However, since allegedly the blank cheques were earlier given to respondents for use for business purposes when relation between the parties were good but the alleged fraudulent use took place few years thereafter when dispute arose between them, S. 420 IPC not attracted as fraudulent inducement must be there at the inception and not at a later stage to attract S. 420 IPC — But S. 406 IPC was invocable — Hence investigation should be confined to charge under S. 406 IPC only — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The private parties were Directors of the appellant Company and were closely related. The Company had two units. The Managing Director of the Company was one L. Allegedly, pursuant to negotiations between L on the one hand and Accused 2 and 3 Directors on the other, signed blank cheques were handed over by L to the said accused persons during period 2000 to 2004 as process for obtaining cheques from the Managing Director had been taking considerable time. However, dispute between the parties arose in 2005. A company petition was filed before the High Court. A scheme for arrangement submitted by the parties was approved, pursuant whereto one unit was transferred to Accused 1 and the other unit to L. For that purpose the units were demerged. L allegedly made oral requests to Accused 2 and 3 to return the unused signed blank cheques. However, allegedly on the premise that Respondents 2 and 3 entered into a conspiracy to misuse the said cheques L filed an informal complaint with the police in 2006 with an endorsement that there was no role for the police at that stage. The respondents thereafter issued a letter stating that with a view to repay a part of the institutional liability of Respondent 1 a cheque had been drawn by the appellant in favour of Respondent 1 which had been deposited for collection. A first information report was then lodged by the appellant alleging that the blank signed cheques issued in the year 2001-2002 had been fraudulently used. Legal notices were, however, issued by Respondent 1 upon the appellant with regard to dishonour of three cheques. On or about 13-11-2006 an application was filed before the High Court for quashing the first information report. On 6-12-2006, a complaint petition was filed by Respondent 1 under Sections 138 and 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act against the appellant and also its Chairman and Managing Director. The High Court not only considered the ingredients for the offences under Sections 406, 420 and 463 IPC but also the background facts leading to the dispute between the parties so as to enable it to ascertain whether the ingredients thereof stood satisfied or not. It proceeded on the basis that in view of the demerger scheme, the conduct of the appellant in keeping mum for a long time for getting the unused blank cheques returned is tell tale. It entered into the question as to whether the complaint petition was filed only with a view to pre-empt the respondents herein to take recourse to the remedies available to them to initiate a criminal proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act or the complaint petition in effect and substance should be permitted to be raised only by way of defence. It was held that the said complaint petition was filed on the basis whereof the first information report was directed to be lodged only to pre-empt the accused from filing a complaint petition under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and that even taking the allegations in the complaint to be true and correct, they did not make out a prima facie case of cheating or criminal breach of trust or forgery. Accordingly, the High Court held that continuation of the proceedings amounted to abuse of process of the Court.

Allowing the appeal in part,

Held :

In this case what has failed to attract the attention of the High Court was that maintainability of a criminal proceeding like the present one should not be determined only upon raising a presumption in terms of Section 139 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, it being a rebuttable one. (Para 23)

The High Court should have further taken into consideration the fact that in the event, the defence of the appellant is accepted in the criminal case, it will have no remedy to prosecute the respondents again. To contend that the acquittal of the appellant would have been the springboard for filing a complaint will not be correct. Nobody knows when the criminal case would come to an end. In a given situation, even it may become barred by limitation. It must also be borne in mind that commercial expediencies may lead a person to issue blank cheques. The course of action in the aforementioned situation, which could be taken recourse to was to make an attempt to find out as to whether the complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety constitutes an offence under Sections 420, 406 and 463 of the Penal Code or not. (Para 24)

Ingredients of cheating are:

(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; and

(ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property to any person or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. (Para 25)

Sections 415 read with Section 420 IPC indicates that fraudulent or dishonest inducement on the part of the accused must be at the inception and not at a subsequent stage. In this case blank cheques were handed over to the accused during the period 2000-2004 for use thereof for business purposes but the dispute between the parties admittedly arose much thereafter i.e. in 2005. Thus no case for proceeding against the respondent under Section 420 of the Penal Code is, therefore, made out. (Paras 26 to 28)

Filling up of the blanks in a cheque by itself would not amount to forgery. Whereas in the complaint petition, allegations have been made that it was Respondents 2 and 3 who had entered into a conspiracy to commit the said offence as indicated hereinbefore, in the counter-affidavit, it has been alleged that the employees of the respondent Company did so. (Para 29)

Although, Section 120-B IPC has been added, there does not exist any averment that Respondents 2 and 3 had entered into any conspiracy with their employees. No case for proceeding with the offence of forgery against the respondents has, thus, also been made out. (Para 30)

However, a case for proceeding against the respondents under Section 406 IPC has been made out. A cheque being a property, the same was entrusted to the respondents. If the said property has been misappropriated or has been used for a purpose for which the same had not been handed over, a case under Section 406 IPC may be found to have been made out. It may be true that even in a proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the appellant could raise a defence that the cheques were not meant to be used towards discharge of a lawful liability or a debt, but the same by itself would not mean that in an appropriate case, a complaint petition cannot be allowed to be filed. (Para 31)

The respondents were keeping watch over the matter. As soon as a first information report was lodged, a notice was immediately sent. A quashing application was filed within a few days of the lodging of the first information report. The investigation was not allowed to take place at all. Whereas it would have been the duty of the court to uphold and/or to protect the personal liberty of an accused in a case, but where the first information report prima facie discloses commission of a cognizable offence, the High Court, ordinarily, should not have interfered with investigation thereof by the statutory authority. (Para 32)

Investigation by IO may now be confined to the charge under Section 406 IPC. (Para 33). Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678: AIR 2008 SC 1683: (2008) 63 AIC 146 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Indian Oil Corp. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; All Cargo Movers (I) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776; B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107, relied on

(3) The charge and Ss. 405-409

[9934] — S. 406 — Original charge under S. 406, IPC as to entrustment of money — In appeal High Court's direction to amend the charge to include the entrustment of goods purchased with said moneys — If direction legal — Powers of appellate court under S. 423, CrPC — Sustainability of special leave

There was no new trial as such, as the Magistrate was merely directed to record the evidence on the amended charge and send back the records. There was no prejudice caused to the appellant as he was allowed to let in any further evidence.

The power of the appellate court under S. 423, CrPC was wide and empowered it even to make any amendment or any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper.

The offence with which the appellant is now charged alternatively is the same under S. 406, IPC but as the entire transaction was one and indivisible, he is not only required to answer the charge of misappropriation of money but in the alternative misappropriation of goods which the complainant Bank contends became their as soon as the accused purchased them with the money in advance. No prejudice is caused or is likely to be caused to the accused by the amendment of the charge as directed by the High Court.

The appellant took no objection to the framing of the original charge at the trial. He cannot object at this stage to the framing of an alternate charge, on the same allegation in the complaint. Kantilal Chandulal Mehta v. State of Maharashtra, (1969) 3 SCC 166: 1970 SCC (Cri) 19: AIR 1970 SC 359: 1970 Cri LJ 510: (1970) 2 SCR 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and P. Jaganmohan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1969]

[9935] — Ss. 406 and 409 — Charge only under S. 406 and appellant acquitted of the same — But High Court while disposing of the appeals preferred by the complainant recording conviction under S. 409 without any notice and sentencing for the major offence — Held, High Court committed an illegality in doing so. Suresh T. Kilachand v. Sampat Shripat Lambate, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 543: 1994 SCC (Cri) 407: AIR 1994 SC 583: 1994 Cri LJ 611: (1993) 3 Crimes 531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1993]

[9936] — S. 408 — Criminal breach of trust — Prosecution in doubt as to when the idea of embezzlement took root — Prosecution justified in filing a charge-sheet taking the plea that the place of embezzlement was uncertain — Venue of enquiry or trial in a case when the place of embezzlement is uncertain is primarily to be determined by the averment contained in the complaint or charge-sheet — Ordinarily where the facts contained in the complaint or charge-sheet are disproved the court where the charge-sheet or complaint is filed has to proceed with it. State of M.P. v. K.P. Ghiara, AIR 1957 SC 196: 1957 Cri LJ 322, 323: 1957 MPLJ 230.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1956]

[9937] — Ss. 408, 420 and 420/511 r/w S. 120-B — Conviction for offences under, by trial Court — Conviction for offence under S. 409 r/w S. 109, IPC, by High Court an offence for which appellant was never charged — Legality

The act of wrong identification committed by the appellant cannot amount to the offence of cheating by personation. There was no charge at all relating to any cheating or attempting to cheat the Oath Commissioner. No doubt there was mention of commission of forgery of affidavits; but the mention of the commission of that offence could not possibly lead the appellant to infer that he was liable to be convicted for abetting the offence of cheating the Oath Commissioner. Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516: AIR 1974 SC 1811: (1971) 2 SCR 178: 1974 Cri LJ 1261.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Bhargava and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1970]

[9938] — S. 409 — Charge of criminal breach of trust — Offence not proved — However evidence indicated abetment of offence under S. 409 — But in view of peculiar circumstances of case — Conviction of accused not altered and accused acquitted

Where the original charge of criminal breach of trust could not be proved against the accused, but the evidence indicated the abetment of the offence of criminal breach of trust by the accused officer it was held to be unfair in the circumstances to alter the accused's conviction under S. 409, IPC into one of abetment thereof since such an alteration would imply a definite finding of guilt against another (accused's officer) who was not present before the Court. Bhagat Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1954 SC 621: 1954 Cri LJ 1645, 1654.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1954]

[9939] — S. 409 — Mode of committing crime not stated — Charge not vague — CrPC, 1898 — Ss. 537 & 531

The charge is with respect to one offence, though the mode of committing it is not stated precisely. If it be complained that the charge framed under S. 409, IPC, is vague because it does not specifically state one particular mode in which the offence was committed, the vagueness of the charge will not make the trial illegal, especially when no prejudice is caused to the accused. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1832: (1963) 1 SCR 253, 274: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

[9940] — Ss. 409 & 120-B — Charge under Ss. 120-B and 409, IPC — Conviction under S. 409 simpliciter, the charges under S. 120-B having failed, is valid

If the charge of conspiracy to commit criminal breach of trust is followed by a substantive charge of criminal breach of trust in pursuance of such conspiracy there is nothing to prevent the Court convicting an accused under the second charge even if the prosecution fails to establish conspiracy. In any event, there was no prejudice caused to him as he was aware that there was a substantive charge under S. 409 against him.

Therefore the contention that the prosecution having failed to establish conspiracy the appellant could not be convicted of the offence under S. 409, IPC simpliciter is without substance. Madan Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1590: (1967) 3 SCR 439: 1967 Cri LJ 1401, 1404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Bachawat and J.M. Shelat, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1967]

AIR 1963 Ker 68: 1963 (1) Cri LJ 180, overruled

[9941] — Ss. 409 & 405 and Ss. 415 & 420 — Charges framed only under Ss. 415 & 420 — No charge framed under S. 409, though offence, if any, was that under S. 409 — Effect — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 215, 216, 218, 221 and 222

Appellant was a Branch Manager of State Bank of India. He and some of his colleagues were prosecuted under Sections 415 and 420 read with Section 120-B IPC, and Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, for permitting discounting of local cheques to some customers of the Bank. Accused 4 and 5 were bank officials while Accused 1 to 3 were private parties having account with the Bank.

The issues involved were whether the bank officials and the customers had entered into criminal conspiracy to commit the offence of cheating against the Bank under Sections 415 and 420 IPC, and whether the accused persons had obtained any illegitimate advantage, warranting punishment under the Prevention of Corruption Act.

Trial court convicted the accused persons. High Court upheld their conviction. The Supreme Court however took note of the fact that there was no evidence on record to prove that there was an intention to cheat the Bank. On the other hand, there was evidence on record that appellant had stopped cheque discounting facility and he had resumed it only after verbal instructions from a superior officer, PW 20. Moreover, the bank officials appeared to have acted in the overall interest of the Bank for the purpose of promoting its business, though there might have been some irregularity in doing so.

Allowing the appeals,

Held:

One of the ingredients of cheating, as defined in Section 415 IPC, is existence of an intention to cheat at the time of making initial promise or existence thereof from the very beginning of formation of contract. The complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 IPC can be said to have been made out. (Paras 41 and 42)

The offence, if any, was committed under Section 409 IPC but the accused persons have not been charged under Section 409 IPC; even Accused 1 to 3 have not been charged for entering into a conspiracy with Accused 4, 5 and 6 in respect of commission of offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act. It is in the aforementioned situation, the judgment of conviction and sentence cannot be upheld. (Para 51)

The conclusions can be summarised as follows:

(a) The prosecution did not lay down any foundational facts to arrive at a finding of dishonest intention on the part of the appellants, nor has any such finding has been arrived at by the trial court or the High Court.

(b) The circumstances which were considered sufficient to bring home the charges against the appellants were: the cheques of Accused 1, 2 and 3 were discounted after purchasing cheques; cheques were deposited after a gap of one to four days; only later were the amounts deposited in the account, which circumstances are not sufficient to hold the appellants guilty for commission of offence under Section 420 IPC as all the actions on the part of the bank officers were in consonance with the long-standing banking practice.

(c) Accused 4 had taken care of having adequate security to ensure that the bank does not suffer any loss, the gain if any was caused to the bank.

(d) The appellants acted on instructions by the higher authority.

(e) The prosecution evidence does not establish any conspiracy on their part vis-à-vis Accused 1, 2 and 3. (Para 55). S.V.L. Murthy v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 77: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 941.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 103, relied on [9942] — Ss. 409 and 430 — Charge under S. 409 — Allegations in charge-sheet justified a charge under S. 420 as well — Trial Court and appellate Court competent to record a conviction under S. 420, IPC. Sunil Kumar Paul v. State of W.B., AIR 1965 SC 706: (1964) 7 SCR 70: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 630.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1964]

See fully CrPC, 1898, Ss. 236 & 237
See also AIR 1958 SC 56: 1956 Cri LJ 228

[9943] — Ss. 409 & 477-A — Accused charged for 3 offences under S. 409 and one under S. 477-A — Offences arising out of the same acts and forming part of the same transaction — There is no violation of S. 234, CrPC, 1898 — Case is governed by S. 234, CrPC, 1898 — Case is also saved by S. 537, CrPC, 1898 as no prejudice is shown. Chandi Prasad Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 149: (1955) 2 SCR 1035: 1956 Cri LJ 322: (1956) 1 MLJ (SC) 88: 1956 ALJ 153.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Vivian Bose and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar , JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-1955]

(4) Ingredients of criminal breach of trust

Synopsis

(i) Broadly 818
(ii) Dishonest intention — Mens rea — Civil dispute(s) only 823
(iii) Property — What is 826
(iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property 829
(v) Misappropriation, use, disposal, etc. 839
(vi) Temporary deprivation or retention of property/Suffering of loss 844
(vii) Violation of direction of law or express or implied legal contract 846
(viii) Wilfully suffers another to commit criminal breach of trust 851

(i) Broadly

[9944] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Essentials of

To constitute an offence of criminal breach of trust it is essential that the prosecution must prove first of all that the accused was entrusted with some property or with any dominion or power over it. It has to be established further that in respect of the property so entrusted, there was dishonest misappropriation or dishonest conversion or dishonest use or disposal in violation of a direction of law or legal contract, by the accused himself or by someone else which he willingly suffered to do. It follows almost axiomatically from this definition that the ownership or beneficial interest in the property in respect of which criminal breach of trust is alleged to have been committed, must be in some person other than the accused and the latter must hold it on account of some person or in some way for his benefit. C.M. Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478: 1954 Cri LJ 102: 1953 Ker LT 173.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Patanjali Sastri, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea , S.R. Das, Vivian Bose and Ghulam Hasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-1952]

1952 Cri LJ 766, reversed

[9945] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients reiterated (Para 21). Asoke Basak v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 10 SCC 660.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 164, relied on

[9946] — S. 405 — Essential ingredients of

The necessary ingredients of S. 405 are:

(1) The accused must be entrusted with property or dominion over property;

(2) The person so entrusted must —

(a) dishonestly misappropriate or convert to his own use that property, or

(b) dishonestly use or dispose of that property or wilfully suffer any other person to do so in violation

(i) of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or

(ii) of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust. Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575, 577-78.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

[9947] — Ss. 405 and 24 — Criminal breach of trust — Nature and scope of offence — Terms of S. 405, held, are very wide — They apply to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property — S. 405 does not require that trust should be in furtherance of any lawful object — It merely provides that a person commits criminal breach of trust if such a person dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use the property entrusted to him (Para 143). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; Jaikrishnadas Manohardas Desai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 889, relied on

[9948] — Ss. 405 to 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Essential ingredients of — Person to whom a property is entrusted, if allows others to misappropriate the same, commits the offence — Entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property may in the circumstances of the case, lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion — Dishonest misappropriation of the property entrusted, even with the intention to restore the property in future, would attract the offence — "Entrustment" — Import of — Held, on facts (per majority, Shah, J. contra), Accused 1, 3 and 5 committed offence of criminal breach of trust

Per majority (Agrawal and Pasayat, JJ.)

To constitute an offence of criminal breach of trust, there must be an entrustment, there must be misappropriation or conversion to one's own use, or use in violation of a legal direction or of any legal contract; and the misappropriation or conversion or disposal must be with a dishonest intention. When a person allows others to misappropriate the money entrusted to him, that amounts to a criminal breach of trust as defined by Section 405. The section is relatable to property in a positive part and a negative part. The positive part deals with criminal misappropriation or conversion of the property and the negative part consists of dishonestly using or disposing of the property in violation of any direction and of law or any contract touching the discharge of trust. (Para 361)

The term "entrustment" is not necessarily a term of law. It may have different implications in different contexts. In its most general signification all it imports is the handing over possession for some purpose which may not imply the conferring of any proprietary right at all. (Para 363)

To establish the charge of criminal breach of trust, the prosecution is not obliged to prove the precise mode of conversion, misappropriation or misapplication by the accused of the property entrusted to him or over which he has dominion. The principal ingredient of the offence being dishonest misappropriation or conversion which may not ordinarily be a matter of direct proof, entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property entrusted if proved, may, in the light of other circumstances, justifiably lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion. (Para 365)

Sections 407 to 409 make special provisions for various cases in which property is entrusted to the enumerated categories of persons who commit the offence. The offence of breach of trust and dishonest misappropriation are sufficient to constitute an offence under the relevant provisions. (Para 360)

Section 409 deals with criminal breach of trust by a public servant or by a banker, merchant or agent. Section 405 defines criminal breach of trust. The offence like the offence of criminal misappropriation is characterized by an actual fraudulent appropriation of property. There is not originally wrongful taking or moving as in the case of theft but the offence consists in wrongful appropriation of property, consequent upon a possession which is lawful. The offence is distinguishable from criminal misappropriation because subject of it is not the property which by some casual act or otherwise, but without criminal means, comes into the offender's possession; but the property which is entrusted to the offender by the owner or by others' lawful authority and which the offender holds subject to some duty or obligation to apply it according to the trust. (Para 359)

When a person misappropriates to his own use the property that does not belong to him, the misappropriation is dishonest even though there was an intention to restore it at some future point of time. (Para 364)

When the factual background highlighted is considered in the light of the various provisions, it is clear that the offences under the Indian Penal Code alleged have been established against the accused persons. Accused 1, 3 and 5 were therefore, rightly convicted. (Para 378)

Per Shah, J. (dissenting)

What is punishable under Section 403 is dishonest misappropriation or conversion to his own use any movable property. Further, as per the Explanation, dishonest misappropriation for the time being or for a short time is also misappropriation within the meaning of the section. Hence, for establishing the offence it is required to be proved that:

1. The property belongs to a person other than the accused,

2. The accused appropriated the said property or converted it to his own use, and,

3. He did so "dishonestly" — that is to say, with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one or wrongful loss to another person. (Para 258)

(4)(i) Broadly (contd.)

Further, essential ingredients required to be proved under Section 405 are:

1. Accused must be entrusted with some property or with any dominion over property,

2. He dishonestly misappropriates or dishonestly converts to his own use that property, or

3. Dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged or of any legal contract, or

4. Wilfully suffers any other person to do so. (Para 260)

Allegations in this case are that firstly, the accused appropriated cheques issued by Canara Bank in favour of Grindlays Bank to himself. Secondly, that appropriation was misappropriation, and thirdly, it was dishonest. (Para 259)

In the investment policy or lending policy as per the guidelines framed by MUL in 1989 use of the phrase "through scheduled banks" or "directly" appears to be intentional. "Through scheduled bank" would indicate that the amount is not invested "with the bank". A PW has admitted that the name of the broker did not figure or reflect on the record of MUL in the event of transaction of investment being through the broker. In any case, A-1 and A-2 who are sought to be prosecuted are not responsible for the said policy. The policy is framed by the Board and as per the said policy the Sub-Committee headed by the Chairman and the Managing Director of MUL and the Financial Director has passed appropriate resolutions. It appears that they were in the know of the entire investments, but for reasons best known to the prosecution, they are not prosecuted or examined as witnesses even though they were interrogated by the investigating officer. A-1 and A-2 were promoted for their efficiency and good work. The same stand was taken by MUL before JPC despite knowing that there was so-called investigation by CBI. MUL has not suffered any loss. On the contrary, it has received substantial interest for short-term investment for a few days. UCO Bank has also earned commission which is reflected in its account. If there was any dishonest intention on the part of A-3, he would not have credited the earned commission for the transactions in the account books of the Bank. No loss to UCO Bank. Neither MUL nor UCO Bank has lodged any FIR for the so-called misappropriation or fraud. The prosecution has not even suggested that Accused 1, 2, 3 or 4 got any pecuniary advantage or gain by such transactions. Evidence led by the prosecution discloses that it was the practice of the Bank to issue BRs for such type of transactions. It was the duty of the prosecution to carry out necessary investigation whether the BRs were backed by the units or not. If the investigating officer fails to discharge its duty, no inference can be drawn that BRs were not backed by security/units. The prosecution has miserably failed to prove that A-3 issued BRs without holding units as security or that BRs were not backed by units. The Chief General Manager (Finance) of MUL has stated that looking at the BRs of UCO Bank, no suspicion would arise and that issuance of the BRs necessarily indicates that the bank issuing it would be holding the security covered under the BR. The Divisional Manager of UCO Bank at the Bombay office at the relevant time has produced on record a letter dated 8-1-1991 written by him stating resumption of switch transaction after discussing the subject with various authorities including the Zonal Manager, General Manager and Dy. Manager of UCO Bank. On the evidence as it is, at the highest it was a failure on the part of A-1, A-2 and A-3 to perform their duties or observe rules of procedure in appropriate manner and may at the most be an administrative lapse. There is no evidence against A-2 and A-4 to connect them with the crime. A-4 is prosecuted without collecting any evidence against him that he was responsible for crediting the amount in the account of A-5. The prosecution has erroneously proceeded as if the amount of pay orders issued in favour of Grindlays Bank was directly deposited in the account of A-5. For A-5, it is to be held that he gave loan to MUL in the first transaction and borrowed the amount in the last four transactions. These transactions were carried out through UCO Bank. Therefore, assuming that those transactions were against the guidelines issued by RBI, it would not mean that A-5 has misappropriated the amount. He repaid the amount on fixed dates with stipulated interest. Question of payment of interest would arise in cases of loan transaction and normally the Bank would not borrow the amount at such a high rate of interest. The Bank has issued BRs and there is no evidence that BRs were not backed by the units. On the contrary, the defence has led evidence to suggest that units were given as security. For A-3 also, the investigating officer has not bothered to verify properly because admittedly A-3 was transferred from Hamam Street Branch at Bombay to Hingha Branch, near Nagpur at the relevant time when the 5th transaction was carried out between 2-5-1991 to 7-5-1991. (Para 281)

Section 415 has two parts. While in the first part, the person must "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" induce the complainant to deliver any property; in the second part, the person should intentionally induce the complainant to do or omit to do a thing. That is to say, in the first part, inducement must be dishonest or fraudulent. In the second part, the inducement should be intentional. (Para 281)

In the present case, it is very important to determine who is the controlling agent behind the act of the Company (MUL). If the Board of MUL or the management of the Bank were fully aware of such transactions, subordinates who carry out the transactions could not be held guilty, because for the offences for which the accused are charged mens rea must be proved. Therefore, those who are responsible for taking such decision could be prosecuted, but not those who are only carrying out directions on the basis that it is a commercial policy of the Company (MUL) or the Bank. As stated before the JPC, it was an effort to maximise the yield or surplus funds of MUL and there was no need for the Company to take any action against the officers. (Para 281)

Further, the case is required to be decided on the touchstone of ingredients of the offence punishable under IPC and there cannot be any doubt that those who are found guilty should be punished, but the conviction must be on the basis of the established criminal jurisprudence and not on moral or equitable ground or impression created or gathered by the prosecuting agency. It is also true that in the present case, dealing in public funds was there to a large extent but that would not by itself be a sufficient ground for drawing any inference in favour of the prosecution, particularly when there is no evidence on record that MUL or UCO Bank suffered any loss or any of Accused 1 to 4 gained anything. On the contrary, there is evidence on record that UCO Bank got commission from the said transactions. (Para 250)

Hence the prosecution has failed to prove its case against the accused. (Para 281). Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869: AIR 2003 SC 2748.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah[1], B.N. Agrawal[2] and Arijit Pasayat[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2003]

Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116; Jaikrishnadas Manohardas Desai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 889: 1960 Cri LJ 1250, relied on

[9949] — Ss. 405 & 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Two distinct parts under

There are, two distinct parts involved in the commission of the offence of criminal breach of trust. The first consists of the creation of an obligation in relation to the property over which dominion or control is acquired by the accused. The second is a misappropriation or dealing with the property dishonestly and contrary to the terms of the obligation created. Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. S.K. Roy, (1974) 4 SCC 230: 1974 SCC (Cri) 399: AIR 1974 SC 794: (1974) 3 SCR 348: 1974 Cri LJ 678: 1974 (11) ACC 199.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.H. Beg, Y.V. Chandrachud and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1974]

[9950] — S. 409 — Applicability of — Proof — Nature and burden of — Held, prosecution to prove that property in question was entrusted with the accused — Once the same is proved, it is for the accused to prove as to how the property entrusted was dealt with — Actual mode of entrustment need not be proved — Accused appointed as Unit Manager on deputation in Kerala State Civil Supplies Corporation (KSCSC) at Punalur — After he was relieved to his parent department, a special audit conducted on direction of Managing Director of KSCSC — Certain quantities of boiled rice, palmolein and free-sale sugar found short — Accused's liability fixed at Rs 1,70,640 — Accused undertook to remit Rs 1,63,770 being the value of the shortage of 72 quintals of palmolein, 102 quintals of rice and 39 quintals of sugar — Deposited Rs 50,000 in part-payment — On facts, held, entrustment proved — No material placed by accused to prove as to how the property entrusted was dealt with — Conviction and sentence under S. 409, held, proper — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 101 and 103

The accused-appellant was appointed on deputation as Unit Manager of the Kerala State Civil Supplies Corporation (in short "the Corporation") at Punalur vide order dated 14-4-1983 passed by the Regional Manager of the Corporation posted in Thiruvananthapuram. By a letter dated 4-11-1986, the Managing Director of the Corporation directed the Regional Manager to relieve the accused to his parent department on 30-11-1986. Pursuant to the said direction, the Regional Manager issued an order dated 29-11-1986 relieving the accused. The said order was directed to be effective from the afternoon of 29-11-1986. Since the accused did not attend the office on 29-11-1986, the Regional Manager by an order dated 1-12-1986 permitted PW 3 to assume charge of the Punalur depot. Accordingly, PW 3 took the said charge. The stock of the Punalur Depot was partly stored in the Warehousing Corporation godown at Punalur and partly in the godown attached to the office, referred to by the witnesses as self-godown. Though PW 3 assumed charge, the accused had not handed over the keys of the godown or verified the stock. The accused reported in the depot on 13-12-1986 and in the presence of the then Assistant Manager (Accounts) (PW 2) in the regional office of the Corporation, brought the keys and opened the godown. He also undertook in writing the handing over of the charge on 13-12-1986, 15-12-1986 and 16-12-1986. In the presence of the accused the items found in the godown were verified. Only the stocks of 21.875 quintals of MP boiled rice and 84 kg of tamarind were found in the self-godown. The Managing Director of the Corporation directed a special audit to be conducted by PW 1. On audit, the actual stock of boiled rice, palmolein and free sale sugar was found short. PW 1 assessed the total value of shortage of rice at Rs 33,150, that of palmolein at Rs 1,08,000 and sugar at Rs 22,620. He also reported that the accused had withdrawn loading and transporting charges for these articles. PW 1 fixed accused's liability including infructuous expenses on transporting and cost of missing empty barrels at Rs 1,70,640. On 29-12-1986 the accused undertook to remit Rs 1,63,770 being the value of the shortage of 72 quintals of palmolein, 102 quintals of rice and 39 quintals of sugar and in part-payment, deposited Rs 50,000 in the Punalur Depot on that day. By Ext. P-17 he undertook to deposit half the amount by 2-1-1987 and the balance by 31st March next year. Thereafter, the matter was reported to the authorities concerned and consequent to which the accused was suspended from service. The Managing Director of the Corporation wrote to the Director of Vigilance (Investigation) along with a copy of audit report. The Director of Vigilance (Investigation) sanctioned registration of a case. The Inspector of the Kollam Vigilance Unit I (PW 11) conducted the investigation and sent a report to his higher authorities. In the meantime, the accused retired from service on 28-2-1992. The trial court on consideration of materials held the accused guilty and convicted him of the offences punishable under Section 5(2), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 and Section 409 IPC. The High Court in appeal confirmed the conviction and sentence.The accused challenged the said conviction and sentence by filing the instant appeal before the Supreme Court. Since the accused died during pendency of the appeal, his legal representatives were allowed to be impleaded.

(4)(i) Broadly (contd.)

Before the Supreme Court, the LRs of the accused submitted that in the absence of a sanction for the prosecution the whole proceeding was non est and the trial was vitiated. The prosecution had acted unfairly in taking advantage of the position that after retirement sanction was not necessary under the Prevention of Corruption Act. In any event, in respect of a retired employee sanction was necessary in terms of Section 197 CrPC. Additionally, it was submitted that the prosecution had not established any misappropriation and/or mens rea of the alleged crime and, therefore, both the trial court and the High Court had acted contrary to law. It was further submitted that both the courts below proceeded on mere surmises and conjectures to hold that the accused had committed misappropriation. The essential ingredients necessary to prove the accusations under Section 409 IPC were squarely absent. It was also submitted that both the trial court and the High Court had attached undue importance to the fact that the accused-appellant had agreed to pay the differential amount. It was contended that even if the accused had agreed to pay the amount, that was not material while considering the issue whether the ingredients had been established by the prosecution. Finally, it was submitted that taking note of the small amount involved and the fact that the accused had already deposited the amount, the benefit available under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 could be extended.

Dismissing the appeal preferred by the accused,

Held :

It is fairly well-settled position in law that actual mode of entrustment or misappropriation is not to be proved by the prosecution. Once entrustment is proved, it is for the accused to prove as to how the property entrusted was dealt with. It was not only on the basis of the undertaking that the conviction was recorded, but the other evidence on record also unerringly proved entrustment. Therefore, it was for the accused to prove as to how the property entrusted with him was dealt with. No material was placed in that regard. Therefore, the courts below correctly held entrustment to have been proved. The concurrent findings of fact recorded by the courts below relating to entrustment and misappropriation are well merited and fully justified on the basis of evidence on record and do not suffer from any perversity or patent error of law to warrant interference. (Para 13). N. Bhargavan Pillai v. State of Kerala, (2004) 13 SCC 217: 2005 SCC (Cri) 142: AIR 2004 SC 2317: 2004 Cri LJ 2494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-2004]

Jiwan Dass v. State of Haryana, (1999) 2 SCC 530: 1999 SCC (Cri) 288, distinguished on facts

[9951] — S. 409 — Prosecution must prove factum of entrustment and of misappropriation of the entrusted articles before a conviction can be recorded under — Overseer convicted under for shortage of some articles from open godowns which were in physical charge of Chowkidars — Physical charge of the articles not shown to have been made over to the Overseer after being regularly counted in the godowns — Also no evidence to show misappropriation by the Overseer — Goods being open and accessible to all and sundry, possibility of the goods having been pilfered or stolen by others exists — Thus both the ingredients not having been proved, the conviction cannot be sustained. Janeshwar Das Aggarwal v. State of U.P., (1981) 3 SCC 10: 1981 SCC (Cri) 616: AIR 1981 SC 1646: 1981 ALJ 887.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, Baharul Islam and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-1981]

[9952] — Ss. 409, 467 and 471 — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — Proof — Essential requirements — Existence of mens rea, held, must be proved — Recurring deposit accounts in a sub-post office — Misappropriation of amounts of, by employees of that post-office — Conviction of employees A-1 and A-2 (appellants) and A-3 (who did not prefer appeal) — A-1 and A-2 passing vouchers put up by A-3 — No evidence of criminal conspiracy — Nothing to show that A-1 and A-2 had knowledge that the vouchers were fabricated by A-3 — Held, it could not be said that A-1 and A-2 acted with a criminal intent — It might be that they acted in a negligent manner — But, that by itself would not constitute an offence under S. 409 though it may expose them to disciplinary action under the relevant rules — Held, offences under Ss. 409, 467, and 471 IPC and the one under Prevention of Corruption Act, not proved — A-1 and A-2 acquitted — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(1)(c) and (d) r/w 5(2)

Allowing the appeals filed by the accused persons (A-1 and A-2),

Held :

For the offence under Section 409 IPC it must be proved that a person entrusted with property or with any dominion over property, in his capacity as public servant commits criminal breach of trust in respect of such property, as defined in Section 405 IPC, meaning thereby that he dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property, or dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do. The crucial word used in Section 405 IPC is "dishonestly" and, therefore, it implies the existence of mens rea, that is to say, a guilty mind. (Para 9)

If there is no evidence to show that the appellants (A-1 and A-2) had knowledge that the vouchers were fabricated by A-3, it cannot be said that they acted with a criminal intent. It may be that they acted in a negligent manner and if they had taken due care they would have detected the fraud, but they failed to do so. However, that by itself would not constitute an offence under Section 409 IPC though it may expose the appellants to disciplinary action under the relevant rules. (Para 9)

There is no evidence to show that A-1 and A-2 forged the documents which purported to be a valuable security. The evidence is only to the effect that they had negligently put their signatures on those vouchers while passing the vouchers for payment. (Para 9)

In the absence of any evidence to show that A-3 was acting in conspiracy with A-1 and A-2 or that A-1 and A-2 had knowledge of the fact that A-3 had fraudulently and dishonestly prepared forged vouchers on the basis of which the amounts were sought to be withdrawn, the offences under Sections 467, 471 or 409 IPC are not proved against A-1 and A-2. Consequently, the offence under the provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act is also not made out. (Para 10). L. Chandraiah v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 670: AIR 2004 SC 252: 2004 Cri LJ 365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2003]

(ii) Dishonest intention — Mens rea — Civil dispute(s) only

See also under '(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings', below

See also under 'Ss. 415-420 — Cheating', below

See also under S. 482 CrPC, 1973 in Vol. 18, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 2 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[9953] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Criminal liability vis-à-vis civil action — Breach of trust, held, may be a civil wrong but when there is mens rea, it gives rise to criminal liability also (Para 64). Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v. CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

(4)(ii) Dishonest intention — Mens rea — Civil dispute(s) only (contd.)

[9954] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust as distinguished from mere error of judgment — Held, error of judgment does not attract criminal liability (Para 69). Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v. CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[9955] — S. 405 — Mens rea — Dishonest intention — Managing Director of pledgee Bank transferring the securities of pledger Bank in violation of the terms of agreement knowing all the facts — There is mens rea

The appellant Managing Director of the pledgee Bank raised money on the securities of the pledger Bank which it was not entitled to do and the pledger Bank was deprived of these securities even though not for all times. A deprivation even for a short period is within the meaning of the expression. If he disposed these securities with the intention of causing wrongful loss to the one and wrongful gain to the other, there can be no question that the appellant had the necessary mens rea. Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 SCR 483: 26 Comp Cas 340: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, 1125: (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 49.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha , JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1956]

[9956] — Ss. 405 and 24 — Criminal breach of trust vis-à-vis civil breach of trust — Difference, held, lies in dishonest intention

An act of breach of trust simpliciter involves civil wrong of which the person wronged may seek his redress for damages in a civil court but a breach of trust with mens rea gives rise to a criminal prosecution as well. Breach of trust simpliciter is not an offence as it is not associated with an intention which is dishonest. The term dishonestly defined in Section 24 IPC means doing anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another. So the offence is completed when misappropriation of the property has been made dishonestly. Even temporary misappropriation falls within the ambit of the said offence. (Paras 155 and 157)

Accused 6 parted with money of NHB which was entrusted to him so that Harshad Mehta could get it although not entitled therefor in law. The conduct of Accused 6 was therefore dishonest. He is guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust. With regard to Accused 7, there is not enough evidence to show his involvement in the said transactions. So far as the involvement of Accused 1 to 3 is concerned, they also played an important role in diverting call money from NHB which was meant for UCO Bank to the account of Harshad Mehta. As soon as the cheque for Rs 40 crores was received by UCO Bank, the amount stood entrusted to the officials of UCO Bank. However, Accused 1 to 3 in violation of law and in the absence of any contract, permitted the amount to be transferred to the account of Harshad Mehta who was not entitled to it. Therefore, the offence of criminal breach of trust stands proved against them also. (Para 158). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869; S.W. Palanikar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129; Kartikeswar Nayak v. State, 1996 Cri LJ 2253 (Ori), relied on

[9957] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients of — Mens rea, held, is a necessary ingredient without which a breach of trust may not result in criminal breach of trust

Every breach of trust may not result in a penal offence of criminal breach of trust unless there is evidence of a mental act of fraudulent misappropriation. An act of breach of trust involves a civil wrong in respect of which the person wronged may seek his redress for damages in a civil court but a breach of trust with mens rea gives rise to a criminal prosecution as well. (Para 8). S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2001 SC 2960: 2002 Cri LJ 548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil , JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

[9958] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients of, reiterated — Whether a dispute springing out of a contract having an arbitration clause can also attract S. 406 — In present case, respondent entrusted with paddy for milling by State Civil Supplies Corpn. Ltd. which respondent could not account for — Dispute referred to arbitrator and arbitrator making an award in favour of the Corporation — High Court upheld acquittal of respondent-accused by trial court since two views possible as to whether allegation made was of a civil or of a criminal nature — Held, approach of High Court in coming to such an abrupt conclusion, after having recorded that a criminal case may arise even when breach of contract is there and there is no bar for prosecution under criminal law, erroneous — Hence, matter remitted to High Court for fresh consideration in accordance with law (Paras 6 to 10). State of Punjab v. Pritam Chand, (2009) 16 SCC 769.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2009]

Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47, relied on

[9959] — Ss. 405, 420, 403 & 415 — Breach of contract — Filing of criminal complaint — Maintainability

A given set of facts may make out: (a) purely a civil wrong; or (b) purely a criminal offence; or (c) a civil wrong as also a criminal offence. A commercial transaction or a contractual dispute, apart from furnishing a cause of action for seeking remedy in civil law, may also involve a criminal offence. As the nature and scope of a civil proceeding are different from a criminal proceeding, the mere fact that the complaint relates to a commercial transaction or breach of contract, for which a civil remedy is available or has been availed of, is not by itself a ground to quash the criminal proceedings. The test is whether the allegations in the complaint disclose a criminal offence or not. (Para 12). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[9960] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Offences under — Necessary ingredients — Allegation of intention to cheat and of refusal by appellants to pay price for goods received from complainant — No allegation in complaint however, that at very inception of the contract between the parties, there was any intention to cheat — Held, no criminal offence is disclosed, much less under Ss. 406 and 420 and the case is one purely of civil liability — Not quashing prosecution of the appellants on such a complaint would amount to an abuse of process of court, hence appeal allowed and prosecution quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 37 and 73. Hotline Teletubes and Components Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 261: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1515.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2004]

[9961] — Ss. 406, 420, 465, 468 and 120-B — Cheating — Conspiracy — Ingredients of — Intention — Liability of principal for criminal acts of agent — P executed sale deed in Respondent 2's favour on appellant's behalf — Land in dispute was earlier sold to different persons by S — S brother of P — P was attesting witness also in sale deeds executed by S — Respondent 2 filed complaint case against appellant alleging deep-rooted conspiracy — Magistrate took cognizance and issued process against appellant — High Court dismissed appellant's petition under S. 482 CrPC holding that P, appellant's vendor, and his brother S, had in conspiracy with each other, sold away entire lands and appellant was also a party to such conspiracy — Held, no link established between sale deeds executed by S in respect of mutated property and appellant — Appellant was not an attesting witness to any of the sale deeds — If Respondent 2 prejudiced by fact that appellant had executed sale deed in his favour in respect of disputed land, he could question such transfer and claim damages in respect thereof from P by way of appropriate damages — No action in criminal court would lie in absence of any intention to cheat — Further held, filing of such a criminal complaint was only to pressurise appellant into making a settlement — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Contract Act, 1872, S. 188 (Paras 14 to 18). Rama Devi v. State of Bihar, (2010) 12 SCC 273.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2010]

[9962] — Ss. 406, 420, 467, 468 and 120-B — Allegation that accused persons transferred shares on the basis of forged and fabricated signatures — Mere filing of a claim before the Consumer Forum would not make the dispute a civil dispute — CrPC, 1973, S. 190. Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: AIR 1998 SC 2796.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sujata V. Manohar and G.B. Pattanaik , JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1998]

[9963] — S. 409 — Absence of dishonest intention — Accused entrusted with duty to maintain account of certain fund — Accused receiving Rs 166 as subscription which he kept with him — Absence of definite rules as to how he should keep the money relating to the fund — Evidence showing that he might keep the money wherever he liked — Held, the accused could not be convicted for misappropriating the said amount — The circumstance that he borrowed Rs 200 before he produced the amount could not overweigh the fact that the money was produced soon after he was asked to do so. Tulsidas v. State of Punjab, Crl. Appeal No. 100 of 1956.

[Date of decision: 25-8-1958]

(4)(ii) Dishonest intention — Mens rea — Civil dispute(s) only (contd.)

[9964] — S. 409 — Dishonest intention — Proof of

The gist of the offence of criminal misappropriation is "dishonest intention", and it is true that mere retention of property entrusted to a person without any dishonest intention is not criminal breach of trust. It is not, however, the law that the prosecution must prove how the accused person actually spent the amount; nor it is necessary in order to establish the dishonesty that the prosecution should establish an intention to retain permanently the property misappropriated. An intention wrongfully to deprive the owner of the use of the property for a time and to secure the use of the property for his own benefit for a time may be sufficient. State of Punjab v. Amar Singh, Crl. Appeal No. 172 of 1957.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar and S.K. Das , JJ. [Date of decision: 21-5-1958]

[9965] — Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 120-B — Ingredients — Existence of mens rea essential for establishing offences under Ss. 409, 467 and 471 — Alleged acts of fraudulent misappropriation of fund by encashing TA bills funded by Indian Population Project by making false allotment letters, acquittal rolls, entries in books and receipts in furtherance of criminal conspiracy with dishonest intention — Proof — Essential ingredients of conspiracy under S. 120-B not made out against appellant-accused — Mens rea of appellant-accused for offences under Ss. 409, 467 and 471 not proved, nor essential ingredients of those offences made out — Records established that appellant-accused were not beneficiaries of the misappropriated fund — Held, prosecution failed to prove the offences under Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B IPC and consequently offences under the PC Act also not made out — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(c) & 13(2)

The prosecution has miserably failed to establish the essential ingredients of the conspiracy under Section 120-B IPC by leading cogent and convincing evidence against the appellants, A-4 to A-7. (Para 15)

For the offence under Sections 409, 467 and 471, the existence of mens rea (guilty mind) must be proved. So far with regard to the offence under Section 467 IPC is concerned, there is no evidence to show that the appellants forged a document which purported to be a valuable security. There is also no evidence that the appellants had knowledge of fact that the allotment letter was a forged letter. Again, for an offence under Section 409 it must be proved that the person entrusted with the property, or any dominion over property in his capacity as a public servant committed criminal breach of trust in respect of such property as defined in Section 405 IPC. The evidence must show that he dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use that property or dishonestly used or dispossessed that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged. In the present case, there is no evidence that A-4 to A-7 dishonestly misappropriated or converted to their own use the amount of TA. On record it is established that A-4 to A-7 are not the beneficiaries of the misappropriated amount. (Para 16)

In the absence of any evidence to show that A-4 to A-7 (appellants) were acting in conspiracy with other accused persons and that A-4 to A-7 have fraudulently and dishonestly prepared forged bill on the basis of forged allotment letter, the offences under Sections 467, 471, 477-A or Section 409 are not proved against the appellants. Consequently, the offence under the provision of the Prevention of Corruption Act is also not made out. The trial court was, therefore, not justified in convicting A-4 to A-7 under the aforesaid sections of law. (Para 17). Radha Pisharassiar Amma v. State of Kerala, (2007) 13 SCC 410.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-2007]

(iii) Property — What is

See also under 'Ss. 415-420 — Cheating', below

[9966] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Entrustment of property is an essential ingredient of — Mere exercise of "power to allot" petroleum outlets by Minister concerned from out of his discretionary quota cannot constitute "property" within the meaning of S. 405

A trust contemplated by Section 405 would arise only when there is an entrustment of property or dominion over property. There has, therefore, to be a property belonging to someone which is entrusted to the person accused of the offence under Section 405. The entrustment of property creates a trust which is only an obligation annexed to the ownership of the property and arises out of a confidence reposed and accepted by the owner. The word "property", used in Section 409 IPC means the property which can be entrusted or over which dominion may be exercised. Mere exercise of "power to allot petrol pumps", and that too under discretionary quota, cannot be treated as "property" within the meaning of Section 405 of the Indian Penal Code, capable of being misutilised or misappropriated. (Paras 168, 171 and 172)

Having regard to the facts of the case and the ingredients of the offence constituting criminal breach of trust, as defined in Section 405, or the offence as set out in Section 409 IPC, it must be held that there was no case made out against the petitioner for any case being registered against him on the basis of the judgment passed by the Supreme Court nor was there any occasion to direct an investigation by CBI in that case. (Para 173). Common Cause, A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1196: AIR 1999 SC 2979.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad, K. Venkataswami and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1999]

*Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 530; Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 593, overruled

State of Gujarat v. Jaswantlal Nathalal, AIR 1968 SC 700: (1968) 2 SCR 408; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Chelloor Mankkal Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478: 1954 Cri LJ 102; CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045; R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821: (1963) 1 SCR 253, relied on

See also Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736 .*

[9967] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust in respect of a blank cheque — "Property" within the meaning of S. 405 — Cheque is a property — When blank cheque is issued to a person who misappropriates the same or uses the same for a purpose for which same was not issued, case under S. 406 made out

The private parties were Directors of the appellant Company and were closely related. The Company had two units. The Managing Director of the Company was one L. Allegedly, pursuant to negotiations between L on the one hand and Accused 2 and 3 Directors on the other, signed blank cheques were handed over by L to the said accused persons during period 2000 to 2004 as process for obtaining cheques from the Managing Director had been taking considerable time. However, dispute between the parties arose in 2005. A company petition was filed before the High Court. A scheme for arrangement submitted by the parties was approved, pursuant whereto one unit was transferred to Accused 1 and the other unit to L. For that purpose the units were demerged. L allegedly made oral requests to Accused 2 and 3 to return the unused signed blank cheques. However, allegedly on the premise that Respondents 2 and 3 entered into a conspiracy to misuse the said cheques L filed an informal complaint with the police in 2006 with an endorsement that there was no role for the police at that stage. The respondents thereafter issued a letter stating that with a view to repay a part of the institutional liability of Respondent 1 a cheque had been drawn by the appellant in favour of Respondent 1 which had been deposited for collection. A first information report was then lodged by the appellant alleging that the blank signed cheques issued in the year 2001-2002 had been fraudulently used. Legal notices were, however, issued by Respondent 1 upon the appellant with regard to dishonour of three cheques. On or about 13-11-2006 an application was filed before the High Court for quashing the first information report. On 6-12-2006, a complaint petition was filed by Respondent 1 under Sections 138 and 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act against the appellant and also its Chairman and Managing Director. The High Court not only considered the ingredients for the offences under Sections 406, 420 and 463 IPC but also the background facts leading to the dispute between the parties so as to enable it to ascertain whether the ingredients thereof stood satisfied or not. It proceeded on the basis that in view of the demerger scheme, the conduct of the appellant in keeping mum for a long time for getting the unused blank cheques returned is tell tale. It entered into the question as to whether the complaint petition was filed only with a view to pre-empt the respondents herein to take recourse to the remedies available to them to initiate a criminal proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act or the complaint petition in effect and substance should be permitted to be raised only by way of defence. It was held that the said complaint petition was filed on the basis whereof the first information report was directed to be lodged only to pre-empt the accused from filing a complaint petition under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and that even taking the allegations in the complaint to be true and correct, they did not make out a prima facie case of cheating or criminal breach of trust or forgery. Accordingly, the High Court held that continuation of the proceedings amounted to abuse of process of the Court.

Allowing the appeal in part,

Held :

In this case what has failed to attract the attention of the High Court was that maintainability of a criminal proceeding like the present one should not be determined only upon raising a presumption in terms of Section 139 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, it being a rebuttable one. (Para 23)

(4)(iii) Property — What is (contd.)

The High Court should have further taken into consideration the fact that in the event, the defence of the appellant is accepted in the criminal case, it will have no remedy to prosecute the respondents again. To contend that the acquittal of the appellant would have been the springboard for filing a complaint will not be correct. Nobody knows when the criminal case would come to an end. In a given situation, even it may become barred by limitation. It must also be borne in mind that commercial expediencies may lead a person to issue blank cheques. The course of action in the aforementioned situation, which could be taken recourse to was to make an attempt to find out as to whether the complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety constitutes an offence under Sections 420, 406 and 463 of the Penal Code or not. (Para 24)

Ingredients of cheating are:

(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; and

(ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property to any person or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. (Para 25)

Sections 415 read with Section 420 IPC indicates that fraudulent or dishonest inducement on the part of the accused must be at the inception and not at a subsequent stage. In this case blank cheques were handed over to the accused during the period 2000-2004 for use thereof for business purposes but the dispute between the parties admittedly arose much thereafter i.e. in 2005. Thus no case for proceeding against the respondent under Section 420 of the Penal Code is, therefore, made out. (Paras 26 to 28)

Filling up of the blanks in a cheque by itself would not amount to forgery. Whereas in the complaint petition, allegations have been made that it was Respondents 2 and 3 who had entered into a conspiracy to commit the said offence as indicated hereinbefore, in the counter-affidavit, it has been alleged that the employees of the respondent Company did so. (Para 29)

Although, Section 120-B IPC has been added, there does not exist any averment that Respondents 2 and 3 had entered into any conspiracy with their employees. No case for proceeding with the offence of forgery against the respondents has, thus, also been made out. (Para 30)

However, a case for proceeding against the respondents under Section 406 IPC has been made out. A cheque being a property, the same was entrusted to the respondents. If the said property has been misappropriated or has been used for a purpose for which the same had not been handed over, a case under Section 406 IPC may be found to have been made out. It may be true that even in a proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the appellant could raise a defence that the cheques were not meant to be used towards discharge of a lawful liability or a debt, but the same by itself would not mean that in an appropriate case, a complaint petition cannot be allowed to be filed. (Para 31)

The respondents were keeping watch over the matter. As soon as a first information report was lodged, a notice was immediately sent. A quashing application was filed within a few days of the lodging of the first information report. The investigation was not allowed to take place at all. Whereas it would have been the duty of the court to uphold and/or to protect the personal liberty of an accused in a case, but where the first information report prima facie discloses commission of a cognizable offence, the High Court, ordinarily, should not have interfered with investigation thereof by the statutory authority. (Para 32)

Investigation by IO may now be confined to the charge under Section 406 IPC. (Para 33). Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678: AIR 2008 SC 1683: (2008) 63 AIC 146 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107, relied on

[9968] — Ss. 405, 409 and 22 — Word "property" — Meaning of — "Funds" of a company in bank if property

There is no good reason to restrict the meaning of the word 'property' to movable property only when it is used without any qualification in S. 405 or in other sections of the Indian Penal Code. Whether the offence defined in a particular section of the Indian Penal Code can be committed in respect of any particular kind of property will depend not on the interpretation of the word 'property' but on the fact whether that particular kind of property can be subject to the acts covered by the section. It is in this sense that it may be said that the word 'property' in a particular section covers only that type of property with respect to which the offence contemplated in that section can be committed.

The word 'property' is used in the Code in a much wider sense than the expression 'movable property'. It is not therefore necessary to consider in detail what type of property will be included in the various sections of the Indian Penal Code.

The word 'fund' may mean actual cash resources of a particular kind (e.g. money in drawer or a bank), or it may be a mere accountancy expression used to describe a particular category which a person uses in making up his accounts. The words 'payment out of' when used in connection with the word 'fund' in its first meaning connote actual payment, e.g., by taking the money out of the drawer or drawing a cheque on the bank. When used in connection with the word 'fund' in its second meaning they connote that, for the purposes of the account in which the fund finds a place, the payment is debited to that fund, an operation which, of course, has no relation to the actual method of payment or the particular cash resources out of which the payment is made. Thus, if a company makes a payment out of its reserve fund — an example of the second meaning of the word 'fund' — the actual payment is made by cheque drawn on the company's banking account, the money in which may have been derived from a number of sources. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1831: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

Reg. v. Girdhar Dharamdas, 6 Bom HCR Cr 33 and Jugdown Sinha v. Q.E., 23 Cal 372, overruled

Emperor v. Bishan Pd., 37 All 128: AIR 1915 All 93(2): 16 Cri LJ 54; Ramchandra Gurwala v. Emperor, AIR 1926 Lah 385: 27 Cri LJ 1383; Manchersha Ardeshir v. Ismail Ibrahim, 60 Bom 706: AIR 1936 Bom 167: 37 Cri LJ 577; Daud Khan v. Emperor, AIR 1925 All 673: 27 Cri LJ 17, approved

D.C.M. v. Harnam Singh, AIR 1955 SC 590: (1955) 2 SCR 402, followed

[9969] — Ss. 406 and 34 — Wrongful withholding of company quarters — Criminal complaint for — Maintainability — Authorisation for filing complaint — Bona fides of — Eviction-directed — Manager, having been authorised by company resolution and power of attorney, filing complaint against retired employee for wrongfully occupying company quarters — Though power of attorney was executed prior to purchase of stamp papers, it was notarised on a date subsequent to execution and purchase of stamp papers — Trial court by wrongly reading rubber stamp date of notarisation as being prior to date of purchase of stamp papers, holding power of attorney as fictitious and therefore, dismissing complaint — Criminal complaint, held, was maintainable and cognizance was rightly taken — Said documents cannot be termed as fictitious or manufactured so as to oust the appellant from the arena of justice — Stamp Act, 1899, S. 17 — Powers of Attorney Act, 1882, Ss. 2 and 4 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 630 and 621. Automobile Products India Ltd. v. Das John Peter, (2010) 12 SCC 593: (2010) 158 Comp Cas 69: (2010) 93 AIC 214 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Deepak Verma , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2010]

(iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property

[9970] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Essential ingredients for — Held, where the first ingredient of criminal breach of trust, that is, entrustment is missing, the same would not constitute a criminal breach of trust (Para 15). V.R. Dalal v. Yougendra Naranji Thakkar, (2008) 15 SCC 625: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1141: AIR 2008 SC 2793: (2008) 66 AIC 113 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2008]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678, relied on

[9971] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients — Entrustment of the property or dominion over the property — Property hypothecated to creditor — Creating only a charge on the property with right in favour of the creditor to take possession in the event of default on the part of debtor-hypothecator — Possession remaining with the debtor-owner and creditor having neither ownership nor beneficial interest in the property — Held, element of entrustment not involved in such hypothecation — Owner-debtor does not hold the property in trust for the creditor — Charge over the property created in favour of the creditor does not create a beneficial interest in the creditor unless he takes possession of the property in exercise of his right under the deed of hypothecation — Whether the deed created a floating charge or a fixed charge inconsequential

(4)(iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property (contd.)

A criminal breach of trust involves the following ingredients: (a) a person should have been entrusted with property, or entrusted with dominion over property; (b) that person should dishonestly misappropriate or convert to his own use that property, or dishonestly use or dispose of that property or wilfully suffer any other person to do so; (c) that such misappropriation, conversion, use or disposal should be in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract which the person has made, touching the discharge of such trust. (Para 22)

The question is whether there is "entrustment" in an hypothecation? Hypothecation is a mode of creating a security without delivery of title or possession. Both, ownership of the movable property and possession thereof, remain with the debtor. The creditor has an equitable charge over the property and is given a right to take possession and sell the hypothecated movables to recover his dues (Note: no opinion is being expressed on the question whether possession can be taken by the creditor, without or with recourse to a court of law). The creditor may also have the right to claim payment from the sale proceeds (if such proceeds are identifiable and available). But there is no "entrustment of the property" or "entrustment of dominion over the property" by the hypothecatee (creditor) to the hypothecator (debtor) in an hypothecation. When possession has remained with the debtor/owner and when the creditor has neither ownership nor beneficial interest, obviously there cannot be any entrustment by the creditor. (Para 25)

The allegations in the complaints are that aircrafts and the engines fitted therein belong to NEPC India. Possession of the aircraft, neither actual nor symbolic, was delivered to IOC. As the possession of the aircraft remained all along with NEPC India in its capacity as the owner and the deed of hypothecation merely created a charge over the aircrafts with a right to take possession in the event of default, it cannot be said that there was either entrustment of the aircrafts or entrustment of the dominion over the aircrafts by IOC to NEPC India. The very first requirement of Section 405, that is, the person accused of criminal breach of trust must have been "entrusted with the property" or "entrusted with any dominion over property" is, therefore, absent. (Para 27)

It is not possible to accept the contention that Duncans Agro decision itself recognises that there can be criminal breach of trust where a beneficial interest exists in the other person, and the offender holds the property in trust for such person and that when the deed of hypothecation was executed by NEPC India in favour of IOC, the hypothecation created a beneficial interest in the property in favour of IOC, and vis-à-vis such "beneficial interest" of IOC, the possession of the property by NEPC India was in "trust". The Supreme Court in Duncans Agro specifically held that when goods are hypothecated, the owner does not hold the goods in trust for the creditor. A charge over the hypothecated goods in favour of the creditor cannot be said to create a beneficial interest in the creditor, until and unless the creditor in exercise of his rights under the deed, takes possession. The term "beneficial interest" has a specific meaning and connotation. When a trust is created vesting a property in the trustee, the right of the beneficiary against the trustee (who is the owner of the trust property) is known as the "beneficial interest". The trustee has the power of management and the beneficiary has the right of enjoyment. Whenever there is a breach of any duty imposed on the trustee with reference to the trust property or the beneficiary, he commits a breach of trust. On the other hand, when the owner of a goods hypothecates a movable property in favour of a creditor, no "beneficial interest" is created in favour of the creditor nor does the owner become a trustee in regard to the property hypothecated. The right of the creditor under a deed of hypothecation is the right to enforce the charge created under the deed of hypothecation in the manner specified in the deed and by no stretch of imagination can such right be equated to a beneficial interest of a beneficiary in a property held in trust. Therefore, the contention that a creditor has a beneficial interest in the hypothecated property and the owner is in the position of a trustee with reference to the creditor is liable to be rejected. (Paras 28 and 29)

There is also no basis for the further submission that Duncans Agro case dealt with a hypothecation deed creating a floating charge, whereas the case on hand related to a fixed charge and therefore, the principle laid down in Duncans Agro, (1996) 5 SCC 591, will not apply. The principle stated in Duncans Agro will apply in regard to all types of hypothecations. It makes no difference whether the charge created by the deed of hypothecation is a floating charge or a fixed charge. Where a specific existing property is hypothecated, what is created is a "fixed" charge. The floating charge refers to a charge created generally against the assets held by the debtor at any given point of time during the subsistence of the deed of hypothecation. The principle in Duncans Agro is based on the requirement of "entrustment" and not with reference to the "floating" nature of the charge. (Para 30)

Accordingly, it must be held that the basic and very first ingredient of criminal breach of trust, that is, entrustment, is missing and therefore, even if all the allegations in the complaint are taken at their face value as true, no case of "criminal breach of trust" as defined under Section 405 IPC can be made out against NEPC India. (Para 31). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

Chelloor Mankkal Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478: 1954 Cri LJ 102; Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, 1956 SCR 483: AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, relied on

CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045, applied

CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045, explained

Gobindram C. Motwani v. Emperor, (1938) 39 Cri LJ 509: AIR 1938 Sind 73, distinguished

[9972] — S. 405 — Currency notes taken by police officer while making search of a person found in suspicious circumstances — Held, amounts to entrustment

To constitute an offence under S. 405 there must be an entrustment of property and dishonest misappropriation of it. The person entrusted may misappropriate it himself, or he may wilfully suffer another person to do so. In the instant case the respondent, being a police officer was legally entitled to search a person found under suspicious circumstances; and complainant in handing over the bundle of notes to the police officer must have done so in the confidence that he would get back the notes from him when the suspicion was cleared. In these circumstances, there cannot be any difficulty in holding that the currency notes were alleged to have been handed over by the complainant to the respondent for a specific purpose, but were dishonestly misappropriated by the respondent. He was certainly entrusted with the notes within the meaning of S. 405 of the Code. State of U.P. v. Babu Ram Upadhya, AIR 1961 SC 751: (1961) 2 SCR 679: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 773, 777.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar[2], A.K. Sarkar[1], K. Subba Rao[1], K.N. Wanchoo[2] and J.R. Mudholkar[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1960]

[9973] — S. 405 — Dominion over property — That control over the funds of the company was given but no further steps taken, held, will not nullify the power entrusted to him — Non-exercise of the power will not make the dominion nugatory. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1834: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

[9974] — S. 405 — Dominion over property — Partnership assets in the hand of partner — Mere existence of dominion over property not sufficient — Must be established that dominion was result of entrustment by special agreement between parties

Upon the plain reading of S. 405, IPC it is obvious that before a person can be said to have committed criminal breach of trust it must be established that he was either entrusted with or entrusted with dominion over property which he is said to have converted to his own use or disposed of in violation of any direction of law, etc. Every partner has dominion over property by reason of the fact that he is a partner. This is a kind of dominion which every owner of property has over his property. But it is not dominion of this kind which satisfies the requirements of S. 405. In order to establish "entrustment of dominion" over property to an accused person the mere existence of that person's dominion over property is not enough. It must be further shown that his dominion was the result of entrustment. The prosecution must establish that dominion over the assets or a particular asset of the partnership was, by a special agreement between the parties, entrusted to the accused person. If in the absence of such a special agreement a partner receives money belonging to the partnership he cannot be said to have received it in a fiduciary capacity or in other words cannot be held to have been "entrusted" with dominion over partnership properties.

If the working partner was authorised to carry on the work of recovery of the dues of the partnership and to spend the money for business of the partnership i.e. if the money was required for the business of partnership it was not obligatory upon the accused to deposit it in the bank. The appellant working partner cannot be said to have been guilty of criminal breach of trust even with respect to the dues realised by him from certain person and in not depositing them in the bank as alleged by the prosecution. Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433: (1965) 2 SCR 429: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 431, 433.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1964]

(4)(iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property (contd.)

Bhuban Mohan Das v. Surendra Mohan Das, AIR 1951 Cal 69: 52 Cri LJ 723: ILA (1952) 2 Cal 23, approved

Jagannath v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Bom 57: 33 Cri LJ 317 and Queen v. Okhoy Coomar Shaw, 13 Beng LR 307, overruled

Followed in AIR 1968 SC 700: 1968 Cri LJ 803

[9975] — S. 405 — Expressions "entrusted with property" and "with any dominion over property" — Meaning of — Ownership or beneficial interest in the ownership of property must be in some person other than the accused and the accused must hold it on account of some person or in some way for his benefit — Floating charge made on goods by way of security to cover up credit facility — Disposal of goods covering the security against credit facility — Offence of criminal breach of trust not made out

The expression "entrusted with property" or "with any dominion over property" has been used in a wide sense in Section 405 IPC. Such expression includes all cases in which goods are entrusted, that is, voluntarily handed over for a specific purpose and dishonestly disposed of in violation of law or in violation of contract. The expression 'entrusted' appearing in Section 405 IPC is not necessarily a term of law. It has wide and different implications in different contexts. It is, however, necessary that the ownership or beneficial interest in the ownership of the property entrusted in respect of which offence is alleged to have been committed must be in some person other than the accused and the latter must hold it on account of some person or in some way for his benefit. The expression 'trust' in Section 405 IPC is a comprehensive expression and has been used to denote various kinds of relationships like the relationship of trustee and beneficiary, bailor and bailee, master and servant, pledger and pledgee. When some goods are hypothecated by a person to another person, the ownership of the goods still remains with the person who has hypothecated such goods. The property in respect of which criminal breach of trust can be committed must necessarily be the property of some person other than the accused or the beneficial interest in or ownership of it must be in the other person and the offender must hold such property in trust for such other person or for his benefit. In a case of pledge, the pledged article belongs to some other person but the same is kept in trust by the pledgee. In the instant case, a floating charge was made on the goods by way of security to cover up credit facility. In such case for disposing of the goods covering the security against credit facility the offence of criminal breach of trust is not committed. CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045: AIR 1996 SC 2452.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1996]

Applied in Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736

[9976] — S. 405 — Ingredients of — Entrustment

Per Fazal Ali and Mukharji, JJ.

The fundamental core of the offence of criminal breach of trust is that a property must be entrusted and the dominion of the property should be given to the trustee. Where there is a clear allegation of entrustment by the wife against the husband, he could be prosecuted by a criminal court on a complaint filed by the wife.

Per Varadarajan, J.

Section 405 requires a separate specific agreement for entrustment. Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1985 SC 628: 1985 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A. Varadarajan[2] and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1985]

[9977] — S. 405 — Partner's dominion over partnership property — Nature — Criminal liability on misuse — Authorisation by partners to collect moneys or property of the firm — Held, amounts to entrustment of dominion over that property liable under S. 405, IPC in case of misappropriation — Partnership Act, 1932, S. 15. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1837: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

33 Bom LR 1518: AIR 1932 Bom 57, approved

But see AIR 1965 SC 1433: (1965) 2 SCR 429: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 431

[9978] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Complaint under by stockist against his principals — Earlier notice claiming payment of Rs 15 lakhs — Issuance of summons, if on facts proper — Neither the complaint nor the statement of witnesses showing that any property was entrusted to any of the accused or that the accused had dominion over any property of the complainant which the accused converted to their own use — In such circumstances, the ingredients of S. 405, held, were not even prima facie satisfied — Hence, the Magistrate was in serious error in issuing process — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 200, 202, 203 and 204

Under an agreement dated 21-2-1995, Appellant 1 (the Company) appointed Respondent 2 as its consignment stockist subject to certain terms and conditions. The agreement remained in operation up to 31-3-1997. On 3-10-1997, Respondent 2 served a notice on Appellant 1 requesting him to pay a certain amount or in the alternative refer the dispute to arbitration under the arbitration clause contained in the agreement. The notice went in vain. Thereafter, Respondent 2 filed a complaint against the appellants under Sections 406, 420 and 120-B IPC alleging that the appellants, in connivance of each other, had committed the offences of criminal breach of trust and cheating against him. The Magistrate issued summons against the appellants. The appellants filed before the High Court a petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the said order of the Magistrate. The High Court dismissed that petition. The appellants contended that the essential ingredients of Sections 405, 415 and 120-B IPC had not been satisfied and, therefore, the Magistrate erred in issuing the process. They added that High Court also failed to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 IPC to correct that error. They added that at any rate no case was made out against Appellants 1 to 6 and 8. Partly allowing the appeal,

In the present case, there is nothing either in the complaint and/or in the sworn statements of the complainant and the witnesses that any property was entrusted to any of the appellants at all or the appellants had domain over any of the properties of Respondent 2 which they dishonestly converted to their own use so as to satisfy the ingredients of Section 405 IPC punishable under Section 406 IPC. Further, the agreement also did not require entrustment of any property to the appellants. Taking the complaint and the statements of the witnesses as they are, it cannot be said even prima facie that the appellants committed any offence punishable under Section 406 IPC, since the ingredients of that offence were not satisfied. Hence the Magistrate committed a serious error in issuing process against the appellants for the said offence. (Para 20). S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2001 SC 2960: 2002 Cri LJ 548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521; Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149, followed

[9979] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust — A Minister is in a position of a trustee in respect of the public property under his charge and discretion — He must therefore deal with people's property in just and fair manner, failing which he would be liable for criminal breach of trust. Common Cause, A Registered Society (Petrol pumps matter) v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 530: AIR 1996 SC 3538.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1996]

Overruled in Common Cause, A Registered Society* v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667

[9980] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients of — Entrustment/ dominion over property — Held, there was nothing in complaint which even remotely suggested that respondent IEL had entrusted any property to appellant accused — No evidence that appellants had dominion over any of properties of respondent, which they dishonestly converted to their own use — Complaint quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 33 to 38). V.P. Shrivastava v. Indian Explosives Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 361: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2010]

Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; Common Cause v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1196; Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

[9981] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients/prerequisites for offence of — Whether made out at stage of framing of charge — Entrustment of any property or misappropriation (to, or by in-laws), found lacking — Held, charge under S. 406, not made out

The facts mentioned in the complaint, taken on their face value, did not make out a prima facie case against the appellants for having dishonestly misappropriated the stridhan of the complainant, allegedly handed over to them, thereby committing criminal breach of trust punishable under Section 406 IPC. The very prerequisite of entrustment of the property and its misappropriation by the appellants were lacking in the instant case. It was also noted in the charge-sheet itself that the complainant had refused to take articles back when this offer was made to her by the investigating officer. The Sessions Judge and the High Court erred in law in coming to the conclusion that a case for framing of charge under Section 406 IPC was made out. (Para 18). Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507: (2008) 62 AIC 155 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2007]

Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. S.K. Roy, (1974) 4 SCC 230: 1974 SCC (Cri) 399, relied on or any of the other accused persons at all nor had the accused persons dominion over any property of the complaint consignment stockist which the accused persons might have dishonestly converted to their own use, held, the ingredients of the offence punishable under Section 406 were not satisfied — Hence, in such a case, the Magistrate ought not to have issued process — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 202 and 203. S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2001 SC 2960: 2002 Cri LJ 548.

[9982] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Ingredients of the offence under — Where the accused company supplied to its consignment stockist goods in a quantity less than that postulated in the agreement but there was no entrustment of any property to the company

(4)(iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

[9983] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Allowing", "dominion", "entrustment" — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c) & (2)

By enacting the Amending Act of 1952 and creating sub-section (4) to S. 5 the legislature specifically stated that the offence under S. 5(1)(c) is different from any previous existing offence under any penal statute and there can, therefore, be no scope for speculation about repeal. The words used in sub-section (4) "any other law" made the position quite clear and explicit. Other law does not mean identical law in which case the word 'other' will have no meaning. A comparison of the elements of the offences under S. 405 Indian Penal Code and S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act would show that an offence under S. 405, Penal Code is separate and distinct from the one under S. 5(1)(c). There are three points of difference between S. 405, Penal Code and S. 5(1)(c). The dishonest misappropriation contemplated in S. 405, Penal Code is different; whereas that under S. 5(1)(c) is either dishonest misappropriation or fraudulent misappropriation. The latter section is much wider in amplitude than the former. In S. 405, Penal Code the words used are "in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied. There are no such expressions in S. 5(1)(c). It is clear, therefore, that whereas under S. 405, Penal Code there are three essential ingredients to constitute the offence; each one of them being separate and distinct, in S. 5(1)(c) there are only two. Now considering S. 5(1)(c) there are certain matters in it which are absent in S. 405, Penal Code. The words 'dominion' and 'entrustment' connote two different things. The word 'dominion' is not in S. 5(1)(c). The word 'fraudulently' is not present in S. 405, and in S. 5(1)(c) the gist of the offence can also be made out if the offender allows any person so to do, i.e., allows any person to derogate from the law as contemplated in the earlier portion of the section. The meaning put on the word 'allows' would certainly be different from 'dishonest misappropriation' by the offender himself. It may be that the word can mean allowing by negligence or without any volition on the part of the offender. It may also mean that there is some kind of positive and tacit acquiescence necessary to bring home the offence. In any event, allowing other persons so to do does not find a place in S. 405, Penal Code though this section also contemplates "wilfully suffering any other person so to do". There is an essential difference between "allowing" a person and "wilfully suffering" a person to do a certain thing. There can, therefore, be no doubt whatever that S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act creates a new offence called "criminal misconduct" and cannot by implication displace the offence under S. 405, Penal Code.

In S. 405, Penal Code the offender must wilfully suffer another person to misappropriate the property entrusted, but in S. 5(1)(c) if he allows another person to dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriate or otherwise convert for his own use any property so entrusted, then it is an offence. There is a vast difference between wilfully suffering another and allowing a person to do a particular thing and the word "allows" is much wider in its import. Wilfully presupposes a conscious action, while even by negligence one can allow another to do a thing. Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

State v. Pandurang, AIR 1955 Bom 451; R. v. V. Satyanarayanmurthy, AIR 1953 Mad 137: 1953 Cri LJ 309; Amarendra Nath Ray v. State, AIR 1955 Cal 236: 1955 Cri LJ 784; Mohd. Ali v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 68: 1953 Cri LJ 1523; Bhup Narain v. State, AIR 1952 All 35: 1952 Cri LJ 236; Gopal Das v. State, AIR 1954 All 80: 1954 Cri LJ 96, approved

State v. Gurcharan Singh, AIR 1952 Punj 89: 1952 Cri LJ 316, overruled

Followed in State of Punjab v. Shadi Lal, 1960 Cri LJ 539: AIR 1960 SC 397

[9984] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Dominion over property

In the present case the accused and one R could operate on the accounts of a company with the Bank under the powers conferred by the Board of Directors. The accused got blank cheques signed by R on the representation that they would be used for the legitimate purposes of the company but he used them for purposes not connected with the company. It was contended by the accused that he could not have committed the offence of criminal breach of trust when he alone had not the dominion over the funds of the company, the accounts of which he could not operate alone.

Held :

The accused did not get dominion over the funds on account of R's signing blank cheques. The signing of the blank cheques merely facilitated C's committing breach of trust. He got control and dominion over the funds under the powers conferred on him by the Board of Directors, by its resolution authorising him and R to operate on the accounts of the Insurance Company with the Chartered Bank. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1837, 1: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

ILR 26 Pat 703: AIR 1949 Pat 69: 50 Cri LJ 108, overruled

21 Suth WR Cr 59, 61: 13 Beng LR FB 307 and 33 Bom LR 1518: AIR 1932 Bom 57 33 Cri LJ 577, approved

[9985] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Entrusted"

The term "entrusted" found in S. 405, IPC governs not only the words "with the property" immediately following it but also the words "or with any dominion over the property" occurring thereafter. Before there can be any entrustment there must be a trust meaning thereby an obligation annexed to the ownership of property and a confidence reposed in and accepted by the owner or declared and accepted by him for the benefit of another or of another and the owner. But that does not mean that such an entrustment need conform to all the technicalities of the law of trust. A mere transaction of sale cannot amount to entrustment. State of Gujarat v. Jaswantlal Nathalal, AIR 1968 SC 700: (1968) 2 SCR 408: 1968 Cri LJ 803.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, J.M. Shelat and K.S. Hegde , JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-1967]

Satyendra Nath Mukherji v. Emperor, ILR (1947) 1 Cal 97, approved

[9986] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Entrustment"

No question of entrustment arises when a sum is paid by way of illegal gratification along with some transaction. C.M. Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478: 1954 Cri LJ 102: 1953 Ker LT 173.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Patanjali Sastri, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea , S.R. Das, Vivian Bose and Ghulam Hasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-1952]

[9987] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Entrustment — Mere transaction of sale does not amount to entrustment — Government selling cement to contractor solely for purpose of using it in connection with specified construction work — Held, there was no entrustment

The expression 'entrustment' carries with it the implication that the person handing over any property or on whose behalf that property is handed over to another, continues to be its owner. Further, the person handing over the property must have confidence in the person taking the property so as to create a fiduciary relationship between them. A mere transaction of sale cannot amount to an entrustment. When the Government sold cement to a contractor for the purpose of being used in connection with a specified construction work, the transaction is not anything other than a sale. After delivery of the cement, the Government had neither any right or dominion over it. Failure to comply with any law on cement control may offend that law but there was no breach of trust and the contractor was not guilty under S. 409 Penal Code. State of Gujarat v. Jaswantlal Nathalal, AIR 1968 SC 700: (1968) 2 SCR 408: 1968 Cri LJ 803, 805.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, J.M. Shelat and K.S. Hegde , JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-1967]

[9988] — Ss. 405 and 409 — In any manner entrusted — Securities pledged with the Bank for specific purpose on specified conditions — There is entrustment for the purposes of S. 405

The contention is that the parties never contemplated the creation of a trust in the strict sense of the term. But when S. 405 which defines "criminal breach of trust" speaks of a person being in any manner entrusted with property, it does not contemplate the creation of a trust with all the technicalities of the law of trust.

It contemplates the creation of a relationship whereby the owner of property makes it over to another person to be retained by him until a certain contingency arises or to be disposed of by him on the happening of a certain event. The person who transfers possession of the property to the second party still remains the legal owner of the property and the person in whose favour possession is so transferred has only the custody of the property to be kept or disposed of by him for the benefit of the other party, the person so put in possession only obtaining a special interest by way of a claim for money advanced or spent upon the safe keeping of the thing or such other incidental expenses as may have been incurred by him. Hence the appellant can be said either to have been entrusted with the property in a derivative sense or to have dominion over the securities as a banker. Thus, in either case, entrustment, the essential condition for application of S. 409, IPC is fulfilled. Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 SCR 483: 26 Comp Cas 340: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, 1124: (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 49.

(4)(iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha , JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1956]

Followed in AIR 1968 SC 700: 1968 Cri LJ 803

[9989] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Property entrusted to director of a company — Held, directors are not only agents but are in some sense and to some extent trustees or in position of trustees. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1837: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

[9990] — S. 408 — Criminal breach of trust — Entrustment — Proof of — No reliable and direct evidence of entrustment of the money to appellant — Also absence of indirect evidence and failure of prosecution to show the manner of keeping accounts — Mere production of entry in books, held, not conclusive — Reasonable explanation by appellant — Conviction set aside

Absence of evidence on a material and important aspect renders it unsafe to hold that the charge of breach of trust is brought home to the appellant.

There is no direct evidence of entrustment to the appellant. On going through the record there is no indirect evidence of entrustment. All that the prosecution did was to produce the books of account of the head office and of the branch office. There is a debit entry in the books of the branch office showing that a sum of Rs 7000 was given to the appellant on November 10, 1965 for being taken to the head office but the mere entry, unsupported by any oral evidence cannot prove entrustment. Section 34 of the Evidence Act says that entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business are relevant but such statements shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability. The prosecution did not examine anyone even to show that the books of account were regularly kept in the course of business nor indeed was any attempt made to lead evidence apart from the production of books of account to prove the entrustment of the amount to the appellant.

In the vague state of record it is impossible to dismiss the explanation of the appellant as unreasonable. There is no evidence of entrustment, no evidence in regard to the mode and manner of keeping the accounts and not even a suggestion that the cash on hand was at any time tallied or checked. Dadarao v. State of Maharashtra, (1974) 3 SCC 630: 1974 SCC (Cri) 120: AIR 1974 SC 388: 1975 MLJ (Cri) 46: 1975 (12) ACC 9: 1974 Cri LJ 447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Dwivedi and Y.V. Chandrachud , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1973]

[9991] — S. 409 — Applicability of — First condition — Securities pledged with bank — Securities continuing to be the property of the pledger bank — Held, Managing Director holding a power of attorney on behalf of the pledgee bank, can be said to have been entrusted with the property in a derivative sense or to have dominion over the securities as a banker; and thus in either, the first essential condition for the application of S. 409, IPC is fulfilled. Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 SCR 483: 26 Comp Cas 340: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, 1124: (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 49.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha , JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1956]

[9992] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Entrustment of money admitted by the accused — Burden lies on him to prove that entrustment has been carried out and the obligation has been discharged — His explanation has to be examined on preponderance of probabilities — On facts held, defence of accused is probable and he is entitled to benefit of doubt — Case of entrustment of Government money by government servant — Forgery and interpolation in cash book alleged — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106. Jagat Narayan Jha v. State of Bihar, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 246: 1994 Cri LJ 1100.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1992]

[9993] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Property of a govt. company purchased by a firm of which A-1, the then CM was a partner — CM or a Minister not shown to have dominion over the property of the company — Relationship between A-1 and the company not shown to be one of trustee and beneficiary — Held on facts, ingredients of S. 409 not attracted

The properties in question belonged to a corporation which is a separate and distinct entity from the Government and the properties are held by it as an owner and it has complete control over the same except, when the said properties are to be alienated, approval of the Government has to be obtained as provided under the articles of association of the said Corporation. Indeed there is no material in the whole case to come to the conclusion that any trust has been or deemed to have been created in respect of the said properties and that the relationship between A-1 and the govt. company is one of trustee and beneficiary. There is absolutely no entrustment of the properties in any manner, which allows a dominion over it except approving or disapproving an act on the part of the Corporation either to sell or to alienate the properties. It cannot be said that a public servant who holds a particular portfolio and has an element of supervisory control in certain matters, has a dominion over the property so as to exercise any legal incidents attached to the right of ownership. Therefore, there was no entrustment of the said properties and it cannot be said that A-1 had dominion over the said properties either as the Chief Minister or as the Minister of Industries and in any case, the evidence does not establish the ingredient of dishonest disposal or conversion of property for personal use. Thus the charge under Section 409 is also not established. (Para 53). R. Sai Bharathi v. J. Jayalalitha, (2004) 2 SCC 9: 2004 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2004 SC 692: 2004 Cri LJ 286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2003]

[9994] — S. 409 — Embezzlement of fund collected by appellant Taxation Clerk from municipal tax payers without depositing the same to the account of Municipal Committee alleged — Onus of proof on appellant — Appellant admitting receipt of the amount but stating that as per usual practice, he had handed over the amount to the Cashier who had defalcated the same — Cashier neither admitting receipt of the money from appellant not admitting existence of any practice as alleged by appellant — Cashier acquitted by lower appellate court — Held, plea of appellant not acceptable

The prosecution was successful in proving the charge against the appellant. The entrustment as such is not denied by the appellant. It was for him to discharge the onus that he had discharged the trust as was expected of him. By merely taking the plea that he had passed on the sum to the cashier, the trust cannot be said to have been discharged and could only be done if either the cashier would admit receipt or the appellant had reasonably established that there had been a practice to pass on such money without receipt. No departmental man, least of all the accountant, has come forward to support the existence of such practice. The appellant cannot be permitted to say that whatever he had said in his statement under S. 313, CrPC is the gospel truth. The argument of the appellant that the cashier was wrongly acquitted may be plausible, but in the facts and circumstances that fact alone can be of no help to the appellant. Bagga Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cri LJ 2883 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1994]

[9995] — S. 409 — Entrustment — Failure of Tahsildar to deposit in the Treasury amounts of land revenue, fines etc. — Though Reader of Tahsildar physically receiving the amounts, Tahsildar countersigning the receipts prepared by the Reader — Tahsildar having dominion over the accounts was "entrusted with the money" — Neither office practice and procedure followed nor amounts entered in the account books — Accused, held, guilty of misappropriation of the amounts entrusted to him. Vasant Moghe v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 3 SCC 771: 1979 SCC (Cri) 868: AIR 1979 SC 1008: 1979 Cri LJ 885.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy , JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1978]

[9996] — S. 409 — Entrustment of or dominion over property — Bank director not only an agent but a trustee having dominion or control over the bank property which comes into his hand — Such 'property' is a chose in action — De facto managing director committing misappropriation of property without substituting in lieu thereof securities of equal amount, held, liable under. Shivnarayan Laxminarayan Joshi v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 2 SCC 465: 1980 SCC (Cri) 493: AIR 1980 SC 439: 1980 Cri LJ 388.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1979]

[9997] — S. 409 — Entrustment of property — Proof — In absence of legal and independent proof of entrustment partial admission of entrustment obtained by putting a question with regard to entrustment, held, insufficient to prove the charge — Rather, the putting of such question, in the said circumstances, would itself be improper. Jiwan Dass v. State of Haryana, (1999) 2 SCC 530: 1999 SCC (Cri) 288: AIR 1999 SC 1301: 1999 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1999]

(4)(iv) Entrustment of or dominion over property (contd.)

[9998] — S. 409 — Failure by public servant to disburse entrusted amounts to the labour and the contractor, held, established on evidence — However, in view of the facts that the accused-appellant was likely to lose his service and had already undergone 6½ months' RI out of the total term of 2 years' RI, his sentence reduced to the extent of the imprisonment already undergone and a fine of Rs 1000. Vishnu Datta Mishra v. State of M.P., (1979) 4 SCC 382: 1979 SCC (Cri) 993: AIR 1979 SC 825: 1979 Cri LJ 565.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-1978]

[9999] — S. 409 — Giving of charge — Merely giving keys and that too on a holiday, does not amount to giving charge. Amrut Sakharam Sanap v. State of Maharashtra, (1971) 3 SCC 918: 1972 SCC (Cri) 166.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1970]

[10000] — Ss. 409 and 405 — Allocation of business amongst Ministers — Thereby no trust of the government properties is created in favour of any Minister — Merely because a person is elected by the people and is inducted as a Minister, he cannot be said to be holding a trust on behalf of the people — Hence, on that basis it cannot be determined whether he committed offence of criminal breach of trust — Nor can the doctrine of public trust be applied as that doctrine pertains to environmental law — Criminal breach of trust can be determined only under the provisions of the Penal Code — Constitution of India — Art. 77(3)

In the judgment under review the Court was of the opinion that a person on being elected by the people and on becoming a Minister holds a sacred trust on behalf of the people. This, is a philosophical concept and reflects the image of virtue in its highest conceivable perfection. This philosophy cannot be employed for determination of the offence of "criminal breach of trust" which is defined in the Indian Penal Code. Whether the offence of "criminal breach of trust" has been committed by a person has to be determined strictly on the basis of the definition of that offence set out in the Penal Code. (Para 159)

The Court has also invoked the "Doctrine of Public Trust" which is a doctrine of environmental law under which the natural resources such as air, water, forest, lakes, rivers and wildlife are public properties "entrusted" to the Government for their safe and proper use and proper protection. Public Trust Law recognises that some types of natural resources are held in trust by the Government for the benefit of the public. The doctrine enjoins upon the Government to protect the resources for the enjoyment of the general public rather than to permit their use for private ownership or commercial purposes. The "Doctrine of Public Trust" has been evolved so as to prevent unfair dealing with or dissipation of all natural resources. This doctrine is an ancient and somewhat obscure creation of Roman and British law which has been discovered recently by environmental lawyers in search of a theory broadly applicable to environmental litigation. But this doctrine cannot be invoked in fixing the criminal liability and the whole matter will have to be decided on the principles of criminal jurisprudence, one of which is that the criminal liability has to be strictly construed and offence can be said to have been committed only when all the ingredients of that offence as defined in the statute are found to have been satisfied. (Paras 160 and 161)

Election to the State Legislature or the House of the People are held under the Constitution on the basis of adult suffrage. On being elected as a Member of Parliament, the petitioner was inducted as Minister of State. The Department of Petroleum and Natural Gas was allocated to him. Under the allocation of business rules, made by the President of India, the distribution of petroleum products, inter alia, came to be allocated to the petitioner. This allocation of business under the Constitution is done for smooth and better administration and for more convenient transaction of business of the Government of India. In this way, neither a "trust", as ordinarily understood or as defined under the Trust Act, was created in favour of the petitioner nor did he become a "trustee" in that sense. (Para 163)

It must, therefore, be held that the petitioner does not, on becoming the Minister of State for Petroleum and Natural Gas, assume the role of a "trustee" in the real sense nor does a "trust" come into existence in respect of the government properties. Therefore, the Court's direction regarding investigation by CBI into the offence of criminal breach of trust against the Minister cannot be sustained. (Para 166). Common Cause, A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1196: AIR 1999 SC 2979.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad, K. Venkataswami and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1999]

Tito v. Waddell (No. 2), (1977) 3 All ER 129; Kinloch v. Secy. of State for India, (1880) 15 Ch D 1, approved

Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 530; Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 593, overruled

[10001] — Ss. 409 and 405 — Money obtained by fraud or cheating was 'entrusted' to the accused — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c)

There can be no doubt before a public servant can be convicted of an offence under S. 5(1)(c), P.C. Act or under S. 409, IPC, the property which is said to have been misappropriated must be entrusted to him. Section 405 merely provides, whoever being in any manner entrusted with property or with any dominion over the property, as the first ingredient of the criminal breach of trust. The words 'in any manner' in the context are significant. The section does not provide that the entrustment of property should be by some one or the amount received must be the property of the person on whose behalf it is received. As long as the accused is given possession of property for a specific purpose or to deal with it in a particular manner, the ownership being in some person other than the accused, he can be said to be entrusted with that property to be applied in accordance with the terms of entrustment and for the benefit of the owner.

The expression 'entrusted' in S. 409 is used in a wide sense and includes all cases in which property is voluntarily handed over for a specific purpose and is dishonestly disposed of contrary to the terms on which possession has been handed over. It may be that a person to whom the property is handed over may be an agent of the person to whom it is entrusted or to whom it may belong, in which case if the agent who comes into possession of it on behalf of his principal, fraudulently misappropriates the property, he is nonetheless guilty of criminal breach of trust because as an agent he is entrusted with it. A person authorised to collect moneys on behalf of another is entrusted with the money when the amounts are paid to him, and though the person paying may no longer have any proprietary interest nonetheless the person on whose behalf it was collected becomes the owner as soon as the amount is handed over to the person so authorised to collect on his behalf. Here the employee of Indian Airlines took excess money from passengers and pocketed the same by falsifying the receipts. He was therefore, guilty under S. 409 and Ss. 5(2) and 5(1)(c), Prevention of Corruption Act 1947. Som Nath Puri v. State of Rajasthan, (1972) 1 SCC 630: 1972 SCC (Cri) 359: AIR 1972 SC 1490: (1972) 3 SCR 497: 1972 Cri LJ 897.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, P. Jaganmohan Reddy and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1972]

In re Ram Soonder Podda, (1878) 2 Cal LR 515; In re Ramappa, (1911) 22 Mad LJ 112: 13 Cri LJ 15; Venkata Raghunatha Sastri, 45 Mad LJ 133: AIR 1923 Mad 597: 24 Cri LJ 452; Crown Prosecutor v. McIver, 69 Mad LJ 681: AIR 1936 Mad 1: 37 Cri LJ 142; State v. Dahyalal Dalpatram, AIR 1960 Bom 53: 1960 CriLJ 217, approved

Surendra Pal Singh v. State, AIR 1957 All 122: 1957 Cri LJ 170, overruled

(v) Misappropriation, use, disposal, etc.

See also under 'Ss. 415-420 — Cheating', below

[10002] — S. 405 — Failure to account for the money proved to be received fatal — Burden of proof on the accused — Inferences from conduct can be drawn to prove the guilty mind

It is not necessary or possible in every case to prove in what precise manner the accused person has dealt with or appropriated the goods of his master. The question is one of intention and not a matter of direct proof but giving a false account of what he has done with the goods received by him may be treated a strong circumstance against the accused person. In the case of a servant charged with misappropriating the goods of his master the elements of criminal offence of misappropriation will be established if the prosecution proves that the servant received the goods, that he was under a duty to account to his master and had not done so. If the failure to account was due to an accidental loss then the facts being within the servant's knowledge, it is for him to explain the loss. It is not the law of this country that the prosecution has to eliminate all possible defences or circumstances which may exonerate him. If these facts are within the knowledge of the accused then he has to prove them. Of course the prosecution has to establish a prima facie case in the first instance. It is not enough to establish facts which give rise to a suspicion and then by reason of S. 106 of the Evidence Act to throw the onus on him to prove his innocence.

The giving of false explanation is an element which the Court can take into consideration. Krishan Kumar v. Union of India, AIR 1959 SC 1390: (1960) 1 SCR 452: 1959 Cri LJ 1508.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and J.L. Kapur , JJ. [Date of decision: 21-5-1959]

See also AIR 1960 SC 889: 1960 Cri LJ 1250

AIR 1930 Pat 209: 31 Cri LJ 249; AIR 1944 Lah 339, 345: 46 Cri LJ 1 (FB); AIR 1936 Pat 350: 37 Cri LJ 877, approved

AIR 1938 Lah 634: 39 Cri LJ 851; AIR 1938 Mad 172: 39 Cri LJ 1; AIR 1934 Cal 425: 1935 Cri LJ 715; AIR 1934 Sind 22: 36 Cri LJ 818; AIR 1928 Lah 382: 30 Cri LJ 18, distinguished

Rex v. William, (1836) 7 C and P 338 and Reg v. Lynch, (1854) 6 Cox C C 445, relied on

(4)(v) Misappropriation, use, disposal, etc. (contd.)

[10003] — S. 405 — 'Misappropriates or converts to his own use' — Hire of motor for appellant's own use — Hirer writing a letter to owner claiming that agreement was of sale — Owner asserting it to be a hire-purchase agreement — Letter showing no change in use of motor by hirer — Held, the letter cannot result in misappropriation or conversion of motor to his own use by hirer — Real dispute was as to nature of agreement between the parties — Hence the dispute was of a civil nature

The accused-appellant hired a motor which remained in his use for some time and the hire charges were paid for some months. Then he wrote a letter to the owner of the motor stating that he had purchased the said motor on condition that it should be tried for three months and if it was found to be satisfactory the money would be paid and the purchase completed. He also claimed that he had paid the money and completed the purchase.

On the facts in the present case the motor was handed over to the appellant for his use even according to the case of the owner. Unless, therefore, it can be shown that the appellant by doing something to the motor which he was not entitled to do dishonestly misappropriated or converted the motor to his own use, he cannot be guilty of breach of trust under this part of S. 405. Now the case of the owner is that the appellant must be deemed to have misappropriated or converted to his own use the motor by writing the letter. It is clear, however, that the letter shows no change in the use of the motor, which, according to the owner, the appellant had hired for his own use. Therefore, it cannot be said that merely by writing that letter, the appellant dealt with the motor in such manner as would amount to its misappropriation or conversion to his own use by him. Clearly the appellant was using the motor for his own purpose before that letter and continued to use it in the same way after the letter. That letter, cannot result in the misappropriation or conversion of the motor to his own use by the appellant within the meaning of these words in S. 405 in the circumstances of the present case.

The real dispute between the parties, therefore was as to the nature of the agreement between them when the motor was entrusted to the appellant. That dispute was clearly of a civil nature. Mohd. Sulaiman v. Mohd. Ayub, AIR 1965 SC 1319: (1965) 2 SCR 398: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 421.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo , J.C. Shah, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and S.M. Sikri, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1964]

[10004] — S. 405 — Misappropriation — Proof of — Consequence in event of its failure

If under the law it is necessary or possible for the prosecution to prove the manner in which the goods have been misappropriated then the failure of the prosecution to prove facts it set out to prove would be of little relevance.

The question would only be one of intention of the appellant and the circumstances which have been above set out do show that the appellant in what he has done or has omitted to do was moved by a guilty mind. Krishan Kumar v. Union of India, AIR 1959 SC 1390: (1960) 1 SCR 452: 1959 Cri LJ 1508, 1512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and J.L. Kapur , JJ. [Date of decision: 21-5-1959]

[10005] — Ss. 405, 408 and 409 — Misappropriation — Accused, the cashier, in possession of keys of the safe — Keys of inner drawers kept sealed inside the safe — Cash disappearing from the safe — Inference is that the accused was party or privy to the extraction of cash from the safe

Accused was in possession of the keys of the safe, including the keys of the inner drawers of the safe. At least the two keys of the outer lock of the safe were all along with him. Even if someone else was in possession of the keys of the inner drawer he could not open the safe unless the keys of the outer door were made over to him by the accused. Accused's liability as cashier to account for the contents of the safe cannot be disputed. Therefore, the accused was either a party or privy to the extraction of the cash from the safe. In the absence of evidence that he parted with the safe between the period when the cash was last checked and when the loss was detected the accused was under a duty to account for the contents of the safe including the cash. Charge under S. 409 is, therefore, duly brought home to the accused. Surendra Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 656: 1972 SCC (Cri) 700: AIR 1973 SC 488: 1972 Cri LJ 1202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy and G.K. Mitter , JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1972]

[10006] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Misappropriation by partner covered. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1837: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

Queen v. Okhoy Coomar Shaw, 21 Suth WR Cr 59: 13 Beng LR (FB) 307, approved

[10007] — Ss. 406 and 34 — Wrongful withholding of company quarters — Criminal complaint for — Maintainability — Authorisation for filing complaint — Bona fides of — Eviction-directed — Manager, having been authorised by company resolution and power of attorney, filing complaint against retired employee for wrongfully occupying company quarters — Though power of attorney was executed prior to purchase of stamp papers, it was notarised on a date subsequent to execution and purchase of stamp papers — Trial court by wrongly reading rubber stamp date of notarisation as being prior to date of purchase of stamp papers, holding power of attorney as fictitious and therefore, dismissing complaint — Criminal complaint, held, was maintainable and cognizance was rightly taken — Said documents cannot be termed as fictitious or manufactured so as to oust the appellant from the arena of justice — Stamp Act, 1899, S. 17 — Powers of Attorney Act, 1882, Ss. 2 and 4 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 630 and 621. Automobile Products India Ltd. v. Das John Peter, (2010) 12 SCC 593: (2010) 158 Comp Cas 69: (2010) 93 AIC 214 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Deepak Verma , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2010]

[10008] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Supply of goods on credit — Failure to pay on due date held not covered. A.L. Panian v. State of A.P., 1990 Supp SCC 607: 1991 SCC (Cri) 84.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1990]

[10009] — Ss. 406/120-B — Quashment — Relevant considerations — Preventing abuse of process of court or securing ends of justice — Nature of dispute — Quashment of proceedings relating to TDS — Where proceeding is of civil nature which cannot be adjudicated by criminal court, High Court would be justified in exercising its inherent jurisdiction and quashing the same — High Court erred in refusing to exercise its jurisdiction under S. 482 and passing a cryptic order without assigning any reasons therefor when complaint did not disclose any offence of criminal nature — In face of assertion made by appellants that deduction towards income tax were made from salaries of all employees liable to pay the same in view of statutory provisions of IT Act, appropriate remedy for respondent was to approach authority/officer concerned — Moreover, report of SI had indicated that matter in issue was civil in nature — Proceedings against appellants quashed — IT Act, 1961, Ss. 192, 200, 206, 271-C, 276-B & 276-BB — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

A private complaint was filed by the respondent before ACJM under Sections 461/468/406 read with Section 120-B IPC against the appellants alleging discrimination by unduly deducting Rs 1640 p.m. from the monthly salary as income tax and a further wrongful deduction of Rs 3050 on account of cooperative loan issued by the appellants/Company. It was also stated in the complaint that the amount so deducted was not deposited with the Income Tax Authority and should be refunded back. The ACJM directed SI to conduct an inquiry into the allegations made in the complaint. On 30-4-2004, the appellants informed that the amount of income tax deducted in consonance with Section 192 of the Income Tax Act being deposited in due course as tax to the credit of the respondent employee in terms of Section 199 of the Income Tax Act as uniformly done in respect of every employee and also produced Form 16 of the respondent for the period from 1-4-2003 to 31-3-2004. The report submitted by SI showed that complaint in issue was civil in nature. However, JM issued summons against the appellants for an offence under Sections 406/120-B of the Penal Code. In response to the summons, the appellants made an application under Section 205 of the Code before the Judicial Magistrate which was rejected. Subsequently, vide order dated 12-9-2005, the Judicial Magistrate issued warrant of arrest against the appellants.

The appellant's application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint and order dated 12-9-2005 was dismissed by the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the complaint, the respondent mentioned about the filing of a writ petition in 1991 before the High Court of Calcutta and the order passed therein in 2003. He also referred to his contempt petition before the High Court. He alleged that due to the direction of the High Court, which was issued at his instance, the officers entered into a criminal conspiracy and with a view to pressurise him for withdrawing the said contempt, started threatening him and illegally deducting Rs 1640 per month from his monthly salary as income tax though he did not fall within taxable income category. It was also pointed out that a sum of Rs 3050 had been deducted from his salary illegally on account of cooperative loan although, in the previous month, the deduction was only to the extent of Rs 50. (Paras 10 to 13)

(4)(v) Misappropriation, use, disposal, etc. (contd.)

A perusal of Sections 192, 200, 206, 271, 276-B and 276-BB of the Income Tax Act, makes it clear that it is obligatory on the part of the persons responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "salaries", at the time of payment, to deduct income tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the financial year on the estimated income of the assessee and pay the same to the authority concerned. They also make it clear that on failure to deduct tax at source they shall be liable to pay, by way of penalty, a sum equal to the amount of tax which such persons failed to deduct or pay. They also show that failure to pay tax to the credit of the Central Government in certain cases or pay the tax collected at source under Section 276-BB shall be punishable with imprisonment. (Para 23)

In the case on hand, it is the categorical stand of the appellant management that the amount of tax that has been deducted from the respondent's salary as TDS under the head "salaries" in terms of Section 192 is uniformly done in respect of each and every employee of the Company and the amount so deducted is deposited to the credit of the employees including the respondent in terms of Section 199. They also produced a copy of Form 16 being the certificate under Section 203 of the Income Tax Act, 1961 for the tax deducted at source from the income of the respondent. (Para 24)

The JM had forwarded the complaint to SI for conducting an inquiry who had concluded that "the matter is civil in nature" and forwarded the same to the Additional CJM with a request to clarify the same. In spite of that the ACJM after recording stand of complainant had found that there was sufficient ground for proceeding against accused. It is not clear on what grounds ACJM had found so. From the materials placed, particularly, the contents of the complaint, relevant statutory provisions of the Income Tax Act, report of the SI, the complaint does not disclose any case to proceed against the accused persons as arrived at by the Additional CJM. Even if the respondent had some grievance with the appellants about non-promotion, direction of the High Court, pendency of contempt, etc. it is not a case for criminal prosecution. If he is very much interested to vindicate his grievance, the respondent could have very well approached the officer concerned of IISCO or the Income Tax Authority concerned. Though in the complaint, it is stated that the respondent had sent a notice under registered post with acknowledgment due on 17-11-2003, admittedly, no such proof had been placed before the Court. In fact, the appellants stoutly denied the receipt of such a notice. (Paras 26 and 27)

In spite of all the details and materials since the Additional CJM issued summons, the appellants approached the High Court under Section 482 of the Code for quashing the same. The High Court, by the impugned order, without adverting to any of the abovementioned relevant materials passed a cryptic order refusing to exercise its inherent jurisdiction which is unsustainable in law. (Para 28). Rajeswar Tiwari v. Nanda Kishore Roy, (2010) 8 SCC 442: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 915.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2010]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, considered and relied on

[10010] — S. 409 — Misappropriation — Appellant, in charge of Mayor's Relief Fund, preparing cheque for payment of dues to a contractor of the Municipal Corporation, but instead of delivering it to the contractor, getting it encashed through peon — Peon informing the Mayor that he had encashed the cheque and paid the amount to the appellant — But appellant keeping quiet on this before the Mayor and later giving a written undertaking to the Mayor that he would make good the amount — On the basis of this evidence courts below finding the appellant guilty of misappropriation — In the circumstances conviction under S. 409 upheld. Vijay Digambar Lanjekar v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 8: 1991 SCC (Cri) 841.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1991]

[10011] — S. 409 — Misappropriation — Proof of — Prosecution not obliged to prove precise mode of conversion or misappropriation etc. — Entrustment and failure to account for the property entrusted proved — Dishonest misappropriation or conversion can be inferred

Direct evidence to establish misappropriation of the cloth cover which the appellants had dominion is undoubtedly lacking, but to establish a charge of criminal breach of trust, the prosecution is not obliged to prove the precise mode of conversion, misappropriation or misapplication by the accused of the property entrusted to him or over which he has dominion. The principal ingredient of the offence being dishonest misappropriation or conversion which may not ordinarily be a matter of direct proof, entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property entrusted, if proved, may in the light of other circumstances, justifiably lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion. Conviction of a person for the offence of criminal breach of trust may not, in all cases, be founded merely on his failure to account for the property entrusted to him, or over which he has dominion, even when a duty to account is imposed upon him, but where he is unable to account or renders an explanation for his failure to account which is untrue, an inference of misappropriation with dishonest intent may readily be made. Jaikrishnadas Manohardas Desai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 889: (1960) 3 SCR 319: 1960 Cri LJ 1250.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah , JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1960]

See also AIR 1959 SC 1390: 1959 Cri LJ 1508

[10012] — Ss. 409, 109 and 14 — Misappropriation — What is — Effect of Expiry of limitation period — Bars only remedy of suit, appeal or application but does not extinguish right to which the remedy relates — Hence, Bank's right to the debt continued to exist even thereafter which it could enforce by adjusting and appropriating the amount due from the proceeds of the FDR in terms of the security bond executed by the guarantor — Where Bank gave loan to principal debtor on pledging of FDR by guarantor by way of security but principal debtor defaulted in repayment of the loan and suit for recovery of the debt, having not been filed by the Bank within the limitation period, it became barred, held, Bank's right to the debt continued to exist even thereafter which it could enforce by adjusting and appropriating the amount due from the proceeds of the FDR in terms of the security bond executed by the guarantor — Such action in terms of the contract not open to challenge on ground of criminal breach of trust — Hence complaint made by the guarantor alleging commission of offence under Ss. 409, 109 and 114 IPC was frivolous — Contract Act, 1872, S. 128 — Limitation Act, 1963 — S. 3

The first appellant Bank's branch gave a loan to a person. The respondent and his wife stood as guarantors, executed a 'security bond' and handed over a Fixed Deposit Receipt to the Bank. The security bond inter alia provided: "We authorise you and confirm that the F.D.R. pledged as security for the said loan shall also be security including the surplus proceeds thereof for any other liability and the obligation of person and further in favour of the bank and the bank shall be entitled to retain/realise/utilise/appropriate the same without reference to us." The principal debtor did not repay the debt. The bank as creditor adjusted on maturity of the F.D.R., the outstanding debt due to the bank in terms of the contract and the balance sum was credited to the Savings Bank account of the respondent in terms of the security bond. The respondent lodged a complaint against the Bank impleading the Chairman, the Managing Director of the Bank by name and a host of officers, alleging that the debt became barred by limitation but the first appellant with a dishonest interest to save himself from the financial obligation neglected to recover the amount from the principal debtor and allowed the claim to be barred by limitation and embezzled the amount entrusted by the respondent and that appellants 2 to 6 abetted commission of the crime by converting the amount adjusted from his F.D.R. account to their own use in violation of specific violation of the respondent thereby committing offences under Ss. 409, 109 and 114 IPC. The Magistrate without adverting whether the allegation in the complaint prima facie makes out an offence charged for, in a mechanical manner issued the process against the appellants. The High Court declined to quash the complaint on the finding that the Bank acted prima facie high handedly. Allowing the appeal and quashing the complaint

Held :

The rules of limitation are not meant to destroy the rights of the parties. Section 3 of the Limitation Act only bars the remedy, but does not destroy the right which the remedy relates to. Though the right to enforce the debt by judicial process is barred under S. 3 read with the relevant article in the schedule, the right to debt remains. The time barred debt does not cease to exist by reason of S. 3. Only exception in which the remedy also becomes barred by limitation is that the right itself is destroyed. For example under S. 27 of the Act a suit for possession of any property becoming barred by limitation, the right to property itself is destroyed. Except in such cases which are specially provided under the right to which remedy relates in other case the right subsists so long the debt is not repaid. That right can be exercised in any other manner than by means of a suit. It is not obligatory to file a suit to recover the debt. The creditor when he is in possession of an adequate security, could adjust the time barred debt due from the security in his possession and custody and credit the balance amount to the savings bank account of the respondent. Thereby the appellant did not act in violation of any law, nor converted the amount entrusted to them dishonestly for any purpose. Action in terms of the contract expressly or implied is a negation of criminal breach of trust defined in S. 405 and punishable under S. 409 IPC. It is neither dishonest, nor misappropriation. The bank had in its possession the fixed deposit receipt as guarantee for due payment of the debt and the bank appropriated the amount towards the debt due and payable by the principal debtor. Further, the F.D.R. was not entrusted during the course of the business of the first appellant as a Banker of the respondent but in the capacity as guarantor. The complaint does not make out any case much less prima facie case, a condition precedent to set criminal law in motion. Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149: AIR 1992 SC 1815: (1993) 1 An WR 104 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1992]

(vi) Temporary deprivation or retention of property/Suffering of loss

[10013] — S. 405 — Dishonest use or disposal — A deprivation even for a short period is within the meaning of the section. Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 SCR 483: 26 Comp Cas 340: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, 1124: (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 49.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha , JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1956]

[10014] — S. 405 — Misappropriation even if temporary, held, also constitutes criminal breach of trust

An act of breach of trust simpliciter involves civil wrong of which the person wronged may seek his redress for damages in a civil court but a breach of trust with mens rea gives rise to a criminal prosecution as well. Breach of trust simpliciter is not an offence as it is not associated with an intention which is dishonest. The term dishonestly defined in Section 24 IPC means doing anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another. So the offence is completed when misappropriation of the property has been made dishonestly. Even temporary misappropriation falls within the ambit of the said offence. (Paras 155 and 157)

Accused 6 parted with money of NHB which was entrusted to him so that Harshad Mehta could get it although not entitled therefor in law. The conduct of Accused 6 was therefore dishonest. He is guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust. With regard to Accused 7, there is not enough evidence to show his involvement in the said transactions. So far as the involvement of Accused 1 to 3 is concerned, they also played an important role in diverting call money from NHB which was meant for UCO Bank to the account of Harshad Mehta. As soon as the cheque for Rs 40 crores was received by UCO Bank, the amount stood entrusted to the officials of UCO Bank. However, Accused 1 to 3 in violation of law and in the absence of any contract, permitted the amount to be transferred to the account of Harshad Mehta who was not entitled to it. Therefore, the offence of criminal breach of trust stands proved against them also. (Para 158). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869; S.W. Palanikar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129; Kartikeswar Nayak v. State, 1996 Cri LJ 2253 (Ori), relied on

[10015] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Suffering of loss not essential for conviction

The officials of UCO Bank and National Housing Bank who helped Harshad Mehta (since deceased) in siphoning off public money of Rs 40 crores were also charged for criminal breach of trust, apart from being charged for criminal conspiracy.

Held :

It is not the law that complaint petition under all circumstances must be made by banks and financial institutions whose money had been the subject-matter of offence. It is also not the law that suffering of loss is a sine qua non for recording a judgment of conviction. Criminal law can be set in motion by anybody. The prosecution was initiated on the basis of information received by Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). CBI is entitled to do so not only in regard to its statutory powers contained in the Delhi Special Police Act but it was also entitled to take cognizance in terms of the report submitted by the Janakiraman Committee. The money involved in transfer is public money belonging to public sector banks. If transaction was illegal, as a result whereof, a private person, who was not expected to reap fruits of "call money" was allowed to retain the same for a period to make an unlawful gain therefrom, offence of criminal breach of trust must be held to have been committed. It is for the same reason the submission that as nobody ultimately suffered any loss, an offence under Section

409 of the Penal Code was not made out, cannot be accepted. A bank or financial institution may not suffer ultimate loss but if money has been allowed to be used by another person illegally for illegal purpose, ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code would get attracted. A case involving temporary embezzlement also attracts ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code. (Paras 150, 152 and 153)

When a person allows others to misappropriate property entrusted to him, that also amounts to criminal breach of trust. In the present case, amount of Rs 40 crores was entrusted to Accused 6 to be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the National Housing Bank Act, 1987. The Act does not permit grant of loan to an individual. Accused 6 in violation of the law handed over the amount to UCO Bank with full knowledge that the amount would be credited to the account of Harshad Mehta. The call money transaction with UCO Bank was only a cover-up. The property which was trusted to Accused 6 was misappropriated by him. The most essential ingredient of criminal breach of trust is misappropriation with dishonest intention. (Para 154). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10016] — S. 409 — Conviction of cashier for temporary retention of provident fund money meant to be disbursed — On the peculiar facts of the case sentence reduced but fine maintained — Appellant directed to execute bond for good behaviour — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Ss. 5(1)(c) and 5(2). S. Natarajan v. State of Mysore, (1979) 4 SCC 542: 1979 SCC (Cri) 918: AIR 1980 SC 639: 1980 Cri LJ 447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1979]

[10017] — S. 409 — Public servant after detection depositing the misappropriated sum in the treasury — Held, would not absolve him of the offence already committed by putting the money to personal use instead of depositing it — No interference with the conviction therefore called for. Vishwa Nath v. State of J&K, (1983) 1 SCC 215: 1983 SCC (Cri) 173: AIR 1983 SC 174: 1983 Cri LJ 231.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-1983]

[10018] — Ss. 409, 405 and 24 — Criminal breach of trust — Making available public money by bank officials to a private party contrary to statutory provisions and departmental instructions — Dishonest intention evident from facts and circumstances of the case — Held, amounted to criminal breach of trust even if the money was subsequently recovered and banks did not suffer any monetary loss — Further held, banks officials were criminally liable even if no departmental action had been taken against them — It also did not matter that prosecution was launched by CBI instead of banks themselves — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946)

The officials of UCO Bank and National Housing Bank who helped Harshad Mehta (since deceased) in siphoning off public money of Rs 40 crores were also charged for criminal breach of trust, apart from being charged for criminal conspiracy.

Held :

It is not the law that complaint petition under all circumstances must be made by banks and financial institutions whose money had been the subject-matter of offence. It is also not the law that suffering of loss is a sine qua non for recording a judgment of conviction. Criminal law can be set in motion by anybody. The prosecution was initiated on the basis of information received by Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). CBI is entitled to do so not only in regard to its statutory powers contained in the Delhi Special Police Act but it was also entitled to take cognizance in terms of the report submitted by the Janakiraman Committee. The money involved in transfer is public money belonging to public sector banks. If transaction was illegal, as a result whereof, a private person, who was not expected to reap fruits of "call money" was allowed to retain the same for a period to make an unlawful gain therefrom, offence of criminal breach of trust must be held to have been committed. It is for the same reason the submission that as nobody ultimately suffered any loss, an offence under Section 409 of the Penal Code was not made out, cannot be accepted. A bank or financial institution may not suffer ultimate loss but if money has been allowed to be used by another person illegally for illegal purpose, ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code would get attracted. A case involving temporary embezzlement also attracts ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code. (Paras 150, 152 and 153)

When a person allows others to misappropriate property entrusted to him, that also amounts to criminal breach of trust. In the present case, amount of Rs 40 crores was entrusted to Accused 6 to be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the

(4)(vi) Temporary deprivation or retention of property/ Suffering of loss (contd.)

National Housing Bank Act, 1987. The Act does not permit grant of loan to an individual. Accused 6 in violation of the law handed over the amount to UCO Bank with full knowledge that the amount would be credited to the account of Harshad Mehta. The call money transaction with UCO Bank was only a cover-up. The property which was trusted to Accused 6 was misappropriated by him. The most essential ingredient of criminal breach of trust is misappropriation with dishonest intention. (Para 154). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10019] — Ss. 409, 405, 403, Explns. 1 and 21 — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — Temporary misappropriation of public money — Failure to utilise travelling allowance (TA) and daily allowance (DA) for the purpose for which it was given to a public servant — Appellant, a dog handler in a Dog Squad Team in police, drawing an amount of Rs 12,000 on 4-6-1998 as TA/DA to be utilised by him and other dog handlers for dogs' training commencing from 5-6-1998 — He was on leave from 5-6-1998 to 14-6-1998 but on expiry of leave, appellant not attending training and remaining absent unauthorisedly till 14-7-1998 — During his unauthorised absence, appellant went to his native place and returning the amount on coming back — Trial court convicting appellant under S. 409 — His appeal and criminal revision both dismissed — Sustainability — Appellant had taken money for a particular purpose but did not utilise it for that purpose — Hence, held, there was no scope for interference (Para 6). Shabbir Ahmed Sherkhan v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 5 SCC 22: (2009) 1 SCC (L&S) 1016: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 607.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-2009]

(vii) Violation of direction of law or express or implied legal contract

[10020] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Action in terms of any contract express or implied is not covered — So action taken by bank authorities in terms of a security bond executed by guarantor for recovery of outstanding debt would not constitute criminal breach of trust. Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149: AIR 1992 SC 1815: (1993) 1 An WR 104 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1992]

[10021] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients — Dishonest use or disposal of property in violation of direction of law — The expression "direction of law", held, even if given literal meaning, includes direction issued by authorities in exercise of their statutory power as also power of supervision — Failure on the part of bank officials to follow instructions issued by RBI and provisions of a departmental manual, held, was violation of direction of law, resulting in criminal breach of trust — UCO Bank Manual of Instructions on Bill Discounting, Para 2.5(b) — RBI Circular (Para 100). Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v. CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10022] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Misuse of funds by bank officials in violation of banking practices and/or departmental instructions — Whether a criminal breach of trust — Terms of S. 405, held, are very wide — It applies to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property — S. 405 does not require that trust should be in furtherance of a lawful object — The expression "direction of law" in S. 405, held, includes banking norms, banking practices and directions given in internal departmental instructions of a bank — Held on facts, bank officials who allowed advance credits on banker's cheques to a customer in violation of departmental instructions, acted in violation of direction of law — The officials had dominion over money belonging to Bank and they dishonestly used that money for conferring benefit on the customer — The officials were therefore guilty of offence under S. 409

Terms of Section 405 IPC are very wide. It applies to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property. The section does not require that trust should be in furtherance of any lawful object. (Para 168)

An officer of a bank holds a position of trust. Each one of them, keeping in view the nature and extent of duties required to be performed, is expected to do so not only in terms of statutory directions but also the directions issued by Reserve Bank of India and his own employer. Documents for the purpose of giving credit in the account of a customer would indisputably be required to be prepared on the basis of cheque receipts. It cannot be prepared in anticipation of receipt of a cheque; firstly, because the amount of cheque, the name of drawee and other particulars would not be known to them; secondly, the bank is required to maintain a large number of registers to put in place a sound banking system. All precautions must be taken to prevent a fraud or deceit on the part of a customer. Therefore, the fact that credit and debit vouchers were prepared and other registers were filled up, although the cheques were not in physical possession of the Bank, establishes existence of a criminal conspiracy between ultimate beneficiary, on the one hand, and some of the officers of the Bank, on the other. A debit or credit voucher furthermore is not prepared in piecemeal or in instalments. Bank officers are not supposed to know the immediate requirement of an account-holder. (Para 147)

The offences relating to criminal breach of trust stands established against A-1, A-2 and A-4. They were officers in Funds Department of Andhra Bank. In that capacity, they had been entrusted with the funds of the Bank. In that sense, they had dominion over a thing. The money which was transferred to A-3's account, was the money belonging to the Bank. Only the said accused had the power to transfer it to the account of A-3. The same has been done dishonestly to cause wrongful gain to A-3 and in the process wrongful loss has been caused to the Bank. (Para 173)

The instruments based on which the funds of Andhra Bank were transferred to A-3's account were not physically available with Andhra Bank at the time the accused persons authorised transfer of bank funds to A-3's account. A-3 also utilised the said credit given and accordingly even cheques issued by him were honoured. Had it not been for the credits given on relevant dates, his account would have been overdrawn. Interest was also not charged from A-3 and was not debited to his account and loss was therefore caused to the Bank. (Para 174)

Guidelines for banker's cheques were issued by Head Office. They were issued for the purpose of operation of security transaction at Fort Branch, Bombay of Andhra Bank. The guidelines moreover specify that permission had been granted to A-3 for the purpose of securities transactions. Therefore, these directions were obviously binding on the persons who were working in the Funds Department. These guidelines were exclusively meant for Funds Department for handling securities transactions, and there was no other department or branch of Andhra Bank anywhere in India which was handling such securities transactions. As such, they were binding on the accused persons. (Para 44)

Banking norms and established practices and procedures contain directions of law, prescribing the mode in which trust is to be discharged. The expression "direction of law" in the context of Sections 405 and 409 would include not only legislations pure and simple but directions also, instruments and circulars issued by an authority entitled therefor. The trust in this regard would therefore have to be discharged in terms of such directions. Acting in violation thereof causing wrongful gain to A-3 and loss to the Bank would bring the action within Section 409 IPC. (Para 175)

Established banking norms are binding on an officer of the bank in the matter of discharge of trust i.e. in dealing with the money entrusted to him. He is required to follow the same and that would be an implied term of his contract of service as an officer of the bank. The accused acted in breach of the same. Prosecution has sufficiently proved involvement of A-1, A-2 and A-4 as regards the offence of criminal breach of trust. (Para 176). Mir Nagvi Askari v. CBI, (2009) 15 SCC 643.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

R. Venkatakrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737; Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Punjab v. Pritam Chand, (2009) 16 SCC 769; Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 103, relied on

[10023] — Ss. 405 and 415 & 417 — Misuse of facility of payment by instalments granted by High Court — Criminal breach of trust or cheating — Certain criminal proceedings directed to be initiated by High Court against appellant for acts of cheating and criminal breach of trust, not interfered with

Appellant 1 had a loan sanctioned in his favour from the respondent Bank. Appellant 2 stood surety for the loan. Appellant 1 borrowed amounts in pursuance of the loan facility. Appellant 1 committed defaults in repayment. Therefore, the respondent Bank seized the premises of the Appellant 1. A public notice for sale of the assets was issued. Appellant 1 filed a writ petition challenging the action of seizure and sale. That writ petition was dismissed and the LPA against that order was also dismissed. But while dismissing the LPA the High Court inter alia directed recovery of debt in instalments on the basis of a statement at the Bar on behalf of the appellant that it would liquidate all the debts of the Bank in instalments within a period of one-and-a-half years in four equal instalments. Appellant 1 filed a special leave petition against this order which came to be dismissed.

The respondent then filed a contempt petition alleging breach of the above directions. The High Court, in the impugned judgment, took note of the fact that, having got the relief of payment of the outstanding debts in instalments from the Court

(4)(vii) Violation of direction of law or express or implied legal contract (contd.)

Appellant 1 in connivance with Appellant 2 and other relatives had disposed of almost all the available assets. The High Court then held that the above disclosed not only an act of wilful disobedience of the undertaking but also serious offences of criminal breach of trust and cheating the Bank of public money, and the circumstances did indicate involvement of the then Branch Manager of the Bank. That it is was a fit case for lodgment of a criminal case with CID against the abovenamed two contemnors and others who were involved in the act of cheating and criminal breach of trust and other offences.

The appellants were before the Supreme Court thereagainst by special leave.

Disposing of the appeal in the terms below,

Held :

It is found that no undertaking was given by the appellant either on the date the direction for payment in instalments was given or on a subsequent date. The directions to pay by instalments can at best be treated as a decree. Therefore the contempt proceedings were not the correct remedy. Hence the impugned order is set aside to the extent that it punishes the appellants for contempt and sentences them as stated above. However, it is held that by consent of parties an executable decree was passed in favour of the respondent Bank. The remedy of enforcing the decree can only be by way of execution proceedings. Therefore it will be open to the respondent to take out execution proceedings. (Paras 6 and 7)

However, the facts set out in the impugned order do prima facie indicate that the appellants have misused the facility of payment by instalments granted by the High Court. Whether they committed acts of cheating and criminal breach of trust are matters which must be decided in criminal proceedings. The High Court has directed the Inspector General of Police to file a case. There is no reason to interfere with those directions. Therefore, to that extent, the order of the High Court will stand confirmed. The case registered by the Inspector General of Police shall now proceed. (Para 8). Anil K. Surana v. State Bank of Hyderabad, (2007) 10 SCC 257: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 638.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2003]

[10024] — Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379 — Held, on facts, offences not made out against financiers in hire-purchase agreement — Recovery of possession of goods by owner-financier as per terms of the hire-purchase agreement, does not amount to a criminal offence — Such an agreement is an executory contract of sale, conferring no right in rem on the hirer until the conditions for transfer of the property to him have been fulfilled — Held, on facts, where respondent hirer had defaulted in instalment payments of motor vehicle and agreement specifically provided that appellant financiers were entitled to repossess the vehicle in case of default and their agents were authorised to enter any premises for the purpose, and appellants had actually recovered possession of the vehicle, no offence was made out against the appellants — High Court erred in dismissing their petition under S. 482 CrPC challenging issue of summons on complaint filed under Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379 IPC — Hire Purchase Act, 1972, Ss. 8 and 20 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

The respondent S, entered into a hire-purchase agreement dated 3-5-1994 with the appellants, owners of a non-banking financial institution, in respect of a motor vehicle. Rs 3,02,884 was the total consideration agreed to be paid for the vehicle; S initially paid Rs 69,308 and agreed to pay the balance in 36 monthly instalments of Rs 8400 each. A dispute developed at some stage and on 3-12-1998 S filed a criminal complaint alleging that during the night of 16-9-1996, when the vehicle had been in the custody of a motor mechanic, the appellants had taken it away; they had thus committed offences under Sections 406/420/120-B IPC. Cognizance was taken by the Magistrate and summons issued to the appellants.

The appellants filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court seeking to have the proceedings quashed. They averred in the petition that S had defaulted in making the instalment payments, that as of 1-9-1996 the outstanding amount was Rs 1,34,887; they had therefore been obliged to terminate the hire-purchase agreement. They also stated that S surrendered the vehicle to them. The High Court, however, dismissed the petition under Section 482 CrPC holding that it was possible to make out offences, particularly under Section 379 IPC, on the basis of the allegations in the complaint.

In appeal before the Supreme Court, it was submitted on behalf of the appellant financiers that in recovering possession of the vehicle, they had only exercised their right under the hire-purchase agreement as owners of the vehicle; that no offence could be made out from the allegations in the complaint. The agreement, which was produced in court, contained a clear provision that the appellants could repossess the vehicle in case of default by the hirer-purchaser; the appellants or their agents were also entitled to enter any premises for the purpose of inspection or of repossession and were specifically exempted from civil or criminal liability at the instance of the hirer.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Hire-purchase agreements are executory contracts under which the goods are let on hire and the hirer has an option to purchase in accordance with the terms of the agreement. These types of agreements were originally entered into between the dealer and the customer and the dealer used to extend credit to the customer. But as hire-purchase schemes gained in popularity, the dealers who were not endowed with liberal amount of working capital found it difficult to extend the scheme to many customers. Then the financiers came into the picture. The finance company would buy the goods from the dealer and let them to the customer under hire-purchase agreement. The dealer would deliver the goods to the customer who would then drop out of the transaction leaving the finance company to collect instalments directly from the customer. Under hire-purchase agreement, the hirer is simply paying for the use of the goods and for the option to purchase them. The finance charge, representing the difference between the cash price and the hire-purchase price, is not interest but represents a sum which the hirer has to pay for the privilege of being allowed to discharge the purchase price of goods by instalments. (Para 5)

In the present case agreement executed by the parties is to the effect that the hirer would not become the owner of the property until he pays the entire instalments. (Para 10)

The whole case put forward by the respondent complainant is to be appreciated in view of the stringent terms incorporated in the agreement. If the hirer himself has committed default by not paying the instalments and under the agreement the appellants have taken repossession of the vehicle, the respondent cannot have any grievance. The respondent cannot be permitted to say that the owner of the vehicle has committed theft of the vehicle or criminal breach of trust or cheating or criminal conspiracy as alleged in the complaint. When the agreement specifically says that the owner has got a right to repossess the vehicle, there cannot be any basis for alleging that the appellants have committed criminal breach of trust or cheating. (Para 11)

The plea that the appellants have committed theft is without any basis as the appellants have taken repossession of the vehicle in exercise of their right under the agreement. There may be instances where the owner of the goods may commit theft of his own goods as indicated in Illustration (k) of Section 378 IPC. But in the instant case, the owner repossessing the vehicle delivered to the hirer under the hire-purchase agreement will not amount to theft as the vital element of "dishonest intention" is lacking. The element of "dishonest intention" which is an essential element to constitute the offence of theft cannot be attributed to a person exercising his right under an agreement entered into between the parties as he may not have an intention of causing wrongful gain or to cause wrongful loss to the hirer. (Paras 12 and 13)

The hire-purchase agreement in law is an executory contract of sale and confers no right in rem on the hirer until the conditions for transfer of the property to him have been fulfilled. Therefore, the repossession of goods as per the term of the agreement may not amount to any criminal offence. (Para 17)

In the present case the agreement specifically gave authority to the appellants to repossess the vehicle and their agents to enter any property or building wherein the motor vehicle was likely to be kept. Under the hire-purchase agreement, the appellants have continued to be the owners of the vehicle and even if the entire allegations against them are taken as true, no offence was made out against them. The learned Single Judge seriously flawed in his decision and failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in him by not quashing the proceedings initiated against the appellants. (Para 17). Charanjit Singh Chadha v. Sudhir Mehra, (2001) 7 SCC 417: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1557: AIR 2001 SC 3721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan , JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

R.M. Goode: Hire Purchase Law & Practice, 2nd Edn., p. 846; Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; K.A. Mathai v. Kora Bibbikutty, (1996) 7 SCC 212: 1996 SCC (Cri) 281, relied on

[10025] — Ss. 408 and 405 — Criminal breach of trust — What constitutes — Bus conductor — Ticketless travel — Conductor of State Road Transport Corporation found by inspection team to be carrying several passengers (35 in this case) without ticket even after realising fare from them — Moreover, he obstructing the checking process by threatening and abusing the authorities — Such acts on his part, held, constituted misconduct of serious nature (Para 6). U.P. SRTC v. Ram Kishan Arora, (2007) 4 SCC 627: (2007) 2 SCC (L&S) 64: (2007) 3 LLJ 171: (2007) 3 LLN 616: (2007) 3 CLR 347.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2007]

(4)(vii) Violation of direction of law or express or implied legal contract (contd.)

[10026] — Ss. 409, 109 and 14 — Misappropriation — What is — Effect of Expiry of limitation period — Bars only remedy of suit, appeal or application but does not extinguish right to which the remedy relates — Hence, Bank's right to the debt continued to exist even thereafter which it could enforce by adjusting and appropriating the amount due from the proceeds of the FDR in terms of the security bond executed by the guarantor — Where Bank gave loan to principal debtor on pledging of FDR by guarantor by way of security but principal debtor defaulted in repayment of the loan and suit for recovery of the debt, having not been filed by the Bank within the limitation period, it became barred, held, Bank's right to the debt continued to exist even thereafter which it could enforce by adjusting and appropriating the amount due from the proceeds of the FDR in terms of the security bond executed by the guarantor — Such action in terms of the contract not open to challenge on ground of criminal breach of trust — Hence complaint made by the guarantor alleging commission of offence under Ss. 409, 109 and 114 IPC was frivolous — Contract Act, 1872, S. 128 — Limitation Act, 1963 — S. 3

The first appellant Bank's branch gave a loan to a person. The respondent and his wife stood as guarantors, executed a 'security bond' and handed over a Fixed Deposit Receipt to the Bank. The security bond inter alia provided: "We authorise you and confirm that the F.D.R. pledged as security for the said loan shall also be security including the surplus proceeds thereof for any other liability and the obligation of person and further in favour of the bank and the bank shall be entitled to retain/realise/utilise/appropriate the same without reference to us." The principal debtor did not repay the debt. The bank as creditor adjusted on maturity of the F.D.R., the outstanding debt due to the bank in terms of the contract and the balance sum was credited to the Savings Bank account of the respondent in terms of the security bond. The respondent lodged a complaint against the Bank impleading the Chairman, the Managing Director of the Bank by name and a host of officers, alleging that the debt became barred by limitation but the first appellant with a dishonest interest to save himself from the financial obligation neglected to recover the amount from the principal debtor and allowed the claim to be barred by limitation and embezzled the amount entrusted by the respondent and that appellants 2 to 6 abetted commission of the crime by converting the amount adjusted from his F.D.R. account to their own use in violation of specific violation of the respondent thereby committing offences under Ss. 409, 109 and 114 IPC. The Magistrate without adverting whether the allegation in the complaint prima facie makes out an offence charged for, in a mechanical manner issued the process against the appellants. The High Court declined to quash the complaint on the finding that the Bank acted prima facie high handedly. Allowing the appeal and quashing the complaint

Held :

The rules of limitation are not meant to destroy the rights of the parties. Section 3 of the Limitation Act only bars the remedy, but does not destroy the right which the remedy relates to. Though the right to enforce the debt by judicial process is barred under S. 3 read with the relevant article in the schedule, the right to debt remains. The time barred debt does not cease to exist by reason of S. 3. Only exception in which the remedy also becomes barred by limitation is that the right itself is destroyed. For example under S. 27 of the Act a suit for possession of any property becoming barred by limitation, the right to property itself is destroyed. Except in such cases which are specially provided under the right to which remedy relates in other case the right subsists so long the debt is not repaid. That right can be exercised in any other manner than by means of a suit. It is not obligatory to file a suit to recover the debt. The creditor when he is in possession of an adequate security, could adjust the time barred debt due from the security in his possession and custody and credit the balance amount to the savings bank account of the respondent. Thereby the appellant did not act in violation of any law, nor converted the amount entrusted to them dishonestly for any purpose. Action in terms of the contract expressly or implied is a negation of criminal breach of trust defined in S. 405 and punishable under S. 409 IPC. It is neither dishonest, nor misappropriation. The bank had in its possession the fixed deposit receipt as guarantee for due payment of the debt and the bank appropriated the amount towards the debt due and payable by the principal debtor. Further, the F.D.R. was not entrusted during the course of the business of the first appellant as a Banker of the respondent but in the capacity as guarantor. The complaint does not make out any case much less prima facie case, a condition precedent to set criminal law in motion. Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149: AIR 1992 SC 1815: (1993) 1 An WR 104 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1992]

(viii) Wilfully suffers another to commit criminal breach of trust

[10027] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Allowing", "dominion", "entrustment" — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c) & (2)

By enacting the Amending Act of 1952 and creating sub-section (4) to S. 5 the legislature specifically stated that the offence under S. 5(1)(c) is different from any previous existing offence under any penal statute and there can, therefore, be no scope for speculation about repeal. The words used in sub-section (4) "any other law" made the position quite clear and explicit. Other law does not mean identical law in which case the word 'other' will have no meaning. A comparison of the elements of the offences under S. 405 Indian Penal Code and S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act would show that an offence under S. 405, Penal Code is separate and distinct from the one under S. 5(1)(c). There are three points of difference between S. 405, Penal Code and S. 5(1)(c). The dishonest misappropriation contemplated in S. 405, Penal Code is different; whereas that under S. 5(1)(c) is either dishonest misappropriation or fraudulent misappropriation. The latter section is much wider in amplitude than the former. In S. 405, Penal Code the words used are "in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied. There are no such expressions in S. 5(1)(c). It is clear, therefore, that whereas under S. 405, Penal Code there are three essential ingredients to constitute the offence; each one of them being separate and distinct, in S. 5(1)(c) there are only two. Now considering S. 5(1)(c) there are certain matters in it which are absent in S. 405, Penal Code. The words 'dominion' and 'entrustment' connote two different things. The word 'dominion' is not in S. 5(1)(c). The word 'fraudulently' is not present in S. 405, and in S. 5(1)(c) the gist of the offence can also be made out if the offender allows any person so to do, i.e., allows any person to derogate from the law as contemplated in the earlier portion of the section. The meaning put on the word 'allows' would certainly be different from 'dishonest misappropriation' by the offender himself. It may be that the word can mean allowing by negligence or without any volition on the part of the offender. It may also mean that there is some kind of positive and tacit acquiescence necessary to bring home the offence. In any event, allowing other persons so to do does not find a place in S. 405, Penal Code though this section also contemplates "wilfully suffering any other person so to do". There is an essential difference between "allowing" a person and "wilfully suffering" a person to do a certain thing. There can, therefore, be no doubt whatever that S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act creates a new offence called "criminal misconduct" and cannot by implication displace the offence under S. 405, Penal Code.

In S. 405, Penal Code the offender must wilfully suffer another person to misappropriate the property entrusted, but in S. 5(1)(c) if he allows another person to dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriate or otherwise convert for his own use any property so entrusted, then it is an offence. There is a vast difference between wilfully suffering another and allowing a person to do a particular thing and the word "allows" is much wider in its import. Wilfully presupposes a conscious action, while even by negligence one can allow another to do a thing. Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575. Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

State v. Pandurang, AIR 1955 Bom 451; R. v. V. Satyanarayanmurthy, AIR 1953 Mad 137: 1953 Cri LJ 309; Amarendra Nath Ray v. State, AIR 1955 Cal 236: 1955 Cri LJ 784; Mohd. Ali v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 68: 1953 Cri LJ 1523; Bhup Narain v. State, AIR 1952 All 35: 1952 Cri LJ 236; Gopal Das v. State, AIR 1954 All 80: 1954 Cri LJ 96, approved

*State v. Gurcharan Singh, AIR 1952 Punj 89: 1952 Cri LJ 316, overruled

Followed in State of Punjab v. Shadi Lal, 1960 Cri LJ 539: AIR 1960 SC 397*

[10028] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Wilfully suffering" and "wilfully allowing" — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c)

There is an essential difference between "allowing" a person and "wilfully suffering" a person to do a certain thing. There can, therefore, be no doubt whatever that S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act creates a new offence called "criminal misconduct" and cannot by implication displace the offence under S. 405, Penal Code.

In S. 405, Penal Code the offender must wilfully suffer another person to misappropriate the property entrusted, but in S. 5(1)(c) if he allows another person to dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriate or otherwise convert for his own use any property so entrusted, then it is an offence. There is a vast difference between wilfully suffering another and allowing a person to do a particular thing and the word "allows" is much wider in its import. Wilfully presupposes a conscious action, while even by negligence one can allow another to do a thing. Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575. Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

(5) Vicarious or constructive liability — Offences by company

See also under '(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings', below

See also under 'Ss. 415-420 — Cheating', below

See also CrPC, 1973, S. 482, in Vol. 18, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 2 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[10029] — Ss. 405, 406 and 34 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients of — Whether on facts made out — Fastening of vicarious liability — Vicarious liability, held, cannot be fastened on MD, Director or other officers of a Company which is accused of commission of offence under S. 406 — Complainant, wholesale dealer of a Company, after termination of dealership by the Company, sent demand drafts to the Company for supply of goods — Demand made by complainant for supply of goods on ground that dealership was subsequently reiterated by the Company — Proprietor of the dealer firm thereafter filed a complaint before CJM alleging commission of offence under S. 406 by the Company and its MD, the appellant, on ground that the Company with mala fide intention neither supplied the goods nor returned the money — Application filed by appellant under S. 482 CrPC for quashing the criminal proceedings by High Court dismissed holding that prima facie offence under S. 406 was made out against appellant — Held, complaint petition, even assuming to be correct in its entirety, did not disclose an offence under S. 406 against appellant — Vicarious liability cannot be cast on appellant MD for alleged offence committed by the Company — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 34, 253 and 269

Ingredients of the offence under Section 406 are:

"(1) a person should have been entrusted with property, or entrusted with dominion over property;

(2) that person should dishonestly misappropriate or convert to his own use that property, or dishonestly use or dispose of that property or wilfully suffer any other person to do so;

(3) that such misappropriation, conversion, use or disposal should be in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract which the person has made, touching the discharge of such trust." (Para 18)

As the drafts were drawn in the name of the Company, even if the appellant was its Managing Director, he cannot be said to have committed an offence under Section 406 IPC. If and when a statute contemplates creation of such a legal fiction, it provides specifically therefor. In absence of any provision laid down under the statute, a Director of a Company or an employee cannot be held to be vicariously liable for any offence committed by the Company itself. (Para 19)

The Penal Code, save and except some provisions specifically providing therefor, does not contemplate any vicarious liability on the part of a party who is not charged directly for commission of an offence. (Para 16)

The provisions of the Essential Commodities Act, the Negotiable Instruments Act, the Employees' Provident Funds and Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1952, etc. have created such vicarious liability. In terms of the Explanations appended to Section 405 of the Penal Code, a legal fiction has been created to the effect that the employer shall be deemed to have committed an offence of criminal breach of trust. Whereas a person in charge of the affairs of the Company and in control thereof has been made vicariously liable for the offence committed by the Company along with the Company but even in a case falling under Section 406 IPC vicarious liability has been held to be not extendable to the Directors or officers of the Company. (Para 20)

The High Court, therefore, committed a manifest error in passing the impugned judgment. (Para 21)

The appeal is allowed. Respondent 2 is liable to bear the costs of the appellant for causing harassment to him which is quantified at Rs 1,00,000 (Rupees one lakh only). (Para 22). S.K. Alagh v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 662: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 686: AIR 2008 SC 1731: (2008) 142 Comp Cas 228: 2008 Cri LJ 2256: (2008) 3 All LJ 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-2008]

Sabitha Ramamurthy v. R.B.S. Channabasavaradhya, (2006) 10 SCC 581: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 621; Maksud Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668, relied on

[10030] — Ss. 405 to 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Essential ingredients of — Person to whom a property is entrusted, if allows others to misappropriate the same, commits the offence — Entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property may in the circumstances of the case, lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion — Dishonest misappropriation of the property entrusted, even with the intention to restore the property in future, would attract the offence — "Entrustment" — Import of — Held, on facts (per majority, Shah, J. contra), Accused 1, 3 and 5 committed offence of criminal breach of trust

Per majority (Agrawal and Pasayat, JJ.)

To constitute an offence of criminal breach of trust, there must be an entrustment, there must be misappropriation or conversion to one's own use, or use in violation of a legal direction or of any legal contract; and the misappropriation or conversion or disposal must be with a dishonest intention. When a person allows others to misappropriate the money entrusted to him, that amounts to a criminal breach of trust as defined by Section 405. The section is relatable to property in a positive part and a negative part. The positive part deals with criminal misappropriation or conversion of the property and the negative part consists of dishonestly using or disposing of the property in violation of any direction and of law or any contract touching the discharge of trust. (Para 361)

The term "entrustment" is not necessarily a term of law. It may have different implications in different contexts. In its most general signification all it imports is the handing over possession for some purpose which may not imply the conferring of any proprietary right at all. (Para 363)

To establish the charge of criminal breach of trust, the prosecution is not obliged to prove the precise mode of conversion, misappropriation or misapplication by the accused of the property entrusted to him or over which he has dominion. The principal ingredient of the offence being dishonest misappropriation or conversion which may not ordinarily be a matter of direct proof, entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property entrusted if proved, may, in the light of other circumstances, justifiably lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion. (Para 365)

Sections 407 to 409 make special provisions for various cases in which property is entrusted to the enumerated categories of persons who commit the offence. The offence of breach of trust and dishonest misappropriation are sufficient to constitute an offence under the relevant provisions. (Para 360)

Section 409 deals with criminal breach of trust by a public servant or by a banker, merchant or agent. Section 405 defines criminal breach of trust. The offence like the offence of criminal misappropriation is characterized by an actual fraudulent appropriation of property. There is not originally wrongful taking or moving as in the case of theft but the offence consists in wrongful appropriation of property, consequent upon a possession which is lawful. The offence is distinguishable from criminal misappropriation because subject of it is not the property which by some casual act or otherwise, but without criminal means, comes into the offender's possession; but the property which is entrusted to the offender by the owner or by others' lawful authority and which the offender holds subject to some duty or obligation to apply it according to the trust. (Para 359)

When a person misappropriates to his own use the property that does not belong to him, the misappropriation is dishonest even though there was an intention to restore it at some future point of time. (Para 364)

When the factual background highlighted is considered in the light of the various provisions, it is clear that the offences under the Indian Penal Code alleged have been established against the accused persons. Accused 1, 3 and 5 were therefore, rightly convicted. (Para 378)

Per Shah, J. (dissenting)

What is punishable under Section 403 is dishonest misappropriation or conversion to his own use any movable property. Further, as per the Explanation, dishonest misappropriation for the time being or for a short time is also misappropriation within the meaning of the section. Hence, for establishing the offence it is required to be proved that:

1. The property belongs to a person other than the accused,

2. The accused appropriated the said property or converted it to his own use, and,

3. He did so "dishonestly" — that is to say, with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one or wrongful loss to another person. (Para 258)

Further, essential ingredients required to be proved under Section 405 are:

1. Accused must be entrusted with some property or with any dominion over property,

2. He dishonestly misappropriates or dishonestly converts to his own use that property, or

3. Dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged or of any legal contract, or

4. Wilfully suffers any other person to do so. (Para 260)

Allegations in this case are that firstly, the accused appropriated cheques issued by Canara Bank in favour of Grindlays Bank to himself. Secondly, that appropriation was misappropriation, and thirdly, it was dishonest. (Para 259)

In the investment policy or lending policy as per the guidelines framed by MUL in 1989 use of the phrase "through scheduled banks" or "directly" appears to be intentional. "Through scheduled bank" would indicate that the amount is not invested "with the bank". A PW has admitted that the name of the broker did not figure or reflect on the record of MUL in the event of transaction of investment being through the broker. In any case, A-1 and A-2 who are sought to be prosecuted are not responsible for the said policy. The policy is framed by the Board and as per the said policy the Sub-Committee headed by the Chairman and the Managing Director of MUL and the Financial Director has passed appropriate resolutions. It appears that they were in the know of the entire investments, but for reasons best known to the prosecution, they are not prosecuted or examined as witnesses even though they were interrogated by the investigating officer. A-1 and A-2 were promoted for their efficiency and good work. The same stand was taken by MUL before JPC despite knowing that there was so-called investigation by CBI. MUL has not suffered any loss. On the contrary, it has received substantial interest for short-term investment for a few days. UCO Bank has also earned commission which is reflected in its account. If there was any dishonest intention on the part of A-3, he would not have credited the earned commission for the transactions in the account books of the Bank. No loss to UCO Bank. Neither MUL nor UCO Bank has lodged any FIR for the so-called misappropriation or fraud. The prosecution has not even suggested that Accused 1, 2, 3 or 4 got any pecuniary advantage or gain by such transactions. Evidence led by the prosecution discloses that it was the practice of the Bank to issue BRs for such type of transactions. It was the duty of the prosecution to carry out necessary investigation whether the BRs were backed by the units or not. If the investigating officer fails to discharge its duty, no inference can be drawn that BRs were not backed by security/units. The prosecution has miserably failed to prove that A-3 issued BRs without holding units as security or that BRs were not backed by units. The Chief General Manager (Finance) of MUL has stated that looking at the BRs of UCO Bank, no suspicion would arise and that issuance of the BRs necessarily indicates that the bank issuing it would be holding the security covered under the BR. The Divisional Manager of UCO Bank at the Bombay office at the relevant time has produced on record a letter dated 8-1-1991 written by him stating resumption of switch transaction after discussing the subject with various authorities including the Zonal Manager, General Manager and Dy. Manager of UCO Bank. On the evidence as it is, at the highest it was a failure on the part of A-1, A-2 and A-3 to perform their duties or observe rules of procedure in appropriate manner and may at the most be an administrative lapse. There is no evidence against A-2 and A-4 to connect them with the crime. A-4 is prosecuted without collecting any evidence against him that he was responsible for crediting the amount in the account of A-5. The prosecution has erroneously proceeded as if the amount of pay orders issued in favour of Grindlays Bank was directly deposited in the account of A-5. For A-5, it is to be held that he gave loan to MUL in the first transaction and borrowed the amount in the last four transactions. These transactions were carried out through UCO Bank. Therefore, assuming that those transactions were against the guidelines issued by RBI, it would not mean that A-5 has misappropriated the amount. He repaid the amount on fixed dates with stipulated interest. Question of payment of interest would arise in cases of loan transaction and normally the Bank would not borrow the amount at such a high rate of interest. The Bank has issued BRs and there is no evidence that BRs were not backed by the units. On the contrary, the defence has led evidence to suggest that units were given as security. For A-3 also, the investigating officer has not bothered to verify properly because admittedly A-3 was transferred from Hamam Street Branch at Bombay to Hingha Branch, near Nagpur at the relevant time when the 5th transaction was carried out between 2-5-1991 to 7-5-1991. (Para 281)

Section 415 has two parts. While in the first part, the person must "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" induce the complainant to deliver any property; in the second part, the person should intentionally induce the complainant to do or omit to do a thing. That is to say, in the first part, inducement must be dishonest or fraudulent. In the second part, the inducement should be intentional. (Para 281)

In the present case, it is very important to determine who is the controlling agent behind the act of the Company (MUL). If the Board of MUL or the management of the Bank were fully aware of such transactions, subordinates who carry out the transactions could not be held guilty, because for the offences for which the accused are charged mens rea must be proved. Therefore, those who are responsible for taking such decision could be prosecuted, but not those who are only carrying out directions on the basis that it is a commercial policy of the Company (MUL) or the Bank. As stated before the JPC, it was an effort to maximise the yield or surplus funds of MUL and there was no need for the Company to take any action against the officers. (Para 281)

Further, the case is required to be decided on the touchstone of ingredients of the offence punishable under IPC and there cannot be any doubt that those who are found guilty should be punished, but the conviction must be on the basis of the established criminal jurisprudence and not on moral or equitable ground or impression created or gathered by the prosecuting agency. It is also true that in the present case, dealing in public funds was there to a large extent but that would not by itself be a sufficient ground for drawing any inference in favour of the prosecution, particularly when there is no evidence on record that MUL or UCO Bank suffered any loss or any of Accused 1 to 4 gained anything. On the contrary, there is evidence on record that UCO Bank got commission from the said transactions. (Para 250)

Hence the prosecution has failed to prove its case against the accused. (Para 281). Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869: AIR 2003 SC 2748.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah[1], B.N. Agrawal[2] and Arijit Pasayat[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2003]

Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116; Jaikrishnadas Manohardas Desai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 889: 1960 Cri LJ 1250, relied on [10031] — Ss. 405, 409 and 34 — Imposition of vicarious liability in respect of offences under Ss. 405/409 against Chairman of company, where company entrusted with monies — Failure to arraign company — Effect — Complaint must reflect a common prior concert or planning amongst all accused — Complaint herein does not reveal any preconcert or preplanning to misappropriate amount in question — MSEB, in whose coffers said amount was credited, not arraigned as accused in complaint — As ingredients of Ss. 405/409 simpliciter are not satisfied against appellant Chairman of MSEB (see §[114]), question of his acting in concert with others does not arise — Hence, S. 34 IPC is not attracted against appellant (Paras 24, 26 and 27). Asoke Basak v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 10 SCC 660.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

Ramaswami Ayyangar v. State of T.N., (1976) 3 SCC 779: 1976 SCC (Cri) 518; Dani Singh v. State of Bihar, (2004) 13 SCC 203: 2005 SCC (Cri) 127, followed [10032] — Ss. 405, 409 and 34 — Property entrusted to or in dominion of company, but Chairman sought to be made liable — Averments necessary to implicate Chairman — Respondent company making security deposit to bid for tenders with MSEB — Due to certain disputes, it sought immediate refund of said amount, as it was no longer interested in participating in tenders — MSEB informed respondent that deposit had been adjusted against dues payable by respondent — Respondents filed complaint against appellant, Chairman of MSEB, that said amount of Rs 5 lakhs was in dominion of appellant-accused, entrusted to MSEB for a specific purpose and, therefore, by adjusting said amount for some other purpose, accused dishonestly and wilfully, with common intention, deprived complainant use of money and committed offence in terms of S. 405 r/w S. 409 IPC — High Court declined to quash complaint — Held, said amount was deposited by complainant company with MSEB and there is nothing in complaint which may even remotely suggest that complainant had entrusted any property to appellant or that appellant had dominion over said money — In absence of any such specific averment demonstrating role of accused in commission of offence, no prima facie case has been made out against appellant in respect of offence under S. 409 r/w S. 405, even with aid of S. 34 IPC — It was a fit case where High Court should have exercised its powers under S. 482 CrPC by quashing complaint — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 3 to 7, 19 and 21 to 27). Asoke Basak v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 10 SCC 660.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

S.K. Alagh v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 662: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 686, followed

[10033] — Ss. 406, 420, 465, 468 and 120-B — Cheating — Conspiracy — Ingredients of — Intention — Liability of principal for criminal acts of agent — P executed sale deed in Respondent 2's favour on appellant's behalf — Land in dispute was earlier sold to different persons by S — S brother of P — P was attesting witness also in sale deeds executed by S — Respondent 2 filed complaint case against appellant alleging deep-rooted conspiracy — Magistrate took cognizance and issued process against appellant — High Court dismissed appellant's petition under S. 482 CrPC holding that P, appellant's vendor, and his brother S, had in conspiracy with each other, sold away entire lands and appellant was also a party to such conspiracy — Held, no link established between sale deeds executed by S in respect of mutated property and appellant — Appellant was not an attesting witness to any of the sale deeds — If Respondent 2 prejudiced by fact that appellant had executed sale deed in his favour in respect of disputed land, he could question such transfer and claim damages in respect thereof from P by way of appropriate damages — No action in criminal court would lie in absence of any intention to cheat — Further held, filing of such a criminal complaint was only to pressurise appellant into making a settlement — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Contract Act, 1872, S. 188 (Paras 14 to 18). Rama Devi v. State of Bihar, (2010) 12 SCC 273.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2010]

[10034] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Property of a government company purchased by a firm of which A-1, the then CM was a partner — CM or a Minister not shown to have dominion over the property of the company — Relationship between A-1 and the company not shown to be one of trustee and beneficiary — Held on facts, ingredients of S. 409 not attracted

The properties in question belonged to a corporation which is a separate and distinct entity from the Government and the properties are held by it as an owner and it has complete control over the same except, when the said properties are to be alienated, approval of the Government has to be obtained as provided under the articles of association of the said Corporation. Indeed there is no material in the whole case to come to the conclusion that any trust has been or deemed to have been created in respect of the said properties and that the relationship between A-1 and the govt. company is one of trustee and beneficiary. There is absolutely no entrustment of the properties in any manner, which allows a dominion over it except approving or disapproving an act on the part of the Corporation either to sell or to alienate the properties. It cannot be said that a public servant who holds a particular portfolio and has an element of supervisory control in certain matters, has a dominion over the property so as to exercise any legal incidents attached to the right of ownership. Therefore, there was no entrustment of the said properties and it cannot be said that A-1 had dominion over the said properties either as the Chief Minister or as the Minister of Industries and in any case, the evidence does not establish the ingredient of dishonest disposal or conversion of property for personal use. Thus the charge under Section 409 is also not established. (Para 53). R. Sai Bharathi v. J. Jayalalitha, (2004) 2 SCC 9: 2004 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2004 SC 692: 2004 Cri LJ 286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2003]

[10035] — S. 409 — Prosecution of Managing Director of a company under liquidation under S. 409 — Sanction of the company court is not necessary

There is nothing in S. 179, Companies Act which can be construed as restricting the powers of the Court to take cognizance of an offence or the powers of the police to initiate prosecution or even of a private citizen to move the machinery of the criminal courts to bring an offender like the appellant to justice.

For a prosecution for breach of trust even by a director of a company no such condition precedent as the previous sanction of any authority is contemplated by law, unless it is a prosecution in the name and on behalf of the company by the official liquidator who has to incur expenses out of the funds of the company. Section 179 is an enabling provision to enable the liquidator to do certain things with the sanction of the Court. It does not control the general law of the land. Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 SCR 483: 26 Comp Cas 340: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, 1125: (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 49.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha , JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1956]

[10036] — Ss. 409 & 405 — Cognizance of offence taken under, against director of a public limited company — Application filed by the director under S. 482 CrPC seeking discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh , JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

(6) Default in payment of employee's EPF or ESI contribution by employer (S. 405 Explns.)

[10037] — S. 405 Expln. 1 — Existence of a statute or statutory rule regarding Provident Fund or Family Pension Fund not essential under — Even in absence of rules under the W.B. Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 (W.B. Act 5 of 1963) and formation of Provident Fund Committee, held, there can be entrustment of provident fund contributions of the teachers by virtue of deduction and retention of their contribution. Harihar Prasad Dubey v. Tulsi Das Mundhra, (1980) 4 SCC 120: 1980 SCC (Cri) 931: AIR 1981 SC 81: (1980) 17 ACC 294: 1980 Cri LJ 1329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and A.C. Gupta , JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-1980]

[10038] — S. 405 Expln. 1 — Held, creates a fiction of entrustment — Employees' Provident Funds Scheme, 1952, Para 32(3). Hindustan Times Ltd. v. Union of India, (1998) 2 SCC 242: 1998 SCC (L&S) 481: AIR 1998 SC 688: (1998) 1 SLR 495: (1998) 28 CLA 149: (1998) 92 FJR 546: (1998) 1 LLJ 682.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-1998]

[10039] — Ss. 405 Expln. 2 and 406 — Word "employer" occurring in Expln. 2 to S. 405 — Meaning and scope — Held, does not attract the definition of "principal employer" contained in S. 40 of ESI Act — Word "employer" although used in Ss. 85-B and 85-C of ESI Act, held, has not been defined in that Act — High Court rightly applied ordinary parlance meaning to the said word — Hence, where the factory in question was owned by a limited company, held, the company, and not its directors singly or collectively, was the employer liable for prosecution under S. 406 — Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948, Ss. 40, 2(17) & (15), 85-B and 85-C — Factories Act, 1948, Ss. 2(n) (as it then stood) and 100(2). ESI Corpn. v. S.K. Aggarwal, (1998) 6 SCC 288: 1998 SCC (L&S) 1480: AIR 1998 SC 2676: (1998) 94 Comp Cas 75: (1998) 3 LLN 920: (1998) 2 LLJ 794.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and Sujata V. Manohar, J. [Date of decision: 31-7-1998]

[10040] — Ss. 406/120-B — Quashment — Relevant considerations — Preventing abuse of process of court or securing ends of justice — Nature of dispute — Quashment of proceedings relating to TDS — Where proceeding is of civil nature which cannot be adjudicated by criminal court, High Court would be justified in exercising its inherent jurisdiction and quashing the same — High Court erred in refusing to exercise its jurisdiction under S. 482 and passing a cryptic order without assigning any reasons therefor when complaint did not disclose any offence of criminal nature — In face of assertion made by appellants that deduction towards income tax were made from salaries of all employees liable to pay the same in view of statutory provisions of IT Act, appropriate remedy for respondent was to approach authority/officer concerned — Moreover, report of SI had indicated that matter in issue was civil in nature — Proceedings against appellants quashed — IT Act, 1961, Ss. 192, 200, 206, 271-C, 276-B & 276-BB — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

A private complaint was filed by the respondent before ACJM under Sections 461/468/406 read with Section 120-B IPC against the appellants alleging discrimination by unduly deducting Rs 1640 p.m. from the monthly salary as income tax and a further wrongful deduction of Rs 3050 on account of cooperative loan issued by the appellants/ Company. It was also stated in the complaint that the amount so deducted was not deposited with the Income Tax Authority and should be refunded back. The ACJM directed SI to conduct an inquiry into the allegations made in the complaint. On 30-4-2004, the appellants informed that the amount of income tax deducted in consonance with Section 192 of the Income Tax Act being deposited in due course as tax to the credit of the respondent employee in terms of Section 199 of the Income Tax Act as uniformly done in respect of every employee and also produced Form 16 of the respondent for the period from 1-4-2003 to 31-3-2004. The report submitted by SI showed that complaint in issue was civil in nature. However, JM issued summons against the appellants for an offence under Sections 406/120-B of the Penal Code. In response to the summons, the appellants made an application under Section 205 of the Code before the Judicial Magistrate which was rejected. Subsequently, vide order dated 12-9-2005, the Judicial Magistrate issued warrant of arrest against the appellants.

The appellant's application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint and order dated 12-9-2005 was dismissed by the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the complaint, the respondent mentioned about the filing of a writ petition in 1991 before the High Court of Calcutta and the order passed therein in 2003. He also referred to his contempt petition before the High Court. He alleged that due to the direction of the High Court, which was issued at his instance, the officers entered into a criminal conspiracy and with a view to pressurise him for withdrawing the said contempt, started threatening him and illegally deducting Rs 1640 per month from his monthly salary as income tax though he did not fall within taxable income category. It was also pointed out that a sum of Rs 3050 had been deducted from his salary illegally on account of cooperative loan although, in the previous month, the deduction was only to the extent of Rs 50. (Paras 10 to 13)

A perusal of Sections 192, 200, 206, 271, 276-B and 276-BB of the Income Tax Act, makes it clear that it is obligatory on the part of the persons responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "salaries", at the time of payment, to deduct income tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the financial year on the estimated income of the assessee and pay the same to the authority concerned. They also make it clear that on failure to deduct tax at source they shall be liable to pay, by way of penalty, a sum equal to the amount of tax which such persons failed to deduct or pay. They also show that failure to pay tax to the credit of the Central Government in certain cases or pay the tax collected at source under Section 276-BB shall be punishable with imprisonment. (Para 23)

In the case on hand, it is the categorical stand of the appellant management that the amount of tax that has been deducted from the respondent's salary as TDS under the head "salaries" in terms of Section 192 is uniformly done in respect of each and every employee of the Company and the amount so deducted is deposited to the credit of the employees including the respondent in terms of Section 199. They also produced a copy of Form 16 being the certificate under Section 203 of the Income Tax Act, 1961 for the tax deducted at source from the income of the respondent. (Para 24)

The JM had forwarded the complaint to SI for conducting an inquiry who had concluded that "the matter is civil in nature" and forwarded the same to the Additional CJM with a request to clarify the same. In spite of that the ACJM after recording stand of complainant had found that there was sufficient ground for proceeding against accused. It is not clear on what grounds ACJM had found so. From the materials placed, particularly, the contents of the complaint, relevant statutory provisions of the Income Tax Act, report of the SI, the complaint does not disclose any case to proceed against the accused persons as arrived at by the Additional CJM. Even if the respondent had some grievance with the appellants about non-promotion, direction of the High Court, pendency of contempt, etc. it is not a case for criminal prosecution. If he is very much interested to vindicate his grievance, the respondent could have very well approached the officer concerned of IISCO or the Income Tax Authority concerned. Though in the complaint, it is stated that the respondent had sent a notice under registered post with acknowledgment due on 17-11-2003, admittedly, no such proof had been placed before the Court. In fact, the appellants stoutly denied the receipt of such a notice. (Paras 26 and 27)

In spite of all the details and materials since the Additional CJM issued summons, the appellants approached the High Court under Section 482 of the Code for quashing the same. The High Court, by the impugned order, without adverting to any of the abovementioned relevant materials passed a cryptic order refusing to exercise its inherent jurisdiction which is unsustainable in law. (Para 28). Rajeswar Tiwari v. Nanda Kishore Roy, (2010) 8 SCC 442: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 915.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2010]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, considered and relied on

(7) Criminal breach of trust by clerk or servant, etc. (S. 408)

See also under '(4) Ingredients of criminal breach of trust', above

[10041] — Ss. 405, 408 and 409 — Misappropriation — Accused, the cashier, in possession of keys of the safe — Keys of inner drawers kept sealed inside the safe — Cash disappearing from the safe — Inference is that the accused was party or privy to the extraction of cash from the safe

Accused was in possession of the keys of the safe, including the keys of the inner drawers of the safe. At least the two keys of the outer lock of the safe were all along with him. Even if someone else was in possession of the keys of the inner drawer he could not open the safe unless the keys of the outer door were made over to him by the accused. Accused's liability as cashier to account for the contents of the safe cannot be disputed. Therefore, the accused was either a party or privy to the extraction of the cash from the safe. In the absence of evidence that he parted with the safe between the period when the cash was last checked and when the loss was detected the accused was under a duty to account for the contents of the safe including the cash. Charge under S. 409 is, therefore, duly brought home to the accused. Surendra Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 656: 1972 SCC (Cri) 700: AIR 1973 SC 488: 1972 Cri LJ 1202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy and G.K. Mitter , JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1972]

[10042] — Ss. 406 and 34 — Wrongful withholding of company quarters — Criminal complaint for — Maintainability — Authorisation for filing complaint — Bona fides of — Eviction-directed — Manager, having been authorised by company resolution and power of attorney, filing complaint against retired employee for wrongfully occupying company quarters — Though power of attorney was executed prior to purchase of stamp papers, it was notarised on a date subsequent to execution and purchase of stamp papers — Trial court by wrongly reading rubber stamp date of notarisation as being prior to date of purchase of stamp papers, holding power of attorney as fictitious and therefore, dismissing complaint — Criminal complaint, held, was maintainable and cognizance was rightly taken — Said documents cannot be termed as fictitious or manufactured so as to oust the appellant from the arena of justice — Stamp Act, 1899, S. 17 — Powers of Attorney Act, 1882, Ss. 2 and 4 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 630 and 621. Automobile Products India Ltd. v. Das John Peter, (2010) 12 SCC 593: (2010) 158 Comp Cas 69: (2010) 93 AIC 214 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Deepak Verma , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2010]

[10043] — S. 406 r/w S. 34 — Wrongful withholding of company quarters — Eviction directed by Supreme Court itself on dire terms due to conduct of respondent-accused — Retired employee undisputedly being in wrongful occupation of appellant Company quarters for more than 18 years and breaching undertaking after undertaking to vacate premises — Trial court dismissing complaint under S. 630, Companies Act r/w Ss. 406/34 IPC on basis of untenable technical ground — Instead of remanding matter, held, Art. 142 can be invoked to cure manifest illegality which resulted in palpable injustice to appellant Company — There is no equity in favour of accused — Expeditious eviction, if needed with police help, therefore, directed — Said employee directed to hand over possession or face one year imprisonment and 1000 fine — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 630 and 621

Even after taking into consideration all the defences taken by the accused, their eviction from the servant quarter is inevitable. It is clear from the impugned orders that there is manifest illegality in the same and have resulted in palpable injustice to the appellant Company which is curable by invoking the inherent powers under Article 142, Constitution of India. (Paras 27 and 28)

Equity also does not swing in favour of the accused, who have displayed adamant and dilatory attitude. A-1 even committed default of his own promise. A-1 retired in the year 1992 and gave an undertaking to the Company as far as back as 5-1-2000 categorically admitting and agreeing to vacate the premises on or before 31-1-2000, it was incumbent on his part to honour the same. From the date of retirement more than 18 years have passed by and he has used the servant quarter without having any right to do so. No further mercy or sympathy can be shown to such an accused. (Paras 25 to 29)

No useful purpose would be served even if the matter is remitted to the Magistrate for trial on merits. Quietus has to be given to the litigation which started years back. (Paras 28 and 30)

The appellant's complaint filed under Section 630, Companies Act is allowed and the accused is granted time to vacate the servant quarter on or before 1-10-2010 and to hand over its peaceful and vacant possession to the appellant Company. In default thereof the accused shall have to suffer imprisonment for a term of one year and fine of Rs 10,000. In default of payment of fine, the accused shall suffer further imprisonment of one month. If the accused persons fail to do so then the appellant shall be entitled to take police help to get the order executed. (Paras 31 and 32). Automobile Products India Ltd. v. Das John Peter, (2010) 12 SCC 593: (2010) 158 Comp Cas 69: (2010) 93 AIC 214 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Deepak Verma , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2010]

[10044] — S. 408 — Appellant convicted for misappropriation of certain amounts belonging to the respondent Cooperative Society — Appellant pleading that the said amounts were taken by him as advance after being sanctioned by the President and in support of the said plea appellant producing certain documents for the first time in the Supreme Court — In spite of service of notice, counsel for the respondent failing to appear before the court and no challenge made to the plea of the appellant — Document accepted and conviction of the appellant set aside. Subash Chandra Bohidar v. Burobhadi S.C.S., (1996) 7 SCC 16: 1996 SCC (Cri) 165.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and K. Venkataswami , JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-1995]

[10045] — S. 408 — Charge for criminal breach of trust specifying July 13, 1957 as the date on which the accused was in employment — Implication of — Finding by High Court that misappropriation took place on June 30, 1957 does not amount to making out a new case different from the charge — CrPC, 1898, S. 222

The charge neither mentions the date of entrustment nor of its misappropriation but refers to July 13, 1957 as the date on which the appellant was in the employment. The implication of the charge is that it is on or about that date that the entrustment and the misappropriation took place.

As the funds were in the charge of the appellant the instructions given by him to the accountant to make a wrong cross entry are only susceptible of the inference that he wanted to misappropriate the amount. Kantilal Gandalal Shah v. State of Gujarat, (1974) 3 SCC 587: 1974 SCC (Cri) 65: AIR 1974 SC 222: 1974 Cri LJ 310.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Dwivedi and Y.V. Chandrachud , JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-1973]

[10046] — S. 408 — Conviction restored and sentence reduced to that already undergone — High Court acted improperly in setting aside concurrent findings of fact where the prosecution evidence was not challenged in cross-examination — CrPC, 1973 — S. 401. State of Karnataka v. Marigowda, (1981) 4 SCC 429: 1981 SCC (Cri) 849: AIR 1982 SC 1171.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1981]

[10047] — S. 408 — Criminal breach of trust by clerk or servant — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 — S. 4 — Power of court to release certain offenders on probation of good conduct — Appellant convicted under S. 408 IPC for irregularities detected during audit of accounts of a cooperative society, of which appellant was Secretary — On appeal sentence reduced to one month RI — Irregularities occurred in 1981-82 — Amounts of money involved were small (Rs 1812 and less) — Appellant had reimbursed the Society for entire amount with interest — Held, benevolent provisions of Probation of Offenders Act could be extended to appellant, who directed to execute a bond for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour for 3 years — Sentence suspended sine die. Bore Gowda v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 10 SCC 260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-1999]

[10048] — S. 408 — Provision in S. 12 Probation of offenders Act for removal of disqualification attaching to conviction — Applicability — Held, applicable only to the disqualification attached under the law providing for the offence and its punishment — Hence, where a person convicted under S. 408 IPC was released under S. 4(1) of the 1958 Act, S. 12 of that Act, held, did not bar the taking into account the conviction for the purpose of his dismissal from government service — Constitution of India, Art. 311(2) second proviso (a) — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 — Ss. 12 and 4(1). Harichand v. Director of School Education, (1998) 2 SCC 383: 1998 SCC (L&S) 560: AIR 1998 SC 788: (1998) 2 LLN 36: (1998) 2 LLJ 831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.P. Bharucha and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-1998]

Aitha Chander Rao v. State of A.P., 1981 Supp SCC 17: 1981 SCC (Cri) 637, distinguished [10049] — S. 408 — Sentence — Delay in final disposal of appeal a mitigating factor — Misappropriation of about Rs 8784 by manager of a cooperative society — Occurrence taking place about 13 years ago and the appellant remaining in jail for about three months — Sentence of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone. Khodidas Manjibhai Savriaya v. State of Gujarat, 1994 SCC (Cri) 1410.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1992]

[10050] — Ss. 408 and 405 — Criminal breach of trust — What constitutes — Bus conductor — Ticketless travel — Conductor of State Road Transport Corporation found by inspection team to be carrying several passengers (35 in this case) without ticket even after realising fare from them — Moreover, he obstructing the checking process by threatening and abusing the authorities — Such acts on his part, held, constituted misconduct of serious nature (Para 6). U.P. SRTC v. Ram Kishan Arora, (2007) 4 SCC 627: (2007) 2 SCC (L&S) 64: (2007) 3 LLJ 171: (2007) 3 LLN 616: (2007) 3 CLR 347.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2007]

[10051] — Ss. 408, 467, 471 and 477-A — Criminal breach of trust and forgery etc. — On facts, offences established

On facts, the two documents, namely, the bill and the voucher-cum-receipt on their face would bring home to the person who uses them either knowledge or reason to believe that the same were forged and this was not disputed by the counsel for the appellant. The evidence also discloses that, (a) on the theory of the blank cheques signed by PWs 1 and 12 remaining in the custody of the appellant, and (b) the possession of the forged bill with the accused on the basis of which the bearer cheque was issued by him, the conclusions of the High Court were right. Further, the user of the forged voucher-cum-receipt on the part of the appellant-accused with the requisite knowledge or reasonable belief that the same was a forged one is also established by the evidence. Therefore, the prosecution has established its charge under S. 471 read with S. 467, Indian Penal Code under both the counts against the accused beyond any reasonable doubt and the High Court was justified in reversing the acquittal recorded by the trial Court. B.K. Maarfatia v. State of Maharashtra, (1978) 1 SCC 596: 1978 SCC (Cri) 149: AIR 1978 SC 434: 1978 Cri LJ 507.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and V.D. Tulzapurkar , JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1977]

[10052] — Ss. 408 and 477-A — Sentence of imprisonment till rising of court and fine of Rs 50 and 100, prima facie inadequate. State of Karnataka v. Surender Kotiankar, (1984) 4 SCC 370: 1984 SCC (Cri) 624: AIR 1984 SC 1586: 1984 Cri LJ 1727: (1984) 2 Crimes 440.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1984]

[10053] — Ss. 409 & 408 — Agent or servant — Accused as promoter of a society lawfully received amount of share money and embezzled the same — Accused is an agent and not a servant — S. 409 and not S. 408 shall apply

Having regard to the nature of the duties of the appellant as the Secretary of the Society, it is clear that his status was that of an agent and not a servant. Moreover, whether the appellant should be charged under S. 408 or S. 409 is of no importance in the present case, as the sentence imposed on him under S. 409 viz., four years' rigorous imprisonment could be maintained even under S. 408. Chandi Prasad Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 149: (1955) 2 SCR 1035: 1956 Cri LJ 322, 325: (1956) 1 MLJ (SC) 88: 1956 ALJ 153.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Vivian Bose and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-1955]

(8) Criminal breach of trust by public servant (S. 409) — Corruption cases

See also Public Accountability and Vigilance — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 and Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988

Synopsis

(i) Broadly 861
(ii) Relative scope vis-à-vis Prevention of Corruption Act 873
(iii) Sanction for prosecution 874
(iv) Instances 878
(v) Sentence 889

(i) Broadly

See also '(4) Ingredients of criminal breach of trust', above

[10054] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Entrustment of property is an essential ingredient of — Mere exercise of "power to allot" petroleum outlets by Minister concerned from out of his discretionary quota cannot constitute "property" within the meaning of S. 405

A trust contemplated by Section 405 would arise only when there is an entrustment of property or dominion over property. There has, therefore, to be a property belonging to someone which is entrusted to the person accused of the offence under Section 405. The entrustment of property creates a trust which is only an obligation annexed to the ownership of the property and arises out of a confidence reposed and accepted by the owner. The word "property", used in Section 409 IPC means the property which can be entrusted or over which dominion may be exercised. Mere exercise of "power to allot petrol pumps", and that too under discretionary quota, cannot be treated as "property" within the meaning of Section 405 of the Indian Penal Code, capable of being misutilised or misappropriated. (Paras 168, 171 and 172)

Having regard to the facts of the case and the ingredients of the offence constituting criminal breach of trust, as defined in Section 405, or the offence as set out in Section 409 IPC, it must be held that there was no case made out against the petitioner for any case being registered against him on the basis of the judgment passed by the Supreme Court nor was there any occasion to direct an investigation by CBI in that case. (Para 173). Common Cause, A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1196: AIR 1999 SC 2979.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad, K. Venkataswami and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1999]

Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 530; Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 593, overruled

State of Gujarat v. Jaswantlal Nathalal, AIR 1968 SC 700: (1968) 2 SCR 408; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Chelloor Mankkal Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478: 1954 Cri LJ 102; CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045; R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821: (1963) 1 SCR 253, relied on

See also Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736

[10055] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust as distinguished from mere error of judgment — Held, error of judgment does not attract criminal liability (Para 69). Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v. CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10056] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust — A Minister is in a position of a trustee in respect of the public property under his charge and discretion — He must therefore deal with people's property in just and fair manner, failing which he would be liable for criminal breach of trust. Common Cause, A Registered Society (Petrol pumps matter) v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 530: AIR 1996 SC 3538.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1996]

(8)(i) Broadly (contd.)

Overruled in Common Cause, A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667

[10057] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients — Dishonest use or disposal of property in violation of direction of law — The expression "direction of law", held, even if given literal meaning, includes direction issued by authorities in exercise of their statutory power as also power of supervision — Failure on the part of bank officials to follow instructions issued by RBI and provisions of a departmental manual, held, was violation of direction of law, resulting in criminal breach of trust — UCO Bank Manual of Instructions on Bill Discounting, Para 2.5(b) — RBI Circular (Para 100). Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v. CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10058] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Entrustment"

No question of entrustment arises when a sum is paid by way of illegal gratification along with some transaction. C.M. Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478: 1954 Cri LJ 102: 1953 Ker LT 173.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Patanjali Sastri, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, Vivian Bose and Ghulam Hasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-1952]

[10059] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Suffering of loss not essential for conviction

The officials of UCO Bank and National Housing Bank who helped Harshad Mehta (since deceased) in siphoning off public money of Rs 40 crores were also charged for criminal breach of trust, apart from being charged for criminal conspiracy.

Held :

It is not the law that complaint petition under all circumstances must be made by banks and financial institutions whose money had been the subject-matter of offence. It is also not the law that suffering of loss is a sine qua non for recording a judgment of conviction. Criminal law can be set in motion by anybody. The prosecution was initiated on the basis of information received by Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). CBI is entitled to do so not only in regard to its statutory powers contained in the Delhi Special Police Act but it was also entitled to take cognizance in terms of the report submitted by the Janakiraman Committee. The money involved in transfer is public money belonging to public sector banks. If transaction was illegal, as a result whereof, a private person, who was not expected to reap fruits of "call money" was allowed to retain the same for a period to make an unlawful gain therefrom, offence of criminal breach of trust must be held to have been committed. It is for the same reason the submission that as nobody ultimately suffered any loss, an offence under Section 409 of the Penal Code was not made out, cannot be accepted. A bank or financial institution may not suffer ultimate loss but if money has been allowed to be used by another person illegally for illegal purpose, ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code would get attracted. A case involving temporary embezzlement also attracts ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code. (Paras 150, 152 and 153)

When a person allows others to misappropriate property entrusted to him, that also amounts to criminal breach of trust. In the present case, amount of Rs 40 crores was entrusted to Accused 6 to be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the National Housing Bank Act, 1987. The Act does not permit grant of loan to an individual. Accused 6 in violation of the law handed over the amount to UCO Bank with full knowledge that the amount would be credited to the account of Harshad Mehta. The call money transaction with UCO Bank was only a cover-up. The property which was trusted to Accused 6 was misappropriated by him. The most essential ingredient of criminal breach of trust is misappropriation with dishonest intention. (Para 154). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10060] — S. 409 — Absence of proof of motive in a case against public servant — Held, ordinarily not safe to convict accused

Officers in the position of the accused do not commit illegal acts like disposing of Government property in their custody and expose themselves to a prosecution and possible disgrace unless they are prompted by some strong motive, usually self-interest; and though a conviction can be based on evidence which does not disclose a motive if the facts proved justify such a course, yet it would ordinarily be unsafe to convict in a case like the present in the absence of proof indicating an adequate reason for criminal behaviour on the part of the accused. Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287: (1955) 1 SCR 1177: 1955 Cri LJ 857, 860.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea and S.R. Das, Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-12-1954]

[10061] — S. 409 — Acquittal for offences under S. 409 IPC and S. 5 of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Held, does not bar trial under S. 135, Customs Act and S. 85, Gold (Control) Act. A.A. Mulla v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 11 SCC 606: AIR 1997 SC 1441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1996]

[10062] — S. 409 — Applicability of — Proof — Nature and burden of — Held, prosecution to prove that property in question was entrusted with the accused — Once the same is proved, it is for the accused to prove as to how the property entrusted was dealt with — Actual mode of entrustment need not be proved — Accused appointed as Unit Manager on deputation in Kerala State Civil Supplies Corporation (KSCSC) at Punalur — After he was relieved to his parent department, a special audit conducted on direction of Managing Director of KSCSC — Certain quantities of boiled rice, palmolein and free-sale sugar found short — Accused's liability fixed at Rs 1,70,640 — Accused undertook to remit Rs 1,63,770 being the value of the shortage of 72 quintals of palmolein, 102 quintals of rice and 39 quintals of sugar — Deposited Rs 50,000 in part-payment — On facts, held, entrustment proved — No material placed by accused to prove as to how the property entrusted was dealt with — Conviction and sentence under S. 409, held, proper — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 101 and 103

The accused-appellant was appointed on deputation as Unit Manager of the Kerala State Civil Supplies Corporation (in short "the Corporation") at Punalur vide order dated 14-4-1983 passed by the Regional Manager of the Corporation posted in Thiruvananthapuram. By a letter dated 4-11-1986, the Managing Director of the Corporation directed the Regional Manager to relieve the accused to his parent department on 30-11-1986. Pursuant to the said direction, the Regional Manager issued an order dated 29-11-1986 relieving the accused. The said order was directed to be effective from the afternoon of 29-11-1986. Since the accused did not attend the office on 29-11-1986, the Regional Manager by an order dated 1-12-1986 permitted PW 3 to assume charge of the Punalur depot. Accordingly, PW 3 took the said charge. The stock of the Punalur Depot was partly stored in the Warehousing Corporation godown at Punalur and partly in the godown attached to the office, referred to by the witnesses as self-godown. Though PW 3 assumed charge, the accused had not handed over the keys of the godown or verified the stock. The accused reported in the depot on 13-12-1986 and in the presence of the then Assistant Manager (Accounts) (PW 2) in the regional office of the Corporation, brought the keys and opened the godown. He also undertook in writing the handing over of the charge on 13-12-1986, 15-12-1986 and 16-12-1986. In the presence of the accused the items found in the godown were verified. Only the stocks of 21.875 quintals of MP boiled rice and 84 kg of tamarind were found in the self-godown. The Managing Director of the Corporation directed a special audit to be conducted by PW 1. On audit, the actual stock of boiled rice, palmolein and free sale sugar was found short. PW 1 assessed the total value of shortage of rice at Rs 33,150, that of palmolein at Rs 1,08,000 and sugar at Rs 22,620. He also reported that the accused had withdrawn loading and transporting charges for these articles. PW 1 fixed accused's liability including infructuous expenses on transporting and cost of missing empty barrels at Rs 1,70,640. On 29-12-1986 the accused undertook to remit Rs 1,63,770 being the value of the shortage of 72 quintals of palmolein, 102 quintals of rice and 39 quintals of sugar and in part-payment, deposited Rs 50,000 in the Punalur Depot on that day. By Ext. P-17 he undertook to deposit half the amount by 2-1-1987 and the balance by 31st March next year. Thereafter, the matter was reported to the authorities concerned and consequent to which the accused was suspended from service. The Managing Director of the Corporation wrote to the Director of Vigilance (Investigation) along with a copy of audit report. The Director of Vigilance (Investigation) sanctioned registration of a case. The Inspector of the Kollam Vigilance Unit I (PW 11) conducted the investigation and sent a report to his higher authorities. In the meantime, the accused retired from service on 28-2-1992. The trial court on consideration of materials held the accused guilty and convicted him of the offences punishable under Section 5(2), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 and Section 409 IPC. The High Court in appeal confirmed the conviction and sentence.The accused challenged the said conviction and sentence by filing the instant appeal before the Supreme Court. Since the accused died during pendency of the appeal, his legal representatives were allowed to be impleaded.

Before the Supreme Court, the LRs of the accused submitted that in the absence of a sanction for the prosecution the whole proceeding was non est and the trial was vitiated. The prosecution had acted unfairly in taking advantage of the position that after retirement sanction was not necessary under the Prevention of Corruption Act. In any event, in respect of a retired employee sanction was necessary in terms of Section 197 CrPC. Additionally, it was submitted that the prosecution had not established any misappropriation and/or mens rea of the alleged crime and, therefore, both the trial court and the High Court had acted contrary to law. It was further submitted that both the courts below proceeded on mere surmises and conjectures to hold that the accused had committed misappropriation. The essential ingredients necessary to prove the accusations under Section 409 IPC were squarely absent. It was also submitted that both the trial court and the High Court had attached undue importance to the fact that the accused-appellant had agreed to pay the differential amount. It was contended that even if the accused had agreed to pay the amount, that was not material while considering the issue whether the ingredients had been established by the prosecution. Finally, it was submitted that taking note of the small amount involved and the fact that the accused had already deposited the amount, the benefit available under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 could be extended.

(8)(i) Broadly (contd.)

Dismissing the appeal preferred by the accused, Held :

It is fairly well-settled position in law that actual mode of entrustment or misappropriation is not to be proved by the prosecution. Once entrustment is proved, it is for the accused to prove as to how the property entrusted was dealt with. It was not only on the basis of the undertaking that the conviction was recorded, but the other evidence on record also unerringly proved entrustment. Therefore, it was for the accused to prove as to how the property entrusted with him was dealt with. No material was placed in that regard. Therefore, the courts below correctly held entrustment to have been proved. The concurrent findings of fact recorded by the courts below relating to entrustment and misappropriation are well merited and fully justified on the basis of evidence on record and do not suffer from any perversity or patent error of law to warrant interference. (Para 13). N. Bhargavan Pillai v. State of Kerala, (2004) 13 SCC 217: 2005 SCC (Cri) 142: AIR 2004 SC 2317: 2004 Cri LJ 2494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-2004]

Jiwan Dass v. State of Haryana, (1999) 2 SCC 530: 1999 SCC (Cri) 288, distinguished on facts

[10063] — S. 409 — Conviction under — Facts which are required to be proved for — Burden of proof in respect thereof — Held, onus lies on prosecution to prove charge against accused and it has to prove that (a) the accused, a public servant was entrusted with property of which he was duty-bound to account for, and (b) the accused had misappropriated the property — But, where entrustment is admitted by accused, it is for him to discharge the burden that the entrustment has been carried out as accepted and the obligation has been discharged — Proof as to actual mode and manner of misappropriation would be difficult in case where entrustment is proved or admitted and in such a case the prosecution would have to rely largely on the truth or falsity of the explanation given by the accused — Appellant, a Junior Engineer, was in charge of execution of construction of tanks — He showing payments made to persons engaged for work, but in reality no such payments were made — Showing bogus names, appellant misappropriating Rs 6764.10 by abusing his position as supervisor — Accused 2, a labourer, was made to put his thumb marks on the muster rolls to show receipt of monies by fictitious persons — No dispute about entrustment of money to appellant — Plea of appellant that the payments were not made by him directly but through the middlemen, not sustainable as he could not escape from liability by saying that he had entrusted the job to someone else — Thus, his conviction under S. 409, held, was proper — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106

In order to sustain a conviction under Section 409 IPC the prosecution is required to prove that (a) the accused, a public servant was entrusted with property of which he was duty-bound to account for, and (b) the accused had misappropriated the property. (Para 9)

It is not necessary or possible in every case to prove as to in what precise manner the accused had dealt with or appropriated the goods. In a case of criminal breach of trust, the failure to account for the money, proved to have been received by the accused or giving a false account of its use is generally considered to be a strong circumstance against the accused. Although onus lies on the prosecution to prove the charge against the accused, yet where the entrustment is proved or admitted it would be difficult for the prosecution to prove the actual mode and manner of misappropriation and in such a case the prosecution would have to rely largely on the truth or falsity of the explanation given by the accused. Thus, where the entrustment is admitted by the accused, it is for him to discharge the burden that the entrustment has been carried out as accepted and the obligation has been discharged. (Paras 12 and 10)

In the instant case, there is no dispute about the entrustment. The appellant had taken the stand that the payments were not made by him directly but through the middlemen, who distributed the amount to the persons who were engaged. This plea has been elaborately dealt with by both the trial court and the High Court. It was the duty of the appellant to make payment. He cannot escape from liability by saying that he had entrusted the job to someone else. It was found by the trial court and the High Court with reference to the evidence on record that payments were shown to have been made to persons who were found to be fictitious. The evidence of Village Kotwal, who was examined as PW 6 also shows that there was no such person in the village to whom the appellant claimed to have made payment. (Paras 12 to 14)

In view of the clinching evidence tendered by the prosecution which has been analysed at great length by the trial court and the High Court, there is no scope for interference. (Para 15). Mustafikhan v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 1 SCC 623: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2006]

Jagat Narayan Jha v. State of Bihar, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 246, relied on

Inderjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 289: 1995 SCC (Cri) 837, distinguished on facts

[10064] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Entrustment of money admitted by the accused — Burden lies on him to prove that entrustment has been carried out and the obligation has been discharged — His explanation has to be examined on preponderance of probabilities — On facts held, defence of accused is probable and he is entitled to benefit of doubt — Case of entrustment of Government money by government servant — Forgery and interpolation in cash book alleged — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106. Jagat Narayan Jha v. State of Bihar, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 246: 1994 Cri LJ 1100.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1992]

[10065] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Property of a govt. company purchased by a firm of which A-1, the then CM was a partner — CM or a Minister not shown to have dominion over the property of the company — Relationship between A-1 and the company not shown to be one of trustee and beneficiary — Held on facts, ingredients of S. 409 not attracted

The properties in question belonged to a corporation which is a separate and distinct entity from the Government and the properties are held by it as an owner and it has complete control over the same except, when the said properties are to be alienated, approval of the Government has to be obtained as provided under the articles of association of the said Corporation. Indeed there is no material in the whole case to come to the conclusion that any trust has been or deemed to have been created in respect of the said properties and that the relationship between A-1 and the govt. company is one of trustee and beneficiary. There is absolutely no entrustment of the properties in any manner, which allows a dominion over it except approving or disapproving an act on the part of the Corporation either to sell or to alienate the properties. It cannot be said that a public servant who holds a particular portfolio and has an element of supervisory control in certain matters, has a dominion over the property so as to exercise any legal incidents attached to the right of ownership. Therefore, there was no entrustment of the said properties and it cannot be said that A-1 had dominion over the said properties either as the Chief Minister or as the Minister of Industries and in any case, the evidence does not establish the ingredient of dishonest disposal or conversion of property for personal use. Thus the charge under Section 409 is also not established. (Para 53). R. Sai Bharathi v. J. Jayalalitha, (2004) 2 SCC 9: 2004 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2004 SC 692: 2004 Cri LJ 286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2003]

[10066] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — What and how to be proved to establish the charge of — Held, the prosecution must prove that: (i) the accused was a public servant, (ii) was in such capacity entrusted with the property or with domination over the same, and (iii) he committed breach of trust in respect of the same — Strict proof must be given. Jiwan Dass v. State of Haryana, (1999) 2 SCC 530: 1999 SCC (Cri) 288: AIR 1999 SC 1301: 1999 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1999]

[10067] — S. 409 — Embezzlement of fund collected by appellant Taxation Clerk from municipal tax payers without depositing the same to the account of Municipal Committee alleged — Onus of proof on appellant — Appellant admitting receipt of the amount but stating that as per usual practice, he had handed over the amount to the Cashier who had defalcated the same — Cashier neither admitting receipt of the money from appellant not admitting existence of any practice as alleged by appellant — Cashier acquitted by lower appellate court — Held, plea of appellant not acceptable

(8)(i) Broadly (contd.)

The prosecution was successful in proving the charge against the appellant. The entrustment as such is not denied by the appellant. It was for him to discharge the onus that he had discharged the trust as was expected of him. By merely taking the plea that he had passed on the sum to the cashier, the trust cannot be said to have been discharged and could only be done if either the cashier would admit receipt or the appellant had reasonably established that there had been a practice to pass on such money without receipt. No departmental man, least of all the accountant, has come forward to support the existence of such practice. The appellant cannot be permitted to say that whatever he had said in his statement under S. 313, CrPC is the gospel truth. The argument of the appellant that the cashier was wrongly acquitted may be plausible, but in the facts and circumstances that fact alone can be of no help to the appellant. Bagga Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cri LJ 2883 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1994]

[10068] — S. 409 — Entrustment — Failure of Tahsildar to deposit in the Treasury amounts of land revenue, fines etc. — Though Reader of Tahsildar physically receiving the amounts, Tahsildar countersigning the receipts prepared by the Reader — Tahsildar having dominion over the accounts was "entrusted with the money" — Neither office practice and procedure followed nor amounts entered in the account books — Accused, held, guilty of misappropriation of the amounts entrusted to him. Vasant Moghe v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 3 SCC 771: 1979 SCC (Cri) 868: AIR 1979 SC 1008: 1979 Cri LJ 885.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy , JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1978]

[10069] — S. 409 — Entrustment of money to accused not proved on facts — No other incriminating circumstances shown — Held, offence under S. 409 not made out — Conviction improper — Acquittal ordered — Ranbir Penal Code, 1932 (1989 Smvt.), S. 409. Roshan Lal Raina v. State of J&K, (1983) 2 SCC 429: 1983 SCC (Cri) 533: AIR 1983 SC 631: 1983 Cri LJ 975.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and O. Chinnappa Reddy , JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1983]

[10070] — S. 409 — Entrustment of property — Proof — In absence of legal and independent proof of entrustment partial admission of entrustment obtained by putting a question with regard to entrustment, held, insufficient to prove the charge — Rather, the putting of such question, in the said circumstances, would itself be improper. Jiwan Dass v. State of Haryana, (1999) 2 SCC 530: 1999 SCC (Cri) 288: AIR 1999 SC 1301: 1999 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1999]

[10071] — S. 409 — Failure by public servant to disburse entrusted amounts to the labour and the contractor, held, established on evidence — However, in view of the facts that the accused-appellant was likely to lose his service and had already undergone 6½ months' RI out of the total term of 2 years' RI, his sentence reduced to the extent of the imprisonment already undergone and a fine of Rs 1000. Vishnu Datta Mishra v. State of M.P., (1979) 4 SCC 382: 1979 SCC (Cri) 993: AIR 1979 SC 825: 1979 Cri LJ 565.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-1978]

[10072] — S. 409 — Giving of charge — Merely giving keys and that too on a holiday, does not amount to giving charge. Amrut Sakharam Sanap v. State of Maharashtra, (1971) 3 SCC 918: 1972 SCC (Cri) 166.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1970]

[10073] — S. 409 — Ingredients of the offence specified in Item 2 is Sch. to 1949 W.B. Act do not differ in any respect from those required by S. 409 — Entry not limits itself to offences by public servants for acts done as public servants — W.B. Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949 (21 of 1949) — Sch. Item 2. Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. S.K. Roy, (1974) 4 SCC 230: 1974 SCC (Cri) 399: AIR 1974 SC 794: (1974) 3 SCR 348: 1974 Cri LJ 678: 1974 (11) ACC 199.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.H. Beg, Y.V. Chandrachud and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1974]

[10074] — S. 409 — Misappropriation — Appellant, in charge of Mayor's Relief Fund, preparing cheque for payment of dues to a contractor of the Municipal Corporation, but instead of delivering it to the contractor, getting it encashed through peon — Peon informing the Mayor that he had encashed the cheque and paid the amount to the appellant — But appellant keeping quiet on this before the Mayor and later giving a written undertaking to the Mayor that he would make good the amount — On the basis of this evidence courts below finding the appellant guilty of misappropriation — In the circumstances conviction under S. 409 upheld. Vijay Digambar Lanjekar v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 8: 1991 SCC (Cri) 841.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1991]

[10075] — S. 409 — Offence by police officer — Held, is cognizable under Rule I and not under Rule III of Para 486 of U.P. Police Regulations. State of U.P. v. Babu Ram Upadhya, AIR 1961 SC 751: (1961) 2 SCR 679: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 773.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar[2], A.K. Sarkar[1], K. Subba Rao[1], K.N. Wanchoo[2] and J.R. Mudholkar[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1960]

[10076] — S. 409 — Persons (like public servants, bankers, etc.) made liable under S. 409 — Duties of such persons — Held, the same are of highly confidential character, involving great power of control over property entrusted to them — Breach of trust by such persons may often result in serious public or private calamity — High morality is expected of these person — They are supposed to discharge their duties honestly (Para 146). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869; Raghunath Anant Govilkar v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 11 SCC 289: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 130; Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. S.K. Roy, (1974) 4 SCC 230: 1974 SCC (Cri) 399; Chelloor Mankkal Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478, relied on

[10077] — S. 409 — Prosecution must prove factum of entrustment and of misappropriation of the entrusted articles before a conviction can be recorded under — Overseer convicted under for shortage of some articles from open godowns which were in physical charge of Chowkidars — Physical charge of the articles not shown to have been made over to the Overseer after being regularly counted in the godowns — Also no evidence to show misappropriation by the Overseer — Goods being open and accessible to all and sundry, possibility of the goods having been pilfered or stolen by others exists — Thus both the ingredients not having been proved, the conviction cannot be sustained. Janeshwar Das Aggarwal v. State of U.P., (1981) 3 SCC 10: 1981 SCC (Cri) 616: AIR 1981 SC 1646: 1981 ALJ 887.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, Baharul Islam and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-1981]

[10078] — S. 409 — Public servant after detection depositing the misappropriated sum in the treasury — Held, would not absolve him of the offence already committed by putting the money to personal use instead of depositing it — No interference with the conviction therefore called for. Vishwa Nath v. State of J&K, (1983) 1 SCC 215: 1983 SCC (Cri) 173: AIR 1983 SC 174: 1983 Cri LJ 231.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-1983]

[10079] — S. 409 — When a person can be said to be acting in the "capacity of a public servant" — "Entrustment" — meaning of

The respondent as Superintendent of the Pakistan section of an Insurance Society which was a unit of LIC collected premium directly from the policy-holders, issued receipts and made false adjustments in the records. The Special Court acquitted him on the ground that no money was entrusted to the respondent in his capacity as a public servant. The appeal to the High Court did not succeed. The State has then appealed to the Supreme Court.

Held :

In the case of an offence by a public servant punishable under S. 409, IPC, the acquisition of dominion or control over the property must also be in the capacity of a public servant. This is not the same thing as having the authority, as a public servant to get the control or dominion over property annexed with an obligation. The gravamen of the offence is the dishonest misappropriation of the money or property which comes into the possession or under the control of a public servant who has the ostensible authority to receive it even though, technically speaking, from the point of view of the distribution of departmental duties under internal rules of an office, it may not be within the scope of his authority or duty to accept the money. The fact that a public servant acts fraudulently in the exercise of his duties as a public servant to get dominion or control over some property will be an aggravating and not an exculpating circumstance. The "entrustment" results from what the person handing over money or property is made to think, understand, and believe about the purpose for which he hands over money or property to a public servant. If this takes place because of and due to the exercise of the official authority the requirements of S. 409, IPC are satisfied.

Ordinarily, it is the ostensible or apparent scope of a public servant's authority when receiving property and not its technical limitations, under some internal rules of the department or office concerned, and the use made by the servant of his actual official capacity which would determine whether there is a sufficient nexus or connection between the acts complained of and the official capacity so as to bring it within the ambit of S. 409, Indian Penal Code.

To constitute an offence under S. 409, IPC, it is not required that misappropriation must necessarily take place after the creation of a legally correct entrustment of dominion over property. The entrustment may arise in "any manner whatsoever". That manner may or may not involve fraudulent conduct of the accused. Section 409, IPC, covers dishonest misappropriation in both types of cases: that is to say, those where the receipt of property is itself fraudulent or improper and those where the public servant misappropriates what may have been quite properly and innocently received. All that is required is what may be described as "entrustment" or acquisition of dominion over property in the capacity of a public servant who, as a result of it, becomes charged with a duty to act in a particular way, or, at least honestly.

(8)(i) Broadly (contd.)

The obligation to act in a certain manner with regard to or to deal honestly with property, over which a public servant obtains dominion or control by the use of his official capacity, may arise either expressly or impliedly.

A legal defect in the scope of the ostensible authority of a public servant does not prevent an entrustment to or an obligation to be fastened upon a public servant in his capacity as a public servant if the facts of the case establish, as in the present case, the required nexus or connection between acts which create the obligation and the capacity.

On facts held that the respondent misused his official capacity, and, under its garb and the colour of his office, obtained payments and issued receipts. The policy-holders did not know the correct position and would not have made payments to the respondent but for the possession and use by him of his official capacity. There is sufficient ostensible nexus between the actual official capacity and the conduct of the respondent to hold that the entrustment or dominion was obtained by the respondent over monies of policy-holders in his official capacity or as a public servant who, consequently, became charged with the duty, as a public servant between the actual official capacity and the conduct of the respondent to hold that the entrustment or dominion was obtained by the respondent over monies of policy-holders in his official capacity or as a public servant who, consequently, became charged with the duty, as a public servant, and indeed, even more so as a public servant, to act honestly with regard to sums thus received by him. So the respondent is guilty of an offence punishable under S. 409, IPC, which could be tried by the Special Court. Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. S.K. Roy, (1974) 4 SCC 230: 1974 SCC (Cri) 399: AIR 1974 SC 794: (1974) 3 SCR 348: 1974 Cri LJ 678: 1974 (11) ACC 199.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.H. Beg, Y.V. Chandrachud and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1974]

[10080] — Ss. 409 and 405 — Allocation of business amongst Ministers — Thereby no trust of the government properties is created in favour of any Minister — Merely because a person is elected by the people and is inducted as a Minister, he cannot be said to be holding a trust on behalf of the people — Hence, on that basis it cannot be determined whether he committed offence of criminal breach of trust — Nor can the doctrine of public trust be applied as that doctrine pertains to environmental law — Criminal breach of trust can be determined only under the provisions of the Penal Code — Constitution of India — Art. 77(3)

In the judgment under review the Court was of the opinion that a person on being elected by the people and on becoming a Minister holds a sacred trust on behalf of the people. This, is a philosophical concept and reflects the image of virtue in its highest conceivable perfection. This philosophy cannot be employed for determination of the offence of "criminal breach of trust" which is defined in the Indian Penal Code. Whether the offence of "criminal breach of trust" has been committed by a person has to be determined strictly on the basis of the definition of that offence set out in the Penal Code. (Para 159)

The Court has also invoked the "Doctrine of Public Trust" which is a doctrine of environmental law under which the natural resources such as air, water, forest, lakes, rivers and wildlife are public properties "entrusted" to the Government for their safe and proper use and proper protection. Public Trust Law recognises that some types of natural resources are held in trust by the Government for the benefit of the public. The doctrine enjoins upon the Government to protect the resources for the enjoyment of the general public rather than to permit their use for private ownership or commercial purposes. The "Doctrine of Public Trust" has been evolved so as to prevent unfair dealing with or dissipation of all natural resources. This doctrine is an ancient and somewhat obscure creation of Roman and British law which has been discovered recently by environmental lawyers in search of a theory broadly applicable to environmental litigation. But this doctrine cannot be invoked in fixing the criminal liability and the whole matter will have to be decided on the principles of criminal jurisprudence, one of which is that the criminal liability has to be strictly construed and offence can be said to have been committed only when all the ingredients of that offence as defined in the statute are found to have been satisfied. (Paras 160 and 161)

Election to the State Legislature or the House of the People are held under the Constitution on the basis of adult suffrage. On being elected as a Member of Parliament, the petitioner was inducted as Minister of State. The Department of Petroleum and Natural Gas was allocated to him. Under the allocation of business rules, made by the President of India, the distribution of petroleum products, inter alia, came to be allocated to the petitioner. This allocation of business under the Constitution is done for smooth and better administration and for more convenient transaction of business of the Government of India. In this way, neither a "trust", as ordinarily understood or as defined under the Trust Act, was created in favour of the petitioner nor did he become a "trustee" in that sense. (Para 163)

It must, therefore, be held that the petitioner does not, on becoming the Minister of State for Petroleum and Natural Gas, assume the role of a "trustee" in the real sense nor does a "trust" come into existence in respect of the government properties. Therefore, the Court's direction regarding investigation by CBI into the offence of criminal breach of trust against the Minister cannot be sustained. (Para 166). Common Cause, A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1196: AIR 1999 SC 2979.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad, K. Venkataswami and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1999]

Tito v. Waddell (No. 2), (1977) 3 All ER 129; Kinloch v. Secy. of State for India, (1880) 15 Ch D 1, approved

Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 530; Common Cause, A Regd. Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 593, overruled

[10081] — Ss. 409 and 405 — Applicability of — Essential requirements for proving criminal breach of trust, stated — If due to a fortuitous or intervening situation, a person to whom money is entrusted is incapacitated from carrying out the job, held, that will not bring in application of S. 405 or S. 409, unless misappropriation, or conversion to personal use or disposal of property is established — Where amount of Rs 1,50,200 was given by appellant to a bank in order to get two bank drafts of Rs 75,000 each, but due to an intervening situation i.e. the theft of the said money from the cash counter by somebody, the said bank drafts could not be prepared and handed over to the appellant, held, the ingredients necessary to constitute criminal breach of trust were absent — Hence, accused persons (cash peon G and Head Cashier B of the bank), held, not liable to be convicted under S. 409

In order to sustain conviction under Section 409, two ingredients are to be proved. They are:

(1) the accused, a public servant, or banker or agent was entrusted with property for which he is duty-bound to account for; and

(2) the accused has committed criminal breach of trust. (Para 7)

What amounts to criminal breach of trust is provided in Section 405 IPC. The basic requirement to bring home the accusations under Section 405 are the requirements to prove conjointly (1) entrustment, and (2) whether the accused was actuated by dishonest intention or not; misappropriated it or converted it to his own use to the detriment of the persons who entrusted it. (Paras 8 and 9)

But here, it is not the case of the prosecution that the money which was given to Head Cashier B and cash peon G to obtain the bank drafts was taken away by them. Because of an intervening situation, the disappearance of the cash due to theft by somebody else, the bank drafts could not have been prepared and handed over to the appellant. Even if there is loss of money, the ingredients necessary to constitute criminal breach of trust are absent. If due to a fortuitous or intervening situation, a person to whom money is entrusted is incapacitated from carrying out the job, that will not bring in application of Section 405 IPC or Section 409 IPC, unless misappropriation, or conversion to personal use or disposal of property is established. Therefore, the accused persons cannot be convicted under Section 409 IPC. (Para 10). Kailash Kumar Sanwatia v. State of Bihar, (2003) 7 SCC 399: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1649: AIR 2003 SC 3714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat , JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2003]

[10082] — Ss. 409 & 405 — Cognizance of offence taken under, against director of a public limited company — Application filed by the director under S. 482 CrPC seeking discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh , JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[10083] — Ss. 409 and 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Essential ingredients for proving the offence of, restated — Where entrustment of property to the accused established and accused failed to produce or account for the properties when asked to do so and no plausible explanation given in respect of the said failure, held, accused liable to be convicted under S. 409

(8)(i) Broadly (contd.)

Appellant AS, who was a property clerk in a court, was prosecuted for misappropriating the properties belonging to the court and selling them to the accused A-2 to A-5 during the period 2-3-1979 to 6-6-1985. The trial court acquitted him of the charge under Section 409 IPC. But in appeal, the High Court reversed the acquittal and convicted him under Section 409 IPC. In the instant appeal, AS contended that the ingredients necessary to bring home accusations under Section 409 were not present. It was submitted that only entries in the books of accounts were made by AS and there was nothing beyond that to show that he was acting as a property clerk.

Dismissing the appeal filed by the accused-appellant,

Held :

In order to sustain conviction under Section 409, two ingredients are to be proved. They are:

(1) the accused, a public servant, or a banker or agent was entrusted with property of which he is duty-bound to account for; and

(2) the accused has committed criminal breach of trust. (Para 5)

What amounts to criminal breach of trust is provided in Section 405 IPC. The basic requirement to bring home the accusations under Section 405 are the requirements to prove conjointly (1) entrustment, and (2) whether the accused was actuated by the dishonest intention or not misappropriated it or converted it to his own use to the detriment of the persons who entrusted it. As the question of intention is not a matter of direct proof, certain broad tests are envisaged which would generally afford useful guidance in deciding whether in a particular case the accused had mens rea for the crime. (Paras 6 and 7)

Cogent and reliable evidence was adduced to show that the appellant was working as a property clerk from 2-3-1979 to 6-6-1985 and that he was entrusted with the court's properties and had domain over them including the articles with which the present case is concerned. (Para 8)

The evidence on record conclusively establishes that the accused-appellant was in charge of the properties and he could not either produce those articles or properly account for them when he was asked to do so, as was obligated for him. No explanation, much less plausible has been given. The High Court was, therefore, right in setting aside the order of acquittal so far as the appellant is concerned. (Paras 10 and 12). Anwar Chand Sab Nanadikar v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 10 SCC 521.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat , JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

Rabindra Kumar Dey v. State of Orissa, (1976) 4 SCC 233: 1976 SCC (Cri) 566: AIR 1977 SC 170, explained and distinguished

Jaikrishnadas Manohardas Desai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 889: 1960 Cri LJ 1250, followed

[10084] — Ss. 409 & 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients of — Failure to account for property entrusted not enough — Dishonest misappropriation for conversion to his own use or dishonest use or disposal must be proved

An essential ingredient of the offence under S. 405 is that the accused being in any manner entrusted with property or with dominion over property, dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property or dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust.

Section 409 can be invoked only if it can be shown that the accused being in any manner entrusted with property or with dominion over property in his capacity as public servant committed criminal breach of trust in respect of that property. It requires something much more than mere failure or omission to return the property. Sardar Singh v. State of Haryana, (1977) 1 SCC 463: 1977 SCC (Cri) 121: AIR 1977 SC 1766: 1977 Cri LJ 1158.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and A.C. Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-1976]

[10085] — Ss. 409 and 405 — Money obtained by fraud or cheating was 'entrusted' to the accused — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c)

There can be no doubt before a public servant can be convicted of an offence under S. 5(1)(c), P.C. Act or under S. 409, IPC, the property which is said to have been misappropriated must be entrusted to him. Section 405 merely provides, whoever being in any manner entrusted with property or with any dominion over the property, as the first ingredient of the criminal breach of trust. The words 'in any manner' in the context are significant. The section does not provide that the entrustment of property should be by some one or the amount received must be the property of the person on whose behalf it is received. As long as the accused is given possession of property for a specific purpose or to deal with it in a particular manner, the ownership being in some person other than the accused, he can be said to be entrusted with that property to be applied in accordance with the terms of entrustment and for the benefit of the owner.

The expression 'entrusted' in S. 409 is used in a wide sense and includes all cases in which property is voluntarily handed over for a specific purpose and is dishonestly disposed of contrary to the terms on which possession has been handed over. It may be that a person to whom the property is handed over may be an agent of the person to whom it is entrusted or to whom it may belong, in which case if the agent who comes into possession of it on behalf of his principal, fraudulently misappropriates the property, he is nonetheless guilty of criminal breach of trust because as an agent he is entrusted with it. A person authorised to collect moneys on behalf of another is entrusted with the money when the amounts are paid to him, and though the person paying may no longer have any proprietary interest nonetheless the person on whose behalf it was collected becomes the owner as soon as the amount is handed over to the person so authorised to collect on his behalf. Here the employee of Indian Airlines took excess money from passengers and pocketed the same by falsifying the receipts. He was therefore, guilty under S. 409 and Ss. 5(2) and 5(1)(c), Prevention of Corruption Act 1947. Som Nath Puri v. State of Rajasthan, (1972) 1 SCC 630: 1972 SCC (Cri) 359: AIR 1972 SC 1490: (1972) 3 SCR 497: 1972 Cri LJ 897.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, P. Jaganmohan Reddy and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1972]

In re Ram Soonder Podda, (1878) 2 Cal LR 515; In re Ramappa, (1911) 22 Mad LJ 112: 13 Cri LJ 15; Venkata Raghunatha Sastri, 45 Mad LJ 133: AIR 1923 Mad 597: 24 Cri LJ 452; Crown Prosecutor v. McIver, 69 Mad LJ 681: AIR 1936 Mad 1: 37 Cri LJ 142; State v. Dahyalal Dalpatram, AIR 1960 Bom 53: 1960 CriLJ 217, approved

Surendra Pal Singh v. State, AIR 1957 All 122: 1957 Cri LJ 170, overruled

[10086] — Ss. 409, 405, 403, Explns. 1 and 21 — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — Temporary misappropriation of public money — Failure to utilise travelling allowance (TA) and daily allowance (DA) for the purpose for which it was given to a public servant — Appellant, a dog handler in a Dog Squad Team in police, drawing an amount of Rs 12,000 on 4-6-1998 as TA/DA to be utilised by him and other dog handlers for dogs' training commencing from 5-6-1998 — He was on leave from 5-6-1998 to 14-6-1998 but on expiry of leave, appellant not attending training and remaining absent unauthorisedly till 14-7-1998 — During his unauthorised absence, appellant went to his native place and returning the amount on coming back — Trial court convicting appellant under S. 409 — His appeal and criminal revision both dismissed — Sustainability — Appellant had taken money for a particular purpose but did not utilise it for that purpose — Hence, held, there was no scope for interference (Para 6). Shabbir Ahmed Sherkhan v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 5 SCC 22: (2009) 1 SCC (L&S) 1016: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 607.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-2009]

[10087] — Ss. 409, 467 and 471 — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — Proof — Essential requirements — Existence of mens rea, held, must be proved — Recurring deposit accounts in a sub-post office — Misappropriation of amounts of, by employees of that post-office — Conviction of employees A-1 and A-2 (appellants) and A-3 (who did not prefer appeal) — A-1 and A-2 passing vouchers put up by A-3 — No evidence of criminal conspiracy — Nothing to show that A-1 and A-2 had knowledge that the vouchers were fabricated by A-3 — Held, it could not be said that A-1 and A-2 acted with a criminal intent — It might be that they acted in a negligent manner — But, that by itself would not constitute an offence under S. 409 though it may expose them to disciplinary action under the relevant rules — Held, offences under Ss. 409, 467, and 471 IPC and the one under Prevention of Corruption Act, not proved — A-1 and A-2 acquitted — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(1)(c) and (d) r/w 5(2)

Allowing the appeals filed by the accused persons (A-1 and A-2),

Held :

For the offence under Section 409 IPC it must be proved that a person entrusted with property or with any dominion over property, in his capacity as public servant commits criminal breach of trust in respect of such property, as defined in Section 405 IPC, meaning thereby that he dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property, or dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do. The crucial word used in Section 405 IPC is "dishonestly" and, therefore, it implies the existence of mens rea, that is to say, a guilty mind. (Para 9)

(8)(i) Broadly (contd.)

If there is no evidence to show that the appellants (A-1 and A-2) had knowledge that the vouchers were fabricated by A-3, it cannot be said that they acted with a criminal intent. It may be that they acted in a negligent manner and if they had taken due care they would have detected the fraud, but they failed to do so. However, that by itself would not constitute an offence under Section 409 IPC though it may expose the appellants to disciplinary action under the relevant rules. (Para 9)

There is no evidence to show that A-1 and A-2 forged the documents which purported to be a valuable security. The evidence is only to the effect that they had negligently put their signatures on those vouchers while passing the vouchers for payment. (Para 9)

In the absence of any evidence to show that A-3 was acting in conspiracy with A-1 and A-2 or that A-1 and A-2 had knowledge of the fact that A-3 had fraudulently and dishonestly prepared forged vouchers on the basis of which the amounts were sought to be withdrawn, the offences under Sections 467, 471 or 409 IPC are not proved against A-1 and A-2. Consequently, the offence under the provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act is also not made out. (Para 10). L. Chandraiah v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 670: AIR 2004 SC 252: 2004 Cri LJ 365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2003]

[10088] — Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 120-B — Ingredients — Existence of mens rea essential for establishing offences under Ss. 409, 467 and 471 — Alleged acts of fraudulent misappropriation of fund by encashing TA bills funded by Indian Population Project by making false allotment letters, acquittal rolls, entries in books and receipts in furtherance of criminal conspiracy with dishonest intention — Proof — Essential ingredients of conspiracy under S. 120-B not made out against appellant-accused — Mens rea of appellant-accused for offences under Ss. 409, 467 and 471 not proved, nor essential ingredients of those offences made out — Records established that appellant-accused were not beneficiaries of the misappropriated fund — Held, prosecution failed to prove the offences under Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B IPC and consequently offences under the PC Act also not made out — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(c) & 13(2)

The prosecution has miserably failed to establish the essential ingredients of the conspiracy under Section 120-B IPC by leading cogent and convincing evidence against the appellants, A-4 to A-7. (Para 15)

For the offence under Sections 409, 467 and 471, the existence of mens rea (guilty mind) must be proved. So far with regard to the offence under Section 467 IPC is concerned, there is no evidence to show that the appellants forged a document which purported to be a valuable security. There is also no evidence that the appellants had knowledge of fact that the allotment letter was a forged letter. Again, for an offence under Section 409 it must be proved that the person entrusted with the property, or any dominion over property in his capacity as a public servant committed criminal breach of trust in respect of such property as defined in Section 405 IPC. The evidence must show that he dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use that property or dishonestly used or dispossessed that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged. In the present case, there is no evidence that A-4 to A-7 dishonestly misappropriated or converted to their own use the amount of TA. On record it is established that A-4 to A-7 are not the beneficiaries of the misappropriated amount. (Para 16)

In the absence of any evidence to show that A-4 to A-7 (appellants) were acting in conspiracy with other accused persons and that A-4 to A-7 have fraudulently and dishonestly prepared forged bill on the basis of forged allotment letter, the offences under Sections 467, 471, 477-A or Section 409 are not proved against the appellants. Consequently, the offence under the provision of the Prevention of Corruption Act is also not made out. The trial court was, therefore, not justified in convicting A-4 to A-7 under the aforesaid sections of law. (Para 17). Radha Pisharassiar Amma v. State of Kerala, (2007) 13 SCC 410.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-2007]

[10089] — Ss. 409/34 — For liability under S. 34 physical presence not necessary if participation established — Situation different in Shreekantiah case, AIR 1955 SC 287 where absence itself disproved participation. Jaikrishnadas Manohardas Desai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 889: (1960) 3 SCR 319: 1960 Cri LJ 1250, 1254.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah , JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1960]

Considered in (1973) 1 SCC 512: (1973) 1 SCC (Cri) 384*
See also 52 IA 40, 52: AIR 1925 PC 1: 26 Cri LJ 431*

(ii) Relative scope vis-à-vis Prevention of Corruption Act

See in detail Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 and Public Accountability and Vigilance in Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.

[10090] — S. 405 — Both distinct — Latter not discriminatory — Constitution of India, Art. 14 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c). Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458, 464: 1957 SCR 423, 437: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

[10091] — S. 405 — Held, not repealed by S. 5 of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947. State of Punjab v. Amar Singh, Criminal Appeal No. 172 of 1957.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar and S.K. Das , JJ. [Date of decision: 21-5-1958]

State v. Gurcharan Singh, AIR 1952 Punj 89, overruled
See also 1957 SCR 423

[10092] — S. 405 — Offence under S. 5(1), Prevention of Corruption Act, held, distinct and separate from one under S. 405, IPC — Former does not repeal the latter to any extent. State of A.P. v. Akki Veeriah, Criminal Appeal No. 56 of 1956. [Date of decision: 25-8-1958]

[10093] — Ss. 405 & 409 — Scope — Effect of S. 5 of Prevention of Corruption Act — Ss. 5(1)(c) and 5(2) do not repeal S. 405 or 409, IPC — Offences under S. 5(1)(c) and S. 405 are separate and distinct

The Prevention of Corruption Act being a temporary one, the Legislature would not have intended in the normal course of things that a temporary statute like the one in question should supersede an enactment of antiquity, even if the matter covered the same field. Under S. 6(a), General Clauses Act if by efflux of time the period of a temporary statute which had repealed an earlier statute expires, there would not be a revival of the earlier one by the expiry of the temporary statute.

By enacting the Amending Act of 1952 and creating sub-section (4) to S. 5 the legislature specifically stated that the offence under S. 5(1)(c) is different from any previous existing offence under any penal statute and there can, therefore, be no scope for speculation about repeal. The words used in sub section (4) "any other law" made the position quite clear and explicit. Other law does not mean identical law in which case the word 'other' will have no meaning. A comparison of the elements of the offences under S. 405, IPC and 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act would show that an offence under S. 405, Penal Code is separate and distinct from the one under S. 5(1)(c). There are three points of difference between S. 405, Penal Code and S. 5(1)(c). The dishonest misappropriation contemplated in S. 405, Penal Code is different; whereas that under S. 5(1)(c) is either dishones misappropriation of fraudulent misappropriation. The latter section is much wider in amplitude than the former. In S. 405, Penal Code the words used are "in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied". There are no such expressions in S. 5(1)(c). It is clear, therefore, that whereas under S. 405, Penal Code there are three essential ingredients to constitute the offence; each one of them being separate and distinct, in S. 5(1)(c) there are only two. Now considering S. 5(1)(c) there are certain matters in it which are absent in S. 405, Penal Code. The words 'dominion' and 'entrustment' connote two different things. The words 'dominion' is not in S. 5(1)(c). The word 'fraudulently' is not present in S. 405, and in S. 5(1)(c) the gist of the offence can also be made out if the offender allows any person so to do, i.e., allows any person to derogate from the law as contemplated in the earlier portion of the section. The meaning put on the word 'allows' would certainly be different from "dishonest misappropriation" by the offender himself. It may be that the word can mean allowing by negligence or without any volition on the part of the offender. It may also mean that there is some kind of positive and tacit acquiescence necessary to bring home the offence. In any event, allowing other persons so to do does not find a place in S. 405, Penal Code though this section also contemplates "wilfully suffering any other person so to do". There is an essential difference between "allowing" a person and "wilfully suffering" a person to do a certain thing. There can, therefore, be no doubt whatever that S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act creates a new offence called "criminal misconduct" and cannot by implication displace the offence under S. 405, Penal Code.

In S. 405, Penal Code the offender must wilfully suffer another person to misappropriate the property entrusted, but in S. 5(1)(c) if he allows another person to dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriate or otherwise convert for his own use any property so entrusted, then it is an offence. There is a vast difference between wilfully suffering another and allowing a person to do a particular thing and the word 'allows' is much wider in its import. Wilfully presupposes a conscious action, while even by negligence one can allow another to do a thing.

(8)(ii) Relative scope vis-à-vis Prevention of Corruption Act (contd.)

Therefore the two offences are distinct and separate. The offence created under S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is distinct and separate from the one under S. 405, Penal Code and, therefore, there can be no question of S. 5(1)(c) repealing S. 405, Penal Code. Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575, 580.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

State v. Pandurang, AIR 1955 Bom 451; R. v. V. Satyanarayanmurthy, AIR 1953 Mad 137: 1953 Cri LJ 309; Amarendra Nath Ray v. State, AIR 1955 Cal 236: 1955 Cri LJ 784; Mohd. Ali v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 68: 1953 Cri LJ 1523; Bhup Narain v. State, AIR 1952 All 35: 1952 Cri LJ 236; Gopal Das v. State, AIR 1954 All 80: 1954 Cri LJ 96, approved

State v. Gurcharan Singh, AIR 1952 Punj 89: 1952 Cri LJ 316, overruled

Followed in 1960 Cri LJ 539: AIR 1960 SC 397

[10094] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Allowing", "dominion", "entrustment" — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c) & (2). Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

[10095] — Ss. 405 and 409 — "Wilfully suffering" and "wilfully allowing" — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c)

There is an essential difference between "allowing" a person and "wilfully suffering" a person to do a certain thing. There can, therefore, be no doubt whatever that S. 5(1)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act creates a new offence called "criminal misconduct" and cannot by implication displace the offence under S. 405, Penal Code.

In S. 405, Penal Code the offender must wilfully suffer another person to misappropriate the property entrusted, but in S. 5(1)(c) if he allows another person to dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriate or otherwise convert for his own use any property so entrusted, then it is an offence. There is a vast difference between wilfully suffering another and allowing a person to do a particular thing and the word "allows" is much wider in its import. Wilfully presupposes a conscious action, while even by negligence one can allow another to do a thing. Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

[10096] — S. 409 — Prohibition of a subsequent trial for the same offence — Offence of criminal misconduct punishable under S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 is not identical in essence, import and content with an offence under S. 409, IPC — Therefore acquittal for an offence under S. 5(2), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 does not bar a trial under S. 409, IPC — CrPC, 1898 — S. 403 — Constitution of India — Art. 20(2) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 300

The offence of criminal misconduct punishable under S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 2 of 1947 is not identical in essence, import and content with an offence under S. 409 of the Indian Penal Code. The offence of criminal misconduct is a new offence created by that enactment and it does not repeal by implication or abrogate S. 409 of the Indian Penal Code. Therefore there can be no objection to a trial and conviction under S. 409 of the Indian Penal Code even if the respondent has been acquitted of an offence under S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 2 of 1947. State of M.P. v. Veereshwar Rao Agnihotri, AIR 1957 SC 592: 1957 SCR 868: 1957 Cri LJ 892.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and Syed Jafer Imam, S.K. Das, P. Govinda Menon and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1957]

[10097] — S. 409 — Trial of offence under S. 409, IPC read with S. 5, Prevention of Corruption Act not improper. State of Punjab v. Shadi Lal, AIR 1960 SC 397: 1960 Cri LJ 539.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and K.N. Wanchoo, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-1959]

(iii) Sanction for prosecution

See in detail CrPC, 1973, S. 197, in Vol. 16, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 1 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

See also S. 19, Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 in Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.

[10098] — Ss. 406/120-B — Sanction for prosecution of public servant — Offences under Ss. 406, 409 read with S. 120-B IPC — Sanction under S. 197 for prosecution of public servant, held, not necessary — CrPC, 1973 — S. 197

It was laid down in Harihar Prasad case, (1972) 3 SCC 89 that:

"As far as the offence of criminal conspiracy punishable under Section 120-B, read with Section 409, Indian Penal Code is concerned and also Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is concerned, they cannot be said to be of the nature mentioned in Section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. To put it shortly, it is no part of the duty of a public servant, while discharging his official duties, to enter into a criminal conspiracy or to indulge in criminal misconduct. Want of sanction under Section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is, therefore, no bar."

Learned Single Judge of the High Court declined to follow the aforesaid legal position in the present case on the sole premise that the offence under Section 406 of IPC has also been fastened against the accused besides Section 409 of IPC. It is difficult to discern the rationale in the distinguishment. Sections 406 and 409 of IPC are cognate offences in which the common component is criminal breach of trust. When the offender in the offence under Section 406 is a public servant (or holding any one of the positions listed in the section) the offence would escalate to Section 409 of the Penal Code. When in Harihar Prasad case it was held that in regard to the offence under Section 409 of IPC read with Section 120-B it is no part of the duty of the public servant to enter into a criminal conspiracy for committing breach of trust, there is no sense in stating that if the offence is under Section 406 read with Section 120-B IPC it would make all the difference vis-à-vis Section 197 of the Code. (Para 8). State of Kerala v. V. Padmanabhan Nair, (1999) 5 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1031: AIR 1999 SC 2405: 1999 Cri LJ 3696: (1999) 4 LLN 77.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-1999]

Harihar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 89: 1972 SCC (Cri) 409; Shreekantiah Ramayya Munnipalli v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287: 57 Bom LR 632; Amrik Singh v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1955 SC 309, followed [10099] — S. 409 — Accused charged under S. 409, IPC and S. 5(2), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Sanction for prosecution under S. 5(2) accorded, but no sanction for prosecution under S. 409, IPC accorded — Sanction for prosecution under S. 5(2) cannot be extended to cover the prosecution under S. 409, IPC — In case sanctioning authorities of the two prosecutions are the same the prosecution under S. 409, IPC after the sanction under S. 5(2) is incompetent. Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287: (1955) 1 SCR 1177: 1955 Cri LJ 857.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das and Vivian Bose , JJ. [Date of decision: 22-12-1954]

See also AIR 1966 SC 220: 1966 Cri LJ 179

[10100] — S. 409 — Objection as to want of sanction under S. 197(1), CrPC, 1898 for prosecution of accused public servant not taken in courts below — Held, the objection open to accused at the stage of Supreme Court, as it was a pure question of law. Rameshwar Sahai v. State of U.P., Criminal Appeal No. 144 of 1954.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, C.J. and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar and Syed Jafer Imam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1955]

(1955) 1 SCR 1177, distinguished

[10101] — S. 409 — Prosecution of a public servant under — Whether sanction is required under S. 197(1), CrPC, 1898 will depend on the facts of each case

Even when the charge is one of misappropriation by a public servant, whether sanction is required under S. 197(1) will depend upon the facts of each case. If the acts complained of are so integrally connected with the duties attaching to the office as to be inseparable from them, then sanction under S. 197(1), CrPC would be necessary; but if there was no necessary connection between them and the performance of those duties, the official status furnishing only the occasion or opportunity for the acts, then no sanction would be required.

Whether sanction is necessary to prosecute a public servant on a charge of criminal misappropriation, will depend on whether the acts complained of hinge on his duties as a public servant. If they do, then sanction is requisite. But if they are unconnected with such duties, then no sanction is necessary. Amrik Singh v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1955 SC 309: (1955) 1 SCR 1302: 1955 Cri LJ 865, 867.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar , JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1955]

Reviewing Shreekantiah (AIR 1955 SC 287) and Amrik Singh (AIR 1955 SC 309) the Supreme Court in Matajog Dubey v. H.C. Bhari, (1955) 2 SCR 925: AIR 1956 SC 44: 1956 Cri LJ 140, 145 stated: "There must be a reasonable connection between the act and the discharge of official duty; the act must bear such relation to the duty that the accused could lay a reasonable but not a pretended or fanciful claim, that he did it in the course of the performance of duty."

Also "whether sanction is necessary or not may have to be determined from stage to stage. The necessity may reveal itself in the course of progress of the case".

AIR 1939 FC 43: 40 Cri LJ 468; AIR 1948 PC 128: 49 Cri LJ 503: and AIR 1949 PC 117: 50 Cri LJ 395, affirmed

See also AIR 1966 SC 20: 1966 Cri LJ 179; AIR 1969 SC 686: 1969 Cri LJ 1057; AIR 1954 SC 455: 1954 Cri LJ 1161; and AIR 1956 SC 44: 1956 Cri LJ 140

For an instance see (1955) 1 SCR 1177: AIR 1955 SC 287: 1955 Cri LJ 857

Followed in (1972) 3 SCC 89: 1972 SCC (Cri) 409

[10102] — S. 409 — Prosecution of Managing Director of a company under liquidation under S. 409 — Sanction of the company court is not necessary

There is nothing in S. 179, Companies Act which can be construed as restricting the powers of the Court to take cognizance of an offence or the powers of the police to initiate prosecution or even of a private citizen to move the machinery of the criminal courts to bring an offender like the appellant to justice.

(8)(iii) Sanction for prosecution (contd.)

For a prosecution for breach of trust even by a director of a company no such condition precedent as the previous sanction of any authority is contemplated by law, unless it is a prosecution in the name and on behalf of the company by the official liquidator who has to incur expenses out of the funds of the company. Section 179 is an enabling provision to enable the liquidator to do certain things with the sanction of the Court. It does not control the general law of the land. Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 SCR 483: 26 Comp Cas 340: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, 1125: (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 49.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha , JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1956]

[10103] — S. 409 — Prosecution under — Entrustment and/or dominion in capacity as public servant — Disposal lawful or otherwise not possible save by an act done or purporting to be done in his official capacity — S. 197, CrPC, 1898 applies, sanction was necessary and trial is vitiated in its absence

If S. 197, CrPC is construed too narrowly it can never be applied, for of course it is not part of an official's duty to commit an offence and never can be. But it is not the duty to examine so much as the act, because an official act can be performed in the discharge of official duty as well as in dereliction of it. Section 197 has content and its language must be given meaning. Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287: (1955) 1 SCR 1177: 1955 Cri LJ 857.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea and S.R. Das, Vivian Bose , JJ. [Date of decision: 22-12-1954]

See also 1954 Cri LJ 1161: AIR 1954 SC 455; 1956 Cri LJ 140: AIR 1956 SC 44; and AIR 1966 SC 220: 1966 Cri LJ 179

[10104] — S. 409 — Prosecution under — Sanction not necessary

A public servant committing criminal breach of trust does not normally act in his capacity as a public servant and therefore no sanction is necessary to prosecute him. Om Parkash Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 458: 1957 SCR 423: (1958) 2 LLJ 645: 1957 Cri LJ 575, 581.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1957]

See also AIR 1966 SC 220: 1966 Cri LJ 179

State v. Pandurang Baburao, AIR 1955 Bom 451; Bhup Narain Saxena v. State, AIR 1952 All 35: 1952 Cri LJ 236 and State v. Gulab Singh, AIR 1954 Raj 211: 1954 Cri LJ 1446, approved

[10105] — S. 409 — Public servant — Sanction not necessary if act not connected with his official duty — S. 197(1), CrPC, 1898 and S. 106, T.N. Village Panchayats Act, 1950 (10 of 1950) — Prosecution of President of Panchayat Board upheld. P. Arulswami v. State of Madras, AIR 1967 SC 776: (1967) 1 SCR 201: 1967 Cri LJ 665.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1966]

[10106] — S. 409 — Sanction for prosecution of a public servant under — Absence of sanction for prosecution under S. 197, CrPC, 1898 is fatal and cannot be cured. Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287: (1955) 1 SCR 1177: 1955 Cri LJ 857.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das and Vivian Bose , JJ. [Date of decision: 22-12-1954]

See also AIR 1966 SC 220: 1966 Cri LJ 179

[10107] — S. 409 — Sanction not necessary when act of criminal misappropriation was not committed by the appellant while he was acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties and that offence has no direct connection with the duties of the accused as a public servant (Per majority: Sarkar, J. contra). Baijnath v. State of M.P., AIR 1966 SC 220: (1966) 1 SCR 210: 1966 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar[1], M. Hidayatullah[2] and V. Ramaswami[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1965]

H.H.B. Gill v. King, 49 Cri LJ 503: AIR 1948 PC 128: 1948 FCR 19; Albert West Meads v. King, AIR 1948 PC 156: 75 IA 185: 49 Cri LJ 660; Phemindra Chandra v. King, AIR 1949 PC 117: 76 IA 10: 50 Cri LJ 395, approved

See fully CrPC, 1898, S. 197

See also AIR 1967 SC 778: 1967 Cri LJ 668

[10108] — S. 409 — Sanction under S. 197 CrPC — Held, is not a condition precedent for launching prosecution for an offence under S. 409 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 197 (Para 12). N. Bhargavan Pillai v. State of Kerala, 2005 SCC (Cri) 142: AIR 2004 SC 2317: (2004) 2 KLT 725: 2004 Cri LJ 2494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat , JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-2004]

State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539, followed

[10109] — S. 409 — Time when question of sanction to be considered — Court can consider the question of necessity of sanction at any stage of the trial when necessity of sanction is disclosed

The question whether sanction under S. 197, CrPC is necessary may arise at any stage of the proceedings. The complaint may not disclose that the act constituting the offence was done or purported to be done in the discharge of official duty; but facts subsequently coming to light on a police or judicial inquiry or even in the course of the prosecution evidence at the trial, may establish the necessity of sanction. Whether sanction is necessary or not may have to be determined from stage to stage. The necessity may reveal itself in the course of the progress of the case. Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, AIR 1956 SC 44: (1955) 2 SCR 925: (1955) 28 ITR 941: 1956 Cri LJ 140.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1955]

[10110] — Ss. 409 & 406 — Sanction for prosecution granted for offence under S. 5(2), P.C. Act saying that the accused liable to be prosecuted under Ss. 409/406, IPC and S. 5(2) of the P.C. Act — Sanction covers offence under S. 5(1)(c)

The sanction says that the appellant had received money and misappropriated it by not crediting the same into the treasury and embezzled it and was therefore guilty of criminal misconduct and liable to prosecution under Ss. 409/406, IPC and S. 5(2) of the P.C. Act. The allegations made clearly show that the sanctioning authority had S. 5(1)(c) in mind because the sanction speaks of misappropriation and embezzlement of the moneys of the Board and misappropriation and embezzlement is only to be found in S. 5(1)(c). The section speaks of misappropriation and embezzlement and there is nothing in the words to imply that this was only with reference to conversion by the appellant to his own use. As the words of the sanction stand they would cover a case of misappropriation or conversion to his own use by the appellant himself or by allowing others to do so. Therefore, the sanction was sufficient for the purpose of giving jurisdiction to the Special Judge to take cognizance of the cases. Munnalal v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 28: (1964) 3 SCR 88: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 11: (1966) 2 LLJ 318: ILR (1963) 2 All 916.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, K.N. Wanchoo and K.C. Das Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-1963]

[10111] — Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471 — "Acting or purporting to act in discharge of his official duty" — Offences under Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC — If covered — Held, the said offences cannot be regarded as committed by public servant while discharging or purporting to act in discharge of his official duty — CrPC, 1973 — S. 197 (Para 60). Bholu Ram v. State of Punjab, (2008) 9 SCC 140: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-2008]

Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193, relied on [10112] — Ss. 409, 463, 468, 477-A and 120-B — Discharge of accused Vice-Chancellor of University — When warranted — Previous sanction for prosecution not having been obtained under S. 50(2), 1994 University Act — Alleged actions taken while appellant was discharging his duties as Vice-Chancellor — Vice-Chancellor being an officer of University in terms of S. 23, 1994 Act — Appellant starting off University in two years, which job had been pending for two decades — Land allotted by Government being waterlogged and required filling up with earth — Appellant inviting tenders therefor and accepting lowest tender which was lower than estimate prepared by Assistant Executive Engineer — Appellant also consulting several experts in the field for said filling up of earth — Neither FIR nor charge-sheet alleging any personal gain for appellant in transaction — Allegation being only that contractor doing earth-filling obtained an excess amount — Even FIR and charge-sheet presenting a huge difference in calculation of loss and this not being reflected in charge-sheet — It not being clear as to why prosecution waited for nearly 8 years to file charge-sheet — Government communicating to Vigilance Department to withdraw charges against appellant but nothing clear about follow-up action — Effect — Appellant on facts and law, held, is entitled to be discharged — In absence of previous sanction as per mandatory requirement under S. 50(2), 1994 Act, prosecution cannot proceed against appellant who was discharging his duties as officer of University — Further, it can be presumed that Government had taken a conscious decision exonerating appellant even in 2006 and there is no reason to doubt integrity of appellant — Heading of S. 50, 1994 Act makes it clear that any act done in good faith is protected — Sree Sankaracharya University of Sanskrit Act, 1994, Ss. 50 and 23 — Applicability of S. 50 — Heading in S. 50 i.e. "protection of acts done in good faith" — Interpretation of — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill.(e) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(2) r/w S. 13(1)(d) — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 239 and 482. R. Ramachandran Nair v. State of Kerala (Vigilance Deptt.), (2011) 4 SCC 395.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-2011]

[10113] — Ss. 409 and 468 — Need for sanction under S. 197 CrPC, if any — Offences under S. 409 IPC (criminal breach of trust by a public servant, etc.) and S. 468 IPC (forgery for the purpose of cheating) — Sanction for prosecution, held, not required as these offences are not committed in the discharge of official duty — Respondent charged with commission of offences under Ss. 409, 420, 461 and 468 IPC but convicted by trial court for the offences under Ss. 409 and 468 only — Appellate court discharging respondent inter alia on the ground that sanction for prosecution was not granted by competent authority — High Court affirming the order — Held, sanction was not required in the present case — High Court's order set aside and appeal of the State directed to be heard on merits — CrPC, 1973, S. 197 (Paras 6 and 9). State of U.P. v. Paras Nath Singh, (2009) 6 SCC 372: (2009) 2 SCC (L&S) 200: 2009 Cri LJ 3069: (2009) 5 All LJ 249.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, D.K. Jain and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939; Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, AIR 1956 SC 44; S.A. Venkataraman v. State, AIR 1958 SC 107; C.R. Bansi v. State of Maharashtra, (1970) 3 SCC 537: 1971 SCC (Cri) 143; Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287: (1955) 1 SCR 1177; Amrik Singh v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1955 SC 309; Harihar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 89: 1972 SCC (Cri) 409; State of Kerala v. V. Padmanabhan Nair, (1999) 5 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1031; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539, applied

(iv) Instances

[10114] — S. 405 — Receiver not accounting for extra payment — On evidence, payment was illegal gratification to him personally and hence not covered by S. 405. C.M. Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478: 1954 Cri LJ 102: 1953 Ker LT 173.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Patanjali Sastri, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea , S.R. Das, Vivian Bose and Ghulam Hasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-1952]

[10115] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Misuse of funds by bank officials in violation of banking practices and/or departmental instructions — Whether a criminal breach of trust — Terms of S. 405, held, are very wide — It applies to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property — S. 405 does not require that trust should be in furtherance of a lawful object — The expression "direction of law" in S. 405, held, includes banking norms, banking practices and directions given in internal departmental instructions of a bank — Held on facts, bank officials who allowed advance credits on banker's cheques to a customer in violation of departmental instructions, acted in violation of direction of law — The officials had dominion over money belonging to Bank and they dishonestly used that money for conferring benefit on the customer — The officials were therefore guilty of offence under S. 409

Terms of Section 405 IPC are very wide. It applies to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property. The section does not require that trust should be in furtherance of any lawful object. (Para 168)

An officer of a bank holds a position of trust. Each one of them, keeping in view the nature and extent of duties required to be performed, is expected to do so not only in terms of statutory directions but also the directions issued by Reserve Bank of India and his own employer. Documents for the purpose of giving credit in the account of a customer would indisputably be required to be prepared on the basis of cheque receipts. It cannot be prepared in anticipation of receipt of a cheque; firstly, because the amount of cheque, the name of drawee and other particulars would not be known to them; secondly, the bank is required to maintain a large number of registers to put in place a sound banking system. All precautions must be taken to prevent a fraud or deceit on the part of a customer. Therefore, the fact that credit and debit vouchers were prepared and other registers were filled up, although the cheques were not in physical possession of the Bank, establishes existence of a criminal conspiracy between ultimate beneficiary, on the one hand, and some of the officers of the Bank, on the other. A debit or credit voucher furthermore is not prepared in piecemeal or in instalments. Bank officers are not supposed to know the immediate requirement of an account-holder. (Para 147)

The offences relating to criminal breach of trust stands established against A-1, A-2 and A-4. They were officers in Funds Department of Andhra Bank. In that capacity, they had been entrusted with the funds of the Bank. In that sense, they had dominion over a thing. The money which was transferred to A-3's account, was the money belonging to the Bank. Only the said accused had the power to transfer it to the account of A-3. The same has been done dishonestly to cause wrongful gain to A-3 and in the process wrongful loss has been caused to the Bank. (Para 173)

The instruments based on which the funds of Andhra Bank were transferred to A-3's account were not physically available with Andhra Bank at the time the accused persons authorised transfer of bank funds to A-3's account. A-3 also utilised the said credit given and accordingly even cheques issued by him were honoured. Had it not been for the credits given on relevant dates, his account would have been overdrawn. Interest was also not charged from A-3 and was not debited to his account and loss was therefore caused to the Bank. (Para 174)

Guidelines for banker's cheques were issued by Head Office. They were issued for the purpose of operation of security transaction at Fort Branch, Bombay of Andhra Bank. The guidelines moreover specify that permission had been granted to A-3 for the purpose of securities transactions. Therefore, these directions were obviously binding on the persons who were working in the Funds Department. These guidelines were exclusively meant for Funds Department for handling securities transactions, and there was no other department or branch of Andhra Bank anywhere in India which was handling such securities transactions. As such, they were binding on the accused persons. (Para 44)

Banking norms and established practices and procedures contain directions of law, prescribing the mode in which trust is to be discharged. The expression "direction of law" in the context of Sections 405 and 409 would include not only legislations pure and simple but directions also, instruments and circulars issued by an authority entitled therefor. The trust in this regard would therefore have to be discharged in terms of such directions. Acting in violation thereof causing wrongful gain to A-3 and loss to the Bank would bring the action within Section 409 IPC. (Para 175)

Established banking norms are binding on an officer of the bank in the matter of discharge of trust i.e. in dealing with the money entrusted to him. He is required to follow the same and that would be an implied term of his contract of service as an officer of the bank. The accused acted in breach of the same. Prosecution has sufficiently proved involvement of A-1, A-2 and A-4 as regards the offence of criminal breach of trust. (Para 176). Mir Nagvi Askari v. CBI, (2009) 15 SCC 643.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

R. Venkatakrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737; Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Punjab v. Pritam Chand, (2009) 16 SCC 769; Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 103, relied on

[10116] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Criminal breach of trust by bank officials — Discounting of bills of exchange in violation of RBI Circular and Bank Manual of Instructions — Discounting taking place at bank branch which was normally not transacting such business — Held, guilty bank officials had dominion over funds entrusted to them by their employer bank and they acted dishonestly to help a private party while discounting bills of exchange — Criminal breach of trust was therefore established against Accused 1 who was Chairman-cum-Managing Director of the bank and Accused 2 who was General Manager thereof — However, further held, offence was not proved against Accused 8 who was Divisional Manager, for the reason that he being a Scale IV employee, was not in a position to take any decision to commit criminal breach of trust — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d) and 13(2)

Accused 1, 2 and 8 were officials of UCO Bank, who discounted two bills of exchange drawn by M/s J.H. Mehta and accepted by two business concerns Mazda and Growmore. It was alleged that all these business concerns were interconnected and were controlled by a single person, Harshad Mehta (since deceased), who was dealing in the share market. The bills were discounted at Nariman Point Branch of UCO Bank whereas such kind of business was transacted at D.N. Road Branch. It also came to light that while discounting the bills of exchange, instructions contained in RBI Circular dated 5-9-1988 and in UCO Bank Manual of Instructions on Bill Discounting were not followed. UCO Bank later on purchased shares from Harshad Mehta to get back money advanced through discounting of bills. It was alleged that the entire transaction was to enable Harshad Mehta to siphon off funds of UCO Bank for using in the share market, and thus the Bank was exposed to a great risk.

Accused 1 at the relevant time was Chairman-cum-Managing Director of UCO Bank. Accused 2 was General Manager and Accused 8 was Divisional Manager of the Bank. The whole process was initiated after a meeting between Accused 1 and Harshad Mehta. The Special Court had convicted Accused 1 and 2 of the offence of criminal breach of trust but had acquitted Accused 8.

Agreeing with the Special Court,

Held :

The Bank entrusted its funds to its officers; they had the dominion over the said property; they were holding the said money in trust which is a comprehensive expression, inter alia, to denote a relationship of master and servant. The act of criminal breach of trust per se may involve a civil wrong but a breach of trust with an ingredient of mens rea would give rise to a criminal prosecution as well. Criminal breach of trust would, inter alia, mean using or disposing of the property by a person who is entrusted with, or has otherwise dominion thereover. Such an act must not only be done dishonestly but also in violation of any direction of law or any contract express or implied, relating to carrying out the trust. It is one thing to say that any circular letter issued by RBI being not within the public domain would not be law but it would be another thing to say that it did not contain any direction of law so as to attract liability in terms of Section 405 of the Penal Code. Lawful directions were issued by RBI. The circular letter was meant for all scheduled banks. The authorities and/or officers running the affairs of scheduled banks were aware thereof. If it is binding on the banks, it would be binding on the officers. Any omission or commission on the part of any authority of the Bank would amount to acting in violation of any direction of law. A direction of law need not be a law made by Parliament or a legislature; it may be made by an authority having the power therefor; the law could be a subordinate legislation, a notification or even a custom. Authorities of UCO Bank were dealing with public funds. They were required to apply the same in terms of circulars issued by Bank as also RBI. It has been accepted at the Bar that failure on the part of officers of the Bank to abide by directives issued under circulars would result in civil action. Subjecting the bank to a civil liability would thus attract one of the ingredients of criminal breach of trust. However, mere error of judgment would not attract the penal provision contained in Section 409 of the Penal Code. Moreover, the Special Judge has found that the accused had knowledge of RBI circular. (Paras 64, 61 and 66 to 69)

(8)(iv) Instances (contd.)

In order that the Bank could discount a bill of exchange, it was necessary that it related to a bona fide or genuine commercial transaction and it was because of this requirement that the accused persons had gone to the extent of preparing false documents to give an appearance that the discounting related to bona fide commercial transaction. (Paras 62, 60 and 87)

It does not matter whether the violation was in relation to the circular issued by RBI or it was in violation of the guidelines issued by the UCO Bank itself. The question as to whether directions are statutory in character and binding in law may not depend upon the nature of the powers to be exercised by RBI. Discounting and rediscounting of bills of exchange is an integral part of banking transactions. (Para 90)

None of the ingredients of Para 2.5(b) of UCO Bank Manual were satisfied. None of persons or companies concerned were customers of the said Branch; the authorities did not know them. All the procedural requirements necessary for safeguarding interests of the Bank were thrown to the winds. (Paras 92 to 99)

Even if it is assumed that the transaction was otherwise permissible in law under the Contract Act or any other parliamentary Act, yet the prosecution must succeed once it is able to prove that ingredients of Section 405 are satisfied. The entire transaction was undertaken with one motive: that funds of UCO Bank should be made available to Harshad Mehta who was a stockbroker. The fact that UCO Bank had undertaken grave risk is not in dispute. An offence is committed with a view to circumvent the law. An apparent state of affairs need not be the real state of affairs. A simple transaction of discounting and rediscounting on its face may appear to be genuine and lawful but there may be underlying purposes behind it. (Paras 47, 101 and 102)

The charge of criminal breach of trust therefore stands established against Accused 1 and 2. The role played by Accused 2 in the entire chain of events is significant. The decision to discount two bills of exchange at Nariman Point Branch had been taken by Accused 1 only after consulting Accused 2. Accused 2 had full details of the transaction. He had also played a key role in the purchase of shares by UCO Bank to provide for repayment of the amount advanced by UCO Bank. He had also similarly made an endorsement for issuing a cheque in favour of ANZ Grindlay's Bank on account of J.H. Mehta. However, the role played by Accused 2 was subsidiary to that played by Accused 1. The entire transaction appears to have been gone through because of a deal struck between deceased Harshad Mehta and Accused 1. The Special Judge however rightly held that Accused 8 was not in a position to issue any directions; he being a Scale IV employee. He therefore could not be said to be guilty of the offence of criminal breach of trust. (Paras 110 to 112). Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v. CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10117] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Imposition of penalty/punishment — Statements made by complainant subsequent to imposition of penalty on the delinquent — Not relevant — Departmental enquiry against bank officer for misappropriation of a certain amount culminating in removal from service — Subsequent to the passing of the order of removal, the complainant allegedly making a disclosure statement under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Contention of the delinquent that the punishing authority ought to have considered the said statement, rejected. Suresh Pathrella v. Oriental Bank of Commerce, (2006) 10 SCC 572: (2006) 134 DLT 516.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-10-2006]

Sohan Singh v. Union of India, (1984) 1 SCC 162: 1984 SCC (L&S) 105; Narinder Mohan Arya v. United India Insurance Co. Ltd., (2006) 4 SCC 713: 2006 SCC (L&S) 840, distinguished [10118] — Ss. 407, 467 and 477-A — Criminal trial simultaneous with departmental enquiry on the same charge — Acquittal in criminal trial on benefit of doubt no bar to imposing of penalty in departmental proceedings — Sub-Postmaster fraudulently withdrawing an amount (Rs 8000 in this case) from SB Account of a person by himself putting that person's signature — Criminal trial ending in acquittal on benefit of doubt — In such circumstances, CAT erred in holding that in view of the acquittal in the criminal trial, penalty could not be imposed in the departmental proceedings on the same charge. Senior Supdt. of Post Offices v. A. Gopalan, (1997) 11 SCC 239: AIR 1999 SC 1514.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-1997]

Nelson Motis v. Union of India, (1992) 4 SCC 711: 1993 SCC (L&S) 13: (1993) 23 ATC 382, distinguished

[10119] — S. 409 — Application for extending the time for completing the investigation filed by IO after the expiry of the statutory period prescribed by S. 167(5)(iii) CrPC — Grant of — Permissibility — Where the court had still not passed a discharge order, validity of extension of time on such an application, upheld — Further held, there was no conflict between the ratio in Falguni Dutta case and that in Bimal Chandra Saha case — W.B. Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949 (21 of 1949) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 167(5) & (6) (as amended in the State of W.B.)

The appellant was involved as accused in an offence under Section 409, IPC. During investigation of the case he applied for, and got, a pre-arrest bail order and surrendered himself before the Magistrate on 18-3-1993. As the investigation was not completed within two years therefrom, he moved the said Magistrate on 22-9-1995 for discharging him under Section 167(5), CrPC. The Magistrate dismissed the application pointing out that the case being triable only by a Special Judge under the West Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949 the order sought by the appellant could be passed only by the Special Judge. A Single Judge of the High Court while holding the Magistrate to be competent to pass an order under Section 167(5) in the instant case, granted further time to the IO, on an application filed by him, on being satisfied that the IO could not complete the investigation due to sickness. The question was whether time could have been extended without the IO moving for such extension before the expiry of the statutory period. A further question was whether there was conflict between the decisions in State of W.B. v. Falguni Dutta case and Durgesh Chandra Saha v. Bimal Chandra Saha case. Upholding the Single Judge's order and answering the second question in the negative,

Held :

On the facts of the instant case the two years' period mentioned in Section 167(5)(iii) must be reckoned from 18-3-1993 on which date the appellant surrendered himself in court.

There is no conflict between the decisions in State of W.B. v. Falguni Dutta case and Durgesh Chandra Saha v. Bimal Chandra Saha case and the ratio was applied on the factual position in each case. Nirmal Kanti Roy v. State of W.B., (1998) 4 SCC 590: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1100: AIR 1998 SC 2322.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1998]

Durgesh Chandra Saha v. Bimal Chandra Saha, (1996) 1 SCC 341: 1996 SCC (Cri) 109, impliedly distinguished

State of W.B. v. Pranab Ranjan Roy, (1998) 3 SCC 209: 1998 SCC (Cri) 730, followed [10120] — S. 409 — Charge against cashier that he delayed payment of T.A. Bills and other amounts or did not make payments at all though he had already taken receipts from such person — Held, the concurrent finding of conviction cannot stand because no written complaint by the several affected persons who had also given testimony was produced in evidence — Case not proved beyond reasonable doubt. Om Prakash v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 550: 1980 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 1980 SC 476: 1980 Cri LJ 311.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-1979]

[10121] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Accused employed as Laboratory Attendant in Fruit Canning Unit — Failure to deposit amount collected by him from salesman in local treasury — Burden lies on accused to prove that he deposited the amount — Such burden not discharged — Conviction upheld — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106. Hira Nand v. State of H.P., 1995 Cri LJ 3646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1995]

[10122] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — Whether on facts substantiated — J and M, Superintendent and Storekeeper respectively in Government Heat Treatment Centre authorised to take a certain quantity of light diesel oil from Indian Oil Corporation (IOC) — Bank draft given to them for that purpose, deposited in

(8)(iv) Instances (contd.)

IOC office, M taking delivery of diesel oil and in token thereof signing the cash-memo as well as the register — Oral evidence of Senior Technical Officer of the Government Heat Treatment Centre and of Depot Manager, IOC, also confirming the taking of delivery of diesel oil by M — However, the diesel oil ultimately found to be short by 4300 litres — In view of the said evidence, held, there was no entrustment of diesel or dominion over the same, to J — Hence, conviction of J under S. 409, held, not sustainable — Mere entrustment of the bank draft to, and authorisation in favour of, J to take delivery of diesel oil, held, could not lead to a contrary inference — Even the subsequent undertaking given by J to make up the loss, held, could not amount to confession or admission of guilt on the part of J and could not sustain his conviction under S. 409 — However, in view of the said oral and documentary evidence, M, held, guilty of embezzlement of 4300 litres of diesel oil — Hence, his conviction and sentence under S. 409, upheld — Confession of accused — What is not confession or admission of guilt — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 17 and 24. Jiwan Dass v. State of Haryana, (1999) 2 SCC 530: 1999 SCC (Cri) 288: AIR 1999 SC 1301: 1999 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1999]

[10123] — S. 409 — Entitlement to back wages — Employee removed from service on conviction by criminal court for criminal breach of trust but subsequently acquitted — Thereafter order of removal set aside by High Court and the employee reinstated — In such circumstances payment of back wages might put a premium on corruption — Hence, in order to take a decision in that regard, pre-prosecution confidential reports of the employee should be considered by the court/tribunal — Since in the instant case, the confidential reports indicated doubtful integrity, back wages refused by Supreme Court

The respondent is not entitled to back wages because he was found to be a man of doubtful integrity and his confidential reports are not good.

Corruption is the result of deep-seated moral degradation and unsatiated greed for wealth. The office of public service affords an opportunity to the public servant to abuse the office and in that pursuit to accept illegal gratification for the discharge of official duty. Acquittal may be due to many reasons, like apathy in prosecution, witnesses turning hostile, indulging in corruption in a skilful manner, etc. Conduct of an employee gains notoriety in service and among the public. Payment of back wages would provide an impetus and put a premium on corruption. The society has to pay the price for corrupt officers from public exchequer. When a court directs payment of back wages on reinstatement, it has to consider the backdrop of circumstances and to pragmatically apply the principle to the given set of facts. No abstract principle of universal application can be laid in this regard. State of U.P. v. Ved Pal Singh, (1997) 3 SCC 483: 1997 SCC (L&S) 823: AIR 1997 SC 608: 1997 Lab IC 441: (1997) 1 CLR 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1996]

[10124] — S. 409 — Recipient denying having received the money and repudiating the signature on the receipt to be his — Conviction based on sole testimony of such interested witness, held, improper — Prosecution unable to discharge its onus — Accused entitled to the benefit of doubt. Labhshanker Maganlala Shukla v. State of Gujarat, (1979) 3 SCC 391: 1979 SCC (Cri) 684: AIR 1979 SC 1012: 1979 Cri LJ 890.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Jaswant Singh, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal , JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-1978]

[10125] — S. 409 — Surreptitious and unauthorised sale of store material and misappropriation of the proceeds by store incharge in FCI — Eye witness account of watchman, truck drivers and mazdoor as also recovery of the material from the purchaser supporting the prosecution case — Circumstance of shortage of store material on verification of stock relied on as a corroborative piece of evidence — Various grounds taken by the accused for discrediting the testimony of the prosecution witnesses found to be baseless — Having regard to the direct and other evidence, held, conviction under S. 409 and three months RI and fine of Rs 1000 upheld — In view of the short term of imprisonment awarded and the long period during which the appellant was at large, it is just or proper that sentence of imprisonment be reduced to the period already undergone while maintaining the sentence of fine (Para 6). Lal Bahadur Shriramdatta Chaudhari v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 546: 1991 SCC (Cri) 718: AIR 1991 SC 34.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi , JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1990]

[10126] — Ss. 409 and 120-B — Applicability — Criminal breach of trust — Diversion of funds of company — Transactions prior to occupying the positions mentioned in S. 409, held, did not attract Ss. 409 & 120-B — Precondition for

Respondents 1 and 2 to become directors of the company was to deposit a certain amount — In order to fulfil the said pre-condition they allegedly obtaining loan from a party who, as a supplier, had been advanced an identical sum by that company — In such circumstances, the said allegations even if accepted in entirety, held, did not constitute an offence under Ss. 120-B and 409 — Therefore, continuance of criminal proceedings against Respondents 1 and 2 under those provisions being manifestly unjust, the charge and the proceedings were rightly quashed by the High Court in exercise of its powers under S. 482, CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 482. Ashim Kumar Roy v. Bipinbhai Vadilal Mehta, (1998) 1 SCC 133: 1998 SCC (Cri) 269: AIR 1997 SC 3976: (1998) 91 Comp Cas 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1997]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388, applied

[10127] — Ss. 409 and 201 — Entitlement to, reinstatement with back wages and continuity of service — Unfair and unreasonable treatment by Bank — On the charge of embezzlement of a certain amount, employer initiating departmental proceedings, criminal prosecution and also filing a suit to recover the amount allegedly embezzled — Concurrently holding that charge to be unproved, criminal court acquitting the delinquent employee and civil court dismissing the employer's suit — Both the courts finding the delinquent employee to have been treated very unfairly and unreasonably — Criminal court finding the employer to have extracted a confession from him in a very cruel manner — In such circumstances, the employee, held, entitled to reinstatement with back wages, continuity in service and other benefits — Costs of litigation also awarded to him — Constitution of India, Art. 136 — CPC, 1908, S. 35

The judgments of both the civil court and the criminal court established that the appellant was treated very unfairly and unreasonably. For all intent and purport, a criminal case was foisted upon him. A confession, according to Chief Judicial Magistrate, was extracted from him by the bank officers in a very cruel manner. It is, therefore, not a case where back wages should be denied. The respondent Bank tried to proceed against the appellant both in a civil proceedings as well as in a criminal proceedings and at both the independent forums, it failed. Therefore, the impugned orders and judgments cannot be sustained. The appellant is directed to be reinstated with back wages, continuity of service and other consequential benefits. The respondent shall also pay and bear the costs of the appellant which is quantified at Rs 10,000. (Paras 16 and 17). Jasbir Singh v. Punjab & Sind Bank, (2007) 1 SCC 566: (2007) 1 SCC (L&S) 401: (2007) 1 LLN 106: (2007) 1 LLJ 481: (2007) 112 FLR 911: (2007) 1 SLR 569.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2006]

U.P. State Brassware Corpn. Ltd. v. Uday Narain Pandey, (2006) 1 SCC 479: 2006 SCC (L&S) 250, explained

Distinguished in St. Michael's Teacher's Training Institute v. V.N. Karpaga Mary, (2008) 7 SCC 388

[10128] — Ss. 409, 405 and 24 — Criminal breach of trust — Accused in charge of Government Agricultural Seed Store charged under S. 409 for preparing forged bills showing credit sales of seeds, fertilisers etc. to village level workers and misappropriating the amount shown in the bills — Charges of forgery and using forged documents as genuine under Ss. 467 and 471 already set aside by High Court and in absence of any appeal, stand of accused that the bills were genuine acceptable — Entire amount in question deposited by accused before CID investigation — Practice of credit sales of the store articles in vogue for long in the department despite Government circular prohibiting the same — Superior officers also not taking serious view of the credit sales and a circular merely warning that officials indulging in credit sales would be held personally responsible to pay the outstanding amount — In the circumstances, held, accused cannot be burdened with criminality of breach of trust for following the long established practice of credit sales — Prosecution failed to establish the main ingredient of 'dishonestly' against the accused even if he may be guilty of dereliction of his duty — Prosecution even failed to prove temporary misappropriation of the amount — Second accused, having taken charge of the seed store after the bills were prepared and after the alleged misappropriation of the amount in question by the first accused, cannot be convicted under S. 409 — In absence of any evidence regarding any conspiracy, pre-concert or concert of minds of the two accused-appellants or any pre-arranged plan between them to commit the offence, they cannot be jointly fastened with the offence under S. 409 — In case of reinstatement in service of the appellants pursuant to their acquittal, they, although ordinarily entitled to back wages, will not be having any claim for the back wages from the date of suspension up to the date of reinstatement in view of their undertaking to that effect before the court (Paras 15, 24 to 27). Narendra Pratap Narain Singh v. State of U.P., (1991) 2 SCC 623: 1991 SCC (Cri) 482: AIR 1991 SC 1394.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1991]

(8)(iv) Instances (contd.)

[10129] — Ss. 409, 405 and 24 — Criminal breach of trust — Making available public money by bank officials to a private party contrary to statutory provisions and departmental instructions — Dishonest intention evident from facts and circumstances of the case — Held, amounted to criminal breach of trust even if the money was subsequently recovered and banks did not suffer any monetary loss — Further held, banks officials were criminally liable even if no departmental action had been taken against them — It also did not matter that prosecution was launched by CBI instead of banks themselves — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946)

The officials of UCO Bank and National Housing Bank who helped Harshad Mehta (since deceased) in siphoning off public money of Rs 40 crores were also charged for criminal breach of trust, apart from being charged for criminal conspiracy.

Held :

It is not the law that complaint petition under all circumstances must be made by banks and financial institutions whose money had been the subject-matter of offence. It is also not the law that suffering of loss is a sine qua non for recording a judgment of conviction. Criminal law can be set in motion by anybody. The prosecution was initiated on the basis of information received by Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). CBI is entitled to do so not only in regard to its statutory powers contained in the Delhi Special Police Act but it was also entitled to take cognizance in terms of the report submitted by the Janakiraman Committee. The money involved in transfer is public money belonging to public sector banks. If transaction was illegal, as a result whereof, a private person, who was not expected to reap fruits of "call money" was allowed to retain the same for a period to make an unlawful gain therefrom, offence of criminal breach of trust must be held to have been committed. It is for the same reason the submission that as nobody ultimately suffered any loss, an offence under Section 409 of the Penal Code was not made out, cannot be accepted. A bank or financial institution may not suffer ultimate loss but if money has been allowed to be used by another person illegally for illegal purpose, ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code would get attracted. A case involving temporary embezzlement also attracts ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code. (Paras 150, 152 and 153)

When a person allows others to misappropriate property entrusted to him, that also amounts to criminal breach of trust. In the present case, amount of Rs 40 crores was entrusted to Accused 6 to be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the National Housing Bank Act, 1987. The Act does not permit grant of loan to an individual. Accused 6 in violation of the law handed over the amount to UCO Bank with full knowledge that the amount would be credited to the account of Harshad Mehta. The call money transaction with UCO Bank was only a cover-up. The property which was trusted to Accused 6 was misappropriated by him. The most essential ingredient of criminal breach of trust is misappropriation with dishonest intention. (Para 154). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10130] — Ss. 409 and 420 — Bulk purchases of insurance stamps from outside State for use within the State — If "calculated to deprive Government of any duty or penalty" — FIR lodged against officers of an insurance corporation alleging that offences under Ss. 420 & 409 IPC r/w Ss. 64 & 69 of Stamp Act, were committed — Tenability — Held, no offence was committed — Rates of stamp duty in respect of insurance policies is the subject-matter of a Central Law — State's power to make rules under a Central Act, therefore, extends only to the extent provided for under the Act — Moreover, Stamp Rules of the State were framed when the current constitutional scheme was not in place — Also that R. 115-A refers to stamps which are "property of the Central Government" — Hence, contention that insurance stamps must be purchased within the State only, held, is legally untenable — Further held, by purchasing stamps appellants had in any case paid duties and had not "deprived Government of any duty or penalty" in contravention of S. 64(c) of Stamp Act — Nor were the appellants stamp vendors — Nor did they make any unauthorised sale of insurance stamps — Hence held, S. 69 of Stamp Act was not applicable — High Court's order holding that FIR prima facie disclosed commission of alleged offences, set aside — Stamp Act, 1899, Ss. 64(c), 27, 69, 74 and 75 r/w Rr. 3 and 115-A, United Provinces Stamp Rules, 1942. V.V.S. Rama Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 234: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 356: (2009) 77 AIC 24 (SC): (2009) 4 All LJ 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma , JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

[10131] — Ss. 409 and 420 — Misappropriation — Appellant, Manager of Rice Mill, in custody and management of huge stocks of paddy entrusted to him — Evidence of disinterested official witnesses establishing that he misappropriated 1500 quintals of paddy — In the circumstances of the case reversal of acquittal by the High Court justified — However, sentence of imprisonment till the rising of the Court found inadequate — But in view of long lapse of time notice for enhancement of sentence not issued. Narindra Kumar Jain v. State of M.P., 1996 SCC (Cri) 1025: AIR 1996 SC 2213.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-1996]

[10132] — Ss. 409, 420 and 120-B — Exercise of revisional powers by High Court for quashing charges — Maintainability — Charges of corruption against cooperative bank officials — Charge-sheet under Ss. 409, 420 and 120-B IPC together with S. 13 (1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988, filed against respondent-accused, Chairman and Directors of Cooperative Bank, who were also members of the Loan Committee, for sanctioning loans without verifying eligibility of borrowers to receive such loans or the end-use of such loans and intentionally acting in an illegal manner to enable borrowers to avail of the loans — Trial court directing framing of charges — In revision thereagainst, High Court quashing the charges framed on the ground that respondents were members of the Loan Committee and as such members they were only required to consider loan cases which were put up to them by Bank Manager concerned for the grant of loan and it was for the Branch Managers of various branches to verify the facts regarding entitlement for grant of loan before submitting the same to the Loan Committee and hence, it could not be said that respondents had acted illegally and had wrongly sanctioned loans to the borrowers concerned — Sustainability — Appellant, inter alia, contending that in going into factual aspects of the matter, High Court travelled beyond its revisional powers in coming to findings of fact, which were yet to be established on evidence — Tenability — Held, undoubtedly, in the inquiry report of District Vigilance Committee, role attributed to respondents in sanctioning loans was shown to be purely managerial where the groundwork had been completed by Branch Managers, but as members of Loan Sanctioning Committee, they had acted inefficiently — It was also suggested that Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Bank had connived with other accused in defrauding the Bank — Hence, held, High Court erroneously quashed charges framed against respondents — Consequently, orders impugned set aside and charges framed by trial court restored — Trial court directed to proceed with trial — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 401 & 397 and 228 (Paras 5, 10, 43, 44 and 50 to 52). State of M.P. v. Rameshwar, (2009) 11 SCC 424: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1421: (2009) 77 AIC 102 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 2415.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2009]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Nikhil Merchant v. CBI, (2008) 9 SCC 677: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 859, distinguished.

[10133] — Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471 — Applicability — Addition of other person as accused — Appellant (school clerk) was accused of embezzling school funds by putting forged signatures of Respondent 2 (Head Master-cum-Drawing and Disbursing Officer) under Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC — Report of the signature expert though received by the prosecution was not produced before the court — When from the evidence of PWs 2, 14 and 11 it came to light that Respondent 2 might be involved in the crime, the Magistrate issued summons against Respondent 2 on an application made by the appellant — Cognizance by Magistrate, held, was not illegal or arbitrary — CrPC, 1973 — S. 319

Now, an application under Section 319 CrPC can only be made to a court and the court may exercise the power under the said section if it appears from evidence that any person other than the accused had also committed an offence for which he can be tried together with the accused. It was the case of the appellant that it was during the course of prosecution evidence that he came to know that signatures of Respondent 2 were sent for examination, some report was received by the prosecution which was not produced in court and on the basis of such evidence, the case was made out against Respondent 2. In these circumstances, there is no infirmity in the prayer granting applications under Section 319 CrPC. Therefore, even on merits, the order passed by the Magistrate issuing summons to Respondent 2 could not be said to be unlawful or even improper. The Magistrate issued summons taking into account evidence led by the prosecution, particularly, by PWs 2, 14 and 11. (Paras 62, 49 and 56). Bholu Ram v. State of Punjab, (2008) 9 SCC 140: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-2008]

(8)(iv) Instances (contd.)

[10134] — Ss. 409, 420, 467 and 477-A — Fraud and misappropriation of bank funds — Conviction justified — Charge against Respondent 1 Bank Manager of sanctioning crop loan in the name of fictitious persons and misappropriating the same — Respondent completed all the loan formalities himself and affixed his own thumb impressions instead of those of the loanees on the loan document — Handwritings on the loan document and the thumb impressions thereon, found by qualified fingerprint expert to be those of respondent — All transactions, right from application to disposal took place in the afternoon and all documents used to be processed during lunch hour, whereas as per the procedure, disbursement of land could take place only upon proper verification thereof — Loan sanctioned and the amount disbursed on the very same day the loan application was made — Held, charge against Respondent 1 made out — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(2) (Paras 25 and 29). State v. M. Krishna Mohan, (2007) 14 SCC 667: AIR 2008 SC 368: (2008) 61 AIC 180 (SC).
Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ.
[Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

[10135] — Ss. 409, 420, 467, 477-A r/w S. 120-B — Exoneration in departmental proceedings — Would not entitle accused to acquittal in criminal proceedings — Charge against Respondent 2, Field Officer on probation of Gramin Bank, of conspiring with Respondent 1 Manager of the Bank by preparing appraisal report on the basis of which Respondent 1 sanctioned crop loans in the names of fictitious persons and misappropriated the loan amount — Plea of Respondent 2 that since in departmental enquiry held against him, he was exonerated, he would be entitled to acquittal in the criminal proceedings on that ground — But according to investigating officer the departmental enquiry was initiated before commencement of investigation — Held, plea of exoneration in departmental proceedings having been raised by way of defence, Respondent 2 was obliged to bring on record all the relevant documents relating to departmental proceedings — Enquiry officer in departmental proceedings could not get benefit of all the materials considered by IO — Hence exoneration in departmental proceedings would not result in acquittal of Respondent 2 in the criminal proceedings — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) proviso

The inquiry report has not been brought on record. The factum of exoneration of Respondent 2 in the departmental proceedings was raised by way of defence. It was, therefore, obligatory on his part to bring on record all the relevant documents, namely, the charge-sheet, the other materials brought on record by the Department and the findings of the enquiry officer. If the statement of the investigating officer is to be accepted and there is absolutely no reason as to why it should not be, there was no occasion for the enquiry officer to have the benefit of the depositions of the purported loanees, the opinion of the fingerprint expert and other material brought on record by the prosecution which clearly established the involvement of the respondents herein. In a case of this nature where departmental proceeding was initiated only as against Respondent 2, the enquiry officer did not have the benefit to consider all the materials which could be brought on record by the Department in the light of the investigation made by a specialised investigating agency, the evidence of experts and deposition of witnesses to show that forgery of document has been committed by forging thumb impression and handwriting, exoneration of Respondent 2 in the departmental proceedings cannot lead to the conclusion that he was not guilty of commission of the offences wherefor he was charged. (Paras 31 and 35)

P.S. Rajya case, (1996) 9 SCC 1 was rendered on the facts obtaining therein and cannot be said to be an authority for the proposition that exoneration in departmental proceeding ipso facto would lead to a judgment of acquittal in a criminal trial. (Para 33)

It may be true that no act of forgery and misappropriation has been attributed to Respondent 2, but he was the one who had prepared the appraisal report. After preparation of such appraisal report, the loan amount having been sanctioned and the amount of loan purported to have been paid to the loanees, he was also guilty of commission of the said offence. (Para 26)

The entire prosecution case relating to charges of forgery and misappropriation has been attributed to Respondent 1 alone. He was the one who had put on shelves all the procedural requirements. Not only he, during the luncheon hours, filled up the application forms, but even prior thereto he had purported to have received the documents, sanctioned the loan and obtained the amount of loan in cash. The loanees were known to him and not to Respondent 2. (Para 42)

Therefore, a case has been made out to invoke the proviso appended to sub-section (2) of Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 in the case of Respondent 2. Furthermore, he worked in the bank for a short period and was still undergoing probation. Forgery and misappropriation was committed by Respondent 1 even thereafter. The appraisal reports prepared by Respondent 2 were used by Respondent 1 also for the subsequent period, when Respondent 2 was no longer working in the said branch. (Para 43)

Therefore, while upholding the conviction and sentence as awarded by trial Judge as against Respondent 1 (Accused 1), in view of the special reasons recorded hereinbefore, a sentence of imprisonment of three months is imposed on Respondent 2. He shall, however, be liable to pay a fine of Rs 20,000 (Rupees twenty thousand only) and in default shall undergo a sentence of three months. (Para 44). State v. M. Krishna Mohan, (2007) 14 SCC 667: AIR 2008 SC 368: (2008) 61 AIC 180 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Supdt. of Police (CBI) v. Deepak Chowdhary, (1995) 6 SCC 225: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1095, relied on

P.S. Rajya v. State of Bihar, (1996) 9 SCC 1: 1996 SCC (Cri) 897, distinguished [10136] — Ss. 409 and 467 — Prosecution of Marketing Inspector for misappropriation of rent collected from stall-holders and fabrication of false record to conceal embezzlement — Accused issuing receipt for higher amount but in corresponding counter-foils entering only lesser amount — Entries in receipts and counterfoils not disputed — On facts, held, finding of High Court in favour of accused clearly attributable to misreading of evidence leading to miscarriage of justice and therefore not sustainable — Absence of cash book, which had been destroyed in fire, not material — Order of acquittal passed by High Court set aside — However, in view of old age and retirement from service several years ago accused deserves leniency in punishment — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 378 and 386. State of Orissa v. Gangadhar Pande, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 150: 1991 SCC (Cri) 389.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Natarajan, K. Jagannatha Shetty and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-1989]

[10137] — Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 411 — Appellant, Bank clerk accused of forging bills and getting payments — Approver's evidence, if valid — Corroboration of approver's evidence, whether adequate — Omission by approver to state to police some facts, whether fatal — Conviction upheld

Omissions by approver in his statement to the police is not fatal. It may be that when the approver gave his police statement he did not know that he would be granted pardon and possibly for that reason had not come out with all the facts known to him and he did so while he was making his statement before the Magistrate as he knew by then that he would be tendered pardon on condition that he would disclose all the facts known to him. The omission in the police statement, therefore, by itself would not necessarily have rendered his evidence unreliable. In considering whether the approver's evidence passed the test of reliability, the Court would have to consider whether taken as a whole and in the light of the facts and circumstances of the case it was a credible version or not. Madan Mohan Lal v. State of Punjab, (1970) 2 SCC 733: 1970 SCC (Cri) 509: AIR 1970 SC 1006: 1970 Cri LJ 898.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and G.K. Mitter, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-1970]

[10138] — Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 477-A — Embezzlement — Charge of encashment of fake RBI demand drafts at Sub-Treasury in the name of fictitious payees by falsification of accounts by Sub-Treasury Officer in connivance with other employees — DDs proved to be false and bogus and payees fictitious — No advice for payment received from RBI — Identity of the person, who was stated to have identified the payees, not disclosed — Entries regarding signatures or thumb impressions of the payees and amounts paid, admitted to have been made by the accused in relevant registers, found to be false — Shortage in cash balance not explained by accused — Held on facts, prosecution discharged its burden of establishing the charges beyond doubt by leading unimpeachable evidence — When payment of huge amount was being made it was the duty of the accused to make thorough enquiry regarding correct identity and genuineness of the payees — This fact being in the special knowledge of the accused, it was incumbent upon them to disclose names and identity of the person who had identified the payees and to establish their innocence by producing such person or the payees in defence evidence — In absence thereof, conviction recorded by trial court upheld. State of A.P. v. Y. Basavadevudu, (1992) 3 SCC 30: 1992 SCC (Cri) 495.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.M. Kasliwal , JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1992]

[10139] — Ss. 409, 467 and 477-A — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) — Amount drawn by Principal of school for chowkidar not borne on the register — Chowkidar not denying receipt of the amount — Other persons also not borne on the register — Held, impropriety and breach of rules not sufficient to sustain conviction for misappropriation. Brijbasi Lal Shrivastava v. State of M.P., (1979) 4 SCC 521: 1980 SCC (Cri) 116: AIR 1979 SC 1080: 1979 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali , JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1979]

(8)(iv) Instances (contd.)

[10140] — Ss. 409, 467 r/w S. 109 — Prosecution alleging that accused misappropriated a large amount belonging to a Gram Panchayat by defrauding the Sarpanch who was illiterate — Held, illiteracy of the Sarpanch cannot induce court to ignore infirmities in his evidence or to fill in lacunae in prosecution case — In any case this fact would not justify benefit of doubt for prosecution. Mohinder Singh v. State of Haryana, (1974) 4 SCC 285: 1974 SCC (Cri) 447: AIR 1974 SC 873: 1974 Cri LJ 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and V.R. Krishna Iyer, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1974]

[10141] — Ss. 409 and 477-A — Nature and scope of departmental proceedings — Dissimilarity with criminal proceedings — Scope of disciplinary proceedings and scope of criminal proceedings, held, are quite distinct, exclusive and independent of each other — Standards of proof in the said two proceedings are also different — In the present case, even the charges in the said two proceedings were different — Hence, High Court erred in holding that the acquittal of the delinquent employee by the criminal court had clinched the issue in the departmental enquiry

The scope of disciplinary proceedings and the scope of criminal proceedings in a court of criminal law are quite distinct, exclusive and independent of each other. Moreover, the standards of proof required in the criminal proceedings and the departmental disciplinary actions are not the same. [Paras 32, 21, 22 and 24(i)]

The prosecution proceedings launched against the respondent herein were in respect of offences punishable under Sections 409 and 477-A IPC, whereas the departmental proceedings as initiated against her were in respect of the charges of misappropriation and other fraudulent practices. Thus, the respondent herein was proceeded against for quite different charges and on different sets of facts before the criminal court on the one hand and before the departmental enquiry officer on the other. The High Court patently erred in holding that the acquittal of the respondent by the criminal court had clinched the issue in the departmental enquiry. (Paras 32, 3 and 20)

The plea of the respondent for taking a lenient view has no force. The scope of judicial review is very limited. Sympathy or generosity as a factor is impermissible. Loss of confidence is the primary factor and not the amount of money misappropriated. In the instant case, the respondent employee was found guilty of misappropriating the Corporation funds. There was nothing wrong in the Corporation losing confidence or faith in such an employee and awarding punishment of dismissal. In such cases, there is no place for generosity or misplaced sympathy on the part of the judicial forums and interfering therefor with the quantum of punishment awarded by the disciplinary and Appellate Authority. (Para 29)

In the present case, the charged employee held a position of trust where honesty and integrity were inbuilt requirements of functioning and, therefore, the matter required to be dealt with firmly with firm hands and not leniently. (Para 35). T.N.C.S. Corpn. Ltd. v. K. Meerabai, (2006) 2 SCC 255: 2006 SCC (L&S) 265: (2006) 1 LLN 516: (2006) 40 AIC 516 (SC): (2006) 2 SLR 358.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan , JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2006]

Lalit Popli v. Canara Bank, (2003) 3 SCC 583: 2003 SCC (L&S) 353; Ajit Kumar Nag v. G.M. (PJ), Indian Oil Corpn. Ltd., (2005) 7 SCC 764: 2005 SCC (L&S) 1020, relied on

Distinguished in Union of India v. Naman Singh Shekhawat, (2008) 4 SCC 1*

[10142] — Ss. 409 and 477-A — On facts, charges of criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts established — However, taking the time factor and the age of the appellant into consideration sentence reduced to six months' R.I. under each count — No law point laid down. Inder Sain Jain v. State of Punjab, AIR 1994 SC 1065: 1994 Cri LJ 1224.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-9-1993]

[10143] — Ss. 409 and 477-A — Overwhelming evidence against appellant — Reversal of acquittal by High Court upheld. Budh Singh v. State of Haryana, (1974) 3 SCC 638: 1974 SCC (Cri) 168: AIR 1974 SC 1354: 1974 Cri LJ 614.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1973]

[10144] — Ss. 409, 477-A and 120-B — Order of dismissal on the ground of conduct which had led to conviction on a criminal charge — Pendency of an appeal against the conviction, held, no bar to passing of such an order — However in case of acquittal in appeal, the dismissed employee can seek review of the dismissal order — Central Civil Services (CCA) Rules, 1965, R. 19(i) — Constitution of India, Art. 311(2) second proviso (a) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c) and (2). Union of India v. V.K. Bhaskar, (1997) 11 SCC 383.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-1996]

Director of Collegiate Education (Admn.) v. S. Nagoor Meera, (1995) 3 SCC 377: 1995 SCC (L&S) 686: (1995) 29 ATC 574, followed [10145] — Ss. 409 and 511 — Charge of attempt to commit criminal breach of trust against appellant godown keeper of Food Corporation of India — Wheat bags being loaded in truck from Food Corporation's godown under the instruction of the appellant — Truck along with a release order for the wheat bags in favour of a cooperative society seized by police — Defence founded on the plea that loading of the truck was for despatching wheat to the cooperative society — Held, failure of prosecution to produce the release order fatal to the prosecution case — Conviction and sentence of the appellant under S. 409 read with S. 511, Indian Penal Code set aside. Chittaranjan Choudhury v. State of Bihar, (1987) 2 SCC 104: 1987 SCC (Cri) 287: AIR 1987 SC 856: 1987 Cri LJ 773.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt , JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1987]

(v) Sentence

See also '(13) Sentence/Fine/Compensation/Other punishment/relief', below

[10146] — Ss. 406 and 467 — Sentence reduced — Offence of forgery and criminal breach of trust by a government servant — Concurrent sentence of four years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 500, in default to rigorous imprisonment for six months awarded by trial Court — High Court reducing fine — Record not very clear on the offence of forgery committed by the accused — Supreme Court in view of the appellant's age and loss of government service and obscurity as to part played in forgery reducing the sentence to one year's rigorous imprisonment while maintaining the fine. Ramashraya Chakravarti v. State of M.P., (1976) 1 SCC 281: 1976 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1976 SC 392: (1976) 2 SCR 713: 1976 Cri LJ 334.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1975]

[10147] — S. 409 — Accused sentenced to a total period of 11 years' rigorous imprisonment in 4 cases for misappropriating money of Society as its sarpanch — Sentence not excessive. Ranchhod Lal v. State of M.P., AIR 1965 SC 1248: (1965) 2 SCR 283: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 253, 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, Raghubar Dayal and N. Rajagopala Ayyangar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1964]

[10148] — S. 409 — Conviction of cashier for temporary retention of provident fund money meant to be disbursed — On the peculiar facts of the case sentence reduced but fine maintained — Appellant directed to execute bond for good behaviour — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Ss. 5(1)(c) and 5(2). S. Natarajan v. State of Mysore, (1979) 4 SCC 542: 1979 SCC (Cri) 918: AIR 1980 SC 639: 1980 Cri LJ 447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1979]

[10149] — S. 409 — Conviction under — In view of the facts that the accused-appellant was likely to lose his service and had already undergone 6½ months' R.I. out of the total term of 2 years' R.I., his sentence reduced to the extent of the imprisonment already undergone and a fine of Rs 1000. Vishnu Datta Mishra v. State of M.P., (1979) 4 SCC 382: 1979 SCC (Cri) 993: AIR 1979 SC 825: 1979 Cri LJ 565.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-1978]

[10150] — S. 409 — Conviction under — Reduction of sentence — Entire amount (Rs 23,107) involved in criminal breach of trust replenished to person entitled — Hence, sentence of one year simple imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone. Bankupalli Chinnababu v. State, (2002) 9 SCC 352: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1193: AIR 2003 SC 4406.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-2000]

[10151] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Sentence — Accused, a public servant, convicted for collecting Rs 648 from villagers as house tax and dishonestly misappropriating or converting the said amount for his own use — Lower courts awarding sentence of 6 months' RI and a fine of Rs 1000 — In the circumstances of the case, sentence reduced to the period already undergone i.e. 4½ months' RI without disturbing the fine of Rs 1000 (Para 5). Bachchu Singh v. State of Haryana, (1999) 9 SCC 81: 1999 SCC (Cri) 365: AIR 1999 SC 2285: 1999 Cri LJ 3528.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Venkataswami and S.S.M. Quadri , JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-1999]

[10152] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — Sentence — Accused returning the money — Sentence reduced to imprisonment already undergone and fine imposed. Kassim Pillai Abdul v. State of Kerala, (1978) 4 SCC 481: 1979 SCC (Cri) 102: AIR 1978 SC 1081: 1978 Cri LJ 994.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1978]

[10153] — S. 409 — Offence of criminal breach of trust under — Provisions of S. 4, Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 do not apply. Som Nath Puri v. State of Rajasthan, (1972) 1 SCC 630: 1972 SCC (Cri) 359: AIR 1972 SC 1490: (1972) 3 SCR 497: 1972 Cri LJ 897.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, P. Jaganmohan Reddy and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1972]

(8)(v) Sentence (contd.)

[10154] — S. 409 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(1)(c) — Sentence — Misappropriation of Rs 52, 465.37 belonging to Govt. by the appellant who was Managing Director of the Corporation — In peculiar facts and circumstances of the case and in view of old age of the appellant and his health, sentence of one year reduced to the period already undergone — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c). R.V. Lyngdoh v. State (Delhi) Spl. Establishment, (1999) 2 SCC 645: 1999 SCC (Cri) 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-1999]

[10155] — S. 409 — Sentence — In a case where accused did not get any pecuniary advantage sentence of 3 months' R. I. and a fine of Rs 201 and in default R. I. for six weeks' was a proper sentence. Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 SCR 483: 26 Comp Cas 340: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, 1125: (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 49.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha , JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1956]

[10156] — S. 409 — Sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Sentence of imprisonment essential under S. 409 — Simple imprisonment for 15 days and fine of Rs 1500 in default whereof 6 months simple imprisonment, ordered by High Court — Appeal preferred by the convict before Supreme Court within the time granted by High Court for surrender — Offence took place in 1969 — Hence no purpose would be served in incarcerating the appellant at this stage — But since S. 409 leaves no choice with the court but to award some imprisonment besides fine, sentence reduced to the period of imprisonment, if any, already undergone or till rising of the court if no imprisonment undergone — Case remanded to verify fact of incarceration, if any, undergone. Jaydev Shrichand Danani v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 616: 1993 SCC (Cri) 429: AIR 1992 SC 2152.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1992]

[10157] — S. 409 — Sentence — Mitigating factors — CJM convicted respondent under S. 409 and sentenced him to undergo simple imprisonment for 6 months and imposed fine of Rs 1000 — Sessions Court affirmed the conviction and sentence — In revision, High Court acquitted the respondent — Order of acquittal set aside and conviction under S. 409 affirmed by Supreme Court in appeal — But having regard to facts that the offence had been committed 15 years back, respondent had deposited the entire amount (Rs 8000) before lodging of FIR, respondent might have been in custody for some time and respondent now aged about 60 years, held, interest of justice would be subserved if any substantial punishment is not awarded — Accordingly, a further fine of Rs 4000 imposed, apart from Rs 1000 imposed by trial court — In default of payment of the said amount respondent shall undergo simple imprisonment for three months (Paras 16 and 17). State of H.P. v. Karanvir, (2006) 5 SCC 381: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2006 SC 2211: 2006 Cri LJ 2917.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2006]

[10158] — S. 409 — Sentence — Mitigating factors — Misappropriation of wheat by Inspector in Food and Civil Supplies Department — In view of long lapse of time and loss of job sentence reduced to 6 months' R.I. — However, a fine of Rs 15,000 imposed to reimburse the State for loss incurred by it. Ranjit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1959: 1995 Cri LJ 3615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-1995]

[10159] — S. 409 — Sentence — Occurrence taking place in 1971 and the amount misappropriated being Rs 3604.85 p — Accused remaining in jail for more than two months — Sentence reduced to the period already undergone. Raj Singh v. State of U.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 500: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1992]

[10160] — S. 409 — Sentence — Offence under S. 409 proved but the appeal having been admitted about 7 years back and the accused having lost his job, sentence reduced to the period of imprisonment already undergone. Vasant Moghe v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 3 SCC 771: 1979 SCC (Cri) 868: AIR 1979 SC 1008: 1979 Cri LJ 885.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy , JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1978]

[10161] — S. 409 — Sentence of 2 years' RI with fine of Rs 2000 imposed against appellant under — Appellant already undergone 6 months' RI and paid the fine and later released on bail — Appellant also lost his job as a result of the conviction — SLP filed in 1979 decided in 1991 — On these facts held, ends of justice would be met if the sentence is reduced to the period already undergone. Vijay Digambar Lanjekar v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 8: 1991 SCC (Cri) 841.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1991]

[10162] — S. 409 — Sentence reduced — Appellant convicted on charge of embezzlement of Rs 8898.38 — High Court sentencing him to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 9000 out of which the embezzlement amount to be paid back, or on default, to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a further period of 6 months — Appellant depositing Rs 9000 during pendency of present appeal — Held, ends of justice would be met if appellant's sentence reduced to period already undergone provided he pays in addition, a fine of Rs 2000 — In default of payment of fine appellant shall undergo rigorous imprisonment for a further period of three months. Ved Prakash Handooja v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 596: 1974 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1974 SC 2336: 1975 Cri LJ 31.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-1974]

[10163] — S. 409 — Sentence reduced — Chances of repetition of offence remote — Circumstance for awarding a lenient sentence. Harihar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 89: 1972 SCC (Cri) 409: 1972 Cri LJ 707.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and S.C. Roy , JJ. [Date of decision: 7-9-1971]

[10164] — S. 409 — Sentence reduced — Money entrusted in the capacity as Sub-Postmaster retained for about two months — Accused undergoing more than one trial and seven years passed since the commission of the offence — Sentence reduced to imprisonment already undergone i.e. four weeks plus a fine of Rs 100. State of Punjab v. Amar Singh, Criminal Appeal No. 172 of 1957.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar and S.K. Das , JJ. [Date of decision: 21-5-1958]

[10165] — Ss. 409 and 420 — Misappropriation of money from bank — Sentence of one year RI — Accused-appellant subsequently remitting the entire amount to bank — Hence, the sentence imposed on him reduced to the period already undergone. Bonela Swaminatham v. State of A.P., (2001) 10 SCC 225: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1042: AIR 2000 SC 3578 (1): 2000 Cri LJ 4996 (2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2000]

[10166] — Ss. 409 and 467 — Sentence reduced — Public servant found guilty of embezzlement and forgery — Excessive sentence awarded to him — Minimised by Supreme Court

Where the accused, who was a public servant, was prosecuted and convicted for offences under Ss. 409 and 467, IPC and was sentenced to 7 years' and 4 years' rigorous imprisonment respectively for them, the Supreme Court, considering that if he had been prosecuted under the Prevention of Corruption Act II of 1947 the maximum sentence which would have been awarded to him would have been seven years' rigorous imprisonment though the special court trying him would have imposed upon him a substantial fine even to the extent of the amount embezzled by him, and keeping in view the circumstances of the case, found the sentences to be excessive reduced the sentences to those of three years' rigorous imprisonment each in regard to those offences. Mangleshwari Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1954 SC 715: 1954 Cri LJ 1797, 1801.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, Vivian Bose and N.H. Bhagwati , JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1954]

[10167] — Ss. 409, 467 and 471 — Accused convicted for offence punishable with life imprisonment not entitled to benefit of probation — But where accused acquitted six years ago on being given such benefit by the High Court, Supreme Court's interference would not be in the interest of justice — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c) read with S. 5(2) — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 — S. 4. State of Gujarat v. V.A. Chauhan, (1983) 2 SCC 64: 1983 SCC (Cri) 319: AIR 1983 SC 359: 1983 Cri LJ 692(1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1983]

Som Nath Puri v. State of Rajasthan, (1972) 1 SCC 630, 1972 SCC (Cri) 359, followed

[10168] — Ss. 409 and 477-A — Sentence reduced — In view of the accused having secured alternative employment and the circumstances of the case, held, the imprisonment of 19 days already undergone would be sufficient. Ganeshbhai Sankarbhai v. State of Gujarat, (1972) 2 SCC 73: 1972 SCC (Cri) 647: AIR 1972 SC 1618: 1972 Cri LJ 1029.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy, K.K. Mathew and G.K. Mitter, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1972]

[10169] — Ss. 409/34 — Sentence — While upholding the conviction, sentence of 3 years' imprisonment reduced to that of 5 months already undergone in view of the fact that the accused was made a scapegoat, being a new and inexperienced recruit to the department. Bhagwan v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 1 SCC 610: 1980 SCC (Cri) 312: AIR 1979 SC 1120: 1979 Cri LJ 924.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-1979]

(9) Criminal breach of trust by banker, merchant, factor, broker or agent, etc. (S. 409)

See also '(8)(v) Criminal breach of trust by public servant (S. 409) — Corruption cases — Sentence', above

See also under 'Ss. 415-420 — Cheating', below

[10170] — S. 406 — Jurisdiction of Special Court under 1992 Act — Accused involved in an offence relating to transactions in securities during the relevant period — Held, can be tried by Special Court and not by a regular criminal court even though he is not a notified person as per S. 3(2) — Effect of notification under S. 3(2) — Also transfer of such cases to Special Court would be automatic — Notification by custodian not essential — Special Court (Trial of Offences Relating to Transactions in Securities) Act, 1992 — Ss. 7, 3(2) & (4) and 9-A

The scheme of Section 7, in the light of the Preamble of the Act and the main purpose for enactment of the Act, appears to be that all criminal proceedings pertaining to prosecutions in connection with the accused involved in transactions in securities during the relevant period will lie before the Special Court and not before ordinary courts as the section starts with a non obstante clause stating that notwithstanding anything contained in any other law, only Special Courts will have exclusive jurisdiction to try such offences. It is of course true that once the Custodian notifies the name of any person in the Official Gazette as per sub-section (2) of Section 3 then certain civil consequences regarding attachment of his properties would follow as per Section 3 sub-section (3) automatically and that would empower the Custodian to deal with such properties in such manner as Special Court may direct as per sub-section (4) of Section 3 of the Act. On such notification of the person concerned the Custodian would also get jurisdiction and power to cancel contracts and agreements entered into by such notified person after following the procedure of Section 4 sub-section (1). It is also true that on and from the commencement of the Special Court (Trial of Offences Relating to Transactions in Securities) (Amendment) Act, 1994 as laid down by Section 9-A pending suits against such notified persons contemplated by the special provisions would also stand transferred for adjudication to the Special Court. Thus so far as civil suits are concerned the proceedings pending on the commencement of Amending Act of 1994 would stand transferred provided in the meantime after the main Act came into force in 1992 such defendants have got notified under Section 3 sub-section (2) of the Act. But that is a scheme pertaining to civil actions against notified persons. The offence referred to in sub-section (2) of Section 3 which is within the sweep of Section 7 of the Act must be an offence committed by any person and must have the following two characteristics:

1. Such offence must relate to transactions in securities; and

2. Such offence should be alleged to have been committed between 1-4-1991 and on or before 6-6-1992.

Once these two requirements are satisfied the Special Court will get jurisdiction to try such offences and, therefore, consequently to try the accused concerned who are alleged to have committed such offences cognizable by the Special Court. When the principal accused is the notified person even non-notified accused can be tried jointly with such principal accused as per Section 8 if they were jointly involved in such offences. But even that apart if the accused is the sole accused and he is not a notified person and if any criminal case is pending against such an accused in any court when the Act came into force then even such a criminal case provided two requirements of sub-section (2) of Section 3 qua such offence as seen earlier are satisfied will automatically stand transferred to the Special Court as laid down by the latter part of Section 7. If the Special Court can try transferred criminal cases which were filed prior to 6-6-1992 in regular courts wherein the accused were not notified persons as such cases would stand transferred to it for trial automatically on coming into force of the Act, then of necessity it must be held that even if such criminal cases are filed after coming into force of the Act, against non-notified persons involved in similar type of offences they could be tried by the Special Court. Any other view would result in creation of two conflicting types of jurisdictions for the Special Court functioning as per the same Section 7.

On a conjoint reading of Section 3 and its relevant provisions, therefore, it must be held that once the Custodian notifies a person in the Official Gazette under sub-section (2) of Section 3 he gets the power and jurisdiction to deal with such person's properties and transactions as laid down under Section 3 sub-section (4) and Section 4 and in such a case even the civil suits of notified persons would stand transferred as per Section 9-A of the Act. But so far as criminal proceedings are concerned even if the accused is not notified still the Special Court will have jurisdiction under Section 7 to deal with the offences alleged to have been committed by such an accused if the earlier mentioned two basic requirements of Section 3 sub-section (2) are satisfied. Minoo Mehta v. Shavak D. Mehta, (1998) 2 SCC 418: 1998 SCC (Cri) 645: AIR 1998 SC 831: (1998) 91 Comp Cas 895.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-1998]

Canara Bank v. Nuclear Power Corpn. of India Ltd., 1995 Supp (3) SCC 81; Kudremukh Iron Ore Co. Ltd. v. Fairgrowth Financial Services Ltd., (1994) 4 SCC 246, distinguished

See also (2001) 6 SCC 16 at p. 22 where this decision has been criticised and explained

[10171] — Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379 — Held, on facts, offences not made out against financiers in hire-purchase agreement — Recovery of possession of goods by owner-financier as per terms of the hire-purchase agreement, does not amount to a criminal offence — Such an agreement is an executory contract of sale, conferring no right in rem on the hirer until the conditions for transfer of the property to him have been fulfilled — Held, on facts, where respondent hirer had defaulted in instalment payments of motor vehicle and agreement specifically provided that appellant financiers were entitled to repossess the vehicle in case of default and their agents were authorised to enter any premises for the purpose, and appellants had actually recovered possession of the vehicle, no offence was made out against the appellants — High Court erred in dismissing their petition under S. 482 CrPC challenging issue of summons on complaint filed under Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379 IPC — Hire Purchase Act, 1972, Ss. 8 and 20 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

The respondent S, entered into a hire-purchase agreement dated 3-5-1994 with the appellants, owners of a non-banking financial institution, in respect of a motor vehicle. Rs 3,02,884 was the total consideration agreed to be paid for the vehicle; S initially paid Rs 69,308 and agreed to pay the balance in 36 monthly instalments of Rs 8400 each. A dispute developed at some stage and on 3-12-1998 S filed a criminal complaint alleging that during the night of 16-9-1996, when the vehicle had been in the custody of a motor mechanic, the appellants had taken it away; they had thus committed offences under Sections 406/420/120-B IPC. Cognizance was taken by the Magistrate and summons issued to the appellants.

The appellants filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court seeking to have the proceedings quashed. They averred in the petition that S had defaulted in making the instalment payments, that as of 1-9-1996 the outstanding amount was Rs 1,34,887; they had therefore been obliged to terminate the hire-purchase agreement. They also stated that S surrendered the vehicle to them. The High Court, however, dismissed the petition under Section 482 CrPC holding that it was possible to make out offences, particularly under Section 379 IPC, on the basis of the allegations in the complaint.

In appeal before the Supreme Court, it was submitted on behalf of the appellant financiers that in recovering possession of the vehicle, they had only exercised their right under the hire-purchase agreement as owners of the vehicle; that no offence could be made out from the allegations in the complaint. The agreement, which was produced in court, contained a clear provision that the appellants could repossess the vehicle in case of default by the hirer-purchaser; the appellants or their agents were also entitled to enter any premises for the purpose of inspection or of repossession and were specifically exempted from civil or criminal liability at the instance of the hirer.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Hire-purchase agreements are executory contracts under which the goods are let on hire and the hirer has an option to purchase in accordance with the terms of the agreement. These types of agreements were originally entered into between the dealer and the customer and the dealer used to extend credit to the customer. But as hire-purchase schemes gained in popularity, the dealers who were not endowed with liberal amount of working capital found it difficult to extend the scheme to many customers. Then the financiers came into the picture. The finance company would buy the goods from the dealer and let them to the customer under hire-purchase agreement. The dealer would deliver the goods to the customer who would then drop out of the transaction leaving the finance company to collect instalments directly from the customer. Under hire-purchase agreement, the hirer is simply paying for the use of the goods and for the option to purchase them. The finance charge, representing the difference between the cash price and the hire-purchase price, is not interest but represents a sum which the hirer has to pay for the privilege of being allowed to discharge the purchase price of goods by instalments. (Para 5)

In the present case agreement executed by the parties is to the effect that the hirer would not become the owner of the property until he pays the entire instalments. (Para 10)

The whole case put forward by the respondent complainant is to be appreciated in view of the stringent terms incorporated in the agreement. If the hirer himself has committed default by not paying the instalments and under the agreement the appellants have taken repossession of the vehicle, the respondent cannot have any grievance. The respondent cannot be permitted to say that the owner of the vehicle has committed theft of the vehicle or criminal breach of trust or cheating or criminal conspiracy as alleged in the complaint. When the agreement specifically says that the owner has got a right to repossess the vehicle, there cannot be any basis for alleging that the appellants have committed criminal breach of trust or cheating. (Para 11)

The plea that the appellants have committed theft is without any basis as the appellants have taken repossession of the vehicle in exercise of their right under the agreement. There may be instances where the owner of the goods may commit theft of his own goods as indicated in Illustration (k) of Section 378 IPC. But in the instant case, the owner repossessing the vehicle delivered to the hirer under the hire-purchase agreement will not amount to theft as the vital element of "dishonest intention" is lacking. The element of "dishonest intention" which is an essential element to constitute the offence of theft cannot be attributed to a person exercising his right under an agreement entered into between the parties as he may not have an intention of causing wrongful gain or to cause wrongful loss to the hirer. (Paras 12 and 13)

The hire-purchase agreement in law is an executory contract of sale and confers no right in rem on the hirer until the conditions for transfer of the property to him have been fulfilled. Therefore, the repossession of goods as per the term of the agreement may not amount to any criminal offence. (Para 17)

In the present case the agreement specifically gave authority to the appellants to repossess the vehicle and their agents to enter any property or building wherein the motor vehicle was likely to be kept. Under the hire-purchase agreement, the appellants have continued to be the owners of the vehicle and even if the entire allegations against them are taken as true, no offence was made out against them. The learned Single Judge seriously flawed in his decision and failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in him by not quashing the proceedings initiated against the appellants. (Para 17). Charanjit Singh Chadha v. Sudhir Mehra, (2001) 7 SCC 417: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1557: AIR 2001 SC 3721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

R.M. Goode: Hire Purchase Law & Practice, 2nd Edn., p. 846; Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; K.A. Mathai v. Kora Bibbikutty, (1996) 7 SCC 212: 1996 SCC (Cri) 281, relied on [10172] — S. 409 — Advocate and client — Correspondence and account showing that matter was a civil one — Compliant of breach of trust by client's son against the advocate without authority from his father — Maintainability. Vasudeo Kulkarni v. Surya Kant Bhatt, (1977) 2 SCC 304: 1977 SCC (Cri) 349: AIR 1977 SC 1331: 1977 Cri LJ 1000: (1977) 3 SCR 109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1977]

[10173] — S. 409 — Agent — Director of a company is its agent. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1841: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

[10174] — S. 409 — Entrustment of or dominion over property — Bank director not only an agent but a trustee having dominion or control over the bank property which comes into his hand — Such 'property' is a chose in action — De facto managing director committing misappropriation of property without substituting in lieu thereof securities of equal amount, held, liable under. Shivnarayan Laxminarayan Joshi v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 2 SCC 465: 1980 SCC (Cri) 493: AIR 1980 SC 439: 1980 Cri LJ 388.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1979]

[10175] — S. 409 — Persons (like public servants, bankers, etc.) made liable under S. 409 — Duties of such persons — Held, the same are of highly confidential character, involving great power of control over property entrusted to them — Breach of trust by such persons may often result in serious public or private calamity — High morality is expected of these person — They are supposed to discharge their duties honestly (Para 146). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869; Raghunath Anant Govilkar v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 11 SCC 289: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 130; Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. S.K. Roy, (1974) 4 SCC 230: 1974 SCC (Cri) 399; Chelloor Mankkal Narayan Ittiravi Nambudiri v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 478, relied on

[10176] — S. 409 — Requirements of — Expression "in the way of his business" — Meaning of

What S. 409, IPC requires is that the person alleged to have committed criminal breach of trust with respect to any property be entrusted with that property or with dominion over that property in the way of his business as an agent. The expression "in the way of his business" means that the property is entrusted to him, "in the ordinary course of his duty or habitual occupation or profession or trade". He should get the entrustment or dominion in his capacity as agent. In other words, the requirements of this section would be satisfied if the person be an agent of another and that other person entrusts him with property or with any dominion over that property in the course of his duties as an agent. A person may be an agent of another for some purpose and if he is entrusted with property not in connection with that purpose but for another purpose, that entrustment will not be entrustment for the purposes of S. 409, IPC if any breach of trust is committed by that person.

A different expression "in the way of business" has been used in place of the expression "in his capacity" to make it clear that entrustment of property in the capacity of agent will not, by itself, be sufficient to make the criminal breach of trust by the agent a graver offence than any of the offences mentioned in Ss. 406 to 408, IPC. The criminal breach of trust by an agent would be a graver offence only when he is entrusted with property not only in his capacity as an agent but also in connection with his duties as an agent. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1840: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

[10177] — S. 409 — Retrial — Prosecution of a practising lawyer by a client under S. 409 — An important document alleged to be in accused's handwriting alleged to be forged by the accused — Complainant not producing expert evidence — Trial court holding the document not proved and acquitting the accused — High Court ordering retrial in the appeal against acquittal and directing the Magistrate to afford an opportunity to the complainant to produce expert evidence — Order against well established rules of criminal jurisprudence is erroneous

The accused, a practising lawyer, was prosecuted by the complaint, his client, under S. 409, IPC for misappropriating a sum of Rs 5000. The prosecution case was based on a letter alleged to have been written by the accused. The accused challenged the document as a forgery in material parts, but the complainant did not take any steps to get an expert on handwriting examined. The trial Court acquitted the accused. In appeal by the complainant against the order of acquittal the High Court ordered a retrial and directed the Magistrate to give an opportunity to the complainant to adduce the evidence of a handwriting expert, in order to establish the genuineness of the questioned document. The accused appealed to the Supreme Court.

Held:

An accused person should not be placed on trial for the same offence more than once, except in very exceptional circumstances. Though the complainant had the fullest opportunity of adducing all the evidence that would be necessary to prove the charge against the accused person, but he did not adduce expert evidence and also did not pray for examination of an expert. The prosecution took its chance of having a decision in its favour on the evidence adduced by it before the trial Court. That Court was not satisfied that evidence was adequately reliable to bring the charge home to the accused and acquitted him. On appeal the High Court could take a different view of the evidence, reverse the judgment and convert the order of acquittal into an order of conviction. It was however not justified to have put the accused to the botheration and expense of a second trial simply because the prosecution did not adduce all the evidence which should and could have been brought before the Court of first instance. Simply because the accused happened to be a lawyer would not be a ground for subjecting him to harassment a second time. Therefore, the order of retrial passed by the High Court was entirely erroneous. Abinash Chandra Bose v. Bimal Krishna Sen, AIR 1963 SC 316: (1963) 3 SCR 564: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 261.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1962]

[10178] — Ss. 409, 405, 411 and 120-B — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients — Acting contrary to directions of person who had entrusted the property — Accused 4, a registered stockbroker, purchasing mutual fund securities in the name of a bank and later on selling them — Sale contrary to terms subject to which securities were issued but otherwise there was no violation of any statutory provision — Neither name lending bank nor issuing institution objecting to the sale — Held, Accused 4 being the real owner of securities, did not commit criminal breach of trust as the property sold was his own — For the same reason, charge under S. 411, of receiving/retaining stolen property, held, also not made out against him — Securities were purchased by another financial institution — Accused 3 was an officer in that institution — Accused 3 also acquitted of similar charges against him — Further held, Accused 3 could not also be convicted under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 for the reason that purchase of securities of Rs 33 crores could not be made without authorisation from higher authorities and the transaction was legal —Special Court (Trial of Offences Relating to Transactions in Securities) Act, 1992 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(c), 13(1)(d) and 13(2)

Accused 4, a registered stockbroker, purchased Canara Bank mutual fund units, CANCIGO, worth Rs 33 crores in the name of Andhra Bank and its subsidiary, Andhra Bank Financial Services Ltd. Interest on these units was credited to Accused 4's account. He sold these units before completing their lock-in period of one year to CANFINA, a subsidiary of Canara Bank. The sale was contrary to terms and conditions of mutual fund but otherwise there was no violation of any statutory provisions. CANFINA deducted amount of Rs 25 crores plus, which Accused 4 owed to them, and released rest of the amount to Accused 4.

It was also found that CANFINA purchased mutual fund from Accused 4 on the directions of Accused 3 who was an officer in CANFINA.

Accused 4 was charged of criminal breach of trust under Section 405 and for receiving/retaining stolen property under Section 411 of the Penal Code.

Accused 3 was also charged for criminal breach of trust under Sections 405 and 409 of the Penal Code, and also under Sections 13(1)(c), 13(1)(d) and 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988.

Both the accused appealed to the Supreme Court against their conviction.

Main issue was whether Accused 4, who had purchased mutual fund units in the name of Andhra Bank and its subsidiary, had committed criminal breach of trust by selling the units to CANFINA. The Supreme Court while deciding this issue took note of the fact that the Supreme Court in an earlier case, Canbank Financial Services Ltd. case, (2004) 8 SCC 355, had held that Accused 4 had a transferable interest in the securities purchased in the name of Andhra Bank and its subsidiary (Accused 4 was Respondent 2 in that case).

Allowing the appeals and acquitting both Accused 3 and 4, of the abovementioned charges, Held :

For all practical purposes, CANCIGO units worth Rs 33 crores were purchased by Accused 4, and he transferred these units to CANFINA. Canara Bank Mutual Fund, CBMF, did not raise any objection in respect of transfer of the CANCIGO units by Accused 4. If at all, it was for CBMF to raise any objection but they did not raise any objection to transfer of CANCIGO units. CANFINA had succeeded in getting the proceeds of these CANCIGO units. Therefore, no offence of criminal breach of trust is committed by Accused 4. He has not acted contrary to the direction of any person who had entrusted these units to him and it is proved that it was Accused 4 himself who was apparent owner of these units. (Paras 18 and 19)

So long as CANFINA has no grievance or complaint against Accused 4, that he acted contrary to their directions and accepted CANCIGO units and paid money to Accused 4, no offence is made out against Accused 3 either of criminal breach of trust or conspiracy. (Para 21)

In the circumstances, no ingredient of criminal breach of trust is made out against either of the appellants. (Para 23)

The prosecution also could not prove any conspiracy by these accused persons to commit any criminal acts. So long as there was no such evidence, the offence of conspiracy is not proved against these appellants. (Para 24)

So long as the prosecution admits that CANCIGO units worth Rs 33 crores were purchased by making use of money owned by Accused 4, they were not a stolen property in his hands. Neither Andhra Bank nor Andhra Bank Financial Services Limited has any case that these CANCIGO units were stolen by Accused 4. As the offence of criminal breach of trust is not made, the conviction of Accused 4 under Section 411 is not sustainable and is liable to be quashed. So also, Accused 3 is not liable for the conspiracy to commit offence under Section 411 IPC. (Para 25)

CANCIGO units were worth Rs 33 crores and they were accepted with the proper authorisation by the higher authorities in CANFINA. It is highly improbable to believe that appellant-Accused 3 on his own decided to accept CANCIGO units worth Rs 33 crores without any instructions. CANFINA did not file any complaint alleging any unauthorised transaction carried out by him. It has already been held by the Supreme Court in Canbank Financial Services Ltd. that entire transaction was legal and CANFINA was entitled to the proceeds of these CANCIGO units and not the "Custodian" under the Act. Therefore, Accused 3 is also not guilty of offence punishable under Sections 13(1)(c) and 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. (Para 26). S. Mohan v. CBI, (2008) 7 SCC 1: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 1: (2008) 106 Cut LT 360.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2008]

Canbank Financial Services Ltd. v. Custodian, (2004) 8 SCC 355, relied on

[10179] — Ss. 409 and 408 — Agent or servant — Accused as promoter of a society lawfully received amount of share money and embezzled the same — Accused is an agent and not a servant — S. 409 and not S. 408 shall apply

Having regard to the nature of the duties of the appellant as the Secretary of the Society, it is clear that his status was that of an agent and not a servant. Moreover, whether the appellant should be charged under S. 408 or S. 409 is of no importance in the present case, as the sentence imposed on him under S. 409 viz., four years' rigorous imprisonment could be maintained even under S. 408. Chandi Prasad Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 149: (1955) 2 SCR 1035: 1956 Cri LJ 322, 325: (1956) 1 MLJ (SC) 88: 1956 ALJ 153.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Vivian Bose and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-1955]

[10180] — Ss. 409, 420 and 405 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot hold a parallel trial in exercise of power under — If offence prima facie falls under the Penal Code, launching of prosecution cannot be thwarted by High Court under S. 482 merely because penal action open under any other statute — Cognizance of offence taken by Magistrate under S. 409 IPC against managing director and directors (appellants) of a public limited company on the basis of charge-sheet submitted by CBI and other material prima facie disclosing dishonest misappropriation of share and debenture moneys collected from public — Application filed by appellants under S. 482 seeking their discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 69, 63 and 73 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

Though the Companies Act contains provisions regarding the issuance of prospectus, applications for shares and allotment thereof and provides different checks over the misuse of the fund collected from the public for issuance of shares or debentures, but where persons issue prospectus and collect moneys from public assuring them that they intend to do business with the public money for their benefit and the benefit of such public, but the real intention is to do no business other than collecting the moneys from the public for their personal gain, such persons cannot be said to be immune from the provisions of the Penal Code. The persons managing the affairs of such company cannot use the juristic entity and corporate personality of the company as a shield to evade themselves from prosecution for offences under the Penal Code, if it is established that primary object of the incorporation and existence of the Company is to defraud the public.

But, at the same time, while taking cognizance of alleged offences in connection with the registration, issuance of prospectus, collection of moneys from the investors and the misappropriation of the fund collected from the shareholders which constitute one offence or other under the Penal Code, court must be satisfied that prima facie an offence under the Penal Code has been disclosed on the materials produced before the court. For prosecution for offences under the Penal Code the complainant has to make out a prima facie case against the individuals concerned, regarding their acts and omissions which constitute the different ingredients of the offences under the Penal Code. There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished.

In the facts of the present case itself, the prosecution has to prove that the appellant as promotors or directors, had dishonest intention since the very beginning while collecting the moneys from the applicants for the shares and debentures or that having collected such moneys they dishonestly misappropriated the same. The ingredients of the different offences under the Penal Code need not be proved only by direct evidence: they can be shown from the circumstances of a particular case that the intention of the promotors or the directors was dishonest since the very inception or that they developed such intention at some stage, for their wrongful gain and causing wrongful loss to the investors. All the circumstances and the materials to prove such a charge have to be collected during the investigation and inquiry and ultimately have to be produced before the court at the stage of trial for a verdict as to whether the ingredients of offence in question have been established on behalf of the prosecution.

In the present case the quashing of the prosecution pending against the appellants only on the ground that it was open to the applicants for shares to take recourse to the provisions of the Companies Act, cannot be accepted. It is a futile attempt on the part of the appellants, to close the chapter before it has unfolded itself. It will be for the trial court to examine the matter on the materials produced on behalf of the prosecution. That exercise cannot be performed either by the High Court or by the Supreme Court. The trial court should proceed with the case in accordance with law.

The High Court should not, while exercising power under S. 482 of the Code, usurp the jurisdiction of the trial court. The power under S. 482 of the Code has been vested in the High Court to quash a prosecution which amounts to abuse of the process of the court. But that power cannot be exercised by the High Court to hold a parallel trial, only on basis of the statements and documents collected during investigation or inquiry, for purpose of expressing an opinion whether the accused concerned is likely to be punished if the trial is allowed to proceed. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[10181] — Ss. 409, 420 and 424 r/w S. 37 — Quashing of proceedings — On facts, allowed — Huge quantities of paddy alleged to have been diverted by Accused 1 and made to disappear with active assistance of Accused 2 to 9 and further that he purchased properties in name of benamis with their assistance — No specific role ascribed to appellants (Accused 2, 3, 6, 7 and 8) — Allegations were bald and vague — Hence, held, no useful purpose would be served by allowing the prosecution to continue — Proceedings against them liable to be quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

A-1 was the sole proprietor of a rice mill. Accused 2 to Accused 5 were the family members of Accused 1, whereas Accused 6 to Accused 8 were the son-in-law, the daughter of Accused 1 and the brother of the son-in-law of Accused 1 respectively. Accused 2 and Accused 3 were the two sons of Accused 1 who are aged about 28 and 25 years respectively. Accused 1 was purchasing paddy from the local paddy growers in the village and he issued vouchers to some of them, while to others promissory notes ranging from Rs 30,000 to Rs 3 lakhs were executed as security towards the purchase of paddy. He had also obtained Rs 30 lakhs as loan from SBI. However, his business declined and consequently he owed debts to the banks, several financial institutions and to the public and his liabilities aggregated to Rs 89,51,600. Therefore, on 24-6-2005, he filed an insolvency petition. Consequent upon filing of the aforesaid insolvency petition several representations were made to the District Collector by the villagers making allegations against Accused 1 and his family members. A charge-sheet was filed under Ss. 406, 420 and 424 r/w S. 37 IPC against Accused 1 to 9. In the said charge-sheet the police stated that Accused 1 to Accused 9, developed an evil idea by colluding themselves and fraudulently directed the loans and gold secretly in benami names in order to defraud the persons who supplied paddy to them. It was further stated that during the year 2005 Accused 1 purchased paddy crop from several farmers saying that he would pay the cost of paddy as per the existing market value. They blindly believed Accused 1 and unloaded huge quantities of paddy produced by them and entrusted the same with Accused 1. But Accused 1 diverted part of the paddy to Accused 5 who was running rice mill on the ground of inadequate power supply and secretly sold it for his own use. It was further stated that 10 days before that he had also diverted huge quantities to "NRI Industries". Eventually, Accused 1 gained unlawfully to the tune of Rs 1,20,00,000 by cheating the abovementioned paddy suppliers.

Accused 1 to Accused 9 including the appellants herein (Accused 2 and Accused 3) jointly filed petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint and charge-sheet on the ground that it was only a civil liability arising out of breach of contract by Accused 1 in payment of price of paddy and, therefore, it was improper on the part of the police to come to their aid to recover the money under a transaction by filing criminal cases and that the said criminal complaint itself was a counterblast to the insolvency petition filed by Accused 1. However, High Court observed that accused had collected paddy from various agriculturists worth Rs 1,20,00,000 by making them to believe that the cost of paddy would be paid immediately but after having collected the paddy, they failed to pay the amount to the agriculturists and thereby they cheated those persons. So, it was held that there was prima facie material against all the accused i.e. Accused 1 to Accused 9. Accordingly, the High Court dismissed the criminal petition. Hence, the present appeal.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

When at an initial stage a prosecution is asked to be quashed, the test to be applied by the court is as to whether the uncontroverted allegations as made in the complaint filed prima facie establish the offence. It is also for the court to take into consideration any special feature that may appear in a particular case while considering whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. This is so on the basis that the court cannot be utilised for any oblique purpose. (Para 31)

In the instant case, on perusing the report filed with SHO, and the charge-sheet submitted by him, it is found that most of the allegations in the aforesaid charge-sheet are mainly directed against Accused 1. (Para 33)

The allegations made against the other accused are that Accused 1 diverted huge quantities of paddy to NRI Industries, and made it disappear with the active assistance of Accused 2 to Accused 9 and that he purchased lands in the name of benamis with the assistance of Accused 6 and Accused 2. These are the only allegations made against the role of the present appellants, namely, Accused 2 and 3 and Accused 6, 7 and 8. Without ascribing any specific role to any one of them the aforesaid allegation appears to be very bald and vague. Similarly the allegations made against Accused 2 and Accused 3 that they had helped their father in purchasing some property is also very vague as no specific role is ascribed to them. (Paras 34 and 35)

Hence, no useful purpose would be served by allowing the prosecution to be continued against them. Proceedings as against the appellants herein i.e. Accused 2 and 3 and Accused 6 to 8 quashed. However, no opinion expressed so far as the allegations made in the said charge-sheet against Accused 1 and the other accused persons are concerned. Further clarified that observations were only with respect to the criminal proceedings and none of these observations should be construed as an opinion so far civil liability, if any, is concerned. (Paras 36 and 37). Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma , JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2009]

[10182] — S. 409 and S. 420 r/w S. 120-B — GPA-holder accepting factum of cancellation of GPA but thereafter executing the same — High Court while dismissing revision petition observing that it was possible that the appellants were duped by the attorney who knew that his powers had been revoked but concealed the fact, but such arguments could be validly advanced by petitioners for establishing their bona fides during trial — Hence, held, no interference with impugned judgment called for — CrPC, 1973, S. 228 (Paras 2, 17 and 18)

In February 1987 complainant and his five family members executed general power of attorney (GPA) at Canada in favour of one M which was subsequently registered at Ferozepur. The GPA-holder sold a plot of land belonging to complainant to appellants for Rs 5 lakhs, and the sale deed was duly registered. In December 1989 appellants suddenly came to know that complainant had filed a suit for declaration that said GPA-holder had no authority to sell the property and/or to permanently alienate and dispose of the said property. An ex parte injunction order/status quo was granted on 2-12-1989 though the appellants in absence of knowledge of the same had got the sale deeds registered on 5-12-1989.

On 14-6-1990 an order was passed in the suit restraining appellants from dispossessing the complainant from the said property and to maintain status quo, whereas in fact appellants were already in possession of that property since 7-11-1989. In appeal filed by the appellants the learned ADJ ordered status quo with regard to ownership and possession of property.

On 30-6-1995, complainant lodged a complaint with Deputy Commissioner, who was related to him. The Commissioner summoned the appellants at his residence and asked them to cancel the sale deeds and to concede the claim of complainant, threatening them with dire consequences.

On 31-8-1995 after about six years FIR was lodged against appellants. On 29-5-1996 a report was submitted to SSP stating that FIR was intended to pressurise the appellants and no offence appeared to have been committed by them. In spite of that charge-sheet was filed against appellants. Charges were framed against appellants under Section 120-B read with Section 409 IPC and Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC against appellants. Criminal revision was filed challenging maintainability of charges framed against them which was dismissed by the High Court by impugned order holding that there was sufficient ground to presume that unrebutted evidence of complainant constitutes triable offences. It was also found that details of property in respect of which it was executed were missing and though the power of attorney prima facie appeared to be a valid document, nevertheless on a plain reading thereof left one with uncertain feeling as regard its impact. Hence, the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Chaman Lal v. State of Punjab, (2009) 11 SCC 721: (2009) 2 ECrN 1057 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2009]

Mohd. Khalid v. State of W.B., (2002) 7 SCC 334: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1734, relied on American Jurisprudence, Vol. II, Section 23, p. 559; Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edn., Vol. 11, p. 44, para 58, cited

(10) Criminal breach of trust re dowry articles/stridhan

[10183] — S. 405 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients — Taking away of dowry articles by husband and in-laws — S. 405 IPC vis-à-vis special legislation contained in Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — Such an offence, where alleged, held on facts, should be tried under the special legislation rather than general provisions contained in the Penal Code — Further held, if any article was given by way of dowry, the question of its entrustment on behalf of wife would not arise — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4

So far as the allegation in regard to criminal breach of trust is concerned, it related to the dowry articles. No allegation has been made that the appellants are guilty of commission of offence punishable under Section 3 and/or 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act. If any dowry has been given, the same would attract the provisions of the special Act in preference to the general statute. Furthermore, if any article is given by way of dowry, the question of entrustment thereof for or on behalf of the bride would not arise. (Para 30)

Allegations made in FIR merely disclose that at the time of leaving the house, the appellants had taken with them certain articles. The said articles ought to be in lawful possession of Respondent 3 (wife). The offence of theft might have been committed. But when they are in joint possession, even no offence of theft would also be made out. (Para 31). Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620: 2009 Cri LJ 3462.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[10184] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients of — Prerequisites for offence under — Whether made out — Offering of sum as compensation for divorce by mutual consent — Effect of — Allegations made in complaint against appellants (parents of husband) of misappropriation of her stridhan by respondent — Tenability — Held, allegation that A-2 (mother-in-law) had taken all the gifts/cash given by the invitees/guests attracts definition of breach of trust under S. 405 IPC — Entrustment of some properties and/or dominion over them, if any, attributed only against A-2 — No definite case of entrustment of any property made against A-1 — Offering of Rs 25 lakhs for grant of divorce by mutual consent as compensation to complainant, per se does not constitute offence under S. 406 IPC — Any gift made to bridegroom or his parents, whether in accordance with any custom or otherwise also would not constitute any offence under S. 406 IPC — Case under S. 406 IPC made out only against A-2 — Hence, directed that proceedings could continue against her

The offence of criminal breach of trust as defined in Section 405 IPC may be held to have been committed when a person who had been entrusted in any manner with the property or has otherwise dominion over it, dishonestly misappropriates it or converts it to his own use, or dishonestly uses it, or disposes it of, in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which the trust is to be discharged, or of any lawful contract, express or implied, made by him touching such discharge, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do. (Para 53)

The essential ingredients for establishing an offence of criminal breach of trust as defined in Section 405 and punishable under Section 406 IPC with sentence for a period up to three years or with fine or with both, are:

(i) entrusting any person with property or with any dominion over property;

(ii) the person entrusted dishonestly misappropriating or converting to his own use that property; or dishonestly using or disposing of that property or wilfully suffering any other person so to do in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust. (Para 54)

The only allegation which brings the case within the purview of Section 406 is that Appellant 2 had taken all the gifts/cash given by the invitees/guests. Technically, this allegation would attract the definition of breach of trust within the meaning of Section 405 IPC. Entrustment of some properties and/or dominion over them, if any, therefore, is attributed only against Appellant 2. Other allegations made against the appellants are general in nature. Entrustment is said to have been made to the appellants and/or their son. No definite case of entrustment of any property has been made against Appellant 1. He is only said to have given back to the complainant's parent the entire clothes and jewellery. No demand was made by the respondent. (Para 56)

Offering of Rs 25 lakhs for grant of divorce by mutual consent as compensation to the complainant, which is three times of the amount of the value of "stridhana" and/or amount spent by the complainant's father per se does not constitute any offence of Section 406 of the Code. Any gift made to the bridegroom or his parents, whether in accordance with any custom or otherwise also would not constitute any offence under Section 406 of the Code. Prima facie a case under Section 406 IPC has been made out only against Appellant 2. (Paras 57 and 59)

The summoning order dated 21-3-2005 passed against the appellants except Appellant 2 is set aside. It is clarified that the proceedings can continue only against Appellant 2, that too in respect of Section 406 IPC only. (Para 61). Bhaskar Lal Sharma v. Monica, (2009) 10 SCC 604: (2009) 161 DLT 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2009]

Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; State of Punjab v. Pritam Chand, (2009) 16 SCC 769; Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620, relied on [10185] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Dowry articles constituting stridhan property given by parents of Hindu woman to the husband and his close relatives at the time of marriage — Dishonest misappropriation or conversion to own use of those articles by husband and others — Whether by itself amounts to criminal breach of trust or a separate agreement for specific entrustment of those articles essential to constitute such offence

Per majority

The concept of stridhan property of a married woman becoming a joint property of both the spouses as soon as she enters her matrimonial home and continues to be so until she remains there or even if there is a break in the matrimonial alliance, is in direct contravention of Hindu Law of Saudayika. Husband does not acquire joint interest in the property.

The husband is only custodian of the stridhan property entrusted to him. The entrustment is just like something which the wife keeps in a bank and can withdraw any amount whenever she likes without any hitch or hindrance and the husband cannot use the stridhan for his personal purposes unless he obtains the tacit consent of his wife. Even if the personal property of the wife is jointly kept it would be deemed to be expressly or impliedly kept in the custody of the husband. Simple entrustment of stridhan without creating any rights in the husband except putting the articles in his possession does not entitle him to use the same to the detriment of his wife without her consent. The husband has no justification for not returning the said articles as and when demanded by the wife nor can he burden her with losses of business by using the said property which was never intended by her while entrusting possession of stridhan.

The view that as remedy under civil law was available, S. 406 IPC was inapplicable cannot be accepted. A criminal prosecution would not be completely barred merely because a civil remedy is available. Criminal law and civil law can run side by side. The two remedies are not mutually exclusive but clearly coextensive and essentially differ in their content and consequence. The object of the criminal law is to punish an offender who commits an offence against a person, property or the State for which the accused, on proof of the offence, is deprived of his liberty and in some cases even his life. This does not, however, affect the civil remedies at all for suing the wrongdoer in cases like arson, accidents, etc. If the husband dishonestly misappropriates the stridhan property of his wife, though kept in his custody, that would not bar prosecution under S. 406 IPC and would not render the ingredients of S. 405 IPC nugatory or abortive.

The mere factum of the husband and wife living together does not entitle either of them to commit a breach of criminal law and if one does then he/she will be liable for all the consequences of such breach. In the case of stridhan property also, the title of which always remains with the wife, if the husband or any other member of his family who are in possession of such property, dishonestly misappropriate or refuse to return the same, they will be liable to punishment for the offence of criminal breach of trust under Ss. 405 and 406 IPC.

Per Varadarajan, J.

The most important ingredient of an offence under S. 406 IPC, which is alleged by the wife against her husband and other accused-respondents in her complaint in the present case is the entrustment of the dowry articles to the respondents and their dishonest conversion thereof to their own use. Whether the allegation made in the complaint amounts to entrustment as required by law to make out an offence under S. 406 IPC has to be examined in the background of what usually happens in Hindu marriages, namely, placing of the articles presented to the bride in the presence of the elders and others assembled for the occasion and removal thereof after the function is over. The minimum requirement for the purposes of S. 405 IPC in such cases is a specific separate agreement whereby the property of the wife or husband was entrusted to the husband or wife and/or his or her close relations. In absence of such separate agreement for specific entrustment it would not be possible to draw an inference of entrustment of custody or dominion over the property of one spouse to the other and his or her relations so as to attract the stringent provisions of S. 406 IPC, otherwise there would be disastrous effects and consequences on the peace and harmony which ought to prevail in matrimonial homes. The appropriate remedy would appear to be by way of a civil suit where there is scope for the parties to the marriage coming together at the instance of relations, elders and well-wishers and patching up their differences. Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1985 SC 628: 1985 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A. Varadarajan[2] and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1985]

[10186] — Ss. 405 and 406 — Entrustment of stridhana property to the husband or any other member of the family — Dishonest misappropriation or conversion to own use of that property by the husband or such other person by itself amounts to criminal breach of trust — Any further special agreement to establish that the property was given to the husband or other member of the family need not be established — Expression "entrustment" — Meaning of — When wife left matrimonial home or driven therefrom proof of entrustment of stridhana property would depend upon circumstances of the each case — On facts, a prima facie case of entrustment has been made out by the appellant-wife as the stridhana properties not returned to her by the husband

When the wife entrusts her stridhana property with the dominion over that property to her husband or any other member of the family and the husband or such other member of the family dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property or wilfully suffers any other person to do so, he commits criminal breach of trust. The essential ingredients for establishing an offence of criminal breach of trust as defined in Section 405 and punishable under Section 406 IPC with sentence for a period up to three years or with fine or with both, are: (i) entrusting any person with property or with any dominion over property; (ii) the person entrusted dishonestly misappropriating or converting to his own use that property; or dishonestly using or disposing of that property or wilfully suffering any other person so to do in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust. The expression "entrustment" carries with it the implication that the person handing over any property or on whose behalf that property is handed over to another, continues to be its owner. Entrustment is not necessarily a term of law. It may have different implications in different contexts. In its most general significance, all its imports is handing over the possession for some purpose which may not imply the conferment of any proprietary right therein. The ownership or beneficial interest in the property in respect of which criminal breach of trust is alleged to have been committed, must be in some person other than the accused and the latter must hold it on account of some person or in some way for his benefit.

In view of the finding that stridhana property is the exclusive property of the wife on proof that she entrusted the property or dominion over the stridhana property to her husband or any other member of the family, there is no need to establish any further special agreement to establish that the property was given to the husband or other member of the family. It is always a question of fact in each case as to how the property came to be entrusted to the husband or any other member of the family by the wife when she left the matrimonial home or was driven out therefrom. No absolute or fixed rule of universal application can be laid down in that behalf. It requires to be established by the complainant or the prosecution, depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case, as to how and in what manner the entrustment of the stridhana property or dominion over her stridhana came to be made to the husband or any other member of the family or the accused person, as the case may be. Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S.B. Majmudar and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-1996]

Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180, affirmed

[10187] — S. 406 — Complaint under, by wife against her husband, father-in-law, mother-in-law and in-laws — Allegation of entrustment of articles and cash found to be sufficient for taking cognizance of offence — High Court not justified in quashing the complaint pending before the Magistrate — However, there being no justification for arraying, other than the husband, father-in-law and mother-in-law, the other in-laws as accused the order of the High Court as against in-laws not disturbed. Radha Rani v. Parmod Kumar Oberoi, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 491: 1995 SCC (Cri) 396.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-1991]

[10188] — S. 406 — Entrustment of stridhan property to husband does not amount to partnership — Hence case under S. 406 maintainable

Per Fazal Ali and Mukharji, JJ.

It cannot be said that a bare act of keeping stridhan property in the custody of the husband constitutes a partnership and, therefore, a criminal case under S. 406 IPC is not maintainable. In a partnership the wife must be some clear and specific act indicate that the stridhan which has been entrusted to the husband is to be used for a partnership business and the losses of the firm, if any, would have to be shared by both. In other words, one of the essential conditions of a partnership firm is that every partner must have dominion over the property by virtue of the fact that he is a partner. A pure and simple entrustment of stridhan without creating any rights in the husband excepting putting the articles in his possession does not entitle him to use the same to the detriment of his wife without her consent. The husband has no justification for not returning the said articles as and when demanded by the wife nor can he burden her with losses of business by using the said property which was never intended by her while entrusting possession of stridhan. On the allegations in the complaint, the husband is no more and no less than a pure and simple custodian acting on behalf of his wife and if he diverts the entrusted property elsewhere or for different purposes he takes a clear risk of prosecution under S. 406 of the IPC. On a parity of reasoning, it is manifest that the husband, being only a custodian of the stridhan of his wife, cannot be said to be in joint possession thereof and thus acquire a joint interest in the property. When the essential conditions of a partnership do not exist the mere act or factum of entrustment of stridhan would not constitute any co-ownership or legal partnership as defined under S. 4 of the Partnership Act. Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1985 SC 628: 1985 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A. Varadarajan[2] and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1985]

[10189] — S. 406 — Quashment not considered advisable due to stage proceedings had reached — However, directions issued to protect interests of appellant-accused — Allegations pertaining to criminal breach of trust in relation to diamond encrusted heavy gold pendant, chain and earring set against appellant who was foster sister of complainant's husband, and a married lady coming from wealthy background — Held, undoubtedly allegations made are extremely wild and disgusting but how far they can be used to meet requirements of S. 406 IPC is a moot question — However, since FIR relating thereto has been lodged and cognizance also taken, only interests of appellant can be protected — Directed that appellant would not be required to attend the proceedings unless specifically directed by court to do so and that too in case of extreme necessity; that no coercive step shall be taken against her and that she shall be granted bail by court trying the case if it decides to try the offence by framing charge and court to be careful while considering framing of charge — FIR pertaining to S. 406 IPC not quashed (Paras 14 to 16). Vijeta Gajra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 11 SCC 618: AIR 2010 SC 2712: 2010 Cri LJ 3841: (2010) 92 AIC 76 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2010]

[10190] — Ss. 406, 415 and 420 — Criminal proceedings launched to harass husband and in-laws due to matrimonial differences — Matrimonial dispute arising in Canada whereas FIR lodged in India — No prima facie case of cheating or criminal breach of trust made out — Superintendent of Police after conducting investigation concluding that husband and in-laws had not committed any offence, yet charge-sheet filed against appellants — Held, High Court ought to have exercised its discretion under S. 482 CrPC in favour of appellants — Proceedings in question, quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

Appellant 1 (husband) and Respondent 3 (wife) were married in India but settled in Canada. Sometime in early 2006, matrimonial differences arose between Appellant 1 and Respondent 3 and the parties started living separately. Appellant 1 moved a divorce petition against Respondent 3 sometime around 1-5-2006. Before that, Respondent 3's father came to India and lodged complaint against appellants sometime around 21-4-2006 under Sections 406 (criminal breach of trust) and 420 (cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property) IPC, inter alia alleging that Appellant 1 married Respondent 3 solely for the purpose of getting entry into Canada and settling there, and that appellants had taken away dowry articles belonging to Respondent 3. The Superintendent of Police, after investigation, concluded that no allegations was proved against appellants and therefore the case should be closed, yet a charge-sheet was filed against appellants.

The appellants moved High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing criminal proceedings but High Court refused to do so. The issue involved was whether any offence was prima facie made out against appellants, or the High Court ought to have exercised its discretionary jurisdiction under Section 482 in favour of appellants.

Allowing the appeal and quashing the proceedings,

Held :

It is not a case where the court has to undertake a difficult task of appreciating the evidence brought on record by the parties. The submission that marriage between Appellant 1 and Respondent 3 was solemnised only for the purpose of getting the family settled at Canada is far-fetched. For the purpose of constituting an offence for criminal breach of trust and/or cheating, the ingredients thereof as contained in Sections 405 and 415 respectively must be borne out from the records. (Paras 21 and 22)

The larger part of offence, if any, has been committed only in Canada. It is difficult to comprehend why Respondent 3's father had to come from Canada to Jalandhar (in India) to lodge an FIR. Respondent 3 and the first informant do not say that the inquiry report submitted by the Superintendent of Police on the representation made by Appellant 2 was incorrect. It has also not been stated that as to on what material, the charge-sheet had been submitted. There is no doubt in the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case that allegations contained in the FIR had been made with an ulterior motive to harass the appellants. Continuance of criminal proceeding against them would, therefore, amount to abuse of process of the court. (Para 32)

Upon taking a holistic view of the matter vis-à-vis statutory provisions, it has to be held that the appellants have made out an exceptional case to invoke the inherent jurisdiction of High Court under Section 482 of the Code. It was obligatory on the part of the High Court to exercise its discretionary jurisdiction to prevent abuse of process of the court. (Para 35). Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620: 2009 Cri LJ 3462.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; V.Y. Jose v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 3 SCC 78: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 996; Hira Lal v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 89, relied on

Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, Criminal Miscellaneous No. M-40020 of 2007 decided on 13-12-2007 (P&H), reversed

[10191] — Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A — Quashing of charge-sheet — Factors to be considered — Possibility of discharge under S. 239 CrPC — Nature of cases being warrant cases — Relevance — FIR by appellant wife alleging that her respondent husband married another lady in presence of other accused persons, from which a child was born and that appellant was subjected to cruelty for refusing to consent to her abortion and was driven out from her matrimonial home — Charge-sheet under Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A IPC filed — High Court quashed charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC because of non-fulfilment of ingredients constituting offences under these sections — Sustainability — Held, while considering application for quashing of charge-sheet, allegations made in FIR and materials collected during course of investigation are required to be considered — Truthfulness or otherwise of allegation is not fit to be gone into at this stage as it is always a matter of trial — High Court ought not to have interfered after submission of charge-sheet and even before Magistrate examining as to whether accused persons deserved to be discharged under S. 239 CrPC — When a report is submitted to Magistrate, he is required to be prima facie satisfied that facts disclosed therein constitute an offence — Magistrate is not bound by conclusion of investigating agency in police report i.e. in charge-sheet and it is open to him, after exercise of judicial discretion, to take view that facts disclosed in report do not constitute any offence for taking cognizance — Quashing of Ss. 406 and 494 IPC from charge-sheet, even before exercise of discretion by Magistrate under S. 190 CrPC, undesirable — Moreover, all offences are triable by Magistrate and quashing of charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC had not resulted in exonerating accused persons from facing trial itself — Matter would have been different had offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC been triable as a sessions case — Herein, High Court ought to have allowed aforementioned provisions of CrPC their full play — For all these reasons, High Court erred in holding that charge-sheet does not reveal ingre- dients constituting offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC — Hence, impugned judgment set aside (Paras 13 to 20). K. Neelaveni v. State, (2010) 11 SCC 607: AIR 2010 SC 3191: 2010 Cri LJ 2819: (2010) 2 ECrN 541 (SC): (2010) 88 AIC 58 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2010]

[10192] — Ss. 406, 498-A and 114 — Quashing of complaint — Grounds — Vague allegations — Matters to be alleged — Held, for lodging a proper complaint mere mentioning of relevant sections and language of those sections not sufficient — Particulars of offence committed by each accused and role played by them in committing that offence need to be stated — In instant case, allegations related to dowry demand and misbehaviour against husband and parents-in-law (appellants) of complainant — However, said complaint was vague as it did not show which accused had committed what offence and exact role played by appellants in commission of offence(s) — Allegations against husband were somewhat precise, but he had already expired — Held, in such circumstance allowing prosecution to continue against aged appellants would be abuse of process of law — Besides, despite service of notice complainant neither appearing nor engaging counsel to represent her — Hence, said complaint liable to be quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 9 to 12). Neelu Chopra v. Bharti, (2009) 10 SCC 184.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2009]

[10193] — Ss. 406, 498-A r/w S. 34 — Transfer petition — Disposed of in terms of settlement arrived at in between parties — CrPC, 1973, S. 406 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13. Rajesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 199: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 242: 2009 Cri LJ 3041.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2009]

[10194] — S. 406 r/w Ss. 4 and 6 of Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Marriage gifts including ornaments received from wife's parents must be restored to the wife while driving her out of the matrimonial home — Failure to do so would constitute offence punishable under S. 406, IPC r/w Ss. 4 and 6 of the Act. Madhu Sudan Malhotra v. Kishore Chand Bhandari, 1988 Supp SCC 424: 1988 SCC (Cri) 854: 1988 BLJR 360.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-1987]

(11) Criminal breach of trust by partner

[10195] — S. 405 — Dominion over property — Partnership assets in the hand of partner — Mere existence of dominion over property not sufficient — Must be established that dominion was result of entrustment by special agreement between parties

Upon the plain reading of S. 405, IPC it is obvious that before a person can be said to have committed criminal breach of trust it must be established that he was either entrusted with or entrusted with dominion over property which he is said to have converted to his own use or disposed of in violation of any direction of law, etc. Every partner has dominion over property by reason of the fact that he is a partner. This is a kind of dominion which every owner of property has over his property. But it is not dominion of this kind which satisfies the requirements of S. 405. In order to establish "entrustment of dominion" over property to an accused person the mere existence of that person's dominion over property is not enough. It must be further shown that his dominion was the result of entrustment. The prosecution must establish that dominion over the assets or a particular asset of the partnership was, by a special agreement between the parties, entrusted to the accused person. If in the absence of such a special agreement a partner receives money belonging to the partnership he cannot be said to have received it in a fiduciary capacity or in other words cannot be held to have been "entrusted" with dominion over partnership properties.

If the working partner was authorised to carry on the work of recovery of the dues of the partnership and to spend the money for business of the partnership i.e. if the money was required for the business of partnership it was not obligatory upon the accused to deposit it in the bank. The appellant working partner cannot be said to have been guilty of criminal breach of trust even with respect to the dues realised by him from certain person and in not depositing them in the bank as alleged by the prosecution. Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433: (1965) 2 SCR 429: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 431.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1964]

Bhuban Mohan Das v. Surendra Mohan Das, AIR 1951 Cal 69: 52 Cri LJ 723: ILA (1952) 2 Cal 23, approved

Jagannath v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Bom 57: 33 Cri LJ 317 and Queen v. Okhoy Coomar Shaw, 13 Beng LR 307, overruled

Followed in AIR 1968 SC 700: 1968 Cri LJ 803

[10196] — S. 406 — Dispute between partners of a firm — Criminal breach of trust alleged by one partner against the other — Magistrate issued process to the accused — Ingredients to be satisfied

That the offence of criminal breach of trust under S. 406 is not in respect of property belonging to the partnership but is an offence committed by the person in respect of property which has been specially entrusted to such a person and which he holds in fiduciary capacity. Debabrata Gupta v. S.K. Ghosh, (1970) 1 SCC 521: 1970 SCC (Cri) 221.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-1970]

[10197] — S. 406 — Partnership property in the hands of partner — Liability of partner for criminal breach of trust in respect of such property — It must be shown that the property was specially entrusted to the accused under a special contract and he held that property in fiduciary capacity under the Partnership firm is not a legal entity but a legal mode of doing business by all the partners. Until the firm is dissolved as per law and the accounts settled, all the partners have dominion in common over the property and funds of the firm. Only after the settlement of accounts and allotment of respective shares, a partner becomes owner of his share. However, criminal breach of trust under Section 406 is not in respect of the property belonging to the partnership firm, but is an offence committed by a person in respect of the property which has been specially entrusted to such a person under a special contract and he holds that property in fiduciary capacity under special contract. If he misappropriates the same, it is an offence. (Para 8)

In the instant case it is not the case of the complainant that the accused persons were entrusted with the dominion of the property of the firm in their capacity as partners of the complainant firm. On the other hand the complainant firm entered into a contract with the accused firm, entrusted a film for exhibition and for accounting the sale proceeds and to return the film. They had neither accounted for, nor returned the film. Under these circumstances it cannot be said that the imputations alleged against the appellant have been done in his capacity as a partner of the firm. Whether the offence has been made out, whether he is liable and what are the defences open to him are not matters at this stage for consideration. It is for the trial court to proceed with the trial and to deal with according to law. Therefore, the complaint cannot be quashed. (Para 10). Anil Saran v. State of Bihar, (1995) 6 SCC 142: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1051: AIR 1996 SC 204.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1995]

(12) Trial, Proof and Other issues

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vols. 18, 19 and 20, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

Synopsis

(i) Acquittal justified 906
(ii) Appeal/Revision 906
(iii) Appreciation of evidence and proof 908
(iv) Bail 909
(v) Circumstantial evidence 911
(vi) Double jeopardy 911
(vii) Expert evidence 912
(viii) Investigation, Cognizance, Summons, etc. 912
(ix) Joint trial/Re-trial/Consolidation/ Transfer of cases 915
(x) Jurisdiction 917
(xi) Limitation 918
(xii) Other issues 919
(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings 919
(xiv) Witnesses 933

(i) Acquittal justified

[10198] — Ss. 406 and 120-B — Acquittal — Held, evidence against the appellant being of flimsy and of unreasonable nature which does not establish the guilt, conviction and sentence recorded by High Court set aside. Ramanlal Baldevdas Shah v. State of Gujarat, 1992 Supp (2) SCC 547: 1992 SCC (Cri) 838: AIR 1992 SC 1916: 1992 Cri LJ 3164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-1992]

(ii) Appeal/Revision

[10199] — S. 406 — Criminal breach of trust of monies belonging to Cooperative Society — Appellant found guilty and sentenced — Concurrent findings of fact by two Courts cannot be interfered with in special leave appeal — Constitution of India, Art. 136

The concurrent findings of the Courts below on question of fact cannot be interfered with in appeal under Art. 136 of the Constitution. Shukla Labhshanker Maganlal v. State of Gujarat, (1970) 3 SCC 220: 1971 SCC (Cri) 38.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, V. Bhargava and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1970]

[10200] — S. 408 — Contention that the accused did not receive money as part of duty as a clerk, not raised in High Court — Question being one of fact Supreme Court not to permit the raising of the question. Madan Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1590: (1967) 3 SCR 439: 1967 Cri LJ 1401.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Bachawat and J.M. Shelat, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1967]

[10201] — Ss. 408 and 462 — Revision against remand of case for fresh trial by first appellate court in appeal against conviction — Proper mode of disposal — Need for examination of case on merits — First appellate court remanding case for fresh trial and re-examination to fill lacunae in prosecution version — High Court in revision against said remand order holding that remand is impermissible in law and setting aside the remand order but confirming conviction by trial court but without any examination on merits — Unsustainability — Held, if remand for fresh trial is not permissible, High Court ought to have examined case on merits since first appellate court did not examine case on merits — Matter remitted to High Court for decision on merits — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 401, 374 and 386 (Para 8). Rameshwar Prasad v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 471: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 508: (2009) 77 AIC 220 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, V.S. Sirpurkar and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2009]

[10202] — Ss. 408, 468 and 477-A — Revisional jurisdiction of High Court — Nature and scope of — Cannot be equated with appellate jurisdiction — Reappreciation of evidence not permissible unless it has resulted in gross miscarriage of justice — On facts, High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in interfering with the conviction by reappreciating the evidence and by not examining several items of evidence relied upon by Sessions Judge in confirming the conviction — CrPC, 1973 — S. 401

In its revisional jurisdiction, the High Court can call for and examine the record of any proceedings for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order. In other words, the jurisdiction is one of supervisory jurisdiction exercised by the High Court for correcting miscarriage of justice. But the said revisional power cannot be equated with the power of an appellate court nor can it be treated even as a second appellate jurisdiction. Ordinarily, therefore, it would not be appropriate for the High Court to reappreciate the evidence and come to its own conclusion on the same when the evidence has already been appreciated by the Magistrate as well as the Sessions Judge in appeal, unless any glaring feature is brought to the notice of the High Court which would otherwise tantamount to gross miscarriage of justice.

In the instant case the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in interfering with the conviction of the respondent by reappreciating the oral evidence. The High Court also committed further error in not examining several items of evidence relied upon by the Additional Sessions Judge, while confirming the conviction of the respondent. In this view of the matter, the impugned judgment of the High Court is wholly unsustainable in law. State of Kerala v. Puttumana Illath Jathavedan Namboodiri, (1999) 2 SCC 452: 1999 SCC (Cri) 275: AIR 1999 SC 981: 1999 Cri LJ 1443.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1999]

[10203] — S. 409 — Dismissal of criminal revision — Non-appearance of counsel of accused — Propriety — Appellant-accused convicted and sentenced for offence under S. 409 IPC for alleged misappropriation of cash — Appeal dismissed upholding the conviction and sentence — In criminal revision in terms of S. 397 r/w Ss. 401 and 482 CrPC, as none appeared for appellant-accused, High Court dismissed revision petition after hearing counsel for the State — Submissions that as counsel for appellant-accused in High Court was appointed as counsel for the State, therefore, he could not have appeared for appellant — Also, as the position was not brought to the notice of appellant, therefore, he should not be made to suffer — Held, it is not in dispute that counsel appearing for appellant in criminal revision was appointed counsel for the State and so could not have appeared for appellant — Also, no material to show that appellant after having knowledge of such appointment of his counsel failed to appoint another lawyer — In the facts of the case, held, impugned order of High Court set aside and matter remitted to High Court for hearing afresh — Counsel for appellant undertaking to engage another counsel for appellant before High Court — Since matter was pending before High Court for nearly seven years, hence, High Court requested to dispose of criminal revision expeditiously if possible — CrPC, 1973, S. 397 r/w Ss. 401 and 482 (Paras 3, 4, 6 and 7). Satin Chandra Pegu v. State of Assam, (2006) 12 SCC 446: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 92: AIR 2007 SC 457: 2007 Cri LJ 309: (2007) 49 AIC 432 (SC): (2006) 204 ELT 517.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-2006]

(iii) Appreciation of evidence and proof

[10204] — Ss. 405 and 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Burden of proof — Initial burden on prosecution to prove entrustment of the property to accused — Actual manner of misappropriation of the property by accused need not be proved by it — Once the initial burden is discharged by prosecution, onus would lie on accused to prove how the property entrusted to him was dealt with by him — Amount deposited by PW with respondent Postmaster for purchase of NSCs but the same having not been purchased, complaint made by PW with postal authorities — Respondent having come to know about initiation of inquiry by postal authorities, deposited the full amount with interest in two instalments in post office — Held, trial court rightly convicted respondent under S. 409 — High Court in revision, misdirected itself in taking the view that prosecution failed to prove misappropriation of the amount by respondent — Contention that no question was put to respondent while examining him under S. 313 CrPC as to whether the amount was given to him for his personal use or it was converted by him for his personal use, held, misconceived since while examining under S. 313 CrPC trial court was only required to ask such question which had been brought on record against the accused — CrPC, 1973, S. 313

The respondent, a Postmaster, was holding an office of public trust. The complainant who was a teacher entrusted a certain amount to the respondent for the purpose of purchasing national savings certificates. As soon as the amount was received by the respondent on behalf of the postal authorities, it became public money. It was required to be utilised for the purpose for which the same was handed over to the respondent. The respondent being a public officer had the requisite knowledge that the amount carried interest as he had deposited the amount in two instalments along with a sum by way of interest. The respondent thought himself liable to pay the said amount with interest, so as to reimburse to the complainant the amount to which he was entitled by way of interest for depositing the said amount. The High Court erred in taking the view that the second ingredient of Section 405 IPC i.e. misappropriation of the amount by the respondent-accused had not been proved. The High Court, in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, completely misdirected itself in opining that it was obligatory on the part of PWs to state in their complaint that the accused committed criminal misappropriation with the intention to utilise the amount for his personal use. The very fact that the respondent retained with him the entrusted amount is not disputed. If he did not utilise the amount for the purpose for which the same had been deposited, an offence must be held to have been committed. It was not necessary for the prosecution to bring on record material to show as to how the respondent had utilised the amount. In view of the admitted fact, it was for the respondent himself to prove the defence raised by him that the entire amount had not been paid to him by the complainant. (Paras 8 to 10)

The actual manner of misappropriation, it is well settled, is not required to be proved by the prosecution. Once entrustment is proved, it was for the accused to prove as to how the property entrusted to him was dealt with in view of Section 405 IPC. If the respondent had failed to produce any material for this purpose, the prosecution should not suffer therefor. (Para 11)

It is not possible to accept the further contention that no question was put to the respondent while he was being examined under Section 313 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, with a view to give him an opportunity to explain whether the amount was given to him for his personal use or he converted the money for his personal use. While examining the accused under Section 313 CrPC, the trial court is merely required to ask such question which has been brought on record as against the respondent. The respondent in fact had admitted the entire prosecution case for all intent and purport. The entire evidence which was adduced on behalf of the prosecution was made known to the accused. In his statement under Section 313 CrPC, he accepted that he had received a sum of Rs 8000 from the complainant and he had deposited the said amount together with interest, in two instalments. He has merely reiterated his defence, that the complainant had not paid to him the entire sum of Rs 8000, which has not been accepted by the trial court. Therefore, the High Court committed a manifest error in arriving at a finding that there has been infraction of the mandatory provisions of Section 313 CrPC. (Paras 13 and 14)

For the aforesaid reasons, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained and it is set aside accordingly. (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Karanvir, (2006) 5 SCC 381: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2006 SC 2211: 2006 Cri LJ 2917.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2006]

N. Bhargavan Pillai v. State of Kerala, (2004) 13 SCC 217: 2005 SCC (Cri) 142, relied on

[10205] — S. 409 — Court must adopt uniform standard in weighing circumstantial evidence

Where the question arose as to the responsibility for embezzlement as between the accused (the Civil Nazir) and his officer (Subordinate Judge) the Court cannot adopt varying standards as between the accused and the Subordinate Judge in weighing the circumstances against them. Bhagat Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1954 SC 621: 1954 Cri LJ 1645.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1954]

(iv) Bail

[10206] — Ss. 405, 406, 408, 409, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B — Bail — Entitlement to — Large economic scam in bank — Huge amounts advanced to persons of dubious antecedents without taking steps to verify their creditworthiness in violation of applicable banking procedures and regulations — Accused-petitioner, a higher authority in that bank — Considering the facts and circumstances of the case, held, petitioner not entitled to be released on bail — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 439 & 437 — Banking Regulation Act, 1949, Ss. 18, 24 and 35-A — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Para 16). Rameshchandra Nandlal Parikh v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 1 SCC 732: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 481: AIR 2006 SC 915: (2006) 194 ELT 140: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1365: 2006 Cri LJ 964.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, C.J. and B.N. Srikrishna , J. [Date of decision: 13-1-2006]

[10207] — Ss. 406, 409, 420 and 120-B — Right to bail — Petitioner in jail for more than ten years — Need to come out to defend himself in forty-eight criminal cases pending in six different States and repay the amount for which the criminal cases had been instituted — Depositors and investors had instituted cases against him in his capacity as ex-MD and ex-Director of the company concerned for commission of offences punishable under Ss. 406, 409 and 420 r/w S. 120-B IPC and S. 138 of NI Act — Bail with conditions and undertakings granted — Court and investigating agency given liberty to take action if petitioner misused the liberty granted to him — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India, Arts. 21 and 32

As many as forty-eight pending cases in six different States had been instituted by different depositors and investors against the writ petitioner in his capacity as ex-MD and ex-Director of the company concerned for commission of offences punishable under Sections 406, 409 and 420 read with Section 120-B IPC and Section 138 of the NI Act. The petitioner as an undertrial prisoner remained in jail for more than ten years (i.e. since August 1998) before he approaching the Supreme Court under Article 32 for enforcement of fundamental rights guaranteed under Articles 14, 19, 20 and 21.

Allowing the appeal partly,

Held :

The petitioner deserves some relief. Although various cases are pending in different courts, the hard reality that the petitioner is in jail since more than ten years cannot be lost sight of. If the petitioner comes out of jail he may be able to make arrangement for repayment of amount and also to defend cases registered against him. On the overall facts and circumstances, the ends of justice would be served if appropriate court is directed to release him on bail on his executing a bond to the satisfaction of such court and the arresting officer. Assurance/undertaking of the writ petitioner-accused required to be filed for appearance in the court proceedings, surrender of passport (if any) to the police till final disposal of the case and liberty to the court concerned and the investigating agency to take required action if the petitioner misuses the liberty granted herein. (Paras 24, 31 and 32)

So far as consolidation of cases and trial of all the cases in one court is concerned such relief cannot be granted. Even in exercise of inherent powers the Supreme Court cannot direct an authority to act contrary to law even if it has ample jurisdiction to pass orders under Article 142 of the Constitution for doing complete justice between the parties in any case or matter. No retrospective effect has been given to Section 436-A CrPC. (Paras 31, 27 and 30). Pramod Kumar Saxena v. Union of India, (2008) 9 SCC 685: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 866: (2008) 70 AIC 4 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2008]

V.K. Sharma v. Union of India, (2000) 9 SCC 449: 2001 SCC (Cri) 467; State of Punjab v. Rajesh Syal, (2002) 8 SCC 158: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1867, relied on

V.K. Sharma v. Union of India, (2000) 9 SCC 449: 2001 SCC (Cri) 467, held overruled

[10208] — Ss. 406, 409, 420, 439, 471, 473 and 120-B — Anticipatory bail — Considerations/ Grounds — Indispensability of specialised treatment to accused suffering from several ailments (if deprived may lead to death of appellant-accused) and parity (as all forty-nine co-accused had been released on bail) — Although appellant

(12)(iv) Bail (contd.)

in disregard of law, not cooperating with investigation, whereby proceedings under Ss. 70 and 82 CrPC initiated, on facts, held, interest of justice would be served if anticipatory bail is granted subject to depositing Rs 40 lakhs with Bank in liquidation — Banking Regulation Act, 1949, S. 46 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 438, 70 and 82

An FIR was lodged against the appellant and thirteen other co-accused for alleged commission of offences punishable under Sections 406, 409, 420, 439, 471, 473, 120-B IPC and Section 46 of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949. The impugned order of the High Court rejected the appellant's plea of illness in his second application under Section 438 CrPC on the ground that the appellant, in disregard of law, had neither surrendered before the investigating officer nor extended cooperation in the investigation. Therefore, a proceedings under Sections 70 and 82 CrPC had also been initiated against the appellant.

Allowing the appeal partly,

Held :

On the facts and in the circumstances of the case and, more particularly, having regard to the health of the appellant, interest of justice would be served if the appellant is enlarged on anticipatory bail subject to certain conditions. There are as many as forty-nine accused, who were arrested and each one of them has already been enlarged on bail. According to the report of the government doctor the appellant is severely obese weighing 120 kg and he is not able to do his activities of daily living without at least two assistants. He is absolutely bedridden due to severe osteoarthritis below knee, lumbar canal stenosis, osteoporosis, diabetes and obesity and that he needs special toilet and bathroom. He has danger of having bedsores, pressure sores without specialised treatment and if left untreated, the diseases may lead to his death. Prognosis is not going to improve further due to increasing age and servile changes. (Paras 6 to 8)

The appellant is directed to deposit a sum of Rs 40 lakhs with the Bank in liquidation. (Para 10). Sureshchandra Ramanlal v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 7 SCC 591: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 212: (2008) 67 AIC 14 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and J.M. Panchal , JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2008]

[10209] — Ss. 406, 409, 420, 467, 471 and 120-B — Grant of bail, with stringent conditions — Interference with by Supreme Court — When warranted — Financial scam involving huge amount — High Court by impugned judgment granting bail to Respondent 1 accused of committing fraud of an unprecedented scale to tune of crores of rupees, imposing stringent conditions taking into consideration readiness and willingness on his part to make payment of Rs 2384 lakhs in instalments — Submission by appellant Bank that High Court erred in doing so insofar as it failed to take into consideration that total amount involved in the scam was huge viz. to tune of Rs 107 crores, and that in any event keeping in view offer made by appellant, he should at least be directed to pay Rs 41 crores — Held, power of the superior courts to enlarge an accused on bail is not in dispute — High Court while enlarging the first respondent on bail, taking into consideration the materials on record, had imposed stringent conditions which had not been contravened by him — Even if some contraventions had been made, the same could be brought to the notice of High Court — Further, submission that he may be directed to pay at least a sum of Rs 41 crores cannot be accepted because subject-matter of FIR was only Rs 8 crores — Besides, it is well settled that courts while granting bail cannot impose unreasonable conditions — Thus, in absence of any material brought on record that Respondent 1 had not complied with conditions imposed on him by High Court, impugned judgment cannot be interfered with — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 437 and 439 (Paras 14 to 16). M.M. Cooperative Bank Ltd. v. J.P. Bhimani, (2009) 8 SCC 727: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 937.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2009]

Fida Hussain Bohra v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 5 SCC 150: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 624; Ramathal v. Inspector of Police, (2009) 12 SCC 721; I. Glaskasden Grace v. Inspector of Police, (2009) 12 SCC 769, relied on [10210] — Ss. 406, 420, 467 and 120-B — Interim bail — Grant of — Propriety — Accused conspired in the siphoning off of the funds of a cooperative bank — He undertaking to deposit Rs 15 lakhs immediately and Rs 35 lakhs within six or eight months — He had been in jail for about 22 months — In these circumstances, held, accused to be released on interim bail for a period of six months — High Court to consider continuance of said bail, subject to further developments in the matter — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 439 and 437 — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Para 3). Babubhai Ratilal Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 12 SCC 536.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-2005]

[10211] — Ss. 406/420 — Anticipatory bail — Grant of, on unreasonable condition — Impropriety of — FIR against appellant-accused under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Anticipatory bail granted to him, subject to deposit of Rs 15 lakhs in form of FDR in the name of trial court — Affirmed by High Court — Sustainability — Imposition of such condition, held, unreasonable, hence, set aside — Anticipatory bail granted on modified conditions — CrPC, 1973, S. 438 (Paras 7 and 8)

Having regard to the facts and circumstances of the present case, the imposition of condition to deposit the sum of Rs 15 lakhs in the form of FDR in the trial court is an unreasonable condition and, therefore, the said condition is set aside as a condition precedent for granting anticipatory bail to the appellant-accused. (Para 7)

On the other hand, it is directed that on executing a bond to the tune of Rs 25,000 with two solvent sureties to the satisfaction of the Magistrate concerned, and further that the accused shall make himself available for interrogation whenever is required and the accused should surrender his passport immediately to the Magistrate concerned where the matter is pending and would not leave this country without appropriate permission from the court, he would be entitled to the order granting him anticipatory bail. (Para 8). Amarjit Singh v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2009) 13 SCC 769: (2002) 96 DLT 59.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2002]

[10212] — Ss. 406/420/34 — Bail — Where appellants, charged with misappropriating Rs 75,000, had been in custody for 9 months and the earlier High Court order was that if trial did not commence within six months, prayer for bail could be renewed, held, case for grant of bail had been made out — CrPC, 1973 — S. 437 (Para 4). Ram Narayan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 55: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1157: AIR 2000 SC 1945.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-2000]

[10213] — Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468, 471/465 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B — Interim bail — Grant of during pendency of appeal — Grounds for — Appellant convicted under Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468, 471/465 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B IPC and S. 13(2) r/w Ss. 13(1)(c) & (d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 and sentenced to imprisonment for four years by trial court — High Court rejecting his application for bail observing that he may renew his prayer for bail after serving half sentence — Appellant in jail for nearly two years, and no possibility of his appeal being heard in near future — Hence, interim bail granted to him — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(c) & (d) r/w S. 13(2) — CrPC, 1973, S. 389 (Paras 1, 4 and 5). Dinesh Kumar Sinha v. State of Jharkhand, (2009) 6 SCC 628: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 102: 2009 Cri LJ 2994.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu , JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2009]

(v) Circumstantial evidence

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vols. 18, 19 and 20, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[10214] — S. 409 — Circumstantial evidence — Fundamental rules relating to the proof of guilt

In cases where the evidence is of a circumstantial nature, it is well settled that the cumulative effect of the circumstances must be such as to negative the innocence of the accused and to bring the offences home to him beyond any reasonable doubt.

The courts below in taking the contrary view have failed to keep in mind the fundamental rule stated above relating to a proof of guilt based on circumstantial evidence and have proceeded on conjectures in a case where statedly the circumstances are more or less equally balanced. Bhagat Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1954 SC 621: 1954 Cri LJ 1645.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1954]

On circumstantial evidence see more cases under S. 302

(vi) Double jeopardy

[10215] — S. 409 — Acquittal for offences under S. 409 IPC and S. 5 of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Held, does not bar trial under S. 135, Customs Act and S. 85, Gold (Control) Act. A.A. Mulla v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 11 SCC 606: AIR 1997 SC 1441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1996]

[10216] — S. 409 — Charge of criminal breach of trust — Acquittal of person on charge of breach of trust in his capacity as cashier at a particular period — Subsequent trial for defalcation of money by same person not as a cashier at an earlier period — Finding in previous trial does not operate as issue — Estoppel

(12)(vi) Double jeopardy (contd.)

The question for decision was whether the finding of the High Court on the charge of criminal breach of trust with regard to the period December 8, 1960 and August 17, 1961, operated as issue-estoppel on a similar charge with regard to the period January 31, 1960 and November 30, 1960, when the appellant was not acting as cashier.

The basic principle underlying the rule of issue-estoppel is that the same issue of fact and law must have been determined in the previous litigation. If there is any likelihood of facts or conditions changing during the two periods which are under consideration then it is difficult to say that the prosecution would be bound by the finding in a previous trial on a similar issue of fact. The later finding must necessarily be in contradiction of the previous determination. There can be so such contradiction if the periods are different and the facts relating to the carrying on of the duties of a cashier are different. Gopal Prasad Sinha v. State of Bihar, (1970) 2 SCC 905: 1970 SCC (Cri) 584: AIR 1971 SC 458: 1971 Cri LJ 420.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-1970]

[10217] — S. 409 — Prohibition of a subsequent trial for the same offence — Offence of criminal misconduct punishable under S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 is not identical in essence, import and content with an offence under S. 409, IPC — Therefore acquittal for an offence under S. 5(2), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 does not bar a trial under S. 409, IPC — CrPC, 1898 — S. 403 — Constitution of India — Art. 20(2) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 300

The offence of criminal misconduct punishable under S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 2 of 1947 is not identical in essence, import and content with an offence under S. 409 of the Indian Penal Code. The offence of criminal misconduct is a new offence created by that enactment and it does not repeal by implication or abrogate S. 409 of the Indian Penal Code. Therefore there can be no objection to a trial and conviction under S. 409 of the Indian Penal Code even if the respondent has been acquitted of an offence under S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 2 of 1947. State of M.P. v. Veereshwar Rao Agnihotri, AIR 1957 SC 592: 1957 SCR 868: 1957 Cri LJ 892.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and Syed Jafer Imam, S.K. Das, P. Govinda Menon and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1957]

(vii) Expert evidence

[10218] — S. 408 — Complainant's evidence on handwriting of accused, held, sufficient — Not necessary to examine handwriting expert. State of Gujarat v. Vinaya Chandra Chhota Lal Pathi, AIR 1967 SC 778: (1967) 1 SCR 249: 1967 Cri LJ 668.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-1966]

[10219] — Ss. 409 and 467 — Thumb-impression not taken — The fact that the thumb-impression of the appellant was taken on certain acknowledgment slips for the purpose of examination by the finger impression expert affords no basis for the conclusion that one of those slips must have been substituted in place of the original acknowledgment slip. D.C. Nanjappa v. State of Mysore, (1970) 3 SCC 193: 1971 SCC (Cri) 11.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and K.S. Hegde , JJ. [Date of decision: 30-9-1970]

(viii) Investigation, Cognizance, Summons, etc.

[10220] — Ss. 405, 406, 418, 420, 427, 503, 504, 506/34 and 120-B — Direction by Magistrate for investigation of offences under — Requirements for — Power if properly exercised — Magistrate allowing application filed by respondent SEPCO under S. 156(3) CrPC, and forwarding original complaint alleging commission of offences under Ss. 405, 406, 418, 420, 427, 503, 504, 506/34 and 120-B IPC, to SHO concerned directing him to register FIR after due enquiry, and to submit charge-sheet after investigation — Sustainability — Held, for proceeding under S. 156(3) what is required is a bare reading of complaint and whether it discloses a cognizable offence — Magistrate then instead of applying his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there are sufficient grounds for proceeding, may direct police to investigate — In instant case, offences alleged were all cognizable offences, and hence, Magistrate committed no illegality in passing direction for investigation, warranting any interference by High Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution — Single Judge as well as Division Bench rightly refused to interfere with such limited order — Moreover, challenge at this stage by appellants was premature and High Court rightly rejected their request — CrPC, 1973, S. 156(3) (Paras 15 to 24)

The Magistrate only ordered investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. The Magistrate perused the complaint without examining the merits of the claim that there is sufficient ground for proceeding or not and directed the police officer concerned for investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. As rightly observed by the Single Judge of the High Court, the Magistrate did not bring into motion the machinery of Chapter XV CrPC. He did not examine the complainant or his witnesses under Section 200 CrPC which is the first step in the procedure prescribed under the said Chapter. The question of taking the next step of the procedure envisaged in Section 202 did not arise. Instead of taking cognizance of the offence, the Magistrate has merely allowed the application filed by the complainant/SEPCO under Section 156(3) CrPC and sent the same along with its annexure for investigation by the police officer concerned. (Para 22)

To proceed under Section 156(3) CrPC, what is required is a bare reading of the complaint and if it discloses a cognizable offence, then the Magistrate instead of applying his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may direct the police for investigation. In the case on hand, the Single Judge and the Division Bench of the High Court rightly pointed out that the Magistrate did not apply his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there is sufficient ground for proceeding and, therefore, the Magistrate has not committed any illegality in directing the police for investigation. As a matter of fact, even after receipt of a report under Section 173, the Magistrate under Section 190(1)(b) may or may not take cognizance of offence. In other words, he is not bound to take cognizance upon submission of the police report by the investigating officer, hence, by directing the police to file charge-sheet or final report and to hold investigation, it cannot be construed that the Magistrate has exceeded his power as provided in Section 156(3). (Para 23). Srinivas Gundluri v. SEPCO Electric Power Construction Corpn., (2010) 8 SCC 206: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 652: (2010) 93 AIC 17 (SC): 2010 Cri LJ 4457.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-2010]

Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621, relied on

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234, distinguished on facts

[10221] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Interference by High Court under S. 482 CrPC during investigation by police — Limitations of — Overstepping limits of judicial interference — Impermissibility — Offences under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Held, it is statutory obligation and duty of police to investigate into crime and courts normally ought not to interfere and guide investigating agency as to in what manner investigation has to proceed — Jurisdiction under S. 482 conferred on High Court has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution, only where such exercise is justified by the test laid down in provision itself — Herein, interference by High Court, without recording any reasons, with investigation, which is within exclusive domain of police, by virtually directing police to investigate case from a particular angle and take certain steps, which the police, depending upon evidence collected and host of other circumstances, may or may not have attempted to take in its discretion, held, was overstepping limits of judicial interference — Constitution of India, Art. 226 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482 and 156

In the instant case, the respondent lodged an FIR against the appellants alleging commission of offences under Sections 406 and 420 IPC. The police, having registered the case against the appellants, commenced its investigation. Even while the investigation was in progress, for some inexplicable reasons, the respondent moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC, seeking directions to the police. The petition was filed within one week of registration of the crime, by which time the police had already started serious investigation. None of the appellants were impleaded as party-respondents to the petition filed under Section 482 CrPC. The State alone was impleaded as the respondent.

The High Court disposed of the same observing, inter alia, that it was obligatory on the part of the police to conduct investigation in accordance with law, including recording of statements from witnesses, arrest, seizure of property, perusal of various documents and filing of charge-sheet. The High Court accordingly directed the police to expedite and complete the investigation. The impugned order resulted in drastic consequences far-reaching in nature. Hence the present appeals.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

It is the statutory obligation and duty of the police to investigate into the crime and the courts normally ought not to interfere and guide the investigating agency as to in what manner the investigation has to proceed. The High Court, without recording any reason whatsoever, directed the police that it is obligatory on their part to record statements from witnesses, arrest, seize property and file charge-sheet. It is difficult to discern as to how such directions resulting in far-reaching consequences could have been issued by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, which also resulted in much harassment of the appellants. The High Court interfered with the investigation of crime, which is within the exclusive domain of the police, by virtually directing the police to investigate the case from a particular angle and take certain steps which the police, depending upon the evidence collected and host of other circumstances, may or may not have attempted to take any such steps in its discretion. (Paras 24, 25 and 31)

(12)(viii) Investigation, Cognizance, Summons, etc. (contd.)

It is not necessary that every investigation should result in arrest, seizure of the property and ultimately in filing of the charge-sheet. The police, in exercise of its statutory power coupled with duty, upon investigation of a case, may find that a case is made out requiring it to file charge-sheet or may find that no case as such is made out. It needs no reiteration that the jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC conferred on the High Court has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution only where such exercise is justified by the test laid down in the provision itself. (Para 32)

There was no allegation of dereliction of any duty on the part of the investigating agency. There was also no allegation of any collusion and deliberate delay on the part of the investigating agency in the matter of investigation into the case, that had been promptly registered on the information lodged by the respondent. (Para 17)

The impugned order must be held to be an order passed overstepping the limits of judicial interference. Even in public interest litigation proceedings, appropriate directions may be issued and the purpose in issuing such directions is essentially to ensure performance of statutory duty by the investigating agency. The duty of the court in such proceedings is to ensure that the agencies do their duties in compliance with law. (Paras 28 and 29)

The High Court, in the instant case, did not even advert to the relevant facts. As stated in the order itself, it was more guided by the arguments made across the Bar that the police has not taken any steps to arrest the persons and seize the amounts involved in this case from the appellants though there is no such factual foundation as such laid in the petition. The High Court has altogether ignored the counter filed by the police that the police had already examined ten witnesses within a short span of time after the registration of crime and recorded their statements. (Para 30)

The submission made by the respondent that the High Court did not issue any directions but merely disposed of the petition with the observations reminding the police of its duty, is not impressive. The question that arises for consideration is whether there was any occasion or necessity to make those "observations" even if they are to be considered to be observations and not any directions. It is not even remotely suggested that there was any deliberate inaction or failure in the matter of discharge of duties by the police. There was no allegation of any subversion of processes of law facilitating the accused to go scot-free nor is there any finding as such recorded by the High Court in its order. (Para 35)

For the aforesaid reasons, the impugned judgment of the High Court cannot be sustained, and hence, is set aside. (Para 42). D. Venkatasubramaniam v. M.K. Mohan Krishnamachari, (2009) 10 SCC 488: (2009) 82 AIC 245 (SC): (2009) 3 APLJ 205 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1943-44) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 2 SCR 52; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264; M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628, relied on

[10222] — Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34 — Power of Magistrate to recall order for investigation passed by him under S. 156(3) CrPC or for withdrawal of investigation — Unavailability of — Inherent powers, if any — Held, powers of Magistrate are limited and he has no inherent powers — Ordinarily he has no power to recall his order — In the instant case investigation was directed by Magistrate in terms of S. 156(3) CrPC — He had no jurisdiction to recall said order — High Court erred in not interfering with his order recalling the investigation — Further held, High Court could have interfered therewith even suo motu when it was brought to its notice — CrPC, 1898, S. 561-A — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 156(3) & 320 and 482 & 483

The appellants were depositors in a cooperative bank. Some of the borrowers had mortgaged their properties with the Bank. Alleging commission of offences under Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34 IPC, Bank filed complaint petition before Judicial Magistrate against respondent-accused seeking direction against the police to register and investigate the case under S. 156(3) CrPC. The Magistrate upon considering the allegations granted the prayer. However, the complainant thereafter filed an application before Magistrate informing him that a compromise had been entered into by and between the accused and the Bank. Pursuant thereto, order directing enquiry was recalled by the Magistrate. A writ petition was filed by appellants challenging the same. The High Court by impugned judgment declined to interfere with the said order. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeals, the Supreme Court held as above. Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 76: 2009 Cri LJ 2969.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444; Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36; S. Suresh v. Annappa Reddy, (2004) 13 SCC 424, followed [10223] — Ss. 406, 420, 465, 467, 468 and 120-B — Order of Magistrate (that was set aside by High Court) was not clear as to nature of action taken by Magistrate on a complaint against police inaction — Three alternative actions against police inaction can be taken as per Minu Kumari case, (2006) 4 SCC 359 — Either Magistrate can take cognizance, or direct police investigation or may even dismiss the complaint case based on the guidelines laid down in Minu Kumari case — Since the order of the Magistrate was not very clear and High Court had also not dealt with it, case remanded to trial court to decide the matter afresh as per the directions contained in Minu Kumari case — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 200 to 204 and 154(3) (Paras 12 and 11). Ketankumar Babulal Patel v. Kesarben Jesangji, (2008) 14 SCC 605: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 870: 2009 Cri LJ 365: (2008) 70 AIC 12 (SC)(2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-2008]

Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on

(ix) Joint trial/Re-trial/Consolidation/ Transfer of cases

[10224] — Ss. 406 & 120-B — Several offences under, committed in pursuance of criminal conspiracy — Can be tried together in view of S. 235(1), CrPC, 1898. State of Bombay v. Umarsaheb Buransaheb Inamdar, AIR 1962 SC 1153: 1962 Supp (2) SCR 711: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 259.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal , JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1962]

See also AIR 1960 SC 661: 1960 Cri LJ 1013

[10225] — Ss. 406, 409, 420 and 120-B — Consolidation of cases and trial in one court by retrospective application of S. 436-A CrPC without any express provision for the same — Permissibility — Exercise of power under Art. 142 — Scope of interference in criminal matters — Held, the Supreme Court cannot direct an authority to act contrary to law even if it has ample jurisdiction to pass orders under Art. 142 for doing complete justice (between the parties in any case or matter) — CrPC, 1973, S. 436-A — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India — Arts. 142, 32 and 21

As many as forty-eight pending cases in six different States had been instituted by different depositors and investors against the writ petitioner in his capacity as ex-MD and ex-Director of the company concerned for commission of offences punishable under Sections 406, 409 and 420 read with Section 120-B IPC and Section 138 of the NI Act. The petitioner as an undertrial prisoner remained in jail for more than ten years (i.e. since August 1998) before he approaching the Supreme Court under Article 32 for enforcement of fundamental rights guaranteed under Articles 14, 19, 20 and 21.

Allowing the appeal partly,

Held :

The petitioner deserves some relief. Although various cases are pending in different courts, the hard reality that the petitioner is in jail since more than ten years cannot be lost sight of. If the petitioner comes out of jail he may be able to make arrangement for repayment of amount and also to defend cases registered against him. On the overall facts and circumstances, the ends of justice would be served if appropriate court is directed to release him on bail on his executing a bond to the satisfaction of such court and the arresting officer. Assurance/undertaking of the writ petitioner-accused required to be filed for appearance in the court proceedings, surrender of passport (if any) to the police till final disposal of the case and liberty to the court concerned and the investigating agency to take required action if the petitioner misuses the liberty granted herein. (Paras 24, 31 and 32)

So far as consolidation of cases and trial of all the cases in one court is concerned such relief cannot be granted. Even in exercise of inherent powers the Supreme Court cannot direct an authority to act contrary to law even if it has ample jurisdiction to pass orders under Article 142 of the Constitution for doing complete justice between the parties in any case or matter. No retrospective effect has been given to Section 436-A CrPC. (Paras 31, 27 and 30). Pramod Kumar Saxena v. Union of India, (2008) 9 SCC 685: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 866: (2008) 70 AIC 4 (SC).

(12)(ix) Joint trial/Re-trial/Consolidation/Transfer of cases (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2008]

V.K. Sharma v. Union of India, (2000) 9 SCC 449: 2001 SCC (Cri) 467; State of Punjab v. Rajesh Syal, (2002) 8 SCC 158: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1867, relied on

V.K. Sharma v. Union of India, (2000) 9 SCC 449: 2001 SCC (Cri) 467, held overruled

[10226] — Ss. 406, 420, 468, 471, 504, 506, 382 and 120-B — Transfer of cases — Factors to be considered — Directions that may be passed — Large number of cases filed by parties against each other which were pending in different courts of Punjab and Haryana and Chandigarh — Petitioner seeking transfer of multiple cases by and against him to the Delhi High Court or any other High Court or courts subordinate to such High Court from Punjab and Haryana High Court and/or courts subordinate thereto, apprehending that justice would not be done; and since all cases arose out of the same transaction, contending that interest of justice would be subserved if all matters were clubbed together to avoid multiplicity of proceedings — Held, in exercising power under S. 406, indisputably convenience of parties, including witnesses to be produced at the trial is a relevant consideration therefor — On facts, apprehension expressed by petitioner did not appear to be well founded and it was undoubted that courts concerned would act impartially and petitioner Company, its Directors and officers facing trial would be dealt with very fairly — However, District Judges of Chandigarh and Ludhiana directed to consider desirability of transferring all criminal matters (as far as practicable and legally permissible) to one court so as to enable them to be disposed of one after the other — CrPC, 1973, S. 406 (Paras 1, 9, 10 and 14 to 16). Shree Baidyanath Ayurved Bhawan (P) Ltd. v. State of Punjab, (2009) 8 SCC 389: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 884: 2009 Cri LJ 4107: (2009) 81 AIC 40 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

Abdul Nazar Madani v. State of T.N., (2000) 6 SCC 204: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1048, followed

[10227] — Ss. 408 and 477-A — Misjoinder of charges — Joint trial of six persons for the offences under — Conviction of only one — Legality of trial and conviction — CrPC, 1898 — S. 239

Charges under S. 408 and S. 477-A, Penal Code, could, in the circumstances of this case, be tried together and the joint trial of all the accused was proper and lawful. Our attention was not drawn to any provision of law against the legality of the joint trial. Sushil Kumar Gupta v. Joy Shanker Bhattacharyya, (1970) 1 SCC 504: 1970 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1971 SC 1543.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua , JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-1970]

[10228] — S. 409 — Retrial — Prosecution of a practising lawyer by a client under S. 409 — An important document alleged to be in accused's handwriting alleged to be forged by the accused — Complainant not producing expert evidence — Trial court holding the document not proved and acquitting the accused — High Court ordering retrial in the appeal against acquittal and directing the Magistrate to afford an opportunity to the complainant to produce expert evidence — Order against well established rules of criminal jurisprudence is erroneous

The accused, a practising lawyer, was prosecuted by the complaint, his client, under S. 409, IPC for misappropriating a sum of Rs 5000. The prosecution case was based on a letter alleged to have been written by the accused. The accused challenged the document as a forgery in material parts, but the complainant did not take any steps to get an expert on handwriting examined. The trial Court acquitted the accused. In appeal by the complainant against the order of acquittal the High Court ordered a retrial and directed the Magistrate to give an opportunity to the complainant to adduce the evidence of a handwriting expert, in order to establish the genuineness of the questioned document. The accused appealed to the Supreme Court.

Held :

An accused person should not be placed on trial for the same offence more than once, except in very exceptional circumstances. Though the complainant had the fullest opportunity of adducing all the evidence that would be necessary to prove the charge against the accused person, but he did not adduce expert evidence and also did not pray for examination of an expert. The prosecution took its chance of having a decision in its favour on the evidence adduced by it before the trial Court. That Court was not satisfied that evidence was adequately reliable to bring the charge home to the accused and acquitted him. On appeal the High Court could take a different view of the evidence, reverse the judgment and convert the order of acquittal into an order of conviction. It was however not justified to have put the accused to the botheration and expense of a second trial simply because the prosecution did not adduce all the evidence which should and could have been brought before the Court of first instance. Simply because the accused happened to be a lawyer would not be a ground for subjecting him to harassment a second time. Therefore, the order of retrial passed by the High Court was entirely erroneous. Abinash Chandra Bose v. Bimal Krishna Sen, AIR 1963 SC 316: (1963) 3 SCR 564: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 261.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1962]

[10229] — S. 409 — Trial of accused under S. 105, Insurance Act after their conviction under S. 409, IPC — Not barred by Art. 20(3) of Constitution. State of Bombay v. S.L. Apte, AIR 1961 SC 578: (1961) 3 SCR 107: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 725.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: S.K. Das, A.K. Sarkar, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1960]

ILR 1956 Bom 685: 58 Bom LR 578, reversed

(x) Jurisdiction

[10230] — Ss. 405, 406, 409, 415, 420 and 417 — Absence of jurisdiction to issue summons — Dishonour of cheques — Cheques issued by accused at place AJ where he resided — Subsequent statement of accused that he issued fabricated cheques knowingly with an intention to cheat the complainant and grab his money, was allegedly also made at place AJ — Hence held, the Magistrate at place RP (where the complainant resided) had no jurisdiction to issue the summons as there was nothing on record to show that any part of cause of action arose within its jurisdiction — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 204, 190(1)(a) & 178

Whereas the accused is a resident of the district AJ, the complainant is a resident of the district RP. Cheques were admittedly issued by the accused at his place. There is nothing on record to show that any part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the court concerned. Even if the alleged statements had been made by the accused, the same admittedly had been made only at the place where the accused resides. The Magistrate at place RP, therefore, had no jurisdiction to issue the summons. (Para 16). Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370: 2007 Cri LJ 3735: (2007) 57 AIC 32 (SC): (2007) 5 All LJ 321.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2007]

Mosaraf Hossain Khan v. Bhagheeratha Engg. Ltd., (2006) 3 SCC 658: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 98, relied on [10231] — S. 406 — Direct cognizance of — Sessions Court has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of an offence directly except expressly provided so — Special Court presided by Additional Sessions Judge constituted under S. 12-A of E.C. Act cannot get jurisdiction by a mere transfer of a case by the High Court — Essential Commodities Act, 1955, Ss. 12-A and 12-AA — CrPC, 1973 — S. 193. Jagdish Prasad Gupta v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 386: 1995 SCC (Cri) 924.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and Dr. A.S. Anand, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1994]

[10232] — S. 406 — Jurisdiction of Special Court under 1992 Act — Accused involved in an offence relating to transactions in securities during the relevant period — Held, can be tried by Special Court and not by a regular criminal court even though he is not a notified person as per S. 3(2) — Effect of notification under S. 3(2) — Also transfer of such cases to Special Court would be automatic — Notification by custodian not essential — Special Court (Trial of Offences Relating to Transactions in Securities) Act, 1992 — Ss. 7, 3(2) & (4) and 9-A

The scheme of Section 7, in the light of the Preamble of the Act and the main purpose for enactment of the Act, appears to be that all criminal proceedings pertaining to prosecutions in connection with the accused involved in transactions in securities during the relevant period will lie before the Special Court and not before ordinary courts as the section starts with a non obstante clause stating that notwithstanding anything contained in any other law, only Special Courts will have exclusive jurisdiction to try such offences. It is of course true that once the Custodian notifies the name of any person in the Official Gazette as per sub-section (2) of Section 3 then certain civil consequences regarding attachment of his properties would follow as per Section 3 sub-section (3) automatically and that would empower the Custodian to deal with such properties in such manner as Special Court may direct as per sub-section (4) of Section 3 of the Act. On such notification of the person concerned the Custodian would also get jurisdiction and power to cancel contracts and agreements entered into by such notified person after following the procedure of Section 4 sub-section (1). It is also true that on and from the commencement of the Special Court (Trial of Offences Relating to Transactions in Securities) (Amendment) Act, 1994 as laid down by Section 9-A pending suits against such notified persons contemplated by the special provisions would also stand transferred for adjudication to the Special

(12)(x) Jurisdiction (contd.)

Court. Thus so far as civil suits are concerned the proceedings pending on the commencement of Amending Act of 1994 would stand transferred provided in the meantime after the main Act came into force in 1992 such defendants have got notified under Section 3 sub-section (2) of the Act. But that is a scheme pertaining to civil actions against notified persons. The offence referred to in sub-section (2) of Section 3 which is within the sweep of Section 7 of the Act must be an offence committed by any person and must have the following two characteristics:

1. Such offence must relate to transactions in securities; and

2. Such offence should be alleged to have been committed between 1-4-1991 and on or before 6-6-1992.

Once these two requirements are satisfied the Special Court will get jurisdiction to try such offences and, therefore, consequently to try the accused concerned who are alleged to have committed such offences cognizable by the Special Court. When the principal accused is the notified person even non-notified accused can be tried jointly with such principal accused as per Section 8 if they were jointly involved in such offences. But even that apart if the accused is the sole accused and he is not a notified person and if any criminal case is pending against such an accused in any court when the Act came into force then even such a criminal case provided two requirements of sub-section (2) of Section 3 qua such offence as seen earlier are satisfied will automatically stand transferred to the Special Court as laid down by the latter part of Section 7. If the Special Court can try transferred criminal cases which were filed prior to 6-6-1992 in regular courts wherein the accused were not notified persons as such cases would stand transferred to it for trial automatically on coming into force of the Act, then of necessity it must be held that even if such criminal cases are filed after coming into force of the Act, against non-notified persons involved in similar type of offences they could be tried by the Special Court. Any other view would result in creation of two conflicting types of jurisdictions for the Special Court functioning as per the same Section 7.

On a conjoint reading of Section 3 and its relevant provisions, therefore, it must be held that once the Custodian notifies a person in the Official Gazette under sub-section (2) of Section 3 he gets the power and jurisdiction to deal with such person's properties and transactions as laid down under Section 3 sub-section (4) and Section 4 and in such a case even the civil suits of notified persons would stand transferred as per Section 9-A of the Act. But so far as criminal proceedings are concerned even if the accused is not notified still the Special Court will have jurisdiction under Section 7 to deal with the offences alleged to have been committed by such an accused if the earlier mentioned two basic requirements of Section 3 sub-section (2) are satisfied. Minoo Mehta v. Shavak D. Mehta, (1998) 2 SCC 418: 1998 SCC (Cri) 645: AIR 1998 SC 831: (1998) 91 Comp Cas 895.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-1998]

Canara Bank v. Nuclear Power Corpn. of India Ltd., 1995 Supp (3) SCC 81; Kudremukh Iron Ore Co. Ltd. v. Fairgrowth Financial Services Ltd., (1994) 4 SCC 246, distinguished

See also (2001) 6 SCC 16 at p. 22 where this decision has been criticised and explained

(xi) Limitation

[10233] — Ss. 406/420 — Scope — Bar of limitation to taking cognizance of offences — On facts, the bar to the offence under S. 500, Indian Penal Code operated from the day of the offence under S. 469(1)(a) CrPC, that is, when the complaint under Ss. 406/420, Indian Penal Code was filed against the present complainant — Date of acquittal of present complainant in those proceedings not relevant — On facts S. 470(1) CrPC not applicable — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 468, 469 and 470(1)

A complaint for commission of offence under Ss. 406/420, Indian Penal Code was made by the appellant against the respondent on March 15, 1972 which resulted in acquittal on April 1, 1975, confirmed by the High Court on May 15, 1975. The respondent filed the present complaint under S. 500, Indian Penal Code on February 11, 1976. The appellant's application to the High Court under S. 482, Criminal Procedure Code against the issue of summons was rejected.

Held :

According to the complaint, the offence under S. 500, Indian Penal Code was committed on March 15, 1972, which was the date of the offence within the meaning of S. 469(1)(a) of the Code, and the period of three years' limitation would be calculated with reference to that date for purposes of the bar provided by S. 468. But the complaint under S. 500, Indian Penal Code was filed on February 11, 1976, much after the expiry of that period. It was therefore not permissible for the Court of the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence after the expiry of the period of limitation.

The High Court reasoned that no "cause of action" arose till the present respondent was acquitted on April 1, 1975. But the question of "cause of action" could not really arise in this case as the controversy relates to the commission of an offence. The High Court erred in taking a contrary view.

On facts S. 470(1) has no application. It is an essential requirement of the sub-section that the person who seeks its benefit should be able to establish that he was "prosecuting" another prosecution in one court or the other referred to in the sub-section. But it is not the case of the respondent that he was prosecuting the appellant in any other prosecution. It is also not his case that that prosecution related to the "same facts" within the meaning of the proviso to the sub-section. Surinder Mohan Vikal v. A.L. Chopra, (1978) 2 SCC 403: 1978 SCC (Cri) 215: AIR 1978 SC 986: 1978 Cri LJ 764.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal , JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1978]

(xii) Other issues

[10234] — S. 409 — High Court setting aside order of discharge and directing commitment for trial under S. 409 — Held, order of the High Court did not revive the committal proceedings and therefore did not attract the 1973 Code by virtue of proviso to S. 484 — The High Court did not order any fresh enquiry in terms of S. 437, CrPC, 1898 but straightaway committed him to Sessions — CrPC, 1973, S. 484, Proviso. M.R. Dhawan v. Delhi Admn., (1978) 2 SCC 184: 1978 SCC (Cri) 186: AIR 1978 SC 1011: 1978 Cri LJ 769.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-1978]

(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings

See also '(4)(ii) Dishonest intention — Mens rea — Civil dispute(s) only', above

See also under 'Ss. 415-420 — Cheating', below

See also under CrPC, 1973, S. 482, in Vol. 18, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 2 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[10235] — Ss. 405, 406 and 408 — Stay by High Court — Inherent power of the High Court — When to be exercised — Complaint under Ss. 405, 406 and 408 IPC during pendency of civil litigation between the parties for dissolution of partnership firm and rendition of accounts — Order of High Court staying the filing of the final report under S. 173 CrPC by the police till disposal of the suit not sustainable — Such an order also caused delay — Constitution of India, Art. 21 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 173

The width of power of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC, in principle, is very expansive but in practice the power is exercised in exceptional cases. The inherent power of the court is not an unrestricted power to make any order which the High Court desires to pass. The power is meant to be exercised to give effect to any order under CrPC or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. It is of utmost importance that criminal cases be disposed of expeditiously as right of an accused to have speedy trial is a right which flows from Article 21 of the Constitution. Far from ensuring a speedy trial the High Court placed an embargo at the pre-trial stage by staying the filing of final report by the police under Section 173 CrPC. The impugned order serves no useful purpose, nay, it is wholly extraneous to the purposes for which the power is preserved. (Para 5). Usha Ahuja v. State of Haryana, (1999) 7 SCC 486: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1283: AIR 1999 SC 3242.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Venkataswami and S.S.M. Quadri , JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1999]

[10236] — Ss. 405, 406, 409, 415, 420 & 417 — Criminal breach of trust and cheating — Complaint filed alleging commission of offences of, where cheques issued by accused towards purchase price, got dishonoured — Quashing of, justified as said offences not made out — Essentially a civil dispute — Where allegations contained in complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety do not disclose an offence, the complaint can be quashed — Cheques issued by accused towards payment regarding purchase of welding rods, got dishonoured — On demand of said money, accused allegedly stating that he had issued fabricated cheques knowingly with an intention to cheat the complainant and grab his money — Complaint filed alleging commission of offences of criminal breach of trust and cheating — Held, non-payment or underpayment of price of goods by itself does not amount to commission of offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust — It is essentially a civil dispute — Merely because the accused issued cheques which got dishonoured, the same by itself would not mean that he cheated the complainant — There was no allegation as to act of inducement on the part of the accused and intention to cheat the complainant from the very inception — Thus, in the absence of allegations in the complaint showing existence of ingredients of the alleged offences, held, the said offences not made out — Complaint was liable to be quashed — Negotiable

(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings (contd.)

Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482. Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370: 2007 Cri LJ 3735: (2007) 57 AIC 32 (SC): (2007) 5 All LJ 321.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2007]

Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

[10237] — Ss. 405, 406 and 420 — Prosecution under — Agreement providing for remedy of arbitration no bar — Agreement in relation to commercial transaction containing an arbitration clause — Criminal prosecution for breach of such contract, if such breach even prima facie constituted a criminal offence, held, not barred merely because of the presence of the arbitration clause in the agreement — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 200, 203 and 204 — Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, Ss. 7 and 8

For the alleged breach of the agreement in relation to commercial transaction, it is open to Respondent 2 to proceed against the appellants for his redressal for recovery of money by way of damages for the loss caused, if any. Merely because there is an arbitration clause in the agreement, that cannot prevent criminal prosecution against the accused if an act constituting a criminal offence is made out even prima facie. (Para 22). S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2001 SC 2960: 2002 Cri LJ 548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil , JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47, followed

[10238] — Ss. 405, 420, 468 and 471 — Quashing of complaint — When justified — Act constituting both civil and criminal wrong — Civil suits for recovery of dues compromised on receiving payments from the companies concerned — Even if offence of cheating is prima facie constituted, compromise decree passed in such suits would amount to compounding of offence of cheating — Delay in completing investigation — No action taken against the erring officials despite allegation made against them in the FIRs — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the High Court was justified in quashing the complaint — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

For the purpose of quashing the complaint, it is necessary to consider whether the allegations in the complaint prima facie make out an offence or not. It is not necessary to scrutinise the allegations for the purpose of deciding whether such allegations are likely to be upheld in the trial. Any action by way of quashing the complaint is an action to be taken at the threshold before evidences are led in support of the complaint. For quashing the complaint by way of action at the threshold, it is, therefore, necessary to consider whether on the face of the allegations, a criminal offence is constituted or not.

A particular act may constitute both civil wrong as well as criminal wrong and merely because a civil action is also pursued, it does not render the criminal action impermissible. In the facts of the case, long after the completion of civil suits, the further investigation in connection with the complaints may not be expedient. It may be noted that the opinion given by the Senior Manager (Legal) that the credit facility which was given to DAIL for its tobacco division should be transferred to the newly formed Company, namely, New Tobacco Company Limited, it cannot be held to be per se mala fide or illegal in view of the provisions of Section 394 of the Companies Act. That apart, the legal opinion of the said Senior Manager (Legal) was placed for consideration by the highest administrative body of the Bank i.e. the Board of Directors and the decision was taken by the Board that the credit liability which stood in favour of DAIL should be transferred in favour of the New Tobacco Company Limited. In the aforesaid circumstances, even if the Senior Manager (Legal) or any other officer of the Bank had not acted properly, in view of the fact that the ultimate decision was taken by the Board of Directors, it cannot be reasonably held that some of the officers of the Bank connived and misled the Board. It may be noted that no allegation has been made against the members of the Board.

In the instant case there is enough justification for the High Court to hold that the case was basically a matter of civil dispute. The Banks had already filed suits for recovery of the dues of the Banks on account of credit facility and the said suits have been compromised on receiving the payments from the companies concerned. Even if an offence of cheating is prima facie constituted, such offence is a compoundable offence and compromise decrees passed in the suits instituted by the Banks, for all intents and purposes, amount to compounding of the offence of cheating. It is also to be noted that a long time has elapsed since the complaint was filed in 1987. It may also be indicated that although such FIRs were filed in 1987 and 1989, the Banks have not chosen to institute any case against the alleged erring officials despite allegations made against them in the FIRs Considering that the investigations had not been completed till 1991 even though there was no impediment to complete the investigations and further investigations are still pending and also considering the fact that the claims of the Banks have been satisfied and the suits instituted by the Banks have been compromised on receiving payments, the said complaint should not be pursued any further. CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045: AIR 1996 SC 2452.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1996]

[10239] — S. 406 — Proceedings against petitioner for shortage of paddy and rice procured by him for FCI — Quashment — Arbitration agreement between petitioner and respondent permitting shortage up to certain limit and for payment of penalty beyond that at rates prescribed in the agreement — Matter referred to and pending arbitration — Meanwhile criminal proceedings under S. 406, IPC initiated and cognizance taken by Magistrate — In appeal against High Court's refusal to quash the criminal proceedings, held that matter being purely of a civil nature, the proceedings must be quashed — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482. Bal Kishan Das v. P.C. Nayar, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 412: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1055: AIR 1991 SC 1531: 1991 Cri LJ 1837.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1991]

[10240] — S. 406 — Quashment not considered advisable due to stage proceedings had reached — However, directions issued to protect interests of appellant-accused — Allegations pertaining to criminal breach of trust in relation to diamond encrusted heavy gold pendant, chain and earring set against appellant who was foster sister of complainant's husband, and a married lady coming from wealthy background — Held, undoubtedly allegations made are extremely wild and disgusting but how far they can be used to meet requirements of S. 406 IPC is a moot question — However, since FIR relating thereto has been lodged and cognizance also taken, only interests of appellant can be protected — Directed that appellant would not be required to attend the proceedings unless specifically directed by court to do so and that too in case of extreme necessity; that no coercive step shall be taken against her and that she shall be granted bail by court trying the case if it decides to try the offence by framing charge and court to be careful while considering framing of charge — FIR pertaining to S. 406 IPC not quashed (Paras 14 to 16). Vijeta Gajra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 11 SCC 618: AIR 2010 SC 2712: 2010 Cri LJ 3841: (2010) 92 AIC 76 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2010]

[10241] — Ss. 406, 418, 420 and 120-B — Quashing of complaint and criminal proceedings — Abuse of process of court — Transaction of sale of land by appellants to Respondent 2 Society — Cheques issued by Respondent 2 in favour of appellant dishonoured by bank because of insufficiency of amount in the account of drawer — FIR lodged under Ss. 406, 420 and 120-B IPC — As a counterblast complaint filed by Respondent 2 against appellants alleging offences under Ss. 418, 420, 423, 504 and 120-B IPC — Appellants filing petition for quashing of the complaint/FIR filed by Respondent 2 — Allegations in the complaint read as a whole not indicating, expressly or impliedly, any intentional deception on the part of the appellants right from the beginning of the transaction — Thus prima facie the allegations made by Respondent 2 not constituting offence punishable under S. 420 or allied offences mentioned in the complaint — Held, continuing the criminal proceedings against the appellants would amount to an abuse of process of the court — High Court erred in refusing to quash the complaint and the proceeding — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The High Court was not right in declining to quash the complaint and the proceeding initiated on the basis of the same. That being the position the case comes within the first category of cases enumerated in State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal and as such warrants interference by this Court. (Para 16). Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786: AIR 2000 SC 2341: 2000 Cri LJ 2983.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra , JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2000]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

[10242] — Ss. 406, 419, 420 and 120-B — Matter, on facts, of civil liability and not criminal — Hence cognizance taken by Magistrate deserved to be quashed under S. 482 CrPC — Inherent jurisdiction of High Court — When to be exercised — Held, should be exercised in extreme exceptions — Criminal complaint filed by the complainant alleging that the appellants had refused to execute the written agreement transferring the plot in his favour for which he had already paid part consideration pursuant to an oral agreement — Cognizance under Ss. 406, 419, 420 and 120-B IPC taken by the Magistrate — High Court by the impugned order dismissing appellants' petition for quashing the cognizance — Held, version of the complainant was self-contradictory since at one place he had stated that the oral agreement to sell

(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings (contd.)

took place in July 2002, while at the other he alleged that he started paying consideration amount between 15-7-2000 and 15-12-2002 — No prima facie case was made out against the appellants involving them in the commission of alleged offences — Even if the allegations made in the complaint are accepted to be true and correct the appellants cannot be said to have committed any offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust — Neither can any guilty intention be attributed to them nor can there possibly be any intention on their part to deceive the complainant — Averments of the complaint and the statements of the complainant and his witnesses recorded by the Magistrate would amount to civil liability inter se the parties and not criminal liability — Hence, cognizance taken by the Magistrate was clearly an abuse of the process of court warranting interference in the interest of justice — Instant case was a case of extreme exception where the High Court ought to have exercised its inherent jurisdiction and power to set aside the unwarranted and unjustified order of the Magistrate — Impugned order quashed — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Paras 4, 10 and 11). Ram Biraji Devi v. Umesh Kumar Singh, (2006) 6 SCC 669: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 176: AIR 2006 SC 2035: 2006 Cri LJ 2782: (2006) 102 Cut LT 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and L.S. Panta , JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2006]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47, distinguished

[10243] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Criminal breach of trust and cheating — Pleadings — Ingredients of the offence not averred in criminal complaint filed one year after civil suit — Civil suit was filed alleging negligence and breach of contractual obligations — Held, breach of contract simpliciter does not constitute an offence — Allegations in the criminal complaint must disclose the necessary ingredients therefor — Court can for the purpose of finding out as to whether the said allegations are prima facie correct, take into consideration the correspondences exchanged by the parties and other admitted documents — Criminal proceedings should not be encouraged, when it is found to be mala fide or otherwise an abuse of the process of the court — Superior courts while exercising inherent power should also strive to serve the ends of justice — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

The parties had entered into a contract of carriage. The first respondent approached the appellants for delivery of six consignments valued at US $98,715.29 to the original consignee, M/s Universal Apparels (EPZ), Mombassa, Kenya. By reason of a fax message, the appellants asked their counterparts in Mombassa, Kenya to confirm delivery of consignment asking it to see that the cargo is delivered only against presentation of original bills of lading. The goods in question were said to have been delivered by the agent of the petitioner to the original consignee without their producing the bills of lading. The respondent complainant issued a notice to the accused persons attributing negligence to the agencies in delivering the cargo without the original bill of lading, committing a breach of carriage and acting in violation of their contract and obligation. A claim for a sum of US $84,353.31 was made and a suit filed by the respondent herein. More than one year after filing of the said suit a complaint petition was filed against the appellants for committing criminal breach of trust by causing criminal misappropriation of the valuable property of the complainant.

An application for quashing of the order issuing summons to the appellant was dismissed by the High Court which held that the allegations made in the complaint prima facie disclosed the offence of breach of trust.

Challenge in this appeal is to the order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The allegations made in the complaint petition, even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety, do not disclose an offence. No allegation whatsoever was made against the appellants in the notice. What was contended was negligence and/or breach of contract on the part of the carriers and their agent. Breach of contract simpliciter does not constitute an offence. For the said purpose, allegations in the complaint petition must disclose the necessary ingredients therefor. Where a civil suit is pending and the complaint petition has been filed one year after filing of the civil suit, the court can for the purpose of finding out as to whether the said allegations are prima facie correct, take into consideration the correspondences exchanged by the parties and other admitted documents. It is one thing to say that the Court at this juncture would not consider the defence of the accused but it is another thing to say that for exercising the inherent jurisdiction of this Court, it is impermissible also to look to the admitted documents. Criminal proceedings should not be encouraged, when it is found to be mala fide or otherwise an abuse of the process of the court. Superior courts while exercising this power should also strive to serve the ends of justice. (Para 16). All Cargo Movers India (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: AIR 2008 SC 247: (2007) 60 AIC 92 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, followed

Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 746; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121, relied on [10244] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Criminal proceedings initiated with ulterior motive — Continuance of such proceedings — Impermissibility of — Ingredients for exercising power under Art. 226 of Constitution and S. 482 CrPC, to prevent abuse of process of any court or to secure ends of justice, restated — On facts, trial court taking cognizance of offence punishable under Ss. 406 and 420 IPC against appellants in a complaint filed by respondent — High Court declining to interfere under S. 482 CrPC with the order passed — Sustainability — Complaint nothing but abuse of process of law, being a counterblast to the proceedings initiated by appellants under S. 138, NI Act, 1881 against respondent — Held, perusal of complaint showed ulterior motive — Proceedings initiated by respondent clearly amounted to abuse of process of law — Hence, relying on Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, reiterating that where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge, held, proceedings initiated before trial court, by the respondent, stand quashed — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482, 190 and 200 (Paras 2, 4, 18 to 20). Mahindra & Mahindra Financial Services Ltd. v. Rajiv Dubey, (2009) 1 SCC 706: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 603: (2009) 74 AIC 71 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[10245] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Quashing of FIR — Scope of jurisdiction of High Court — Tests — Offences of fraud, cheating, etc. alleged — Whether offences alleged in FIR prima facie made out — Whether criminal proceedings initiated only to cause harassment to accused and continuance thereof would amount to abuse of process of court — Disputed question of fact not required to be gone into by Court — But documents of unimpeachable character can be taken into consideration — Although Court should not encourage the practice of initiating criminal proceedings when large number of disputes could ordinarily be determined by civil courts, but Court cannot go beyond its jurisdiction to interfere with the criminal proceedings otherwise genuine — Plausible defence of accused not good enough for exercise of inherent powers — FIR lodged by appellant on charges under Ss. 406, 420 and 436 IPC alleging that blank cheques were issued by appellant to respondents which were later fraudulently used by respondents — Respondents after issuing notice on appellant filed complaint petition under Ss. 138 and 141 of Negotiable Instruments Act alleging dishonour of certain cheques issued by appellant and also filed application under S. 482 for quashing of FIR — Quashing application allowed by High Court taking the view that FIR was lodged only to pre-empt respondents from filing the complaint petition — Held, on facts, High Court erred in going into merits of the case and interfering with the criminal proceedings — However, since allegedly the blank cheques were earlier given to respondents for use for business purposes when relation between the parties were good but the alleged fraudulent use took place few years thereafter when dispute arose between them, S. 420 IPC not attracted as fraudulent inducement must be there at the inception and not at a later stage to attract S. 420 IPC — But S. 406 IPC was invocable — Hence investigation should be confined to charge under S. 406 IPC only — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The private parties were Directors of the appellant Company and were closely related. The Company had two units. The Managing Director of the Company was one L. Allegedly, pursuant to negotiations between L on the one hand and Accused 2 and 3 Directors on the other, signed blank cheques were handed over by L to the said accused persons during period 2000 to 2004 as process for obtaining cheques from the Managing Director had been taking considerable time. However, dispute between the parties arose in 2005. A company petition was filed before the High Court. A scheme for arrangement submitted by the parties was approved, pursuant whereto one unit was transferred to Accused 1 and the other unit to L. For that purpose the units were demerged. L allegedly made oral requests to Accused 2 and 3 to return the unused signed blank cheques. However, allegedly on the premise that Respondents 2 and 3 entered into a conspiracy to misuse the said cheques L filed an informal complaint with the police in 2006 with an endorsement that there was no role for the police at that stage. The respondents thereafter issued a letter stating that with a view to repay a part of the institutional liability of Respondent 1 a cheque had been drawn by the appellant in favour of Respondent 1 which had been deposited for collection.

(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings (contd.)

A first information report was then lodged by the appellant alleging that the blank signed cheques issued in the year 2001-2002 had been fraudulently used. Legal notices were, however, issued by Respondent 1 upon the appellant with regard to dishonour of three cheques. On or about 13-11-2006 an application was filed before the High Court for quashing the first information report. On 6-12-2006, a complaint petition was filed by Respondent 1 under Sections 138 and 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act against the appellant and also its Chairman and Managing Director. The High Court not only considered the ingredients for the offences under Sections 406, 420 and 463 IPC but also the background facts leading to the dispute between the parties so as to enable it to ascertain whether the ingredients thereof stood satisfied or not. It proceeded on the basis that in view of the demerger scheme, the conduct of the appellant in keeping mum for a long time for getting the unused blank cheques returned is tell tale. It entered into the question as to whether the complaint petition was filed only with a view to pre-empt the respondents herein to take recourse to the remedies available to them to initiate a criminal proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act or the complaint petition in effect and substance should be permitted to be raised only by way of defence. It was held that the said complaint petition was filed on the basis whereof the first information report was directed to be lodged only to pre-empt the accused from filing a complaint petition under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and that even taking the allegations in the complaint to be true and correct, they did not make out a prima facie case of cheating or criminal breach of trust or forgery. Accordingly, the High Court held that continuation of the proceedings amounted to abuse of process of the Court.

Allowing the appeal in part,

Held:

In this case what has failed to attract the attention of the High Court was that maintainability of a criminal proceeding like the present one should not be determined only upon raising a presumption in terms of Section 139 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, it being a rebuttable one. (Para 23)

The High Court should have further taken into consideration the fact that in the event, the defence of the appellant is accepted in the criminal case, it will have no remedy to prosecute the respondents again. To contend that the acquittal of the appellant would have been the springboard for filing a complaint will not be correct. Nobody knows when the criminal case would come to an end. In a given situation, even it may become barred by limitation. It must also be borne in mind that commercial expediencies may lead a person to issue blank cheques. The course of action in the aforementioned situation, which could be taken recourse to was to make an attempt to find out as to whether the complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety constitutes an offence under Sections 420, 406 and 463 of the Penal Code or not. (Para 24)

Ingredients of cheating are:

(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; and

(ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property to any person or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. (Para 25)

Sections 415 read with Section 420 IPC indicates that fraudulent or dishonest inducement on the part of the accused must be at the inception and not at a subsequent stage. In this case blank cheques were handed over to the accused during the period 2000-2004 for use thereof for business purposes but the dispute between the parties admittedly arose much thereafter i.e. in 2005. Thus no case for proceeding against the respondent under Section 420 of the Penal Code is, therefore, made out. (Paras 26 to 28)

Filling up of the blanks in a cheque by itself would not amount to forgery. Whereas in the complaint petition, allegations have been made that it was Respondents 2 and 3 who had entered into a conspiracy to commit the said offence as indicated hereinbefore, in the counter-affidavit, it has been alleged that the employees of the respondent Company did so. (Para 29)

Although, Section 120-B IPC has been added, there does not exist any averment that Respondents 2 and 3 had entered into any conspiracy with their employees. No case for proceeding with the offence of forgery against the respondents has, thus, also been made out. (Para 30)

However, a case for proceeding against the respondents under Section 406 IPC has been made out. A cheque being a property, the same was entrusted to the respondents. If the said property has been misappropriated or has been used for a purpose for which the same had not been handed over, a case under Section 406 IPC may be found to have been made out. It may be true that even in a proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the appellant could raise a defence that the cheques were not meant to be used towards discharge of a lawful liability or a debt, but the same by itself would not mean that in an appropriate case, a complaint petition cannot be allowed to be filed. (Para 31)

The respondents were keeping watch over the matter. As soon as a first information report was lodged, a notice was immediately sent. A quashing application was filed within a few days of the lodging of the first information report. The investigation was not allowed to take place at all. Whereas it would have been the duty of the court to uphold and/or to protect the personal liberty of an accused in a case, but where the first information report prima facie discloses commission of a cognizable offence, the High Court, ordinarily, should not have interfered with investigation thereof by the statutory authority. (Para 32)

Investigation by IO may now be confined to the charge under Section 406 IPC. (Para 33). Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678: AIR 2008 SC 1683: (2008) 63 AIC 146 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Indian Oil Corp. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; All Cargo Movers (I) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776; B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107, relied on [10246] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Quashing of proceedings — When warranted — Petitioner entering into an agreement to sell certain property in Delhi for consideration of Rs 4.5 lakhs out of which Rs 3.5 lakhs was paid by the complainant respondent — Balance amount was to be paid at the time of registration of sale deed and delivery of possession — Respondent alleging that in spite of three legal notices having been given, the petitioner failed to honour the agreement and thus cheated him — He, therefore, filing complaint under S. 406 and S. 420 IPC in the criminal court at M since the agreement was reached there and the amount paid thereat — Held, such complaint is an abuse of process of the court and hence liable to be quashed — Even if all the averments made in the complaint are taken to be correct, yet the case for prosecution under S. 420 or S. 406 of the Penal Code is not made out so as to infer any fraudulent or dishonest inducement having been made by the petitioner pursuant to which the respondent parted with the money — Merely because the petitioner had failed to honour the agreement, it cannot be said that he had cheated the respondent — Further, on facts held, complaint filed at M against the petitioner who is a resident of Delhi, seems to be an attempt to pressurise the petitioner for coming to terms with the respondent — Respondent granted liberty to pursue such other remedy under the civil law as may be available to him — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 37, 51 and 52 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 468 (Paras 1, 2, 6 and 7). Murari Lal Gupta v. Gopi Singh, (2005) 13 SCC 699: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 430.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-2005]

[10247] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Taking cognizance — Material relevant for — Where the statement made in the complaint and statements made under S. 202 CrPC taken on face value made out the offence, taking of cognizance, held, justified — At this stage other materials could not be considered by High Court to quash the cognizance — However, at the stage of framing of charge, the accused could argue as to whether the materials permitted the framing of the charge — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 190, 200, 202 and 482

On the basis of a complaint under Sections 406 and 420 IPC, the Magistrate issued process but subsequently recalled the same in respect of Section 420. The High Court refused relief to the accused under Section 482 and directed the Magistrate to reconsider the framing of charge under Section 420. The Supreme Court on facts found that the accused could not be required to face trial under Section 420.

In respect of the offence under Section 406 IPC, the accused contended that while framing of charge the court was duty-bound to look into the prima facie materials.

Rejecting this contention,

Held :

But that stage has not reached in the present case. The Magistrate has merely taken cognizance of the offence and has issued process and therefore at this stage the question of consideration of other materials does not arise and the court will have to take a view taking into account the fact that all the statements made in the complaint as well as the statement made under Section 202, if taken on their face value, an offence can be said to have been made out. Applying that standard, it is held that there was no error in taking cognizance of the offence. However, it would be open to the accused while framing charge to argue as to whether the materials do permit framing of a charge. (Para 4). Ajay Mehra v. Durgesh Babu, (2002) 9 SCC 709.

(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2001]

[10248] — Ss. 406, 420 and 120-B — Complaint under, not constituting the offences thereunder — Held, liable to be quashed under S. 482 CrPC — Inherent powers of High Court — Object and manner of exercise of, restated — Where in the complaint under Ss. 406, 420 and 120-B IPC, no offence was made out against the accused, held, the Magistrate committed a manifest error in issuing process and the High Court erred in not invoking its inherent powers to correct that error — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482, 200, 202, 203 and 204

In the present case, except against Appellant 7, no offence was made out against the remaining appellants. The High Court failed to exercise jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC to correct the manifest error committed by the Magistrate in issuing process against Appellants 1-6 and 8 when the alleged acts against them did not constitute offences for want of satisfying the ingredients of the offences. The approach and considerations while exercising power and jurisdiction by a Magistrate at the time of issuing process are to be in terms of Sections 200 to 203 CrPC, having due regard to the position of law explained in various decisions of Supreme Court, and whereas while exercising power under Section 482 CrPC the High Court has to look at the object and purpose for which such power is conferred on it under the said provision. Exercise of inherent power is available to the High Court to give effect to any order under CrPC, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Therefore, the exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC should be consistent with the scope and ambit of the same in the light of the decisions of the Supreme Court. In appropriate cases, to prevent judicial process from being an instrument of oppression or harassment in the hands of frustrated or vindictive litigants, exercise of inherent power is not only desirable but necessary also, so that the judicial forum of court may not be allowed to be utilized for any oblique motive. When a person approaches the High Court under Section 482 CrPC to quash the very issue of process, the High Court on the facts and circumstances of a case has to exercise the powers with circumspection as stated above to really serve the purpose and object for which they are conferred. (Paras 23, 24 and 27). S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2001 SC 2960: 2002 Cri LJ 548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil , JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507, relied on

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615, explained

[10249] — Ss. 406, 420, 467, 468 and 120-B — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Merely because the accused has right to plead at the time of framing of charges that there is no material for framing of charges he is not debarred from invoking the inherent jurisdiction of the court at the earliest point of time when the Magistrate has taken cognizance — On facts, even if the allegations made in complaint and the statement of the complainant and his witnesses are taken on their face value no offence is made out — Complaint quashed not only against the appellants but also against those two accused who did not prefer any appeal — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

Merely because an accused has a right to plead at the time of framing of charges that there is no sufficient material for such framing of charges as provided in Section 245 of the Code, he is not debarred from approaching the court even at an earlier point of time when the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence and summons the accused to appear to contend that the very issuance of the order of taking cognizance is invalid on the ground that no offence can be said to have been made out on the allegations made in the complaint petition. Power under Section 482 has to be exercised sparingly and in the interest of justice. But allowing the criminal proceeding to continue even where the allegations in the complaint petition do not make out any offence would be tantamount to an abuse of the process of court, and therefore, there cannot be any dispute that in such case power under Section 482 of the Code can be exercised. Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: AIR 1998 SC 2796.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sujata V. Manohar and G.B. Pattanaik , JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1998]

[10250] — Ss. 406, 467 r/w Ss. 34 and 120-B — Criminal proceedings when can be quashed at preliminary stage by High court under — Summons issued on a complaint filed by a trustee alleging that Secretary and Manager of the trust property in conspiracy with the co-trustee and his wife created tenancy in respect of the property in favour of the co-trustee's wife — Defence case that the property intended for tenancy and accordingly co-trustee's wife, being an independent person having her own income, inducted as tenant at the rate of rent which outgoing tenant was paying as higher rent was not chargeable under existing law — Tenant-wife volunteering to surrender the tenancy in response to a notice — On facts and in view of strained relationship between settlor of the trust and the co-trustee and his wife, held, High Court justified in quashing the proceedings as ingredients of criminal offence wanting — It was a civil wrong — Trusts Act, 1882, S. 53 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

When a prosecution at the initial stage is asked to be quashed, the test to be applied by the court is as to whether the uncontroverted allegations as made prima facie establish the offence. It is also for the court to take into consideration any special features which appear in a particular case to consider whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. This is so on the basis that the court cannot be utilised for any oblique purpose and where in the opinion of the court chances of an ultimate conviction are bleak and, therefore, no useful purpose is likely to be served by allowing a criminal prosecution to continue, the court may while taking into consideration the special facts of a case also quash the proceeding even though it may be at a preliminary stage.

Though a case of breach of trust may be both a civil wrong and a criminal offence but there would be certain situations where it would predominantly be a civil wrong and may or may not amount to a criminal offence. The present case is one of that type where, if at all, the facts may constitute a civil wrong and the ingredients of the criminal offences are wanting. Having regard to the relevant documents including the trust deed as also the correspondence following the creation of the tenancy, the submissions advanced on behalf of the parties, the natural relationship between the settlor and the trustee as mother and son and the fall out in their relationship and the fact that the wife of the co-trustee was no more interested in the tenancy, it must be held that the criminal case should not be continued. Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 1988 SC 709: 1988 Cri LJ 853.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ranganath Misra, G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1988]

[10251] — Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A — Quashing of charge-sheet — Factors to be considered — Possibility of discharge under S. 239 CrPC — Nature of cases being warrant cases — Relevance — FIR by appellant wife alleging that her respondent husband married another lady in presence of other accused persons, from which a child was born and that appellant was subjected to cruelty for refusing to consent to her abortion and was driven out from her matrimonial home — Charge-sheet under Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A IPC filed — High Court quashed charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC because of non-fulfilment of ingredients constituting offences under these sections — Sustainability — Held, while considering application for quashing of charge-sheet, allegations made in FIR and materials collected during course of investigation are required to be considered — Truthfulness or otherwise of allegation is not fit to be gone into at this stage as it is always a matter of trial — High Court ought not to have interfered after submission of charge-sheet and even before Magistrate examining as to whether accused persons deserved to be discharged under S. 239 CrPC — When a report is submitted to Magistrate, he is required to be prima facie satisfied that facts disclosed therein constitute an offence — Magistrate is not bound by conclusion of investigating agency in police report i.e. in charge-sheet and it is open to him, after exercise of judicial discretion, to take view that facts disclosed in report do not constitute any offence for taking cognizance — Quashing of Ss. 406 and 494 IPC from charge-sheet, even before exercise of discretion by Magistrate under S. 190 CrPC, undesirable — Moreover, all offences are triable by Magistrate and quashing of charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC had not resulted in exonerating accused persons from facing trial itself — Matter would have been different had offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC been triable as a sessions case — Herein, High Court ought to have allowed aforementioned provisions of CrPC their full play — For all these reasons, High Court erred in holding that charge-sheet does not reveal ingredients constituting offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC — Hence, impugned judgment set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 482, 190, 173(2) and 239 (Paras 13 to 20). K. Neelaveni v. State, (2010) 11 SCC 607: AIR 2010 SC 3191: 2010 Cri LJ 2819: (2010) 2 ECrN 541 (SC): (2010) 88 AIC 58 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2010]

(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings (contd.)

[10252] — Ss. 406, 498-A and 114 — Quashing of complaint — Grounds — Vague allegations — Matters to be alleged — Held, for lodging a proper complaint mere mentioning of relevant sections and language of those sections not sufficient — Particulars of offence committed by each accused and role played by them in committing that offence need to be stated — In instant case, allegations related to dowry demand and misbehaviour against husband and parents-in-law (appellants) of complainant — However, said complaint was vague as it did not show which accused had committed what offence and exact role played by appellants in commission of offence(s) — Allegations against husband were somewhat precise, but he had already expired — Held, in such circumstance allowing prosecution to continue against aged appellants would be abuse of process of law — Besides, despite service of notice complainant neither appearing nor engaging counsel to represent her — Hence, said complaint liable to be quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 9 to 12). Neelu Chopra v. Bharti, (2009) 10 SCC 184.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2009]

[10253] — Ss. 406/120-B — Quashment — Relevant considerations — Preventing abuse of process of court or securing ends of justice — Nature of dispute — Quashment of proceedings relating to TDS — Where proceeding is of civil nature which cannot be adjudicated by criminal court, High Court would be justified in exercising its inherent jurisdiction and quashing the same — High Court erred in refusing to exercise its jurisdiction under S. 482 and passing a cryptic order without assigning any reasons therefor when complaint did not disclose any offence of criminal nature — In face of assertion made by appellants that deduction towards income tax were made from salaries of all employees liable to pay the same in view of statutory provisions of IT Act, appropriate remedy for respondent was to approach authority/officer concerned — Moreover, report of SI had indicated that matter in issue was civil in nature — Proceedings against appellants quashed — IT Act, 1961, Ss. 192, 200, 206, 271-C, 276-B & 276-BB — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

A private complaint was filed by the respondent before ACJM under Sections 461/468/406 read with Section 120-B IPC against the appellants alleging discrimination by unduly deducting Rs 1640 p.m. from the monthly salary as income tax and a further wrongful deduction of Rs 3050 on account of cooperative loan issued by the appellants/Company. It was also stated in the complaint that the amount so deducted was not deposited with the Income Tax Authority and should be refunded back. The ACJM directed SI to conduct an inquiry into the allegations made in the complaint. On 30-4-2004, the appellants informed that the amount of income tax deducted in consonance with Section 192 of the Income Tax Act being deposited in due course as tax to the credit of the respondent employee in terms of Section 199 of the Income Tax Act as uniformly done in respect of every employee and also produced Form 16 of the respondent for the period from 1-4-2003 to 31-3-2004. The report submitted by SI showed that complaint in issue was civil in nature. However, JM issued summons against the appellants for an offence under Sections 406/120-B of the Penal Code. In response to the summons, the appellants made an application under Section 205 of the Code before the Judicial Magistrate which was rejected. Subsequently, vide order dated 12-9-2005, the Judicial Magistrate issued warrant of arrest against the appellants.

The appellant's application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint and order dated 12-9-2005 was dismissed by the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the complaint, the respondent mentioned about the filing of a writ petition in 1991 before the High Court of Calcutta and the order passed therein in 2003. He also referred to his contempt petition before the High Court. He alleged that due to the direction of the High Court, which was issued at his instance, the officers entered into a criminal conspiracy and with a view to pressurise him for withdrawing the said contempt, started threatening him and illegally deducting Rs 1640 per month from his monthly salary as income tax though he did not fall within taxable income category. It was also pointed out that a sum of Rs 3050 had been deducted from his salary illegally on account of cooperative loan although, in the previous month, the deduction was only to the extent of Rs 50. (Paras 10 to 13)

A perusal of Sections 192, 200, 206, 271, 276-B and 276-BB of the Income Tax Act, makes it clear that it is obligatory on the part of the persons responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "salaries", at the time of payment, to deduct income tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the financial year on the estimated income of the assessee and pay the same to the authority concerned. They also make it clear that on failure to deduct tax at source they shall be liable to pay, by way of penalty, a sum equal to the amount of tax which such persons failed to deduct or pay.

They also show that failure to pay tax to the credit of the Central Government in certain cases or pay the tax collected at source under Section 276-BB shall be punishable with imprisonment. (Para 23)

In the case on hand, it is the categorical stand of the appellant management that the amount of tax that has been deducted from the respondent's salary as TDS under the head "salaries" in terms of Section 192 is uniformly done in respect of each and every employee of the Company and the amount so deducted is deposited to the credit of the employees including the respondent in terms of Section 199. They also produced a copy of Form 16 being the certificate under Section 203 of the Income Tax Act, 1961 for the tax deducted at source from the income of the respondent. (Para 24)

The JM had forwarded the complaint to SI for conducting an inquiry who had concluded that "the matter is civil in nature" and forwarded the same to the Additional CJM with a request to clarify the same. In spite of that the ACJM after recording stand of complainant had found that there was sufficient ground for proceeding against accused. It is not clear on what grounds ACJM had found so. From the materials placed, particularly, the contents of the complaint, relevant statutory provisions of the Income Tax Act, report of the SI, the complaint does not disclose any case to proceed against the accused persons as arrived at by the Additional CJM. Even if the respondent had some grievance with the appellants about non-promotion, direction of the High Court, pendency of contempt, etc. it is not a case for criminal prosecution. If he is very much interested to vindicate his grievance, the respondent could have very well approached the officer concerned of IISCO or the Income Tax Authority concerned. Though in the complaint, it is stated that the respondent had sent a notice under registered post with acknowledgment due on 17-11-2003, admittedly, no such proof had been placed before the Court. In fact, the appellants stoutly denied the receipt of such a notice. (Paras 26 and 27)

In spite of all the details and materials since the Additional CJM issued summons, the appellants approached the High Court under Section 482 of the Code for quashing the same. The High Court, by the impugned order, without adverting to any of the abovementioned relevant materials passed a cryptic order refusing to exercise its inherent jurisdiction which is unsustainable in law. (Para 28). Rajeswar Tiwari v. Nanda Kishore Roy, (2010) 8 SCC 442: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 915.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2010]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, considered and relied on

[10254] — Ss. 406/420 — Omnibus statement of misrepresentation and absence of details as to how the complainant was duped — Abuse of process of court/law — Jurisdiction of High Court, for quashing criminal proceedings — Held, can be exercised even when application for discharge of the accused pending with the trial Judge — Such power should be exercised cautiously to prevent abuse of process of court — FIR lodged by GM of a Finance Company roping in the appellants and their family members in order to coerce them to refund the amount borrowed by them from the Company — Consequent proceedings initiated for alleged offence under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Complaint under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act already pending against the appellants and others — Held on facts, FIR and the criminal prosecution for the alleged offence under Ss. 406/420 IPC amounted to abuse of process of law and hence the proceedings liable to be quashed — Constitution of India, Art. 227 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 227, 239 & 245

Respondent 2, GM of a Finance Company, lodged a first information report against seven persons including the two appellants alleging that they as Directors of an Automobile Company had taken a short-term loan of Rs 50 lakhs from the Finance Company but the cheques drawn by them by way of repayment of the loan with interest on presentation were dishonoured by the bank for insufficient funds. Police submitted a charge-sheet for offence under Sections 406/420 IPC against the two appellants and their family members describing all of them as Directors of the said Automobile Company. But during investigation the appellants were found to be not Directors of the said Company. In counter-affidavit filed on behalf of the complainant, apart from making an omnibus statement that the first appellant with dishonest intention and misrepresentation got the loan, nothing had been said as to what those misrepresentations were, how the Finance Company was duped, what were the roles played by the appellants and others in the alleged offence and why the charge-sheet was filed only against the appellants and their family members leaving out the other Directors of the Automobile

(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings (contd.)

Company. Though criminal complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act was already pending at the time of filing the FIR but the charge-sheet relating to the alleged offence under Sections 406/420 IPC did not show if the investigating agency looked into the complaint filed under Section 138 of the said Act. The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashing of the criminal proceedings pending against them under Sections 406/424 IPC in the Court of CJM. The High Court dismissed the application. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case the whole attempt of the complainant is evidently to rope in all the members of the family particularly the appellants who are the parents of the Managing Director of the Automobile Company without regard to their role or participation in the alleged offences with the sole purpose of getting the loan due to the Finance Company by browbeating and tyrannising the appellants with criminal prosecution. A criminal complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is already pending against the appellants and other accused. They would suffer the consequences if offence under Section 138 is proved against them. In any case there is no occasion for the complainant to prosecute the appellants under Sections 406/420 IPC and in his doing so it is clearly an abuse of the process of law and prosecution against the appellants for those offences is liable to be quashed. Accordingly, the judgment of the High Court is set aside and prosecution of the appellants under Sections 406/420 IPC is quashed. (Paras 14 and 15)

Jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code has to be exercised with great care. In exercise of its jurisdiction the High Court is not to examine the matter superficially. It is to be seen if a matter, which is essentially of a civil nature, has been given a cloak of criminal offence. Criminal proceedings are not a short cut of other remedies available in law. Before issuing process a criminal court has to exercise a great deal of caution. For the accused it is a serious matter. The Supreme Court has laid certain principles on the basis of which the High Court is to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Jurisdiction under this section has to be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Merely because the accused persons had already filed an application in the Court of Additional Judicial Magistrate for their discharge, it cannot be urged that the High Court cannot exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Though the Magistrate trying a case has jurisdiction to discharge the accused at any stage of the trial if he considers the charge to be groundless but that does not mean that the accused cannot approach the High Court under Section 482 of the Code or Article 227 of the Constitution to have the proceeding quashed against them when no offence has been made out against them and still why must they undergo the agony of a criminal trial. (Paras 8 and 7). G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513: AIR 2000 SC 754: 2000 Cri LJ 824: 2000 All LJ 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa , JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2000]

State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1704, relied on

Followed in All Cargo Movers India (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776*

[10255] — S. 409 — Criminal breach of trust — Matter pertaining to civil suit — Charge not sustainable where the title of the property in question and relationship between the parties not clear — Matters determinable in a civil suit

In view of the long and intimate relations between the respondent and the family of the complainant and the numerous transactions between them, it is difficult to determine the extent to which the complainant was duped or persuaded by misrepresentations to part with her rights in properties. She had a remedy by civil suit, for the declaration of her rights in and return of the properties, still open to her.

It is not possible to fasten criminal liability, beyond reasonable doubt, upon the respondent before the right and the title to the properties in question is properly established by the complainant by means of a civil suit. The High Court was correct in coming to the conclusion, having regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case, that a dispute of an essentially civil nature had to be decided between the complainant and the respondent before any question of criminal liability could be satisfactorily adjudicated upon. Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Birendra Chandra Chakravarty, (1974) 3 SCC 661: 1974 SCC (Cri) 191: AIR 1974 SC 290: (1974) 2 SCR 481: (1975) MLJ (Cri) 24: 1974 Cri LJ 341.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1973]

[10256] — Ss. 409 and 405 — Cognizance of offence taken under, against director of a public limited company — Application filed by the director under S. 482 CrPC seeking discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[10257] — Ss. 409, 420 and 120-B — Exercise of revisional powers by High Court for quashing charges — Maintainability — Charges of corruption against cooperative bank officials — Chargesheet under Ss. 409, 420 and 120-B IPC together with S. 13 (1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988, filed against respondent-accused, Chairman and Directors of Cooperative Bank, who were also members of the Loan Committee, for sanctioning loans without verifying eligibility of borrowers to receive such loans or the end-use of such loans and intentionally acting in an illegal manner to enable borrowers to avail of the loans — Trial court directing framing of charges — In revision thereagainst, High Court quashing the charges framed on the ground that respondents were members of the Loan Committee and as such members they were only required to consider loan cases which were put up to them by Bank Manager concerned for the grant of loan and it was for the Branch Managers of various branches to verify the facts regarding entitlement for grant of loan before submitting the same to the Loan Committee and hence, it could not be said that respondents had acted illegally and had wrongly sanctioned loans to the borrowers concerned — Sustainability — Appellant, inter alia, contending that in going into factual aspects of the matter, High Court travelled beyond its revisional powers in coming to findings of fact, which were yet to be established on evidence — Tenability — Held, undoubtedly, in the inquiry report of District Vigilance Committee, role attributed to respondents in sanctioning loans was shown to be purely managerial where the groundwork had been completed by Branch Managers, but as members of Loan Sanctioning Committee, they had acted inefficiently — It was also suggested that Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Bank had connived with other accused in defrauding the Bank — Hence, held, High Court erroneously quashed charges framed against respondents — Consequently, orders impugned set aside and charges framed by trial court restored — Trial court directed to proceed with trial — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 401 & 397 and 228 (Paras 5, 10, 43, 44 and 50 to 52). State of M.P. v. Rameshwar, (2009) 11 SCC 424: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1421: (2009) 77 AIC 102 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 2415.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2009]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Nikhil Merchant v. CBI, (2008) 9 SCC 677: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 859, distinguished

[10258] — Ss. 409, 420 and 405 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot hold a parallel trial in exercise of power under — If offence prima facie falls under the Penal Code, launching of prosecution cannot be thwarted by High Court under S. 482 merely because penal action open under any other statute — Cognizance of offence taken by Magistrate under S. 409 IPC against managing director and directors (appellants) of a public limited company on the basis of charge-sheet submitted by CBI and other material prima facie disclosing dishonest misappropriation of share and debenture moneys collected from public — Application filed by appellants under S. 482 seeking their discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 69, 63 and 73 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

Though the Companies Act contains provisions regarding the issuance of prospectus, applications for shares and allotment thereof and provides different checks over the misuse of the fund collected from the public for issuance of shares or debentures, but where persons issue prospectus and collect moneys from public assuring them that they intend to do business with the public money for their benefit and the benefit of such public, but the real intention is to do no business other than collecting the moneys from the public for their personal gain, such persons cannot be said to be immune from the provisions of the Penal Code. The persons managing the affairs of such company cannot use the juristic entity and corporate personality of the company as a shield to evade themselves from prosecution for offences under the Penal Code, if it is established that primary object of the incorporation and existence of the Company is to defraud the public.

But, at the same time, while taking cognizance of alleged offences in connection with the registration, issuance of prospectus, collection of moneys

(12)(xiii) Quashment/Stay/Civil proceedings (contd.)

from the investors and the misappropriation of the fund collected from the shareholders which constitute one offence or other under the Penal Code, court must be satisfied that prima facie an offence under the Penal Code has been disclosed on the materials produced before the court. For prosecution for offences under the Penal Code the complainant has to make out a prima facie case against the individuals concerned, regarding their acts and omissions which constitute the different ingredients of the offences under the Penal Code. There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished.

In the facts of the present case itself, the prosecution has to prove that the appellant as promotors or directors, had dishonest intention since the very beginning while collecting the moneys from the applicants for the shares and debentures or that having collected such moneys they dishonestly misappropriated the same. The ingredients of the different offences under the Penal Code need not be proved only by direct evidence: they can be shown from the circumstances of a particular case that the intention of the promotors or the directors was dishonest since the very inception or that they developed such intention at some stage, for their wrongful gain and causing wrongful loss to the investors. All the circumstances and the materials to prove such a charge have to be collected during the investigation and inquiry and ultimately have to be produced before the court at the stage of trial for a verdict as to whether the ingredients of offence in question have been established on behalf of the prosecution.

In the present case the quashing of the prosecution pending against the appellants only on the ground that it was open to the applicants for shares to take recourse to the provisions of the Companies Act, cannot be accepted. It is a futile attempt on the part of the appellants, to close the chapter before it has unfolded itself. It will be for the trial court to examine the matter on the materials produced on behalf of the prosecution. That exercise cannot be performed either by the High Court or by the Supreme Court. The trial court should proceed with the case in accordance with law.

The High Court should not, while exercising power under S. 482 of the Code, usurp the jurisdiction of the trial court. The power under S. 482 of the Code has been vested in the High Court to quash a prosecution which amounts to abuse of the process of the court. But that power cannot be exercised by the High Court to hold a parallel trial, only on basis of the statements and documents collected during investigation or inquiry, for purpose of expressing an opinion whether the accused concerned is likely to be punished if the trial is allowed to proceed. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[10259] — Ss. 409, 422, 426 and 120-B — Quashment — Matters to be considered — Motivated proceedings — Complaint filed against appellants (bank officials) as counterblast to action taken by them in their official capacity for realising loan amount due — Intention behind initiating criminal proceedings to prevent public servants from discharging their duties — Effect — Held, complaint clearly abuse of judicial process to harass appellants — Averments and allegations in complaint not disclosing commission of any offence by appellants — Instant case a classic illustration of non-application of mind by trial court where Magistrate not scrutinising even contents of complaint, leave aside material documents available on record — Magistrate remaining a silent spectator at the time of recording of preliminary evidence before summoning appellants — High Court committing manifest error in disposing of S. 482 petition without even adverting to basic facts which were placed before it for its consideration — Hence, criminal proceedings quashed — Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, Ss. 17 and 19 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

In the instant case, Bank P sanctioned a loan amount to a proprietary concern owned by one J (borrower). J furnished security of five guarantors, including respondent complainant, who in turn deposited FDRs, each duly signed, authorising the Bank to appropriate proceeds of FDRs along with interest if timely payments were not made by the borrower.

After passing of about one year, the Bank realised that the loan account had become totally irregular since the borrower was not paying any amount whatsoever as undertaken in terms of the agreement. First appellant (Senior Manager of the Bank), on realising that recovery of bank loan had become impossible, adjusted some amounts from FDRs furnished by guarantors as security towards dues of borrower.

The Bank vide its notice informed borrower and guarantors that the loan account should be regularised to which there was no response. This was followed by the Bank lodging an FIR against borrower and guarantors including the respondent for cheating and for misappropriation of hypothecated goods. The respondent complainant being aggrieved by the action of the Bank in appropriating FDRs, filed complaint case under Ss. 409, 422, 426 and 120-B IPC against appellants (Bank officials). The trial court took cognizance of the case and directed non-bailable warrant of arrest against appellants. The appellants being aggrieved by trial court's order, filed a petition under S. 482 CrPC before High Court for quashing the criminal proceedings, which was dismissed. Hence the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The averments and allegations made in the complaint do not disclose the commission of any offence by the appellants or any one of them. They were merely discharging their duties to realise and recover the amounts due to the Bank from the borrower as well as the guarantors. The complaint obviously was filed as a counterblast to the proceedings already initiated by the Bank including the FIR lodged by the first appellant (Senior Manager of the Bank) against the complainant and the borrower for the offences of cheating and misappropriation. (Para 33)

Sequence of events undoubtedly suggests that the criminal proceedings have been maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive of wreaking vengeance on the appellants and with a view to spite them due to personal grudge. It was clearly intended to prevent the public servants from discharging their duties. (Para 34)

The case on hand is a classic illustration of non-application of mind by the Magistrate. The Magistrate did not scrutinise even the contents of the complaint, leave aside the material documents available on record. The Magistrate truly was a silent spectator at the time of recording of preliminary evidence before summoning the appellants. The criminal law was set in motion by the Magistrate by mere asking to do so by the complainant. (Paras 27 and 34)

The High Court committed a manifest error in disposing of the petition filed by the appellants under Section 482 CrPC without even adverting to the basic facts which were placed before it for its consideration. It almost abdicated its duty in refusing to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, though the case on hand required its interference in order to prevent abuse of the process by a court subordinate to it. (Paras 28 and 35)

A clear case is made out requiring interference to secure the ends of justice. Hence, impugned order of the High Court is set aside and the criminal proceedings arising out of complaint case are quashed. (Paras 35 and 36). M.N. Ojha v. Alok Kumar Srivastav, (2009) 9 SCC 682: (2009) 82 AIC 134 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy , JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2009]

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613, relied on

(xiv) Witnesses

[10260] — Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 411 — Appellant, Bank clerk accused of forging bills and getting payments — Approver's evidence, if valid — Corroboration of approver's evidence, whether adequate — Omission by approver to state to police some facts, whether fatal — Conviction upheld

Omissions by approver in his statement to the police is not fatal. It may be that when the approver gave his police statement he did not know that he would be granted pardon and possibly for that reason had not come out with all the facts known to him and he did so while he was making his statement before the Magistrate as he knew by then that he would be tendered pardon on condition that he would disclose all the facts known to him. The omission in the police statement, therefore, by itself would not necessarily have rendered his evidence unreliable. In considering whether the approver's evidence passed the test of reliability, the Court would have to consider whether taken as a whole and in the light of the facts and circumstances of the case it was a credible version or not. Madan Mohan Lal v. State of Punjab, (1970) 2 SCC 733: 1970 SCC (Cri) 509: AIR 1970 SC 1006: 1970 Cri LJ 898.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and G.K. Mitter, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-1970]

(13) Sentence/Fine/Compensation/Other punishment/relief

See also '(8)(v) Criminal breach of trust by public servant (S. 409) — Corruption cases — Sentence', above

[10261] — S. 406 — Sentence — Amount defalcated surrendered by accused and thereafter, accused remaining in jail till his release on bail — In the circumstances, sentence of one year's RI reduced to the period already undergone. Diannatius v. State of Kerala, 1987 Supp SCC 189: 1988 SCC (Cri) 57(2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-1987]

[10262] — Ss. 406 and 420 — Compromise — Compounding of offence — Offences under Ss. 406/420 IPC, compoundable with permission of the court — In view of compromise between the parties, Supreme Court directing them to file an application under S. 320 before the court concerned — CrPC, 1973, S. 320(2) (Para 2). Raja Ram Kashyap v. State of U.P., (2009) 14 SCC 248.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2009]

[10263] — Ss. 406, 477-A and 420 r/w S. 120-B — Sentence — Occurrence taking place about 20 years ago — Sentence reduced to the period already undergone — However, sentence of fine with default clause refrained — No law point laid down. Natvarlal Nathalal Patel v. State of Gujarat, (1993) 1 GLH 516.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-1992]

— S. 410 See also Ss. 411 and 410

[10264] — Ss. 410 and 401 — Acquittal by courts below under S. 401 — Upheld by Supreme Court — No alternative charge under S. 410 — Nor plea for conviction under S. 410 canvassed in courts below — In such situation Supreme Court cannot in appeal under Art. 136 convict under S. 410 especially when findings of fact were that none of the acquitted were found in possession of stolen property knowing it to be stolen — CrPC, 1973, S. 386. Pandara Nadar v. State of T.N., 1991 Supp (2) SCC 458: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1069: AIR 1991 SC 391: 1991 Cri LJ 468.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1990]

[10265] — Ss. 410, 411, 403 and 405 — Stolen property — Extended meaning of expression "stolen property" — Held, the expression covers not only the property obtained by theft but also property obtained by robbery, extortion, criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust — Offence of dishonest retention of stolen property is almost contemporaneous with offence of dishonestly receiving stolen property — Further held, offence under S. 411 is directed against receiver of stolen property and not against the principal offender, namely, thief or the person who commits other offences mentioned in S. 410 — Conviction of principal offender is therefore not a prerequisite for conviction of person who receives stolen property — On facts held, A-1, A-2 and A-4 who were bank officials, had committed criminal breach of trust and therefore money received through them by A-3 (a broker in securities) was stolen property — A-3 was therefore guilty of offence under S. 411

An extended meaning is given to words "stolen property" which are used in the four sections subsequent to Section 410. Not only things which have been stolen, extorted or robbed but also things which have been obtained by criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust, are within the meaning assigned to these words. (Para 179)

A-1, A-2 and A-4 were involved in the offence of criminal breach of trust and accordingly funds which were transferred to A-3's account, fall within the definition of stolen property. (Para 180)

Section 411 as also succeeding sections are directed not against principal offender, namely, thief, robber or misappropriator but against persons who trade in stolen articles and are receivers of stolen property. Principal offenders are therefore outside the scope of this section. Accordingly, conviction of principal offender is not a prerequisite to conviction of receiver of stolen property under this section. However, in the present case the principal offenders i.e. A-1, A-2 and A-4 have been held guilty of criminal breach of trust, therefore, A-3's conviction would be even more clearly established from the facts and circumstances of the case. (Para 181)

The offence of dishonest retention of property is almost contemporaneous with the offence of dishonestly receiving stolen property. A person who dishonestly receives property and retains it, must obviously continue to retain it. (Para 182)

It is the duty of the prosecution in order to bring home the guilt of a person under Section 411 to prove that: (1) stolen property was in possession of the accused; (2) some person other than the accused had possession of the property before the accused got possession of it; and (3) the accused had knowledge that the property was stolen. It has been conclusively established by the prosecution that A-3 was guilty of an offence under Section 411, since he had dishonestly received stolen property. (Para 183). Mir Nagvi Askari v. CBI, (2009) 15 SCC 643.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[10266] — Ss. 410 and 414 — Scope and application — Theft of bales of cloth — Recovery of a large quantity of each item from the house of accused — Accused giving no explanation about the recovery of such a large quantity of various items of cloth from his house — Articles recovered within few days of theft — Labels of the firms to whom stolen items of cloth belonged present on the items — Manuscript writings of dealers whose bales were stolen present on a number of items recovered — Held, circumstance warrant a finding that property was stolen property. Ajendranath v. State of M.P., AIR 1964 SC 170: (1964) 3 SCR 289: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 129, 130: 1964 MLJ (Cri) 226.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1963]

— S. 411 See also Ss. 302, 392 and 411
See also Ss. 302, 394, 397 and 411
See also Ss. 302 and 411
See also Ss. 302, 460, 397 and 411
See also Ss. 394, 307 and 411
See also Ss. 394, 395, 397 and 411
See also Ss. 395, 411 and 412
See also Ss. 405, 409, 411 and 120-B
See also Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 411
See also Ss. 410, 411, 403 and 405
See also Ss. 412 and 411
See also Ss. 457, 380, 411, 413 and 414
See also Ss. 468, 411 and 420

[10267] — S. 411 — Accused found in possession of stolen goods within two days of theft — Presumption by Court that the accused received the goods knowing them to be stolen not improper — Absence of explanation by accused regarding the possession — Conviction, held, proper — Presumption under Illus. (a) to S. 114 of Evidence Act could be drawn against him. Virumal Mulchand v. State of Gujarat, (1974) 3 SCC 565: 1974 SCC (Cri) 43: AIR 1974 SC 334: 1974 Cri LJ 277.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.R. Khanna, A. Alagiriswami and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-1973]

[10268] — S. 411 — Accused received crime article (ornaments) knowing them to be stolen property can be convicted under S. 411 on the basis of presumption under S. 114, Ill. (a) — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114 Ill. (a). Nagappa Dondiba Kalal v. State of Karnataka, 1980 Supp SCC 336: 1981 SCC (Cri) 278: AIR 1980 SC 1753: 1980 Cri LJ 1270.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1980]

[10269] — S. 411 — Applicability of S. 114 Ill (a), Evidence Act where murder and robbery forming part of the same transaction — What should be the maximum length of time lapse between the commission of the robbery or theft and recovery of the stolen articles to justify presumption under Ill. (a) — Penal Code, 1860, S. 411

In this case murder and robbery are proved to have been integral parts of one and the same transaction and therefore the presumption arising under Illustration (a) to S. 114 of the Evidence Act is that the appellant committed murder as well as robbery. The proved circumstances raised the inference that the appellant alone and no one else was guilty of the offence of murder and robbery. The false denial by itself is an incriminating circumstance. The nature of presumption under Illustration (a) to S. 114 must depend upon the nature of the evidence adduced.

No fixed time limit can be laid down to determine whether possession is recent or otherwise and each case must be judged on its own facts. The question as to what amounts to recent possession sufficient to justify the presumption of guilt varies according as the stolen article is or is not calculated to pass readily from hand to hand. If the stolen articles are of the latter kind, the period of one year that elapsed cannot be said to be too long particularly when the appellant had been absconding during that period. There was no lapse of time between the date of his arrest and the recovery of the stolen property. Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447: AIR 1983 SC 446: 1983 Cri LJ 846.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1983]

[10270] — S. 411 — Circumstantial evidence — Recovery of a wrist-watch and a gold ring belonging to the deceased from possession of the accused persons on disclosure statements made by them — Held, this circumstance not sufficient to hold the accused persons guilty of being participants in the crime of murder more particularly when the prosecution had led evidence to show that other accused persons had disposed of some of the articles of deceased and got converted others into different ornaments — They could only be held liable for being in possession of stolen property — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27. Anshad v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 4 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1204.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-1994]

[10271] — S. 411 — Crucial points for consideration in a case under the section — Identity of the goods be established

The crucial points in a case under S. 411 for the courts to consider are: (1) whether the property before the Court were stolen property and (2) whether the same had been attached from the possession of the appellant. If either of these points was not proved the offence could not be brought home. Mahabir Sao v. State of Bihar, (1972) 1 SCC 505: 1972 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 1972 SC 642: 1972 Cri LJ 458.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy and D.G. Palekar , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-1972]

[10272] — S. 411 — Essential elements of — Prosecution must prove that accused had knowledge that property recovered from his possession was stolen property or that he had reason to believe that it was stolen property. Ganesh Chandra Paramanik v. State of W.B., Criminal Appeal No. 55 of 1956.

[Date of decision: 19-8-1958]

[10273] — S. 411 — FIR lodged promptly giving full particulars of the missing currency notes — Recovery of the notes made within a week thereafter from the appellants, witnessed by independent and reliable eyewitnesses — In the circumstances held, plea of planting of the notes on the appellants not acceptable. Satish Chandra v. State of U.P., (1983) 2 SCC 141: 1983 SCC (Cri) 367: AIR 1983 SC 347: 1983 Cri LJ 683: 1983 ALJ 278.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1983]

[10274] — S. 411 — Identity of ornaments worn by the deceased established by four close relations and the goldsmith — Failure to hold text identification parade, held, not fatal — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9. Nagappa Dondiba Kalal v. State of Karnataka, 1980 Supp SCC 336: 1981 SCC (Cri) 278: AIR 1980 SC 1753: 1980 Cri LJ 1270.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1980]

[10275] — S. 411 — Ingredients of — Requirements for — Duty of prosecution

It is the duty of prosecution in order to bring home the guilt of a person under S. 411, to prove, (1) that the stolen property was in the possession of the accused, (2) that some person other than the accused had possession of the property before the accused got possession of it, and (3) that the accused had knowledge that the property was stolen property. Trimbak v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 39: 1954 Cri LJ 335, 336.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.C. Mahajan and N.H. Bhagwati, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1953]

[10276] — S. 411 — Nature of inquiry under is a subjective one

Lord Widgery, C.J. in Atwal v. Massey, laid down that in order to establish an offence under S. 22 of the (English) Theft Act, 1968 which is similar in terms to S. 411 of the Indian Penal Code it was not sufficient to show that the goods had been received in circumstances which would have put a reasonable man on enquiry; the question was a subjective one; was the appellant aware of the theft or did he believe the goods to be stolen or did he, suspecting the goods to be stolen, deliberately shut his eyes to the circumstances. Satnarain Sao v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 881: 1973 SCC (Cri) 86: AIR 1972 SC 1561: (1973) 1 SCR 207: 1972 Cri LJ 1048.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Grover and M.H. Beg, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-1972]

Atwal v. Massey, (1971) 3 All ER 881, relied on [10277] — S. 411 — Possession of stolen property — Accused entitled to acquittal if explanation given by him might reasonably be true

Section 114 of Evidence Act provides that the court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business, in their relation to facts of the particular case. If an explanation were given which the jury think might reasonably be true, and which is consistent with innocence, although they were not convinced of its truth, the prisoners were entitled to be acquitted inasmuch as the prosecution would have failed to discharge the duty cast upon it of satisfying the jury beyond reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. Satnarain Sao v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 881: 1973 SCC (Cri) 86: AIR 1972 SC 1561: (1973) 1 SCR 207: 1972 Cri LJ 1048.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Grover and M.H. Beg, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-1972]

Atwal v. Massey, (1971) 3 All ER 881; Otto George Gfeller v. King, AIR 1943 PC 211: 45 Cri LJ 241 and Rex v. Abramovitch, (1914) 86 LJ (KB) 391, approved

[10278] — S. 411 — Possession of stolen property — Presumption that can be raised — Rebuttal of — Effect

The presumption from recent possession of stolen property is an optional presumption of fact under S. 114, Indian Evidence Act. It is open to the court to convict an appellant by using the presumption where the circumstances indicate that no other reasonable hypothesis except the guilty knowledge of the appellant is open to the prosecution.

But where the explanation given by the accused was good enough to raise serious doubts about the sustainability of the charge, the accused was entitled to acquittal. Karnal Singh Uttam Singh v. State of Maharashtra, (1976) 1 SCC 882: 1976 SCC (Cri) 204: AIR 1976 SC 1097: 1976 Cri LJ 842.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1975]

Otto George Gfeller v. King, AIR 1943 PC 211: 45 Cri LJ 241, followed

[10279] — S. 411 — Receiver of stolen articles pleading himself to be a pawnbroker — Proof of avocation of pawnbroker — Not proved, conviction upheld

Where the accused stated that he worked as a contractor and took things on pawn and advanced money and in the course of business took the cycle which was alleged to be stolen property in pledge.

Held :

(i) The first and the most important fact is that the accused had sought to prove a document in support of the transaction of pledge. That document was not duly proved.

(ii) Apart from the alleged stolen cycle several other cycles were found in the possession of the accused which he claimed to have been pledged with him or with members of his family which would normally have been done if the version given by him that the business of pawnbrokers was being carried on had any truth in it.

(iii) Pawnbrokers are ordinarily and in normal course expected to maintain some books of account or some documents which could contain the particulars of the transactions relating to pledge. In their absence it could not be said that the stolen articles found in possession of the accused came into his possession by means of an honest transaction. Satnarain Sao v. State of Bihar, (1972) 3 SCC 881: 1973 SCC (Cri) 86: AIR 1972 SC 1561: (1973) 1 SCR 207: 1972 Cri LJ 1048.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Grover and M.H. Beg, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-1972]

[10280] — S. 411 — Receiver of stolen property — In absence of charge and in view of appeal before SC being heard 17 years after the occurrence, on the peculiar facts, held, improper to record a conviction in appeal. Kedar Nath v. State of M.P., 1993 Supp (1) SCC 7: 1993 SCC (Cri) 276: AIR 1991 SC 1224: 1991 Cri LJ 989.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-1990]

[10281] — S. 411 — Receiving stolen property — Presumption from mere discovery — When cannot be drawn — Imputation of knowledge if proper on facts

The High Court while disposing an appeal against acquittal, took the view that the accused having given no explanation regarding his knowledge of the place from which the ornaments were taken out, it must be presumed that he must have kept the ornaments there and that the fact that the field did not belong to the accused and that the place was accessible to others would not show that the ornaments were not in his possession but were kept by someone else, in the absence of a statement from the accused explaining the circumstances under which he came to know about the ornaments.

Held :

It was not the correct way of approaching the decision of a case under S. 411, IPC. When the field from which the ornaments were recovered was an open one, and accessible to all and sundry, it is difficult to hold positively that the accused was in possession of these articles. The fact of recovery by the accused is compatible with the circumstance of somebody else having placed the articles there and of the accused somehow acquiring knowledge about their whereabouts and that being so, the fact of discovery cannot be regarded as conclusive proof that the accused was in possession of these articles.

From the bare fact that accused was residing in the complainant's village his knowledge that the ornaments were stolen property could not legitimately be concluded. Trimbak v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 39: 1954 Cri LJ 335, 336.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.C. Mahajan and N.H. Bhagwati, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1953]

[10282] — S. 411 — Recovery — Held, on facts, doubtful — Circumstantial evidence — Theft and murder — Recovery of gold jewellery and other articles belonging to the deceased from the respective jhuggis of the accused-appellants at their instance — Doubt in respect of — PW 5, who was stated to have witnessed the recovery, did not enter any of the jhuggis and, therefore, had not seen the actual recovery — Further, difference in the tim- ing of the recovery proceedings between the evidence of PW 5 and IO — Evidence of PW 19 indicating that the recovered goods were deposited in the malkhana even before the recovery proceedings started — Thus, alleged recovery, held on facts, doubtful — Conviction liable to be set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 27 and 114 Ill. (a) — Recovery of gold jewellery and other articles belonging to the deceased from the houses of the accused persons — Doubt in respect of — PW 5, who was stated to have witnessed the recovery, did not enter any of the jhuggis and, therefore, had not seen the actual recovery — Further, difference in the timing of the recovery proceedings between the evidence of PW 5 and IO — Evidence of PW 19 indicating that the recovered goods were deposited in the malkhana even before the recovery proceedings started — Thus, alleged recovery, held on facts, doubtful (Paras 10 to 13). Kuldip Singh v. State of Delhi, (2003) 12 SCC 528: AIR 2004 SC 771: (2004) 109 DLT 190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

Limbaji v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 10 SCC 340: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1044; Gulab Chand v. State of M.P., (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552, distinguished on facts

[10283] — S. 411 — Recovery of ring of deceased from the appellant 8 days after murder — No valid explanation offered by the appellant — Held, in circumstances, appellant liable to be convicted under S. 411 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a). Gulab Singh v. State of U.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 502: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1783.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1992]

[10284] — S. 411 — Sentence — Two years' RI and fine of Rs 500 imposed — Reduction of — Offence occurred about 19 years back when accused-appellant was 27-28 years — He already suffered imprisonment for 9 months — He was granted exemption from surrendering by order of Supreme Court counsel for the appellant after arguing the matter requested to issue notice to the appellant-accused to engage other advocate but the request was refused — Keeping in view all the facts and circumstances of the case, held, the order of conviction under S. 411 cannot be disturbed but the sentence of rigorous imprisonment should be reduced to the period of imprisonment already undergone. Ram Kalyan v. State of Rajasthan, (2000) 8 SCC 149: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1471: AIR 2000 SC 3157.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and Shivaraj V. Patil , JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-2000]

[10285] — S. 411 — Separate recoveries of stolen currency notes from four accused — Conviction of the two accused-appellants based on testimony of independent and reliable eyewitnesses, held, not improper merely because of acquittal of the other two accused for lack of testimony of reliable witnesses. Satish Chandra v. State of U.P., (1983) 2 SCC 141: 1983 SCC (Cri) 367: AIR 1983 SC 347: 1983 Cri LJ 683: 1983 ALJ 278.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1983]

[10286] — S. 411 — Statement distinctly relating to discovery is admissible in evidence whether confessional or not — Accused in a case under S. 411, IPC, stating that he had hidden the ornaments and will show the place — Whole of the statement including the portion "where he had hidden the ornaments" is admissible — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27

Section 27 is an exception to Ss. 25 and 26 of Evidence Act, which prohibit the proof of a confession made to a police officer or a confession made while a person is in police custody, unless it is made in immediate presence of a Magistrate. Section 27 allows that part of the statement made by the accused to the police "whether it amounts to confession or not" which relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered to be proved. Thus even a confessional statement before the police which distinctly relates to discovery of a fact may be proved under S. 27.

It is only that part which distinctly relates to the discovery which is admissible; but if any part of the statement distinctly relates to the discovery it will be admissible wholly and the court cannot say that it will excise one part of the statement because it is of a confessional nature. Section 27 makes that part of the statement which is distinctly related to the discovery admissible as a whole, whether it be in the nature of confession or not.

Where in a case under S. 411, IPC, the accused stated that he would show the place where he had hidden the ornaments, the whole of the statement relates distinctly to the discovery of the ornaments and is admissible under S. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act. The words "when he had hidden them" have nothing to do with the past history of the crime and are distinctly related to the actual discovery that took place by virtue of that statement. Also these words by themselves though they may show possession of the appellant would not prove the offence, for after the articles have been recovered, the prosecution has still to show that the articles recovered are connected with the crime, i.e., in this case, the prosecution will have to show that they are stolen property. K. Chinnaswamy Reddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1962 SC 1788, 1793: (1963) 3 SCR 412: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 8.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1962]

But see also Prabhoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 1113: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 182

[10287] — S. 411 — Stolen property — Identification of — Common article with a description different from the one given in the complaint — Difficult to say that the article is a stolen property

In the case of a common article like a pipe which does not bear any distinctive mark and which again is shown demonstrably to have a diameter which is 'obviously' less than the one described in the complaint, it will be difficult to say that the property before the court was stolen property. Mahabir Sao v. State of Bihar, (1972) 1 SCC 505: 1972 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 1972 SC 642: 1972 Cri LJ 458.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy and D.G. Palekar , JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-1972]

[10288] — S. 411 — Stolen property shown to have been directly brought into the shop of the accused from the place of theft — Held, prosecution still has to show that in respect of the property recovered from the possession of the accused he had reason to believe that it was stolen property — Showing that partner of the accused paid the driver who brought the goods, held, not sufficient — Presence of the accused in the shop does not prove his complicity. Mohan Lal v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 4 SCC 751: 1980 SCC (Cri) 173: AIR 1979 SC 1718: 1979 Cri LJ 1328.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1979]

[10289] — S. 411 — Stolen watch handed over to accused in presence of police — Seizure of such watch cannot sustain conviction — It cannot be said to have been seized from the accused. Naba Kumar Das v. State of W.B., (1974) 3 SCC 582: 1974 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1974 SC 777: 1974 Cri LJ 512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Dwivedi and Y.V. Chandrachud , JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1973]

[10290] — S. 411 — Sufficiency of evidence — Dacoity case — Search of suspect and alleged recovery of four 'bronze churis' — Police officer recording them in seizure memo as four 'bangles' made of 'brass' — Articles not sealed — Held, conviction under S. 411, IPC cannot be sustained on the basis of such seizure and sole evidence of the police officer. Naba Kumar Das v. State of W.B., (1974) 3 SCC 582: 1974 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1974 SC 777: 1974 Cri LJ 512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Dwivedi and Y.V. Chandrachud , JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1973]

[10291] — Ss. 411 and 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Presence of the accused around the time and place of occurrence along with the cattle of the deceased, held on facts, by itself not sufficient to raise irresistible conclusion about participation of the accused in commission of murder of the deceased — But the accused's possession of the cattle, which the deceased had taken to the field on the day of occurrence having been proved, held, accused must be convicted under S. 411, Penal Code. Joga Gola v. State of Gujarat, 1981 Supp SCC 66: 1982 SCC (Cri) 141: AIR 1982 SC 1227.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1980]

[10292] — Ss. 411 and 302 — Recovery of watch belonging to the deceased at the instance of the accused — Does not connect him with murder — However, he can be punished under S. 411 for being in possession of stolen property — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114 Ill. (a). Surjit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1994 SC 110: 1993 Cri LJ 3901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1993]

[10293] — Ss. 411 and 392 — Robbery in dark night — Identification of accused being doubtful, conviction under S. 392 not sustainable — However, in view of recovery of stolen articles from the possession of the accused conviction under S. 411 upheld — Having regard to long lapse of time and also recovery of articles of ordinary nature sentence reduced to the period already undergone. Shankar Lal Yadav v. State of M.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 1409.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1992]

[10294] — Ss. 411, 394 and 302 — Recovery of gold ornaments of the deceased from the appellant within three days of the murder — On facts, however, held he could only be convicted under S. 411, Indian Penal Code — Prosecution cannot benefit from accused's failure to explain his possession — Burden on prosecution to prove its case affirmatively — Conviction under Ss. 394 & 302 thereby substituted and sentenced to 3 years' RI and fine of Rs 5000 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114. Nagappa Dondiba Kalal v. State of Karnataka, 1980 Supp SCC 336: 1981 SCC (Cri) 278: AIR 1980 SC 1753: 1980 Cri LJ 1270.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1980]

[10295] — Ss. 411 and 396 — Recovery of crime articles — Long delay in recovery — Evidentiary value of such articles — Gold chain, gold bangles, torchlight, gold ring and gold ear-flowers allegedly stolen at the time of murder — Recovery of such articles from the accused persons three long months after the incident, held, too artificial to be believed — Even otherwise, no presumption of involvement of the accused persons in the murder could be drawn at this late stage — More so when they were acquitted of the charge under S. 396 IPC and there was no charge under S. 411 IPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a) — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27. Shabad Pulla Reddy v. State of A.P., (1997) 8 SCC 495: AIR 1997 SC 3087: 1997 Cri LJ 3753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-1997]

[10296] — Ss. 411 and 404 — Circumstantial evidence — Failure of accused to offer satisfactory explanation for possession of the stolen property — Effect — Held, though not an incriminating circumstance by itself, would yet enable an inference being raised against him because the fact being in the exclusive knowledge of the accused it is for him to offer an explanation — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 114 Ill. (a), 106 and 3 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 313 (Para 15). Ganesh Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 731: 2002 SCC (Cri) 247: 2002 Cri LJ 967.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2001]

Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447; Gulab Chand v. State of M.P., (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552, relied on

[10297] — Ss. 411 and 410 — Offence of dishonestly receiving stolen property can only be in respect of "stolen property" — Meaning of

There can be no offence of dishonestly receiving stolen property unless the property which is alleged to be the subject of such receiving, answers the description of "stolen property" given in S. 410, Penal Code. Only such property possession whereof has been transferred by theft, or extortion or criminal misappropriation or other offences allied to them as mentioned in S. 410, falls within the definition of "stolen property". Chandmal v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 621: 1976 SCC (Cri) 120: AIR 1976 SC 917: 1976 Cri LJ 679.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria , JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-1975]

[10298] — Ss. 411 and 412 — Seizure of stolen articles and cash from a hutment allegedly belonging to the appellants who were sleeping outside the hutment — Absence of evidence to show that appellants were owners of the hutment — Articles seized found to be of common use — No evidence led to establish identity of the articles as stolen property — Conviction set aside. Manik Devrao Shinde v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 468: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1761.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, M.M. Punchhi and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1992]

[10299] — Ss. 411 and 412 — Time factor between theft and recovery of material — Hard and fast rule if possible — Recovery of the barrel of a gun after nine months — Drawing presumption under Illus. (a) to S. 114 of Evidence Act if proper

Illustration (a) to S. 114, Evidence Act makes it plain that the time factor has a material bearing and the Court must keep it in view before it can draw the presumption in accordance with the illustration. The presumption can be raised if a person is found to be in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft. If, however, a long period elapses between the date of the theft and the date on which a person is found to be in possession of the stolen articles, the Court would not be justified in drawing the presumption in accordance with the above illustration. The question as to how much period should elapse after the theft in order to rule out the presumption under Illustration (a) would depend on the nature of the stolen article and the facts of each case. If the stolen article recovered from the accused is one which frequently changes hand, in such a case much shorter period would be required before the Court would be entitled to draw the presumption under the above illustration. On the contrary, if the stolen article found in the possession of the accused is one which does not normally change many hands, the Court may draw the presumption under the illustration even after the lapse of a number of months. Again, if the stolen articles recovered from the possession of the accused are some rare books or paintings of a great master or some idol of historical value, the Court will be well justified in drawing a presumption against the person found in possession under the above illustration even after the lapse of a period of more than one year. As against that, if the stolen goods of which the accused is found in possession comprise clothes or other articles which are easily available in the market, the Court may well decline to draw the presumption after the lapse of a much shorter time.

In the present case the article recovered from the appellant was the barrel of a gun which had been carried away by the dacoits as a result of dacoity. The barrel bore the number of the gun. Such a barrel of a gun does not normally change many hands. The nature of the article in question is such that there was bound to arise suspicion in the mind of the person to whom the article was handed over. No satisfactory explanation has been furnished by the appellant for his possession of the barrel. It cannot be said that the appellant acquired the possession of the barrel innocently. Looking to the peculiar nature of the stolen article recovered from the appellant, there is no cogent ground to interfere with the view of the High Court and the trial Court that a presumption can be drawn against the appellant in accordance with Illustration (a) to S. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act after the expiry of a period of eight or nine months from the date of dacoity. Alisher v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 254: 1974 SCC (Cri) 416: AIR 1974 SC 1830: 1974 Cri LJ 897.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.R. Khanna, V.R. Krishna Iyer and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-1973]

— S. 412 See also Ss. 120-B, Ss. 302/34, 394 and 412

See also Ss. 395, 411 and 412
See also Ss. 395 and 412
See also Ss. 396 and 412
See also Ss. 397 and 412

[10300] — S. 412 — Discovery of pant, bushshirt and ring at the instance of the accused — Held, in the circumstances of the case, evidence of recovery rightly rejected by the High Court as it was not probable that while committing dacoity the accused had taken away clothes also along with the gold ring and buried them in the courtyard of the house — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27. Shambhu Dayal v. Subhash Chandra, 1998 SCC (Cri) 900: AIR 1998 SC 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1998]

[10301] — S. 412 — Dishonestly receiving articles looted in dacoity — In pursuance of confessional statement made by the second accused, looted articles recovered — Held, evidence of recovery acceptable and hence second accused liable to be convicted under S. 412 and sentenced to the period of imprisonment already undergone. Tahir Mohd. v. State of M.P., 1993 Supp (2) SCC 697: 1993 SCC (Cri) 760: AIR 1993 SC 931: 1993 Cri LJ 193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, Kuldip Singh and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1992]

[10302] — S. 412 — Recovery of stolen clothes — If conviction under S. 412, sustainable

That the presumption arising under S. 114, Illustration (a) of the Evidence Act, can only make Sheonath guilty of either theft or as receiver of stolen property. (S. 411, IPC)

The recovery of only two articles from him, absence of his name in the FIR and non-identification of him by the eyewitnesses, point only to the conclusion that he was not a participant in the dacoity.

Sheonath cannot be guilty of S. 412, IPC, as the prosecution failed to prove that he knew or had reason to believe that the property had been transferred to him by the commission of dacoity. Sheonath v. State of U.P., (1969) 3 SCC 116: 1970 SCC (Cri) 15: AIR 1970 SC 535: 1970 Cri LJ 601.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and P. Jaganmohan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-1969]

[10303] — S. 412 — Seizure of incriminating articles along with pledge-deed from pawn brokers immediately after occurrence in pursuance of disclosure statements made by the appellants — Articles proved to be the articles belonging to the family of the deceased — Evidence regarding recovery found by lower courts to be reliable and satisfactory — No interference by the Supreme Court called for. Suraj Pal v. State of Haryana, (1995) 2 SCC 64: 1995 SCC (Cri) 313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and Faizan Uddin , JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-1994]

[10304] — Ss. 412 and 395 — Applicability — Delayed recovery of stolen articles — Held, warranted conviction for possession of stolen property and not for dacoity — Hence, S. 412 and not S. 395 attracted — Dacoity in rural area — Goods stolen recovered in a surrounding place — Presumption of conscious possession of stolen property — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114, Ill. (a)

Merely because certain stolen articles were recovered from the accused they cannot be held to be dacoits by invoking the presumption unless there is a recent possession. In this case admittedly, there is a lapse of nearly three or four months. In these circumstances, it would be safe particularly when they were acquitted by the trial court to convict them only for the offence of being in possession of the stolen property.

A serious dacoity took place and must be known to all the people in the village as well as in the surrounding places. The accused who were found to be in possession of the stolen property which is the subject-matter of the dacoity would be held liable under S. 412 IPC. Narayan Singh v. State of M.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 62: 1994 SCC (Cri) 232.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1993]

[10305] — Ss. 412 and 395 — Articles recovered soon after commission of dacoity and shown to have been stolen in course of dacoity — Held, conviction under S. 412 would be proper — Conviction under S. 395 on the basis of presumption under S. 114. Evidence Act, on facts, not sustainable — Sentence of 4 years' RI reduced to 2 years' RI — Conviction and sentence modified accordingly. Amar Singh v. State of M.P., (1982) 3 SCC 214: 1982 SCC (Cri) 700(2): AIR 1982 SC 129: 1982 Cri LJ 610.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1981]

[10306] — Ss. 412 and 396 — Conviction under S. 412 when charge of dacoity not proved — Legality — Certain documents alleged to be property involved in the dacoity seized from the accused consequent to a statement made by him to Circle Inspector of Police — Accused charged under Ss. 396 and 412 IPC — High Court holding him not guilty under S. 396 — In such circumstances, held, it would be presumed that the accused had no knowledge of the dacoity — Onus to prove that the accused had such knowledge, held, lay on the prosecution — In the absence of such proof, the accused could not be held guilty under S. 412 IPC, more so when he had specifically denied the recovery — Further held, the said statement of the accused although admissible under S. 27, Evidence Act to establish that the documents were recovered on the information given by the accused, anything more stated by him therein having no direct bearing on the recovery itself, held, not admissible in evidence to bind the accused — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 27 and 114

The appellant together with certain others was convicted under Sections 396, 302 and 412 IPC by the trial court. However, the High Court found the appellant not guilty under Sections 302 and 396 but confirmed his conviction under Section 412. The appellant contended that after acquittal under Section 396, in the absence of any additional material to establish the charge under Section 412, the appellant could not be convicted under Section 412. On the other hand the prosecution contended that at the time of seizure of documents, viz., Exts. P-36 to P-40 (which pertained to the lorry involved in the dacoity), the appellant had made a statement to the Circle Inspector of Police wherein the appellant had accepted that the documents seized from him were received by him at the time of the dacoity. The prosecution added that in such a situation a legitimate inference could be drawn that Exts. P-36 to P-40 were the property involved in the dacoity which was received by the appellant.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

When the Court held that the appellant was not guilty of the offence of dacoity, it should be presumed that the appellant had no knowledge of the dacoity during which offence the documents seized from him were allegedly stolen. In the instant case what the prosecution has established is that the appellant was in possession of Exts. P-36 to P-40 which the prosecution alleges, belonged to a lorry involved in a dacoity but that part of the knowledge of dacoity cannot be presumed by the mere possession of these documents unless the prosecution adduced some evidence to show that the appellant had the knowledge of such dacoity. The alleged statement given by the appellant to the police at the time of seizure of Exts. P-36 to P-40 can be used by the prosecution for establishing that those documents were recovered on an information given by the appellant which would be admissible under Section 27 of the Evidence Act. Beyond that, anything stated which has no direct bearing on the recovery itself cannot be admissible in evidence to bind the appellant. (Para 4)

Since the onus of proving that the appellant had received those documents knowing or having believed that those documents were involved in a dacoity lay on the prosecution and the prosecution failed to discharge this onus on the material on record, the appellant could not be held guilty of the offence under Section 412 IPC, more so when he had specifically denied the recovery. (Para 5). K. Venkateshwara Rao v. State, (2002) 6 SCC 247: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-2002]

[10307] — Ss. 412 and 396 — Presumption under S. 114 Ill(a), Evidence Act — When can be drawn — Whether the possessor of stolen article is a thief himself or only a receiver of stolen property — Determination of — Circumstances to be considered — Where murder and robbery/dacoity form part of the same transaction a presumption can be drawn that the possessor was the murderer also — Possession of silver todal within two days of dacoity — Absence of evidence to show that the accused concealed it, nor was he in possession of any other stolen property involved in the dacoity — Held, in the circumstances, it would not be sound to draw a presumption beyond his being a receiver of stolen property — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114 Ill. (a)

Illustration (a) indicates two stages for a presumption. First is that the possessor could be the thief himself and the second is that the possessor could have been only a receiver of the stolen property with the requisite knowledge. Apparently, the former is of aggravated degree and the latter is of a lesser degree. If possession of the stolen article with the accused alone is established in evidence, it is a difficult task for the court to choose between the two stages of presumption envisaged in the illustration. The nature of possession of the articles, the place or mode of concealment, the manner in which they were dealt with by the accused, the length of the intervening period, the number of stolen articles possessed by him are all factors which would assist the court in drawing a presumption that the possessor was the thief himself. Similarly, if the possession is associated with any other indication or incriminating circumstance there may be justification for drawing the more aggravated presumption. In a case where robbery (or dacoity) and murder are so interconnected with each other as to become integral parts of the same transaction, the court can go to the extent of drawing the presumption that the possessor was the murderer also.

In the present case the accused was found in possession of silver todal, not immediately after the murder, but within two days of the dacoity. He was found openly moving about with the ornament keeping it on his person. There is quite a variation in the evidence as to whether the silver todals was on the person of the deceased, as deposed to by her mother, when she left with her father or whether the father had the same throughout, as evidenced by the story put up by the prosecution. There is no evidence to show that he concealed it, nor was he in possession of any other stolen property involved in the dacoity. On the facts and circumstances of this case, it would not be sound to draw a presumption beyond his being a receiver of the stolen property with the requisite knowledge. Net Raj Singh v. State of M.P., (1997) 3 SCC 525: 1997 SCC (Cri) 506.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas , JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1996]

[10308] — Ss. 412 and 396 — Recovery of stolen articles — Proof of — Neither the police officer who made the recovery nor the witnesses who were present at the time of recovery examined in the court — Evidence of the Investigating Officer who verified the records relating the recovery of stolen articles not sufficient to prove such recoveries. Kalika Tiwari v. State of Bihar, (1997) 4 SCC 445: 1997 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 1997 SC 2186: 1997 Cri LJ 2531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.T. Thomas , JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-1997]

[10309] — Ss. 412 and 411 — Conviction under S. 412 — Court must come to a definite conclusion that the accused was in possession of the stolen property knowingly or had reason to believe that its possession had been transferred by the commission of dacoity — Otherwise conviction only under S. 411 proper

For the purposes of conviction under S. 412, IPC, the court must come to the conclusion that the dishonest receiver of the stolen property should be in possession of the same knowing or having reason to believe that its possession had been transferred by the commission of dacoity.

But where the only finding was that the accused bought the property knowing it to be stolen, the conviction should be under S. 411 and not S. 412. Moinuddin Mozumdar v. State of Assam, (1972) 3 SCC 322: 1972 SCC (Cri) 521: AIR 1972 SC 635: 1972 Cri LJ 456.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy and D.G. Palekar , JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1971]

[10310] — S. 412 and S. 411 — Receiving stolen property pertaining to dacoity — Punishment for, when warranted — No evidence to show that accused had full knowledge that ornaments purchased by them were subject of dacoity — One of the accused, N, claiming that he had purchased them under receipt from some person but that person not examined as defence witness — Hence held, all accused can at best be charged under S. 411 — Sentence of imprisonment reduced to three years from ten years (Para 10). Narayan Prasad v. State of M.P., (2005) 13 SCC 247: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 2006 SC 204: 2006 Cri LJ 123.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arun Kumar and A.K. Mathur , JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-2005]

[10311] — S. 412 or S. 411 — Ingredients of offence under S. 412 — Knowledge that articles were stolen in a dacoity essential — Prosecution must prove such knowledge — Mere unexplained possession of stolen articles would give rise to a presumption that accused knew that articles were stolen in which case S. 411 and not S. 412 would be attracted. Achyut Das v. State of Assam, (1994) 1 SCC 387: 1994 SCC (Cri) 526: AIR 1994 SC 968: 1994 Cri LJ 1119.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1993]

— S. 413 See also Ss. 457, 380, 411, 413 and 414

— S. 414 See also Ss. 410 and 414

See also Ss. 457, 380, 411, 413 and 414

[10312] — S. 414 — Applicability — Ingredient of reason to believe that property was stolen not proved — Goods recovered at the instance of accused not proved to be belonging to stolen taxi — Accused also had no prior knowledge that they were actually stolen goods — Accused also not being put any question under S. 313 CrPC regarding ownership of goods recovered — Effect — On facts, held, it is not safe to convict the accused

On facts, it is not safe to rely on the evidence of the prosecution to convict P under Section 414 IPC. For convicting P the courts below relied on recoveries made. There is no evidence to establish that the property allegedly recovered at the instance of P belonged to the stolen taxi or that P had prior knowledge that the goods recovered were actually stolen goods. No specific question under Section 313 CrPC was also put to P in regard to the ownership of the goods recovered. Therefore, by giving benefit of doubt, P's conviction is set aside and his bail bonds are discharged. (Paras 9 and 10). Kailash v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 16 SCC 708: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2002]

[10313] — S. 414 — Essentials of — Person whom the accused helped in concealing stolen property not known — For a conviction under the section it is not necessary to trace and convict the person actually committing theft

Section 414, IPC makes it an offence for a person to assist voluntarily in stealing or disposing of or making away with property which he knows or has reason to believe to be stolen property. It is not necessary for a person to be convicted under S. 414, IPC that another person must be traced out and convicted of an offence of committing theft. The prosecution has simply to establish that the property recovered is stolen property and that the appellant provided help in its concealment and disposal. Ajendranath v. State of M.P., AIR 1964 SC 170: (1964) 3 SCR 289: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 129, 131: 1964 MLJ (Cri) 226.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1963]

[10314] — S. 414 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at initial stage — Power should be very sparingly and cautiously exercised — At that High Court should not sift or appreciate the evidence and come to the conclusion that no prima facie case is made out — On facts, High Court not justified in quashing the proceedings — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The inherent power of the court under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should be very sparingly and cautiously used only when the court comes to the conclusion that there would be manifest injustice or there would be abuse of the process of the court, if such power is not exercised. So far as the order of cognizance by a Magistrate is concerned, the inherent power can be exercised when the allegations in the first information report or the complaint together with the other materials collected during investigation taken at their face value, do not constitute the offence alleged. At that stage it is not open for the court either to sift the evidence or appreciate the evidence and come to the conclusion that no prima facie case is made out.

In the present case the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction by trying to appreciate the evidence and coming to a conclusion that no offence is made out. The High Court was wholly unjustified in invoking its inherent power under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to quash the cognizance taken inasmuch as the allegation in the FIR and material referred to in the charge-sheet do make out an offence under Section 414 of the Indian Penal Code, so far as the respondent is concerned. State of Bihar v. Rajendra Agrawalla, (1996) 8 SCC 164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik , JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1996]

Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, followed [10315] — S. 414 — Sessions Judge acquitting several accused of offences under, holding that property not proved as "stolen property" — Appeal preferred against only few of accused — High Court competent to reverse the order in respect of the respondents. Ajendranath v. State of M.P., AIR 1964 SC 170: (1964) 3 SCR 289: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 129, 131: 1964 MLJ (Cri) 226.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1963]

SECTIONS 415-420 — CHEATING

See also 'Ss. 405-409 — CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST', ABOVE

Synopsis

(1) Ss. 415-420 and other provisions of law 947
(2) The charge and Ss. 415-420 950
(3) Ingredients of cheating 951
  (i) Broadly 951
  (ii) Property — What is 957
  (iii) Deceiving any person — Deception — What is 957
  (iv) Dishonest concealment of facts (S. 415 Expln.) 958
  (v) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist 959
  (vi) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing delivery or retention of property by or with consent of deceived person 964
  (vii) Intentionally inducing deceived person to commit act or omission likely to cause harm or damage to him 966
(4) Cheating by personation (Ss. 416 & 419) 967
(5) Cheating person whose interest offender is bound by law or legal contract to protect (S. 418) 972
(6) Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property (S. 420) 973
  (i) Broadly 973
  (ii) Property — What is 976
  (iii) Cheating and dishonestly inducing — Proof of dishonest intention 976
  (iv) Inducing delivery of property — S. 420 vis-à-vis mere cheating 978
  (v) Inducing making of, alteration or destruction of valuable security or signed or sealed thing convertible into valuable security 980
  (vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist 980
(7) Fraudulent financial schemes — What are 990
(8) Tax evasion and cheating 993
(9) Attempt to cheat 998
(10) Trial, Proof and Other issues 999
  (i) Acquittal justified 1000
  (ii) Appeal/Revision 1000
  (iii) Bail 1001
  (iv) Circumstantial evidence 1005
  (v) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation 1005
  (vi) Conspiracy/Multiple accused/ Abetment 1010
  (vii) Conviction justified 1015
  (viii) Jurisdiction 1015
  (ix) Juvenile accused 1019
  (x) Limitation 1019
  (xi) Quashment 1019
  (xii) Sanction for prosecution 1041
  (xiii) Transfer/Consolidation of Cases 1042
  (xiv) Vicarious liability — Offence by company 1043
  (xv) Witnesses 1046
(11) Sentence/Fine/Compensation/Other punishment/relief 1046

—S. 415 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 81, 87, 88, 89, 91, 92, 93, 100, 104, 106, 415, 469 and 499

See also Ss. 120-A and 415

See also Ss. 378, 403, 405, 415 and 425

See also Ss. 405, 406, 409, 415, 420 and 417

See also Ss. 405 and 415 and 417

See also Ss. 405, 420, 403 and 415

See also Ss. 406, 415 and 420

See also Ss. 409 and 405 and Ss. 415 and 420

See also Ss. 463, 464, 465, 470, 471 and 415

—S. 415 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 403, 405 and 415 r/w S. 34

—S. 416 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

—S. 417 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 120-B, 417 and 420

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 326, 342, 417, 465, 473, 506 and 307

See also Ss. 375 and 376 and 417

See also Ss. 405, 406, 409, 415, 420 and 417

See also Ss. 405 and 415 and 417

See also Ss. 468, 420, 120-B, 417 and 465

— S. 417 r/w S. 109 See also Ss. 467 and 417 r/w S. 109

— S. 418 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 196, 199, 120-B, 403, 406 and 418

See also Ss. 406, 418, 420 and 120-B

— S. 419 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 120-A, 120-B and 419

See also Ss. 120-B, 419, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 218, 379, 467, 468, 471 and 419

See also Ss. 153-A, 201, 302, 326, 324, 419 and 436

See also Ss. 205, 419, 465, 467 and 471

See also Ss. 406, 419, 420 and 120-B

— S. 419 r/w S. 120-B See also Ss. 463, 467, 461 and 419 r/w S. 120-B

— Ss. 419/120-B See also Ss. 120-B/302/115 and 419/120-B

— S. 420 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 34 and 420

See also Ss. 52, 420, 406, 466, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-A, 120-B, 420, 468, 471 and 4

See also Ss. 120-B, 107, 109, 420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 108, 109 r/w Ss. 405, 406 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 384, 388, 342, 341, 193, 201, 218, 466 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 405, 409 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 406 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 406, 420 and 384

See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 420, 465, 468, 471, 477-A, 101 and 34

See also Ss. 120-B, 417 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 419, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 420 and 468

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 471 and 506

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468 and 477-A r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 120-B, 420 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 467, 468, 471 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467 and 471

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 467, 471, 420, 406, 409, 465, 162, 163, 167, 201 and 109

See also Ss. 200, 406, 420, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 302, 364, 365, 368, 193, 197, 201, 120-B, 420 and 342

See also Ss. 323, 382, 420, 465, 468, 471, 120-B, 506 and 34

See also Ss. 379, 468, 471, 420 and 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 403, 406, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 405, 406, 408, 409, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 405, 406, 409, 415, 420 and 417

See also Ss. 405, 406 and 420

See also Ss. 405, 420, 403 and 415

See also Ss. 405, 420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 406, 409, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 409, 420, 439, 471, 473 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 409, 420, 467, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 415 and 420

See also Ss. 406, 418, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406 and 420

See also Ss. 406, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34

See also Ss. 406, 420 and 424 r/w S. 37

See also Ss. 406, 420, 465, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 465, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 467 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 468, 471, 504, 506, 382 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 477-A and 420 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379

See also Ss. 408 and 409 r/w Ss. 109, 420 and 420/511 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 408, 420 and 420/511 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 409 and 405 and Ss. 415 and 420

See also Ss. 409 and 420

See also Ss. 409, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 420 and 405

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468, 471/465 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 415 and 420

See also Ss. 419 & 420 r/w Ss. 109, 120-B & 468 and S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988

See also Ss. 419, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 452, 323, 504, 506, 420

See also Ss. 467, 302, 380 and 420

See also Ss. 467, 468, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 420, 409 and 218

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 468, 411 and 420

See also Ss. 468, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 468, 420, 120-B, 417 and 465

See also Ss. 468, 471, 409, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 468, 471 and 420

See also Ss. 471 and 420

See also Ss. 471, 420 and 198

See also Ss. 489-B and 420

See also Ss. 494 and 420

See also Ss. 498-A, 406, 420 and 315

See also Ss. 511 and 420

— S. 420 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 464, 423 and 420 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 471 and 420 r/w S. 34

— S. 420 r/w S. 120-B See also S. 120-B, S. 420 r/w S. 120-B, S. 477 r/w S. 120-B and S. 5(1)(d) r/w S. 5(2), PC Act, 1947 r/w S. 120-B IPC

See also Ss. 406, 477-A and 420 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 409 and S. 420 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 465, 468, 471 and 420 r/w S. 120-B

— Ss. 420/34 See also Ss. 120-B, 420/34 and 477-A/34

See also Ss. 415, 420/34, 24 and 25

See also Ss. 477-A/34 and 420/34

— Ss. 420/120-B See also Ss. 420/511, 420/120-B, 468 and 477-A

(1) Ss. 415-420 and other provisions of law

[10316] — Ss. 419, 420, 465, 467 and 473 — Impersonation as a CA, etc. — Expression "without prejudice to any other proceedings" used in sub-section (2) of Ss. 24-A, 25 and 26 CA Act — Significance — Prosecution under IPC — Maintainability — Where a person is alleged to have committed offences under Ss. 24, 24-A and 26 CA Act as also under IPC but in absence of complaint under S. 28 CA Act before Magistrate's Court, no cognizance of offences punishable under Ss. 24, 24-A and 26 CA Act could be taken, held, prosecution under IPC can still be commenced against him — Prosecution under IPC cannot be disallowed on ground that 1949 Act is a special statute vis-à-vis IPC — Chartered Accountants Act, 1949, Ss. 24, 24-A, 25, 26 and 28

The respondent, who passed the examination of Chartered Accountant but is not a member of the appellant Institute, is alleged to have represented himself before the Income Tax Department and the authorities constituted under the Madhya Pradesh Trade Tax Act on the basis of power of attorney or as legal representative and submitted documents such as audit reports and certificates required to be issued by the Chartered Accountants by preparing forged seals. He is also said to have impersonated himself as Chartered Accountant and prepared audit reports for monetary consideration. Person authorised by the appellant Institute submitted a complaint in this regard in police station alleging commission of offences punishable under Section 24 of the Chartered Accountants Act and Sections 419, 420, 468, 472 and 473 IPC. After conducting investigation the police filed challan in the Court of CJM who passed an order for framing charges against the respondent under Sections 419, 468, 471 and 472 IPC. The respondent challenged the order by filing revision under Section 397 CrPC. The Additional Sessions Judge remitted the case to the trial court with the direction to decide whether there were sufficient grounds for framing charges under Sections 419, 420, 465, 467 and 473 IPC read with Sections 24 and 26 of the Chartered Accountants Act. After remand, the trial court held that there was no basis for framing any charge against the respondent under IPC and that cognizance of offence under Sections 24 and 26 of the Act cannot be taken because no complaint had been filed by or under the order of the Council before the Magistrate. The appellant questioned the orders of the Additional Sessions Judge and the trial court by filing revisions. The High Court dismissed both the revisions. It held that even though prima facie case was made out against the respondent under Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Act, the Magistrate could not have taken cognizance because no complaint was filed under Section 28 and the report submitted by the police could not be made basis for punishing him on the allegation of contravention of any of those provisions. The court also referred to Sections 2(d), 4, 5 and Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC and held that in the absence of a complaint filed by the court concerned, the Magistrate was not competent to frame charges against the respondent and that in view of the special mechanism contained in the Act for prosecution of a person violating Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Act, he cannot be prosecuted under IPC.

The question which arises for consideration in the present appeals is whether Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Chartered Accountants Act operate as a bar against prosecution of a person who is charged with allegations which constitute an offence or offences under other laws including the Penal Code.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The prohibition contained in Section 28 against prosecution of a person except on a complaint made by or under the order of the Council or of the Central Government is attracted only when such person is sought to be prosecuted for contravention of the provisions contained in Section 24 or sub-section (1) of Sections 24-A, 25 or 26 and not for any act or omission which constitutes an offence under IPC. The object underlying the prohibition contained in Section 28 is to protect the persons engaged in profession of Chartered Accountants against false and untenable complaints from dissatisfied litigants and others. However, there is nothing in the language of the provisions contained in Chapter VII from which it can be inferred that Parliament wanted to confer immunity upon the members and non-members from prosecution and punishment if the action of such member or non-member amounts to an offence under IPC or any other law. (Paras 18 and 21)

The use of expression "without prejudice to any other proceedings which may be taken against him" in sub-section (2) of Sections 24-A and 26 and somewhat similar expression in sub-section (2) of Section 25 show that contravention of the provisions contained in sub-section (1) of those sections can lead to filing of complaint under Section 28 of the Act and if the particular act also amounts to an offence under IPC or any other law, then a complaint can also be filed under Section 200 CrPC or a first information report lodged with the police under Section 156 CrPC. The said expression cannot be given a restricted meaning in the context of professional and other misconducts which may be committed by a member of the Institute and for which he may be punished under Section 21-B(3) because the violation of Sections 24 to 26 can be committed by a person who may or may not be a Chartered Accountant as defined in Section 2(b). (Para 19)

In other words, if the particular act of a member of the Institute or a non-member or a company results in contravention of the provisions contained in Section 24 or sub-section (1) of Sections 24-A, 25 or 26 and such act also amounts to criminal misconduct which is defined as an offence under IPC, then a complaint can be filed by or under the order of the Council or of the Central Government under Section 28, which may ultimately result in imposition of the punishment prescribed under Section 24 or sub-section (2) of Sections 24-A, 25 or 26 and such member or non-member or company can also be prosecuted for any identified offence under IPC. (Para 20)

Held :

The provisions contained in Chapter VII of the Act neither define cheating by personation or forgery or counterfeiting of seal, etc. nor provide for punishment for such offences. If it is held that a person acting in violation of Section 24 or contravening sub-section (1) of Sections 24-A and 26 of the Act can be punished only under the Act even though his act also amounts to one or more offence(s) defined under IPC and that too on a complaint made in accordance with Section 28, then the provisions of Chapter VII will become discriminatory and may have to be struck down on the ground of violation of Article 14. (Para 23)

Such an unintended consequence can be and deserves to be avoided in interpreting Sections

24-A, 25 and 26 keeping in view the settled law that if there are two possible constructions of a statute, then the one which leads to anomaly or absurdity and makes the statute vulnerable to the attack of unconstitutionality should be avoided in preference to the other which makes it rational and immune from the charge of unconstitutionality. That apart, the court cannot interpret the provisions of the Act in a manner which will deprive the victim of his right to prosecute the wrongdoer for the offences defined in Sections 416, 463, 464, 468 and 471 by filing the first information report or complaint under the relevant provisions of CrPC. (Para 24)

The respondent could have been simultaneously prosecuted for contravention of Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Act and for the offences defined under IPC but in view of the bar contained in Article 20(2) of the Constitution read with Section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 and Section 300 CrPC, he could not have been punished twice for the same offence. (Para 25)

The argument that the Act is a special legislation vis-à-vis IPC and a person who is said to have contravened the provisions of sub-section (1) of Sections 24, 24-A, 25 and 26 cannot be prosecuted for an offence defined under IPC, which found favour with the High Court does not commend acceptance. (Para 36)

The impugned order is set aside and the matter is remitted to the trial court for considering whether the allegations contained in the complaint constitute any offence under IPC. If the trial court comes to the conclusion that the allegations do constitute one or more offence(s), then it shall proceed against the respondent in accordance with law. However, it is made clear that in the absence of a complaint having been filed under Section 28, no charges be framed against the respondent for the alleged contravention of Sections 24, 24-A or 26 of the 1949 Act. (Para 46). Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Vimal Kumar Surana, (2011) 1 SCC 534.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2010]

Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay, AIR 1953 SC 325: 1953 SCR 730: 1953 Cri LJ 1432; T.S. Baliah v. ITO, AIR 1969 SC 701: (1969) 3 SCR 65; State of Bombay v. S.L. Apte, AIR 1961 SC 578: (1961) 3 SCR 107: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 725; Collector of Customs v. Vasantraj Bhagwanji Bhatia, (1988) 3 SCC 467: 1988 SCC (Cri) 679; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27; State of Rajasthan v. Hat Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 152: 2003 SCC (Cri) 451, relied on

Halsbury's Laws of England, Hailsham Edn., Vol. 9, pp. 152-53, para 212, cited

Jeewan Kumar Raut v. CBI, (2009) 7 SCC 526: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 475; Jamiruddin Ansari v. CBI, (2009) 6 SCC 316: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1033, distinguished

[10317] — Ss. 419, 420, 467 and 468 — Scope and applicability of S. 28, Societies Registration Act — High Court quashing the charge-sheet submitted under various provisions of IPC by applying S. 28 of the Act, observing that some other allegations prima facie made out an offence under S. 4 of the Act and hence, since provisions of S. 28 were breached, the proceedings were unsustainable — Held, S. 28 provides procedure for trial of offences punishable under the 1860 Act itself and not for offences punishable under the Penal Code — Hence, impugned order set aside and matter remanded to trial court for decision afresh — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Societies Registration Act, 1860 — Ss. 28, 4 and 27 (Paras 3, 5 and 6). Sarvesh Kumar Singh v. Jai Govind Mishra, (2006) 9 SCC 206: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 618.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-2005]

[10318] — S. 420 — Investigation of offence under, along with an offence under S. 7 of Essential Commodities Act — Held, not improper. Pravin Chandra Mody v. State of A.P., AIR 1965 SC 1185: (1965) 1 SCR 269: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 250.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, M. Hidayatullah and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1964]

[10319] — S. 420 — Presentation and encashment of a false bill by a clerk of an office as a bill of the office — Offence held covered by Item 3 of Schedule to West Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949 and exclusively triable by Special Court. Sunil Kumar Paul v. State of W.B., AIR 1965 SC 706: (1964) 7 SCR 70: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 630.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1964]

[10320] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Bar to criminal proceedings, if any — Offence under Ss. 420 and 120-B IPC, as well as S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act — Held, taking cognizance of criminal proceedings is not barred under the RBI Act — Bar under Ss. 45-QA and 58-E of the RBI Act applies only to offences committed under the RBI Act — High Court, held, rightly acted by not quashing the order of cognizance taken by the criminal court — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934 — Ss. 45-QA and 58-E. Prudential Capital Mkt. Ltd. v.

State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 539: 2001 SCC (Cri) 644: AIR 2000 SC 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2000]

[10321] — Ss. 420 and 471 — Acquittal under S. 471 but conviction under S. 420 — The reasoning of acquittal inconsistent with that of conviction — Maintainability of order of conviction under S. 420

(i) We are inclined to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that once the conviction under S. 471, IPC, has been set aside the High Court was not justified in convicting him under S. 420.

(ii) In the absence of an appeal by the State against the acquittal of the appellant under S. 471, IPC, we do not think we can permit the respondent to raise this ground (viz., that the acquittal of the appellant by the High Court of the offences under S. 471, IPC, is erroneous). Hira Lal Panna Lal Mahi v. State of Gujarat, (1969) 3 SCC 756.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, V. Bhargava and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1969]

[10322] — Ss. 420, 486, 467 and 466/471 — Framing of charge for commitment — Complaint under Ss. 420, 486, 468, 465/67 — Offence under S. 467 being prima facie established by the evidence — Magistrate not framing any charge under S. 467 and acquitting the accused under Ss. 420, 486, 467, 466/471 after trial — Improper for the Magistrate to drop the charge under S. 467 over which he had no jurisdiction — He was bound to frame charge under S. 467 and commit the case to the Court of Sessions — High Court justified in remanding the case for retrial after framing charge under S. 467 — CrPC, 1898 — Ss. 210, 417(3) & 423(1)

J filed a complaint against 5 appellants. Honorary Magistrate I Class, who tried the case framed charges under Ss. 420, 468, 406 and 465/471 IPC against various accused. Though the evidence and allegations in the complaint prima facie disclosed an offence under S. 467 IPC no charge under S. 467 IPC was framed. Since an offence under S. 467 IPC was triable exclusively by a Sessions Judge the Magistrate would have in the event of framing a charge under S. 467 IPC committed the case to the Court of Sessions. The Magistrate acquitted the accused and on appeal the High Court set aside the order of acquittal and ordered a retrial.

If the Magistrate had applied his mind to the problem he would have seen easily that a prima facie case of forgery was made out. He should then have considered whether the receipts were valuable security or not. If he had done that he would have seen that the main offence would prima facie be one under S. 467, Indian Penal Code read with S. 471 and the other offences were subsidiary. It was thus not proper for him to choose for trial only such offence over which he had jurisdiction and to ignore other offences over which he had none. His duty clearly was to frame a charge under S. 467, Indian Penal Code and to commit the appellants to stand their trial before the Court of Sessions.

It was open to the High Court, while hearing an appeal under S. 417(3) of the Code to direct the Magistrate to frame a charge for an offence which was prima facie established by the evidence for the prosecution and also to order that the accused be committed to the Court of Sessions. It is wrong to contend that the High Court had no jurisdiction in the matter because the trial before the Honorary Magistrate (in so far as it went) was with jurisdiction. If it were so there would be no remedy whenever a Magistrate dropped serious charges ousting him of his jurisdiction and tried only those within his jurisdiction.

However, hesitant the High Court may be, to set aside an order of acquittal and to order retrial, it has jurisdiction under the Code to do so, if the justice of the case clearly demands it and a case of omission from the charge of a serious offence prima facie disclosed by evidence, is one of those circumstances in which the power can properly be exercised particularly when the charge for the offence, if framed, would have ousted the Court of trial of its own jurisdiction. Matukdhari Singh v. Janardan Prasad, AIR 1966 SC 356: (1966) 1 SCR 255: 1966 Cri LJ 307.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar, M. Hidayatullah and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-1965]

(2) The charge and Ss. 415-420

[10323] — S. 420 — Charge vague in a cheating case — Particulars of cheating and details known to the accused — Held, irregularity did not cause any real prejudice to accused and did not vitiate the trial. K. Damodaran v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 462: 1953 Ker LJ 295: 1953 Cri LJ 1928.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.C. Mahajan and S.R. Das, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-1953]

[10324] — Ss. 420, 120-B and 71 — Charge — Accused B and C supplying wood to the Railway and receiving payment on submitting a number of bills — Recurring payment against each bill is not a separate offence under S. 420 IPC — The transaction of the receipt of the entire amount against all the bills is one offence — Framing of one charge about all the transactions is legal and was not in contravention of S. 233 CrPC, 1898. Banwarilal Jhunjhunwala v. Union of India, AIR 1963 SC 1620: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 338: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1962]

[10325] — Ss. 420, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B — Framing of charge — Doctrine of parity — Necessify of consideration of — Many accused including government servants involved in offence of fraud and misappropriation of huge amount of Govt. money — An accused similarly situated not proceeded against only because departmental proceedings ended in his favour — Held (Per Sinha, J.), in a case of present nature the trial Judge should have considered the question having regard to the "doctrine of parity" — Relevant considerations which should have been taken into account in this regard, indicated — Constitution of India, Art. 14 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 228

In a case of this nature the trial Judge should have considered the question having regard to the "doctrine of parity" in mind. An accused similarly situated has not been proceeded against only because the departmental proceedings ended in his favour. Whether an accused before him although stands on a similar footing despite he having not been departmentally proceeded against or had not been completely exonerated also required to be considered. If exoneration in a departmental proceeding is the basis for not framing a charge against an accused person who is said to be similarly situated, the question which requires a further consideration was as to whether the applicant before it was similarly situated or not and/or whether the exonerated officer in the departmental proceeding also faced same charges including the charge of being a party to the larger conspiracy. (Para 23). Soma Chakravarty v. State, (2007) 5 SCC 403: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 514: AIR 2007 SC 2149.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2] and Markandey Katju[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2007]

L. Chandraiah v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 670: 2005 SCC (Cri) 825, relied on

(3) Ingredients of cheating

Synopsis

(i) Broadly 951
(ii) Property — What is 957
(iii) Deceiving any person — Deception — What is 957
(iv) Dishonest concealment of facts (S. 415 Expln.) 958
(v) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist 959
(vi) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing delivery or retention of property by or with consent of deceived person 964
(vii) Intentionally inducing deceived person to commit act or omission likely to cause harm or damage to him 966

(i) Broadly

See also '(6)(i) Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property (S. 420) — Broadly', below

[10326] — S. 415 — Cheating — Ingredients — Having regard to allegations made in the complaint, held, on facts, elements of deception and inducement with fraudulent intention prima facie made out

The essential ingredients of the offence of "cheating" are: (i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission, (ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. (Para 32)

In this case, the complaints clearly allege that the accused with fraudulent intention to cheat and defraud IOC, had induced IOC to resume supply of aircraft fuel on cash-and-carry basis, by entering into a further agreement and undertaking to clear the outstanding amount of Rs 18 crores approximately within the time stipulated in the hypothecation agreements. The sum and substance of the said allegation read with other averments is that NEPC India, having committed default in paying the sum of Rs 18 crores, entered into a fresh agreement agreeing to clear the outstanding amount as per a fresh schedule, with the dishonest and fraudulent intention of pre-empting and avoiding any action by IOC in terms of the hypothecation deeds to take possession of the aircrafts. Though the supplies after the fresh agreement were on cash-and-carry basis, the fraudulent intention is alleged to emanate from the promise under the said agreement to make payment, thereby preventing immediate seizure (taking possession) of the aircrafts by IOC. This allegation made in addition to the allegation relating to removal of engines, has been lost sight of by the High Court. All that is to be seen is whether the necessary allegations exist in the complaint to bring the case within Section 415. Thus the allegations in the complaint constitute such an offence. The Court is not concerned with the proof of such allegations or ultimate outcome of trial at this stage. (Para 36). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

(3)(i) Broadly (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[10327] — S. 415 — Cheating — Ingredients of — Distinguished from mere breach of contract — Definition contemplates two separate classes of acts viz. deception by fraudulent or dishonest inducement and deception by intentional, but not fraudulent or dishonest, inducement — In the second case intentional deception must be shown to exist right from the beginning of the transaction

The appellants agreed to sell their land to a cooperative housing society for a consideration of Rs 16,00,000. Respondent 2 was Secretary of the Society. The respondent paid a sum of Rs 11,00,000 to the appellants by way of drafts drawn in their favour. The appellants executed a registered sale deed in respect of the land in favour of the Society. It is the case of the appellants that on the insistence of Respondent 2 two other brothers of the appellants signed the sale deed as witnesses. By way of a further safeguard the appellants executed a separate indemnity deed on the same day in which they undertook to indemnify any loss caused to the Society on account of any objection which may be raised by any co-sharer against transfer of the land in future. The appellants assert that they delivered possession of the land to the Society on the same day. On registration of the sale deed Respondent 2 handed over three cheques to the appellants for the sum of Rs 5,50,000. When the appellants presented the said cheques in the bank the same were dishonoured on account of insufficiency of amount in the account of the drawer. Appellants after serving notice on Respondent 2 lodged an FIR alleging offences under Sections 406, 420 and 120-B IPC. The police after investigating into the allegations made in the FIR filed a charge-sheet against Respondent 2 and the Vice-President of the Society. The appellants also filed three suits for realisation of the amount due to them. Shortly thereafter, Respondent 2 filed a complaint in the Court of CJM against the appellants alleging commission of offences under Sections 420, 423, 469, 504 and 120-B IPC. In the complaint Respondent 2 alleged inter alia that by conspiring together all the accused have defaulted and cheated the Society and the complainant by giving false, concocted and wrongful information and assurances and thus they induced the complainant to enter into negotiations and also to advance them a heavy amount with their ulterior design to acquire wrongful gain to themselves and for wrongful loss to the Society and the complainant — both monetary and reputational. (See para 7 for details of some of the averments made in the complaint.) It is the case of the appellants that the FIR was filed as a counterblast to the criminal case and the civil suits filed by them against Respondent 2. The appellants therefore filed a petition for quashing the complaint and the criminal proceedings initiated on the basis of the complaint. But the High Court declined to quash the same. Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Section 415 IPC which defines cheating requires

(1) deception of any person;

(2)(a) fraudulently or dishonestly inducing that person

(i) to deliver any property to any person, or

(ii) to consent that any person shall retain any property; or

(b) intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. (Para 13)

In the definition there are set forth two separate classes of acts which the person deceived may be induced to do. In the first place he may be induced fraudulently or dishonestly to deliver any property to any person. The second class of acts set forth in the section is the doing or omitting to do anything which the person deceived would not do or omit to do if he were not so deceived. In the first class of cases the inducing must be fraudulent or dishonest. In the second class of acts, the inducing must be intentional but not fraudulent or dishonest. (Para 14)

In determining the question it has to be kept in mind that the distinction between mere breach of contract and the offence of cheating is a fine one. It depends upon the intention of the accused at the time of inducement which may be judged by his subsequent conduct but for this subsequent conduct is not the sole test. Mere breach of contract cannot give rise to criminal prosecution for cheating unless fraudulent or dishonest intention is shown right at the beginning of the transaction, that is the time when the offence is said to have been committed. Therefore it is the intention which is the gist of the offence. To hold a person guilty of cheating it is necessary to show that he had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making the promise. From his mere failure to keep up promise subsequently such a culpable intention right at the beginning, that is, when he made the promise cannot be presumed. (Para 15)

Reading the averments in the complaint in their entirety and accepting the allegations to be true, the ingredients of intentional deception on the part of the accused right at the beginning of the negotiations for the transaction has neither been expressly stated nor indirectly suggested in the complaint. All that Respondent 2 has alleged against the appellants is that they did not disclose to him that one of their brothers had filed a partition suit which was pending. The requirement that the information was not disclosed by the appellants intentionally in order to make Respondent 2 part with the property is not alleged expressly or even impliedly in the complaint. Therefore the core postulate of dishonest intention in order to deceive the complainant-Respondent 2 is not made out even accepting all the averments in the complaint on their face value. Thus the ingredients of the offence of cheating punishable under Section 420 IPC and its allied offences under Sections 418 and 423 has not been made out. So far as the offences under Sections 469, 504 and 120-B are concerned even the basic allegations making out a case thereunder are not contained in the complaint. In such a situation continuing the criminal proceeding against the accused will be, an abuse of the process of the court. (Para 16)

The High Court was not right in declining to quash the complaint and the proceeding initiated on the basis of the same. That being the position the case comes within the first category of cases enumerated in State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal and as such warrants interference by this Court. (Para 16). Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786: AIR 2000 SC 2341: 2000 Cri LJ 2983.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2000]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; P.S. Rajya v. State of Bihar, (1996) 9 SCC 1: 1996 SCC (Cri) 897; State of Orissa v. Bansidhar Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 194: 1996 SCC (Cri) 259, relied on

[10328] — S. 415 — Cheating — Ingredients of — While first part of S. 415 pertains to property, its second part need not necessarily relate to property — But, for the second part mens rea is essential

Section 415 has two parts. While in the first part, the person must "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" induce the complainant to deliver any property; the second part need not necessarily relate to property. In the second part, the person should intentionally induce the complainant to do or omit to do a thing. That is to say, in the first part, inducement must be dishonest or fraudulent. In the second part, the inducement should be intentional. A guilty intention is an essential ingredient of the offence of cheating. In order, therefore, to secure conviction of a person for the offence of cheating, "mens rea" on the part of that person, must be established. This part speaks of intentional deception which must be intended not only to induce the person deceived to do or omit to do something but also to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. The intentional deception presupposes the existence of a dominant motive of the person making the inducement. Such inducement should have led the person deceived or induced to do or omit to do anything which he would not have done or omitted to do if he were not deceived. The further requirement is that such act or omission should have caused damage or harm to body, mind, reputation or property. (Paras 5, 7, 6 and 11). G.V. Rao v. L.H.V. Prasad, (2000) 3 SCC 693: 2000 SCC (Cri) 733: AIR 2000 SC 2474: 2000 Cri LJ 3487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2000]

Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116: 1956 SCR 483; Mahadeo Prasad v. State of W.B., AIR 1954 SC 724: 1954 Cri LJ 1806, relied on

Empress v. Sheoram, (1882) 2 AWN 237; Queen-Empress v. Rakma Kom Sadhu, ILR (1887) 11 Bom 59; R. v. Dabee Sing, (1867) 7 WR (Cri) 55; R. v. Puddomonie Boistobee, (1866) 5 WR (Cri) 98, approved

(3)(i) Broadly (contd.)

[10329] — S. 415 — Cheating — Requirements of, restated — Deception of any person, held, is common to second and third requirements — Use of disjunctive conjunction "or" indicates that the said requirements are alternative to each other

Section 415 IPC requires: (i) deception of any person, (ii) whereby fraudulently or dishonestly inducing that person to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or (iii) intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit to do if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. Deception of any person is common to the second and third requirements of the provision. The said requirements are alternative to each other and this is made significantly clear by use of disjunctive conjunction "or". (Para 7). Devender Kumar Singla v. Baldev Krishan Singla, (2005) 9 SCC 15: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1185: AIR 2004 SC 3084: 2004 Cri LJ 1778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-2004]

[10330] — Ss. 415 and 24 — Cheating — Instances of — Person who may make complaint against cheating — Sale of property by a person knowing that property did not belong to him — Held, seller defrauds purchaser — Purchaser is entitled to prosecute seller under S. 415 but a third party cannot do so

When a sale deed is executed conveying a property claiming ownership thereto, it may be possible for the purchaser under such sale deed to allege that the vendor has cheated him by making a false representation of ownership and fraudulently induced him to part with sale consideration. But in this case the complaint is not by the purchaser. On the other hand, the purchaser is made a co-accused. It is also not the case of the complainant that any of the accused tried to deceive him. Nor did the complainant allege that first appellant pretended to be complainant while executing the sale deeds. Therefore, it cannot be said that the first accused by the act of executing sale deeds in favour of second accused or the second accused by reason of being the purchaser, or the third, fourth and fifth accused, by reason of being the witness, scribe and stamp vendor in regard to the sale deeds, deceived the complainant in any manner. As the ingredients of cheating as stated in Section 415 are not found, it cannot be said that there was an offence punishable under Sections 417, 418, 419 or 420 IPC. (Paras 20 to 23). Mohd. Ibrahim v. State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2009]

[10331] — Ss. 415, 24, 23 and 25 — Cheating — Deception as a necessary ingredient under both parts of S. 415 — When culpable — Such deception, held, must necessarily produce inducement to part with or deliver property which the complainant would not have parted with or delivered, but for inducement resulting from the deception

Section 415 can be divided into two parts. The first part makes it necessary that the deception by the accused of the person deceived, must be fraudulent or dishonest. Such deception must induce the person deceived to either: (a) deliver property to any person; or (b) consent that any person shall retain any property. The second part also requires that the accused must by deception intentionally induce the person deceived either to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit, if he was not so deceived. Furthermore, such act or omission must cause or must be likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. Thus, it is evident that deception is a necessary ingredient for the offences of cheating under both parts of this section. The complainant, therefore, necessarily needs to prove that the inducement had been caused by the deception exercised by the accused. Such deception must necessarily produce the inducement to part with or deliver property, which the complainant would not have parted with or delivered, but for the inducement resulting from deception. The Explanation to the section would clearly indicate that there must be no dishonest concealment of facts. In other words, non-disclosure of relevant information would also be treated as a misrepresentation of facts leading to deception. (Para 68)

The Explanation appended to Section 415 gives a statutory recognition to the legal principles established through various judicial pronouncements that misleading statements which withhold the vital facts for intentionally inducing a person to do or to omit to do something would amount to deception. Further, in case it is found that misleading statement has wrongfully caused damage to the person deceived it would amount to cheating. (Para 72)

The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to prove the averments made in the complaint. They were entitled to establish that they have been deliberately induced into making huge investments on the basis of representations made by Respondent 1 and its representatives, which representations subsequently turned out to be completely false and fraudulent. The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to establish that Respondent 1 and its representatives were aware of the falsity of the representations at the time when they were made. The appellants have given elaborate details of the positive assertions made by Respondent 1 which were allegedly false to its knowledge. It is also claimed by the appellants that Respondent 1 and its representatives wilfully concealed facts which were material and ought to have been disclosed, but were intentionally withheld so as to deceive the appellant into advancing and expending a sum of Rs 500 crores. (Para 75). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

Central Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, 1867 LR 2 HL 99; New Brunswick and Canada Railway Co. v. Muggeridge, (1860) 1 Dr. & Sm 363 at pp. 381-82: 62 ER 418, relied on

[10332] — Ss. 415, 24, 25 and 23 — Offences requiring mens rea or a particular state of mind (like dishonesty) — Whether a corporate body can be prosecuted when offence is committed in relation to business of a company — Doctrine of attribution and imputation — Degree of control exercised by persons in charge of affairs of company — Principle of alter ego — Held, if degree of control is so intense that a corporation may be said to think and act through a person or body of persons, mens rea of person or persons in control is attributable to the corporation — A corporate body cannot also escape criminal liability merely on the ground that punishment prescribed is imprisonment and fine — On facts held, prosecution could be launched against respondent Company for offence of cheating under S. 415 IPC — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 34 and 291

The respondent Company had effective control over another company which was engaged in a project known as Iridium project, for developing world's first commercial system designed to provide global digital hand-held telephone data, facsimile, paging, geolocation services but the project ultimately did not succeed, with the result that huge investment made by appellant Company in the project resulted in loss. It was the case of appellant Company that Respondent 1 had knowledge of unviability of the project yet they made misleading statements to attract investment. The appellant further alleged that the entire exercise of Respondent 1, besides generating money for itself, was to experiment with others' money and at others' risk. The appellant therefore filed a detailed criminal complaint dated 3-10-2001 of thirty-five pages giving all the necessary facts which constituted the offence of cheating under Section 415 IPC. The trial court vide its order dated 6-11-2001 issued process against the accused persons including Respondent 1 Company. The High Court initially stayed the proceedings before the trial court and finally quashed the criminal complaint dated 3-10-2001 vide its judgment dated 8-8-2003, inter alia on the ground that Respondent 1 being a juristic person, could not be proceeded against, for an offence like cheating.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There is much substance in the submission that virtually in all jurisdictions across the world governed by the rule of law, companies and corporate houses can no longer claim immunity from criminal prosecution on the ground that they are incapable of possessing the necessary mens rea for the commission of criminal offences. The legal position in England and the United States has now crystallised to leave no manner of doubt that a corporation would be liable for crimes of intent. The courts in England have emphatically rejected the notion that a body corporate could not commit a criminal offence which was an outcome of an act of will needing a particular state of mind. The aforesaid notion has been rejected by adopting the doctrine of attribution and imputation. The criminal intent of the "alter ego" of the company/body corporate i.e. the persons or group of persons that guide the business of the company, would be imputed to the corporation. (Paras 55 and 59)

A corporation is virtually in the same position as any individual and may be convicted of common law as well as statutory offences including those requiring mens rea. The criminal liability of a corporation would arise when an offence is committed in relation to the business of the corporation by a person or body of persons in control of its affairs. In such circumstances, it would be necessary to ascertain that the degree and control of the person or body of persons is so intense that a corporation may be said to think and act through the person or the body of persons. The position of law on this issue in Canada is almost the same. Mens rea is attributed to corporations on the principle of "alter ego" of the company. (Para 63)

A company/corporation cannot escape liability for a criminal offence merely because the punishment prescribed is that of imprisonment and fine. The conclusion reached by the High Court that the respondent could not have the necessary mens rea is clearly erroneous. (Para 66). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

(3)(i) Broadly (contd.)

New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Co. v. United States, 53 L Ed 613: 212 US 481 (1908); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Kent and Sussex Contractors Ltd., 1944 KB 146: (1944) 1 All ER 119 (DC); Bolton (H.L.) (Engg.) Co. Ltd. v. T.J. Graham & Sons Ltd., (1957) 1 QB 159: (1956) 3 WLR 804: (1956) 3 All ER 624 (CA); Lennard's Carrying Co. Ltd. v. Asiatic Petroleum Co. Ltd., 1915 AC 705: (1914-15) All ER Rep 280 (HL); Tesco Supermarkets Ltd. v. Nattrass, 1972 AC 153: (1971) 2 WLR 1166: (1971) 2 All ER 127 (HL); Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2005) 4 SCC 530: 2005 SCC (Cri) 961, relied on

19 American Jurisprudence 2d, Para 1434; 19 Corpus Juris Secundum, Para 1363, quoted

[10333] — Ss. 415, 417 and 420 — Cheating — Embraces both types of cases where it occasions transfer of property and where it does not (Para 7). Devender Kumar Singla v. Baldev Krishan Singla, (2005) 9 SCC 15: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1185: AIR 2004 SC 3084: 2004 Cri LJ 1778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-2004]

[Ed.: See also Ratanlal: Law of Crimes, 22nd Edn., p. 1110.]

[10334] — Ss. 415 & 420 — Cheating — Ingredients of — Two parts of S. 415 explained — Deception need not be by express words but may be implied

Section 420 deals with cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property. The offence of cheating is made of two ingredients: deception of any person and fraudulently or dishonestly inducing that person to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property. To put it differently, the ingredients of the offence are that the person deceived delivers to someone a valuable security or property, that the person so deceived was induced to do so, that such person acted on such inducement in consequence of his having been deceived by the accused and that the accused acted fraudulently or dishonestly when so inducing the person. To constitute the offence of cheating, it is not necessary that the deception should be by express words, but it may be by conduct or implied in the nature of the transaction itself. (Para 366)

Section 415 has two parts. While in the first part, the person must "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" induce the complainant to deliver any property; in the second part, the person should intentionally induce the complainant to do or omit to do a thing. That is to say, in the first part, inducement must be dishonest or fraudulent. In the second part, the inducement should be intentional. (Para 281). Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869: AIR 2003 SC 2748.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah[1], B.N. Agrawal[2] and Arijit Pasayat[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2003]

[10335] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Ingredients of cheating — Held on facts, prima facie offence under S. 420 made out

Per Ranganath Misra, J. (Bhagwati, C.J. concurring)

(i) there should be fraudulent or dishonest inducement of a person by deceiving him;

(ii) (a) the person so induced should be intentionally induced to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or

(b) the person so induced should be intentionally induced to do or to omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived; and

(iii) in cases covered by the second part of (ii), the act or omission should be one which caused or is likely to cause damage or harm to the person induced in body, mind, reputation or property.

In the present case the prosecution's allegations were twofold: (i) though the Indira Gandhi Pratibha Pratishthan was not a State Government Trust, publicity was given by the respondent himself and through his agents as also through news media owned by the State Government and the public press to the fact that IGPP was a government trust; and (ii) though Mrs Gandhi had never agreed to the trust being named after her, the respondent associated her name for the purpose of creating an impression in the mind of the people at large that the then Prime Minister, Mrs Indira Gandhi had associated herself with the respondent's trust. The evidence, oral and documentary, taken together justified the framing of a charge for offence under S. 420 on the basis of these allegations. However, the position is a presumptive one open to rebuttal by the respondent. R.S. Nayak v. A.R. Antulay, (1986) 2 SCC 716: 1986 SCC (Cri) 256: AIR 1986 SC 2045: 1986 Cri LJ 1922.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and Ranganath Misra[2], J. [Date of decision: 17-4-1986]

[10336] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Ingredients of, reiterated (Paras 18 and 19). Mohd. Ibrahim v. State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2009]

Vimla (Dr.) v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1963 SC 1572; State of U.P. v. Ranjit Singh, (1999) 2 SCC 617: 1999 SCC (Cri) 293, relied on

(ii) Property — What is

See also '(6)(ii) Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property (S. 420) — Property — What is', below

See also under 'Ss. 405-409 — CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST', above

[10337] — Ss. 415 and 420 — "Property" — Admission card enabling a candidate to sit in examination is "property" for the purposes of S. 415 — Offence of cheating would be committed by a candidate if he would have fraudulently obtained such an admission card

An admission card which would have enabled a candidate to appear in examination as such has no pecuniary value, but it has immense value to the candidate for the examination. Without it he cannot secure admission to the examination hall and consequently cannot appear at the Examination. Therefore such a card is "property" for the purposes of S. 415 IPC. Abhayanand Mishra v. State of Bihar, AIR 1961 SC 1698: (1962) 2 SCR 241: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 822, 824.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1961]

Queen v. Appasami, ILR 12 Mad 151; Queen v. Soshi Bhushan, ILR 15 All 210: 1893 All WN 96, approved

Followed in (1977) 3 SCC 7: (1977) SCC (Cri) 417

[10338] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Property — Whether Assessment Order is "property" and/or "valuable property" — Charge can be framed if Income Tax Officer induced to deliver an assessment order for less income tax than due

One income tax consultant, two income tax clerks, and two partners of premier Industries were charged for "dishonestly or fraudulently inducing the Income Tax Authorities and obtaining assessment order for less income tax than due "from the two partners. Question was whether an assessment order is "property" and/or "valuable security" within the meaning of S. 420, IPC.

Held :

The word "property", occurring in S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code, does not necessarily mean that the thing, of which a delivery is dishonestly desired by the person who cheats, must have a money value or a market value in the hand of the person cheated. Even if the thing has no money value in the hand of the person cheated, but becomes a thing of value in the hand of the person who may get possession of it as a result of the cheating practised by him, it would still fall within the connotation of the term "property" in S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. The communicated order of assessment received by an assessee is, "property", since it is of great importance to an assessee, as containing a computation of his total assessable income and as a determination of his tax liability.

The assessment order is certainly a "document" under S. 29 of the Indian Penal Code. The order of assessment does create a right in the assessee, in the sense that he has a right to pay tax only on the total amount assessed therein and his liability to pay tax is also restricted to that extent. Therefore, an order of assessment is a "valuable security" under S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. Therefore, if the cheating employed by the accused resulted in inducing the Income Tax Officer to make a wrong assessment order, it would amount to inducing the Income Tax Officer to make a "valuable security". Ishwarlal Girdharilal Parekh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1969 SC 40: (1969) 1 SCR 193: (1968) 70 ITR 95, 98, 99: 1969 Cri LJ 271.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Ramaswami and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1968]

Followed in Nrisingha Murari Chakraborty v. State of W.B., (1977) 3 SCC 7: 1977 SCC (Cri) 417

(iii) Deceiving any person — Deception — What is

See also '(iv) Dishonest concealment of facts (S. 415 Expln.)', below

[10339] — S. 415 — 'Deceiving a person' — Held, an essential ingredient of cheating

Cheating can be committed in either of the two ways described in S. 415, IPC. 'Deceiving a person' is common in both the ways of cheating. A person deceived may be fraudulently or dishonestly induced to deliver any property or to consent to the retention of any property by any person. The person deceived may also be intentionally induced to do or to omit to do anything which he would not have done if not deceived and which act of his caused or was likely to cause damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property. Kanumukkala Krishnamurthy v. State of A.P., AIR 1965 SC 333: (1964) 7 SCR 410: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 355, 357.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1964]

[10340] — S. 415 — Deceiving agent or servant of an authority will amount to deceiving the authority itself

There have been cases in which servants or agents of an authority have been deceived while the loss has been suffered by the authority concerned. In such cases, the person deceiving the servants or agents has been held to have deceived the authority concerned, though no direct question was raised about the deception being made not to the authority but to its servant. Kanumukkala Krishnamurthy v. State of A.P., AIR 1965 SC 333: (1964) 7 SCR 410: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 355.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1964]

AIR 1924 Call 18: 27 Cal WN 821: Cri LJ 1313; AIR 1924 Cal 495; 26 Cri LJ 330: AIR 1936 Cal 403: 37 Cri LJ 1156; 6 Pun Rec 1868 (Cri); 4 Cri LJ 355; 12 Mad 151, approved

(iv) Dishonest concealment of facts (S. 415 Expln.)

See also '(iii) Deceiving any person — Deception — What is', above

[10341] — S. 415 — Misrepresentation by College about its affiliation with a university and grant of recognition to it — Dental College neither affiliated with university concerned nor recognised by Dental Council of India (DCI), stating in its advertisement for admission to BDS course that it was under the above university and DCI — Held, this was a case of total misrepresentation on behalf of the College concerned — It tantamounted to an unfair trade practice — Penal Code, 1860, S. 415 (Para 36). Buddhist Mission Dental College and Hospital (2) v. Bhupesh Khurana, (2009) 4 SCC 473: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 510: (2009) 1 CPJ 25 (SC): (2009) 3 All LJ 664.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2009]

[10342] — Ss. 415, 24, 23 and 25 — Cheating — Deception as a necessary ingredient under both parts of S. 415 — When culpable — Such deception, held, must necessarily produce inducement to part with or deliver property which the complainant would not have parted with or delivered, but for inducement resulting from the deception

Section 415 can be divided into two parts. The first part makes it necessary that the deception by the accused of the person deceived, must be fraudulent or dishonest. Such deception must induce the person deceived to either: (a) deliver property to any person; or (b) consent that any person shall retain any property. The second part also requires that the accused must by deception intentionally induce the person deceived either to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit, if he was not so deceived. Furthermore, such act or omission must cause or must be likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. Thus, it is evident that deception is a necessary ingredient for the offences of cheating under both parts of this section. The complainant, therefore, necessarily needs to prove that the inducement had been caused by the deception exercised by the accused. Such deception must necessarily produce the inducement to part with or deliver property, which the complainant would not have parted with or delivered, but for the inducement resulting from deception. The Explanation to the section would clearly indicate that there must be no dishonest concealment of facts. In other words, non-disclosure of relevant information would also be treated as a misrepresentation of facts leading to deception. (Para 68). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

Central Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, 1867 LR 2 HL 99; New Brunswick and Canada Railway Co. v. Muggeridge, (1860) 1 Dr. & Sm 363 at pp. 381-82: 62 ER 418, relied on

[10343] — S. 415 Expln. and Ss. 24 and 23 — Deception — Scope of — Non-disclosure of relevant information — Held, to be treated as misrepresentation leading to deception — Further held, S. 415 Expln. gives statutory recognition to the judicially evolved principle that misleading statements which withhold vital facts for intentionally inducing a person to do or omit to do something, would amount to deception — Misleading statement causing damage wrongfully to the person deceived, amounts to cheating — A corporate body seeking investment by means of misleading statement may therefore be subjected to prosecution for cheating — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 56, 58-A, 60-A, 60-B and 61 to 68 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

Section 415 can be divided into two parts. The first part makes it necessary that the deception by the accused of the person deceived, must be fraudulent or dishonest. Such deception must induce the person deceived to either: (a) deliver property to any person; or (b) consent that any person shall retain any property. The second part also requires that the accused must by deception intentionally induce the person deceived either to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit, if he was not so deceived. Furthermore, such act or omission must cause or must be likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. Thus, it is evident that deception is a necessary ingredient for the offences of cheating under both parts of this section. The complainant, therefore, necessarily needs to prove that the inducement had been caused by the deception exercised by the accused. Such deception must necessarily produce the inducement to part with or deliver property, which the complainant would not have parted with or delivered, but for the inducement resulting from deception. The Explanation to the section would clearly indicate that there must be no dishonest concealment of facts. In other words, non-disclosure of relevant information would also be treated as a misrepresentation of facts leading to deception. (Para 68)

The Explanation appended to Section 415 gives a statutory recognition to the legal principles established through various judicial pronouncements that misleading statements which withhold the vital facts for intentionally inducing a person to do or to omit to do something would amount to deception. Further, in case it is found that misleading statement has wrongfully caused damage to the person deceived it would amount to cheating. (Para 72)

The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to prove the averments made in the complaint. They were entitled to establish that they have been deliberately induced into making huge investments on the basis of representations made by Respondent 1 and its representatives, which representations subsequently turned out to be completely false and fraudulent. The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to establish that Respondent 1 and its representatives were aware of the falsity of the representations at the time when they were made. The appellants have given elaborate details of the positive assertions made by Respondent 1 which were allegedly false to its knowledge. It is also claimed by the appellants that Respondent 1 and its representatives wilfully concealed facts which were material and ought to have been disclosed, but were intentionally withheld so as to deceive the appellant into advancing and expending a sum of Rs 500 crores. (Para 75). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

Central Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, 1867 LR 2 HL 99; New Brunswick and Canada Railway Co. v. Muggeridge, (1860) 1 Dr. & Sm 363 at pp. 381-82: 62 ER 418, relied on

(v) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist

See also '(6)(vi) Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property (S. 420) — Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist', and

'(10)(xi) Quashment', below

[10344] — Ss. 415, 418 and 420 — Cheating — Pre-requisite for — Fraudulent and dishonest intention, from when to subsist — Distinction from breach of contract — Contract for supply of goods — Fraudulent and dishonest intention must be shown to be existing from the very beginning of the transaction — From mere failure to keep the promise at a subsequent stage, offence of cheating cannot be made out — Distinction between offence of cheating and mere breach of contract should be kept in mind — Mere use of words cheating in the complaint would not be sufficient — Substance of the complaint has to be seen — Having regard to the substance of the complaint in the instant case, held, it pertains to a civil case of breach of contract and not a criminal case of offence of cheating — Hence Magistrate erred in issuing process — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 73, 74 and 75

The respondent Company filed a complaint against the appellant alleging that a memorandum of understanding (MoU) was executed between the accused-appellant and the complainant for supply of steel grip tapes inter alia stipulating that 50% of the payments against monthly quantity would be given in advance and balance 50% on receipt of the goods. The complainant delivered 56,94,120 reels of steel grip tapes valued at Rs 3,38,62,860 to the accused and out of this amount, the accused made only part-payment of Rs 3,05,39,086 leaving balance amount of Rs 33,23,774. It was alleged that after making this payment, the accused did not make further payment despite repeated demands and started giving reasons besides raising disputes in respect of the material purchased six years back being defective. After making the aforesaid averments in the complaint, it was concluded that "that MoU was signed by the accused with mala fide and criminal intention of grabbing money and goods from the complainant's Company and to deceive, cheat and cause wrongful loss to the complainant's Company, but the complainant was not aware of the criminal intention of the accused while execution of above MoU". The complainant had also sent a notice to the accused wherein there was no mention about any deceit or cheating. In a complaint filed by the complainant with the police also except for a vague allegation about cheating, nothing of substance was stated. According to the complainant, on the advice of the police the complaint in question was filed before the Magistrate. The Magistrate issued process against the accused. But the Sessions Court set aside the order of the Magistrate issuing process and the High Court reversed the judgment of the Sessions Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

From mere failure of a person to keep up promise subsequently, a culpable intention right at the beginning, that is, when he made the promises cannot be presumed. A distinction has to be kept in mind between mere breach of contract and the offence of cheating. It depends upon the intention of the accused at the time of inducement. The subsequent conduct is not the sole test. Mere breach of contract cannot give rise to criminal prosecution for cheating unless fraudulent, dishonest intention is shown at the beginning of the transaction. The substance of the complaint is to be seen. Mere use of the expression "cheating" in the complaint is of no consequence. (Paras 6 and 8)

(3)(v) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist (contd.)

In the present case except for mention of the words "deceive" and "cheat" in the complaint filed before the Magistrate and "cheating" in the complaint filed before the police, there is no averment about the deceit, cheating or fraudulent intention of the accused at the time of entering into MoU wherefrom it can be inferred that the accused had the intention to deceive the complainant to pay. It is clear from the substance of the complaint that present is a simple case of civil disputes between the parties. Requisite averments so as to make out a case of cheating are absolutely absent. The Sessions Court had rightly set aside the order of the Magistrate issuing process to the appellant. (Paras 8 and 10). Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, D.M. Dharmadhikari and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2004]

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565, relied on

[10345] — Ss. 415, 418 and 420 — Nature of offence under — Mens rea essential ingredient of offences under Ss. 418 and 420

The respondents approached the appellant for the purpose of securing ethambutol hydrochloride drug in bulk for sale and use in various pharmaceutical drugs and products being manufactured by the respondent Company. The appellant has come out with a definite case that by reason of a promise of maintaining a continuous supply of raw materials to the appellant for the purpose of manufacturing ethambutol hydrochloride and in such a way so as not to cause any interruption or hindrance to the manufacturing activity of the appellant-complainant's factory, the complainant entered into an agreement. On failure to comply with that agreement the appellant filed a complaint alleging to have lost a substantial amount of money to the extent of about rupees one crore and the sufferance of loss has been by reason of specific assurance and representation which turned out to be false. Misrepresentation on the part of the accused-respondent persons to the complainant, had been the major grievance and a definite and specific case had been made out that such a misrepresentation was intentionally effected since the accused persons were in the know of things that in the event the supplies were not effected, as per the agreement, the complainant was likely to suffer a wrongful loss which in the interest of the transaction between the parties, the accused persons were bound to protect. Proceedings were initiated against the respondents under Sections 120-B, 418, 415 and 420 read with Section 34 IPC. Against the said proceedings the respondents moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. A Single Judge of the High Court taking the view that the complaint did not disclose any offence allowed the petition for quashing the complaint. Allowing the appeal of the complainant,

Held :

While Section 415 is an offence of cheating, Section 418 deals with cheating with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to a person whose interest the offender is bound to protect and Section 420 is cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property. In order to attract the provisions of Sections 418 and 420 the guilty intent, at the time of making the promise is a requirement and an essential ingredient thereto and subsequent failure to fulfil the promise by itself would not attract the provisions of Section 418 or Section 420. Mens rea is one of the essential ingredients of the offence of cheating under Section 420. As a matter of fact Illustration (g) to Section 415 makes the position clear enough to indicate that mere failure to deliver in breach of an agreement would not amount to cheating but is liable only to a civil action for breach of contract and it is this concept which obviously has weighed with the Single Judge. But considering the factual aspect of the matter it must be held that the issue involved in this case is not one in which the criminal trial should have been short-circuited. (Paras 11 and 19). Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615: AIR 2000 SC 1869: 2000 Cri LJ 1487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2000]

Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516, relied on

Dr. Sharma's Nursing Home v. Delhi Admn., (1998) 8 SCC 745: 1999 SCC (Cri) 91, distinguished

[10346] — Ss. 415, 418, 420 and 120-B — Quashing of complaint or charge-sheet — Scope of High Court's jurisdiction — Mere fact that the offence was committed during the course of a commercial transaction by itself not sufficient to quash the complaint — For quashing the complaint Court has to see whether on the fact situation 'civic profile' outweighs the 'criminal outfit' — Commission of offence under Ss. 120-B, 418, 415 and 420 r/w 34 IPC by respondent in the course of a contractual transaction alleged — Held, on facts, in the factual matrix quashing of complaint not warranted — Complaint has to be examined as a whole without going into merits of the allegations made therein — If a prima facie case is made out disclosing the ingredients of the offence alleged against the accused, Court should not quash the complaint — But if the allegations do not constitute any offence as alleged and appear to be patently absurd and improbable, Court should not hesitate to quash the complaint — Court's approach should, however, be very circumspect, cautious and careful — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The respondents approached the appellant for the purpose of securing ethambutol hydrochloride drug in bulk for sale and use in various pharmaceutical drugs and products being manufactured by the respondent Company. The appellant has come out with a definite case that by reason of a promise of maintaining a continuous supply of raw materials to the appellant for the purpose of manufacturing ethambutol hydrochloride and in such a way so as not to cause any interruption or hindrance to the manufacturing activity of the appellant-complainant's factory, the complainant entered into an agreement. On failure to comply with that agreement the appellant filed a complaint alleging to have lost a substantial amount of money to the extent of about rupees one crore and the sufferance of loss has been by reason of specific assurance and representation which turned out to be false. Misrepresentation on the part of the accused-respondent persons to the complainant, had been the major grievance and a definite and specific case had been made out that such a misrepresentation was intentionally effected since the accused persons were in the know of things that in the event the supplies were not effected, as per the agreement, the complainant was likely to suffer a wrongful loss which in the interest of the transaction between the parties, the accused persons were bound to protect. Proceedings were initiated against the respondents under Sections 120-B, 418, 415 and 420 read with Section 34 IPC. Against the said proceedings the respondents moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. A Single Judge of the High Court taking the view that the complaint did not disclose any offence allowed the petition for quashing the complaint. Allowing the appeal of the complainant,

Held :

Exercise of jurisdiction under the inherent power as envisaged in Section 482 of the Code to have the complaint or the charge-sheet quashed is an exception rather than a rule and the case for quashing at the initial stage must have to be treated as rarest of rare so as not to scuttle the prosecution. With the lodgement of first information report the ball is set to roll and thenceforth the law takes its own course and the investigation ensues in accordance with the provisions of law. The jurisdiction as such is rather limited and restricted and its undue expansion is neither practicable nor warranted. In the event, however, the court on a perusal of the complaint comes to a conclusion that the allegations levelled in the complaint or charge-sheet on the face of it do not constitute or disclose any offence as alleged, there ought not to be any hesitation to rise up to the expectation of the people and deal with the situation as is required under the law. To exercise powers under Section 482 of the Code, the complaint in its entirety will have to be examined on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint and the High Court at that stage has no authority or jurisdiction to go into the matter or examine its correctness. Whatever appears on the face of the complaint shall be taken into consideration without any critical examination of the same. But the offence ought to appear ex facie on the complaint. The truth or falsity of the allegations would not be gone into by the Court at this earliest stage. Whether or not the allegations in the complaint were true is to be decided on the basis of the evidence led at the trial. So the question is: Can it be said that the allegations in the complaint do not make out any case against the accused nor do they disclose the ingredients of an offence alleged against the accused or the allegations are patently absurd and inherently improbable so that no prudent person can ever reach to such a conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused? (Paras 2, 14 and 15)

The factual matrix would be relevant in the matter of assessment of the situation as to whether "civic profile" would outweigh the "criminal outfit". (Para 3)

(3)(v) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist (contd.)

In the matter of exercise of the High Court's inherent power, the only requirement is to see whether continuance of the proceeding would be a total abuse of the process of court. The Criminal Procedure Code contains a detailed procedure for investigation, charge and trial, and in the event the High Court is desirous of putting a stop to the known procedure of law, the High Court must use a proper circumspection and very great care and caution to quash the complaint in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. (Para 16)

While Section 415 is an offence of cheating, Section 418 deals with cheating with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to a person whose interest the offender is bound to protect and Section 420 is cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property. In order to attract the provisions of Sections 418 and 420 the guilty intent, at the time of making the promise is a requirement and an essential ingredient thereto and subsequent failure to fulfil the promise by itself would not attract the provisions of Section 418 or Section 420. Mens rea is one of the essential ingredients of the offence of cheating under Section 420. As a matter of fact Illustration (g) to Section 415 makes the position clear enough to indicate that mere failure to deliver in breach of an agreement would not amount to cheating but is liable only to a civil action for breach of contract and it is this concept which obviously has weighed with the Single Judge. But considering the factual aspect of the matter it must be held that the issue involved in this case is not one in which the criminal trial should have been short-circuited. (Paras 11 and 19). Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615: AIR 2000 SC 1869: 2000 Cri LJ 1487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2000]

Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; L.V. Jadhav v. Shankarrao Abasaheb Pawar, (1983) 4 SCC 231: 1983 SCC (Cri) 813; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Nagpur Steel & Alloys (P) Ltd. v. P. Radhakrishna, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1073; Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516, relied on

Dr. Sharma's Nursing Home v. Delhi Admn., (1998) 8 SCC 745: 1999 SCC (Cri) 91, distinguished

[10347] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Cheating — Ingredients — Fraudulent or dishonest inducement must be at the inception and not at a later stage

Ingredients of cheating are:

(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; and

(ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property to any person or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. (Para 25)

Sections 415 read with Section 420 IPC indicates that fraudulent or dishonest inducement on the part of the accused must be at the inception and not at a subsequent stage. In this case blank cheques were handed over to the accused during the period 2000-2004 for use thereof for business purposes but the dispute between the parties admittedly arose much thereafter i.e. in 2005. Thus no case for proceeding against the respondent under Section 420 of the Penal Code is, therefore, made out. (Paras 26 to 28)

Filling up of the blanks in a cheque by itself would not amount to forgery. Whereas in the complaint petition, allegations have been made that it was Respondents 2 and 3 who had entered into a conspiracy to commit the said offence as indicated hereinbefore, in the counter-affidavit, it has been alleged that the employees of the respondent Company did so. (Para 29)

Although, Section 120-B IPC has been added, there does not exist any averment that Respondents 2 and 3 had entered into any conspiracy with their employees. No case for proceeding with the offence of forgery against the respondents has, thus, also been made out. (Para 30)

However, a case for proceeding against the respondents under Section 406 IPC has been made out. A cheque being a property, the same was entrusted to the respondents. If the said property has been misappropriated or has been used for a purpose for which the same had not been handed over, a case under Section 406 IPC may be found to have been made out. It may be true that even in a proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the appellant could raise a defence that the cheques were not meant to be used towards discharge of a lawful liability or a debt, but the same by itself would not mean that in an appropriate case, a complaint petition cannot be allowed to be filed. (Para 31)

The respondents were keeping watch over the matter. As soon as a first information report was lodged, a notice was immediately sent. A quashing application was filed within a few days of the lodging of the first information report. The investigation was not allowed to take place at all. Whereas it would have been the duty of the court to uphold and/or to protect the personal liberty of an accused in a case, but where the first information report prima facie discloses commission of a cognizable offence, the High Court, ordinarily, should not have interfered with investigation thereof by the statutory authority. (Para 32)

Investigation by IO may now be confined to the charge under Section 406 IPC. (Para 33). Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678: AIR 2008 SC 1683: (2008) 63 AIC 146 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107, relied on [10348] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Cheating — Ingredients of — Intention, held, is the gist of the said offence — Therefore, to hold a person guilty of cheating it is necessary to show that he had a fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making the promise — From mere fact that the promisor could not keep his promise it cannot be presumed that he all along had a culpable intention to break the promise from the beginning (Paras 41 and 42). Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259: AIR 2008 SC 251: (2007) 144 DLT 257: (2007) 59 AIC 30 (SC): (2008) 1 All LJ 40.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, R.V. Raveendran and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2007]

[10349] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Ingredients of — If applicable on facts — There cannot be any doubt or dispute whatsoever that an offence of cheating or fraud can be committed even if the parties had entered into a commercial transaction — But it is equally well settled that the allegations contained in the complaint petition must, prima facie, show inducement of the victim to deliver any property by the accused — The facts do not show that the appellant had the requisite intention — It is not a case where the appellants can be said to have induced the respondent to enter into a transaction so as to deceive them with a view to cause unlawful losses to them and to make unlawful gain for themselves — There was a statutory remedy available against the appellants — Complaint therefore deserves to be quashed (Paras 10 to 13). Anil Ritolla v. State of Bihar, (2007) 10 SCC 110: (2007) 59 AIC 211 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, distinguished

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

(2007) 1 Pat LJR 255, reversed

[10350] — S. 415 Ill. (g) — Nature of offence — Held, if at very initiation of negotiations it was evident that there was no intention to cheat, dispute would be of a civil nature — However, such a conclusion would depend on evidence to be led at time of trial (Para 17). S.P. Gupta v. Ashutosh Gupta, (2010) 6 SCC 562.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2010]

[10351] — Ss. 415 Ill. (g) and 420 — Cheating or civil dispute — Agreement for sale of land — Earnest money paid to the appellant as part-consideration — Possession of land transferred to the complainants — Complaint laid on the basis that the appellant cheated them of the earnest money as he was not willing to complete the bargain — Held, in the circumstances of the case, liability of the appellant, if any, is of civil nature and not criminal — Entire proceedings quashed and the complainant directed to pay Rs 10,000 to the appellant as compensatory costs — CrPC, 1973, S. 357. Nageshwar Prasad Singh v. Narayan Singh, (1998) 5 SCC 694: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1378: AIR 1999 SC 1480.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1998]

[10352] — Ss. 415/420 — Cheating — Whether ingredients of criminal offence made out — Held, on facts the dispute between the parties was a civil dispute — Criminal prosecution for the alleged offence under Ss. 415/420 amounted to abuse of process of law and hence the proceedings are liable to be quashed

The parties hereto entered into an agreement for sale in respect of a house, a sale deed was also executed on 30-9-2005 by the appellant herein. Indisputably on or about 29-9-2005, two rooms, allegedly, constructed on the said lands were demolished. A suit was filed in relation thereto. Respondent 1 who was also defendant in the said suit did not allege that she has been cheated by the appellant herein but later on filed a complaint in the court alleging commission of an offence by the appellant purported to be under Section 420 IPC.

(3)(vi) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing delivery or retention of property by or with consent of deceived person

A petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint had been dismissed by the High Court.

The short question which arose for consideration was as to whether a case of cheating within the meaning of Section 415 of the Penal Code had been made out or not.

Answering in negative and allowing the appeal,

Held :

While executing the sale deed, the appellant did not make any false or misleading representation. There had also not been any dishonest act of inducement on his part to do or omit to do anything which he could not have done or omitted to have done if he were not so deceived. Admittedly, the matter is pending before a competent civil court. A decision of a competent court of law is required to be taken in this behalf. Essentially, the dispute between the parties is a civil dispute. (Para 12)

For the purpose of establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. In a case of this nature, it is permissible in law to consider the stand taken by a party in a pending civil litigation. This does not mean that the liability of a person cannot be both civil and criminal at the same time. But when a stand has been taken in a complaint petition which is contrary to or inconsistent with the stand taken by him in a civil suit, it assumes significance. Had the fact as purported to have been represented before the Supreme Court that the appellant got the said two rooms demolished and concealed the said fact at the time of execution of the deed of sale, the matter might have been different. As the deed of sale was executed on 30-9-2005 and the purported demolition took place on 29-9-2005, it was expected that the complainant/first respondent would come out with her real grievance in the written statement filed by her in the aforementioned suit. She, for reasons best known to her, did not choose to do so. In this view of the matter, in the facts and circumstances obtaining herein, no case has been made out for proceeding with the criminal case. (Paras 13 and 14). B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107: AIR 2008 SC 210: 2008 Cri LJ 431.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 746; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121, relied on

(vi) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing delivery or retention of property by or with consent of deceived person

See also '(3)(vii) Intentionally inducing deceived person to commit act or omission likely to cause harm or damage to him', and

'(6)(iv) Inducing delivery of property — S. 420 vis-à-vis mere cheating', below

[10353] — Ss. 415 and 24 — Cheating — Instances of — Person who may make complaint against cheating — Sale of property by a person knowing that property did not belong to him — Held, seller defrauds purchaser — Purchaser is entitled to prosecute seller under S. 415 but a third party cannot do so

When a sale deed is executed conveying a property claiming ownership thereto, it may be possible for the purchaser under such sale deed to allege that the vendor has cheated him by making a false representation of ownership and fraudulently induced him to part with sale consideration. But in this case the complaint is not by the purchaser. On the other hand, the purchaser is made a co-accused. It is also not the case of the complainant that any of the accused tried to deceive him. Nor did the complainant allege that first appellant pretended to be complainant while executing the sale deeds. Therefore, it cannot be said that the first accused by the act of executing sale deeds in favour of second accused or the second accused by reason of being the purchaser, or the third, fourth and fifth accused, by reason of being the witness, scribe and stamp vendor in regard to the sale deeds, deceived the complainant in any manner. As the ingredients of cheating as stated in Section 415 are not found, it cannot be said that there was an offence punishable under Sections 417, 418, 419 or 420 IPC. (Paras 20 to 23). Mohd. Ibrahim v. State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2009]

[10354] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Cheating — Fraudulent representation — Accused making the complainant believe that he has divine healing powers — Complainant giving him money but not getting the desired result — It is a case of inducement — Held, it can be presumed that the accused has committed offence of cheating — Such presumption is rebuttable

The accused claimed to possess occult faculties and attracted a number of devotees. He represented to have divine healing powers through his touches, particularly of chronic diseases. The complainant approached him for healing his 15-year-old daughter who is congenitally a dumb child. The appellant assured the complainant that the little girl would be cured of her impairment through his divine powers. He demanded a sum of Rs 1 lakh as consideration to be paid in instalments. The complainant paid the amount and waited eagerly for improvement of the child but could not get the desired result. The complainant lodged a complaint with the police for cheating. The appellant moved the High Court for quashing the proceedings but failed. Dismissing the appeal by special leave,

Held :

If somebody offers his prayers to God for healing the sick, there cannot normally be any element of fraud. But if he represents to another that he has divine powers and either directly or indirectly makes that other person believe that he has such divine powers, it is inducement referred to in Section 415 IPC. Anybody who responds to such inducement pursuant to it and gives the inducer money or any other article and does not get the desired result is a victim of the fraudulent representation. The court can in such a situation presume that the offence of cheating falling within the ambit of Section 420 IPC has been committed. It is for the accused, in such a situation, to rebut the presumption. (Para 8). Sri Bhagwan Samardha Sreepada Vallabha Venkata Vishwanandha Maharaj v. State of A.P., (1999) 5 SCC 740: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1047: AIR 1999 SC 2332: 1999 Cri LJ 3661.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-1999]

[10355] — Ss. 415, 420 and 24 — Cheating — Ingredients of — Dishonest inducement in required over and above deception — Complainant getting his brother admitted in a nursing home on assurance given by the authorities that air-conditioned rooms were available in the said nursing home — However, room provided to the complainant found to be not air-conditioned though he was charged for such a room — Held, offence of cheating not made out

In the present case the courts below have rested their findings on deception only and did not go into the question whether the complaint and its accompaniments disclosed the other essential ingredient of the offence under Section 420 IPC, namely, dishonest inducement. "Dishonesty" has been defined in Section 24 IPC to mean deliberate intention to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss; and when with such intention, deception is practised and delivery of property is induced then the offence under Section 420 IPC can be said to have been committed. Judged in that context, in the instant case there are no materials from which it can be said even prima facie that the appellant "dishonestly induced" the complainant to part with his money. Dr. Sharma's Nursing Home v. Delhi Admn., (1998) 8 SCC 745.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-1996]

[10356] — Ss. 415, 420/34, 24 and 25 — Cheating — Ingredients of — A mere representation, which is neither claimed nor alleged to be dishonest or fraudulent would not attract the charge of cheating only because the complainant parts with his money on the basis thereof — On facts, no dishonest representation made by the appellant — Therefore, his conviction set aside

According to the complainant A-2, A-3 and the appellant requested him to advance money against the stock-in-trade by business of Calcutta Cafe of which A-3 was represented to be the proprietor. The three accused represented to the complainant that Calcutta Cafe was free from all encumbrances and the money could be advanced against hypothecation. The deed of hypothecation was signed by A-3 and the amount was advanced to him. Subsequently it transpired that the representation made by the accused persons was false because the property in question was an encumbered property and in a suit filed in the Calcutta High Court, joint receiver had been appointed regarding Calcutta Cafe. No charge was framed against A-2 while A-3 died during pendency of the trial. The trial court convicted the appellants for an offence under Sections 420/34 IPC. His appeal before the High Court failed.

Allowing the appeal by special leave

Held :

Although there is some evidence to show that the money was advanced by the complainant to A-3 on a representation made by all the accused, including the appellant, but taking the complainant's case at its best, even if it be assumed that the appellant had made a representation in the manner deposed to by the complainant, there is nothing on the record to show that the appellant had any knowledge about the Calcutta Cafe being an encumbered property or about the appointment of the Joint Receivers by the Calcutta High Court in a suit in respect of that property. There is no evidence to show that the appellant knowingly made any false representation much less dishonestly or fraudulently. The basic ingredients of the offence of cheating are, therefore, missing in the case. The evidence on the record does not connect the appellant with the crime alleged against him at all. The courts below did not properly examine the legal position as adverted to by us. A mere representation, which is neither claimed or alleged to be dishonest or fraudulent would not attract the charge of cheating only because the complainant parts with his money on the basis thereof. In the present case the dishonest representation, both orally and in the deed of hypothecation, was made by A-3, proprietor of the Calcutta Cafe. The conviction and sentence against the appellant as recorded by the trial court and confirmed by the High Court, under the circumstances is unsustainable. Abdul Fazal Siddiqui v. Fatehchand Hirawat, (1996) 6 SCC 32: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1112.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-1996]

(vii) Intentionally inducing deceived person to commit act or omission likely to cause harm or damage to him

See also '(3)(vi) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing delivery or retention of property by or with consent of deceived person', above, and

'(6)(iv) Inducing delivery of property — S. 420 vis-à-vis mere cheating', below

[10357] — Ss. 415 and 419 — Offence of cheating — Ingredients of — Wrong identification before Oath Commissioner — Deception practised by accused in wrongly identifying some person — No damage or harm to Oath Commissioner in body, mind, reputation or property — Absence of charge relating to any cheating or attempting to cheat Oath Commissioner

The ingredients required to constitute offence of cheating are: (1) there should be fraudulent or dishonest inducement of a person by deceiving him; (2)(a) the person so deceived should be induced to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property; or (b) the person so deceived should be intentionally induced to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived; and (3) in cases covered by (2)(b) the act or omission should be one which causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to the person induced in body, mind, reputation or property. The conviction for an offence under S. 419, substantively or with the aid of S. 109, IPC, could only have been justified if the facts proved constituted all the ingredients of the offence of cheating. Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516: AIR 1974 SC 1811: (1971) 2 SCR 178: 1974 Cri LJ 1261.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Bhargava and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1970]

[10358] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Cheating — Elements of — Obtaining railway receipt by false representation but no additional liability by Railway incurred — Charge not established — Railways Act, 1890, S. 73

The appellants produced a forwarding note to the Stationmaster, got a wagon allotted to despatch 251 bags of chillies and later themselves had them loaded into the wagon and put the rivets on the wagon. A railway Khalasi examined the rivets and sealed the wagon. The wagon was attached on the same day to a goods train and was carried forward outside the station on its way to Calcutta. Later on the seal was found tampered and it was discovered that in the wagon, there were only 197 bags of chaff (Bhusa) and not chillies. The evidence was that the appellants had obtained Rs 5500 from one Murarilal by handing over to him the railway receipt representing that they had booked 251 bags of chillies.

The elements necessary for an offence of cheating under S. 415, IPC were absent inasmuch as it was not made out that the making of the railway receipt was likely to cause damage or harm to the Railway or the Stationmaster.

The false representation made by the appellants in obtaining the railway receipts in the form in which it was issued did not cast any additional liability on the Railway and the issue of the railway receipt, therefore, was not likely to cause any damage or harm to the Railway. No case of cheating is made out. Hari Sao v. State of Bihar, (1969) 3 SCC 107: 1970 SCC (Cri) 10: AIR 1970 SC 843: 1970 Cri LJ 849.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, G.K. Mitter and P. Jaganmohan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-1969]

[10359] — Ss. 417 and 471/465 — Ingredients of offence under — Letters inviting some artistes at a cultural show allegedly forged on the letterhead of a Minister — Co-accused who allegedly forged the letters acquitted and his acquittal becoming final — Allegation against the appellant that he delivered those letters to the recipients — Held, the act of the appellant cannot be said to have been done "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" — Hence offence under Ss. 471/465 not made out — There being absence of harm to any person in body, mind or reputation, charge under Section 417 also misplaced

By the delivery of forged letters, there is neither any wrongful gain to anyone nor any wrongful loss to another. The act of the appellant could not thus be termed to have been done dishonestly. Likewise the appellant cannot be said to have any intention to defraud because his action resulted in no disadvantage to anyone which but for the deception the person defrauded would have acted otherwise. The basic ingredients of the act done "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" being missing, the charge under Section 471 read with Section 465 IPC was totally misplaced.

The High Court perhaps thought that the act or omission of the appellant was not covered in the first part of offence of "cheating" as defined in Section 415 IPC. If so, the act or omission of the accused could not in any event fall in the later part because it cannot be said that the act or omission of the appellant caused or was likely to cause harm to any person in body, mind or reputation. Thus the conviction of the appellant for offence under Section 417 was also totally out of place and the verdict on that score deserves reversal. Jibrial Diwan v. State of Maharashtra, (1997) 6 SCC 499: 1997 SCC (Cri) 944: AIR 1997 SC 3424: 1997 Cri LJ 4070.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1997]

(4) Cheating by personation (Ss. 416 & 419)

[10360] — Ss. 419, 120-A & 120-B — Charge clearly that of conspiracy to cheat by impersonation, though only conspiracy to cheat mentioned — Accused could not have been misled about charge. Yash Pal Mittal v. State of Punjab, (1977) 4 SCC 540: 1978 SCC (Cri) 5: AIR 1977 SC 2433: 1978 Cri LJ 189.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.K. Goswami, N.L. Untwalia and D.A. Desai, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1977]

[10361] — Ss. 419 and 415 — Cheating by personation — Accused applying for appointment to posts notified by Madras Public Service Commission — Making false representations in his application as to his name, place of birth and father's name — He also falsely representing that he held degree of M.B.B.S. — Accused appointed by Government on recommendations of Public Service Commission and drew his salary for many years — Held, accused committed offence of cheating by personation — Offence of cheating as defined in latter part of S. 415 not made out

The appellant who was at the time serving as a Civil Assistant Surgeon in the Madras Medical Service on a temporary basis, applied for the permanent appointment to the posts notified by the Public Service Commission. In his application he made false representation as to his name, place of birth and father's name. He also falsely represented that he held the degree of M.B.B.S. The appellant was tried and convicted for the offence of cheating by personation punishable under S. 419, IPC.

Held, there is nothing on the record to show that the Service Commission could have ordinarily detected the deception or that the appointment of the applicant to the post in the Medical Service was the appointment of a person who proved to be inefficient. On the contrary, the evidence on the record shows that for about 10 years between his appointment and the institution of this case, he served efficiently and obtained good reports from the Departmental Superiors. The appellant has not committed the offence of "cheating" as defined in the latter part of S. 415, IPC even though he had deceived the Service Commission by representing himself to be a duly qualified candidate, and thus induced it to select him for the post.

The appellant's misrepresentation to the Service Commission continued and persisted till the final stage of the Government passing an order of appointment and that therefore the Government itself was deceived by the misrepresentation he had made in his application presented to the Service Commission.

The fact that the Service Commission is an independent statutory authority has no relevant bearing on this question. It is a statutory adviser to Government in the matter of appointment to the Services. Deception of such an adviser is deception of the Government which is expected to pay heed to its advice and act accordingly.

The Government appointed the appellant to a post in its Medical Service on being induced by deception that he was fully qualified for the appointment. In consequence of the appointment, Government had to pay him the salaries which fell due. It is clear therefore that the appellant, by deceiving the Government dishonestly induced it to deliver property to him and thus committed the offence of cheating under S. 415 IPC. The offence really committed by him was "cheating" by personation, punishable under S. 419, IPC. The conviction of the appellant for this offence is therefore correct. Kanumukkala Krishnamurthy v. State of A.P., AIR 1965 SC 333: (1964) 7 SCR 410: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 355.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1964]

[10362] — Ss. 419 and 420 — Cheating by false impersonation — Accused obtaining loan of Rs 25,000 from the complainant and depositing registration certificates of a motor-cycle and a lorry as security — Agreement providing that if the accused failed to repay the loan the complainant could take forceful possession of the vehicles and as an alternative arrangement land also mentioned — Lorry belonging to the brother of the accused — Agreement not showing that the accused in any manner asserted that the lorry belonged to him — Held, dispute is of a civil nature — Ingredients of Ss. 419 and 420 not made out. George Zacharia v. T.K. Varghese, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 267: 1995 SCC (Cri) 374.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1994]

[10363] — Ss. 419 and 420 — Release of offender on probation of good conduct — Considerations for — Nature of the offence and character of the offender — Character — Meaning of — Accused managing to get entry into legal profession by representing that he was a qualified legal practitioner having enrolled himself with the State Bar Council — Accused practising law for a period of eight years and also holding post of Secretary of Bar Association — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the accused must be dealt with deterrently and the courts below not justified in giving him benefit of S. 4 — Fact that the accused expressed repentance over his conduct or that later he obtained a law degree and got himself enrolled as an advocate is of no consequence — Accused awarded six months' RI under each count (Ss. 419 and 420 IPC) and a fine of Rs 5000 each (total Rs 10,000) to be added to fund of the Legal Service Board — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 360 and 361 — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 — S. 4

The respondent approached the Nilgiris Bar Association in the year 1978 for admitting him as a member therein by representing that he was a qualified legal practitioner having enrolled himself with the State Bar Council. Without suspecting the bona fides of the application he was admitted to the membership of the Bar Association. He started his practice at the new station and built up a good clientele and involved himself in all the activities of the Association. He contested for the post of Secretary and won it. In this way, he continued till 1985. But by then some members of the Bar who developed suspicion of his credentials made secret inquiries and discovered that he was imposturing as an advocate and his credentials were bogus. A complaint was lodged with the police who, after investigation, charge-sheeted the accused for offences under Sections 419 and 420 IPC. He pleaded guilty and prayed for mercy. The trial court released him under Section 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act. The High Court declined to interfere but made an endeavour to console the Bar by directing the delinquent person to donate a sum of Rs 15,000 to the Association for buying books to their library. Allowing the appeal by special leave filed by the Bar Council

Held :

Before the relief envisaged in Section 4(1) of the Probation of Offenders Act is granted court must take into account the circumstances of the case, among which "the nature of the offence and the character of the offender" must have overriding considerations. After bestowing judicial consideration on those factors, the court must form an opinion as to whether it would be appropriate in that case to release the particular accused therein as envisaged in the sub-section. The benefits mentioned in Sections 3 and 4 are subject to the limitations laid down in those provisions and the word 'may' in Section 4 of the Act is not to be understood as 'must.'

When considering the nature of the offence the court must have a realistic view of the gravity of the offence, the impact which the offence could have had on the victims and whether considerations of deterrence can be overlooked etc. No fixed yardstick can be laid down to measure the nature of the offence for affording or denying the reliefs envisaged in Section 4 of the Act. However, as the court is enjoined to take into consideration the character of the offender it is well to remember that character is not the abstract opinion in which the offender is held by others. The word "character" is not defined in the Act. Hence, it must be given the ordinary meaning.

Character of the offender in this case reflects in the modality in which he was inveigling in a noble profession duping everybody concerned. In such a view of the matter the two courts could not have formed an opinion in favour of the character of the respondent. It is apposite to observe here that the learned Single Judge did not mention anything about the character of the respondent qua the accusations found against him.

While adverting to the nature of offence the court must bear in mind the necessity to weed out impostors in the professions which require special learning and training, particularly at a time when such impostors are proliferating in the society. Any leniency shown to such wiles would certainly tend to sprout up weeds at menacing scales. The case of the respondent is not one of single lapse or even multiple delinquencies confined to a few days. The long period of 8 years during which the mountebank had successfully indulged in interloping as a qualified and learned counsel would have considerably eroded public confidence in the probity of the legal profession particularly in that area and besmirched the reputation of that Bar as the public might be looking upon every other member of the profession with suspectful eyes. The trial Magistrate and the learned Single Judge, who found a repenting mind in the respondent, have failed to notice that repentance had dawned on him, even if that also was not a pretension, only when he reached a cul-de-sac. When he was masquerading himself everyday in sartorial costumes prescribed only for accredited members of the legal profession it did not occur to him even once during the long period of eight years to think of repentance. On the contrary, he was flourishing at large and had even become the Secretary of the Bar Association. If the vigilant Bar had not discovered the trickery, perhaps he would still have persisted in his art of cheating. Therefore, the crimes committed by him should have been dealt with deterrently and the ameliorative reliefs envisaged in Section 4 of the Act should have been kept at bay. Nilgiris Bar Assn. v. T.K. Mahalingam, (1998) 1 SCC 550: 1998 SCC (Cri) 450: AIR 1998 SC 398: 1998 Cri LJ 398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1997]

Ramji Missar v. State of Bihar, AIR 1963 SC 1088: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 173; Rattan Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 444: (1964) 7 SCR 676; Ishar Das v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 65: 1973 SCC (Cri) 708; Ram Parkash v. State of H.P., (1972) 4 SCC 46: 1973 SCC (Cri) 119, relied on

[10364] — Ss. 419, 420 and 120-B — A-3 alleged to have obtained fake passport by submitting false documents with help of A-4 to A-9 — Involvement of A-3 at both stages i.e. pre-passport application stage and post-passport application stage established — Held, it was for her benefit that entire conspiracy was hatched involving more than one individual — Hence, her conviction sustained — However, considering that she had undergone more than 2½ years of imprisonment, sentence reduced to period already undergone — Passports Act, 1967, Ss. 12 and 3 (Paras 51 and 54)

A-3 was alleged to have obtained a fake passport by submitting false documents with the help of A-4 to A-9, which was used by her to travel to Lisbon, Portugal. She had to face the prosecution and suffer conviction and sentence in Portugal.

The trial court found her guilty of the offences punishable under Sections 120-B, 419 and 420 IPC, A-5 was found guilty of the offences under Section 120-B, Section 419 read with Section 109, Section 420 read with Section 109, Section 468 IPC and Section 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, A-7 guilty of the offence under Section 468 IPC, while A-8 was held guilty of the offences under Sections 120-B, 420, Section 419 read with Section 109 IPC, Section 420 read with Section 109 IPC and under Section 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. In appeal filed thereagainst, the High Court while confirming conviction of A-3, reduced the sentence of RI on all counts while maintaining the fine imposed. The conviction of A-5 and A-8 was also upheld but sentence imposed was reduced. As far as A-7 is concerned his conviction was altered from Section 468 IPC to Section 465 IPC and sentence of RI for 6 months and fine of Rs 500 with default stipulation was imposed. Hence, instant appeals by the appellant-accused. Monica Bedi v. State of A.P., (2011) 1 SCC 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2010]

[10365] — Ss. 419, 420, 465, 467 and 473 — Impersonation as a CA, etc. — Expression "without prejudice to any other proceedings" used in sub-section (2) of Ss. 24-A, 25 and 26 CA Act — Significance — Prosecution under IPC — Maintainability — Where a person is alleged to have committed offences under Ss. 24, 24-A and 26 CA Act as also under IPC but in absence of complaint under S. 28 CA Act before Magistrate's Court, no cognizance of offences punishable under Ss. 24, 24-A and 26 CA Act could be taken, held, prosecution under IPC can still be commenced against him — Prosecution under IPC cannot be disallowed on ground that 1949 Act is a special statute vis-à-vis IPC — Chartered Accountants Act, 1949, Ss. 24, 24-A, 25, 26 and 28

The respondent, who passed the examination of Chartered Accountant but is not a member of the appellant Institute, is alleged to have represented himself before the Income Tax Department and the authorities constituted under the Madhya Pradesh Trade Tax Act on the basis of power of attorney or as legal representative and submitted documents such as audit reports and certificates required to be issued by the Chartered Accountants by preparing forged seals. He is also said to have impersonated himself as Chartered Accountant and prepared audit reports for monetary consideration. Person authorised by the appellant Institute submitted a complaint in this regard in police station alleging commission of offences punishable under Section 24 of the Chartered Accountants Act and Sections 419, 420, 468, 472 and 473 IPC. After conducting investigation the police filed challan in the Court of CJM who passed an order for framing charges against the respondent under Sections 419, 468, 471 and 472 IPC. The respondent challenged the order by filing revision under Section 397 CrPC. The Additional Sessions Judge remitted the case to the trial court with the direction to decide whether there were sufficient grounds for framing charges under Sections 419, 420, 465, 467 and 473 IPC read with Sections 24 and 26 of the Chartered Accountants Act. After remand, the trial court held that there was no basis for framing any charge against the respondent under IPC and that cognizance of offence under Sections 24 and 26 of the Act cannot be taken because no complaint had been filed by or under the order of the Council before the Magistrate. The appellant questioned the orders of the Additional Sessions Judge and the trial court by filing revisions. The High Court dismissed both the revisions. It held that even though prima facie case was made out against the respondent under Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Act, the Magistrate could not have taken cognizance because no complaint was filed under Section 28 and the report submitted by the police could not be made basis for punishing him on the allegation of contravention of any of those provisions. The court also referred to Sections 2(d), 4, 5 and Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC and held that in the absence of a complaint filed by the court concerned, the Magistrate was not competent to frame charges against the respondent and that in view of the special mechanism contained in the Act for prosecution of a person violating Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Act, he cannot be prosecuted under IPC.

The question which arises for consideration in the present appeals is whether Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Chartered Accountants Act operate as a bar against prosecution of a person who is charged with allegations which constitute an offence or offences under other laws including the Penal Code.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The prohibition contained in Section 28 against prosecution of a person except on a complaint made by or under the order of the Council or of the Central Government is attracted only when such person is sought to be prosecuted for contravention of the provisions contained in Section 24 or sub-section (1) of Sections 24-A, 25 or 26 and not for any act or omission which constitutes an offence under IPC. The object underlying the prohibition contained in Section 28 is to protect the persons engaged in profession of Chartered Accountants against false and untenable complaints from dissatisfied litigants and others. However, there is nothing in the language of the provisions contained in Chapter VII from which it can be inferred that Parliament wanted to confer immunity upon the members and non-members from prosecution and punishment if the action of such member or non-member amounts to an offence under IPC or any other law. (Paras 18 and 21)

The use of expression "without prejudice to any other proceedings which may be taken against him" in sub-section (2) of Sections 24-A and 26 and somewhat similar expression in sub-section (2) of Section 25 show that contravention of the provisions contained in sub-section (1) of those sections can lead to filing of complaint under Section 28 of the Act and if the particular act also amounts to an offence under IPC or any other law, then a complaint can also be filed under Section 200 CrPC or a first information report lodged with the police under Section 156 CrPC. The said expression cannot be given a restricted meaning in the context of professional and other misconducts which may be committed by a member of the Institute and for which he may be punished under Section 21-B(3) because the violation of Sections 24 to 26 can be committed by a person who may or may not be a Chartered Accountant as defined in Section 2(b). (Para 19)

In other words, if the particular act of a member of the Institute or a non-member or a company results in contravention of the provisions contained in Section 24 or sub-section (1) of Sections 24-A, 25 or 26 and such act also amounts to criminal misconduct which is defined as an offence under IPC, then a complaint can be filed by or under the order of the Council or of the Central Government under Section 28, which may ultimately result in imposition of the punishment prescribed under Section 24 or sub-section (2) of Sections 24-A, 25 or 26 and such member or non-member or company can also be prosecuted for any identified offence under IPC. (Para 20)

Held :

The provisions contained in Chapter VII of the Act neither define cheating by personation or forgery or counterfeiting of seal, etc. nor provide for punishment for such offences. If it is held that a person acting in violation of Section 24 or contravening sub-section (1) of Sections 24-A and 26 of the Act can be punished only under the Act even though his act also amounts to one or more offence(s) defined under IPC and that too on a complaint made in accordance with Section 28, then the provisions of Chapter VII will become discriminatory and may have to be struck down on the ground of violation of Article 14. (Para 23)

Such an unintended consequence can be and deserves to be avoided in interpreting Sections 24-A, 25 and 26 keeping in view the settled law that if there are two possible constructions of a statute, then the one which leads to anomaly or absurdity and makes the statute vulnerable to the attack of unconstitutionality should be avoided in preference to the other which makes it rational and immune from the charge of unconstitutionality. That apart, the court cannot interpret the provisions of the Act in a manner which will deprive the victim of his right to prosecute the wrongdoer for the offences defined in Sections 416, 463, 464, 468 and 471 by filing the first information report or complaint under the relevant provisions of CrPC. (Para 24)

The respondent could have been simultaneously prosecuted for contravention of Sections 24, 24-A and 26 of the Act and for the offences defined under IPC but in view of the bar contained in Article 20(2) of the Constitution read with Section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 and Section 300 CrPC, he could not have been punished twice for the same offence. (Para 25)

The argument that the Act is a special legislation vis-à-vis IPC and a person who is said to have contravened the provisions of sub-section (1) of Sections 24, 24-A, 25 and 26 cannot be prosecuted for an offence defined under IPC, which found favour with the High Court does not commend acceptance. (Para 36)

The impugned order is set aside and the matter is remitted to the trial court for considering whether the allegations contained in the complaint constitute any offence under IPC. If the trial court comes to the conclusion that the allegations do constitute one or more offence(s), then it shall proceed against the respondent in accordance with law. However, it is made clear that in the absence of a complaint having been filed under Section 28, no charges be framed against the respondent for the alleged contravention of Sections 24, 24-A or 26 of the 1949 Act. (Para 46). Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Vimal Kumar Surana, (2011) 1 SCC 534.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2010]

Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay, AIR 1953 SC 325: 1953 SCR 730: 1953 Cri LJ 1432; T.S. Baliah v. ITO, AIR 1969 SC 701: (1969) 3 SCR 65; State of Bombay v. S.L. Apte, AIR 1961 SC 578: (1961) 3 SCR 107: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 725; Collector of Customs v. Vasantraj Bhagwanji Bhatia, (1988) 3 SCC 467: 1988 SCC (Cri) 679; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27; State of Rajasthan v. Hat Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 152: 2003 SCC (Cri) 451, relied on

Halsbury's Laws of England, Hailsham Edn., Vol. 9, pp. 152-53, para 212, cited

Jeewan Kumar Raut v. CBI, (2009) 7 SCC 526: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 475; Jamiruddin Ansari v. CBI, (2009) 6 SCC 316: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1033, distinguished

[10366] — Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472, 474 r/w S. 34 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Compromise in dispute of purely personal nature arising out commercial transactions not involving any public consequences — FIR registered alleging offences under Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472, 474 r/w S. 34 IPC — During pendency of proceedings in Supreme Court, compromise entered into between the parties — In terms of the compromise, dispute purely of personal nature arising out of commercial transactions, settled with the stipulation that proceedings pending in court may be withdrawn or compromised or quashed — Dispute being purely personal and no public policy being involved in the transactions, held, to continue with the proceedings would be a futile exercise — Hence FIR quashed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482 and 320. Jagdish Chanana v. State of Haryana, (2008) 15 SCC 704: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1157: AIR 2008 SC 1968: (2008) 65 AIC 111 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2237.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2008]

[10367] — Ss. 419, 420, 467 and 468 — Scope and applicability of S. 28, Societies Registration Act — High Court quashing the charge-sheet submitted under various provisions of IPC by applying S. 28 of the Act, observing that some other allegations prima facie made out an offence under S. 4 of the Act and hence, since provisions of S. 28 were breached, the proceedings were unsustainable — Held, S. 28 provides procedure for trial of offences punishable under the 1860 Act itself and not for offences punishable under the Penal Code — Hence, impugned order set aside and matter remanded to trial court for decision afresh — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Societies Registration Act, 1860 — Ss. 28, 4 and 27 (Paras 3, 5 and 6). Sarvesh Kumar Singh v. Jai Govind Mishra, (2006) 9 SCC 206: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 618.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-2005]

[10368] — Ss. 419 & 420 r/w Ss. 109, 120-B & 468 and S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988 — Conviction — Sustainability — A-8, Postman, Head Post-Office alleged to have collected two speed post articles containing fake passports, which were actually entrusted to PW 11 for delivery, falsely representing that he knew the addressees and would personally deliver the same — Evidence establishing that A-8 was aware of contents of the articles — Thus, his participation in conspiracy in securing fake passports clearly proved — Hence, his conviction sustained — Passports Act, 1967, Ss. 12 and 3 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — Conviction confirmed (Para 48). Monica Bedi v. State of A.P., (2011) 1 SCC 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2010]

[10369] — Ss. 419 & 420 r/w Ss. 109, 120-B & 468 and S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988 — Conviction — Sustainability — Evidence establishing that A-5, Head Constable submitted false inquiry report, knowing it to be false, certifying passport application particulars of A-3 — Hence, his conviction for charged offences upheld — Passports Act, 1967, Ss. 12 and 3 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — Conviction confirmed (Paras 49 and 50). Monica Bedi v. State of A.P., (2011) 1 SCC 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2010]

(5) Cheating person whose interest offender is bound by law or legal contract to protect (S. 418)

[10370] — S. 418 — Offence under — Bar of limitation — Three-year limitation period — Filing of complaint after expiry of — Alleged action taking place in 1995 — Filing of complaint on 9-8-2002 — No explanation given by complainant regarding his long silence/inaction — Magistrate taking cognizance without even making any reference to either S. 468 or S. 473 which provides for extension of period of limitation if the Magistrate is satisfied that the delay has been properly explained or that it is necessary to do so in the interest of justice — Held, High Court erred in holding that the complaint was not hit by limitation — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 468(2)(c) and 473 (Para 14). Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 2005 SC 9: 2005 Cri LJ 92.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

[10371] — Ss. 418, 409, 166 r/w S. 114 — Quashment — When warranted — Compromise arrived at between parties — Complainant Respondent 1 filing complaint in his capacity of Chief Managing Trustee alleging that the accused had committed a breach of contractual obligation to construct a multi-purpose community hall at their own cost on a part of land owned and possessed by the Trust, in consideration of which they were to get all rights of development of the remaining land; that instead they sold the construction, earned crores of rupees and ultimately constructed in place and instead of the community hall, 10 rooms which did not fulfil the requirements of the agreement and specifications of the community hall; that from the very beginning their intention was to cheat the Trust and ultimately they succeeded in doing so — Magistrate ordering enquiry and also issuing process against accused — Said order challenged by accused before Addl. Sessions Judge, which was rejected — Specific stand before Sessions Judge and the High Court by the petitioners was that a compromise had been effected and, therefore, the proceedings were not to be continued — High Court by impugned judgment dismissing their petition — However, a connected civil suit Ravi Constructions Co., (2006) 10 SCC 669 was held to be not maintainable in view of the compromise arrived at by the Trust and the accused — In view of the same, held, continuance of instant proceedings would amount to sheer abuse of process of law, and hence quashed — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 202 (Paras 2, 3, 6 and 7). Nalini Shankaran v. Neelkanth Mahadeo Kamble, (2007) 12 SCC 90: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 228.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2007]

Ravi Constructions Co. v. Somvanshi Arya Kshatriya Samaj, (2006) 10 SCC 669, considered

[10372] — Ss. 418, 420, 468, 471 & 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(1)(d) — Mere disregard of relevant provisions of General Financial Rules as well as ordinary norms of procedural behaviour of Government officials and contractors, in absence of a showing beyond reasonable doubt about the guilt, may raise strong suspicion against the accused but would not constitute offences under — General Financial Rules, Rr. 133 & 141. Abdulla Mohd. Pagarkar v. State, (1980) 3 SCC 110: 1980 SCC (Cri) 546: AIR 1980 SC 499: 1980 Cri LJ 220: (1980) 1 SCR 604.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1979]

[10373] — Ss. 418, 471 and 477-A — Applicability of S. 195(1)(c) CrPC, 1898 — Offence to be committed by party to a proceeding after he becomes such party — Material document neither produced nor given in evidence in the proceeding — S. 195(1)(c) CrPC inapplicable — On facts, trial under Ss. 418, 471 and 477-A, IPC could be proceeded with before the High Court under its original criminal jurisdiction — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 397 and 398 — CrPC, 1898 — S. 195(1)(c). Legal Remembrancer of Govt. of W.B. v. Haridas Mundra, (1976) 1 SCC 555: 1976 SCC (Cri) 67: AIR 1976 SC 2225: (1976) 2 SCR 933: 1976 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, P.K. Goswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1975]

(6) Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property (S. 420)

Synopsis

(i) Broadly 973
(ii) Property — What is 976
(iii) Cheating and dishonestly inducing — Proof of dishonest intention 976
(iv) Inducing delivery of property — S. 420 vis-à-vis mere cheating 978
(v) Inducing making of, alteration or destruction of valuable security or signed or sealed thing convertible into valuable security 980
(vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist 980

(i) Broadly

See also '(3)(i) Ingredients of cheating — Broadly', above

[10374] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Ingredients of cheating — Held on facts, prima facie offence under S. 420 made out

Per Ranganath Misra, J. (Bhagwati, C.J. concurring)

(i) there should be fraudulent or dishonest inducement of a person by deceiving him;

(ii) (a) the person so induced should be intentionally induced to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or

(b) the person so induced should be intentionally induced to do or to omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived; and

(iii) in cases covered by the second part of (ii), the act or omission should be one which caused or is likely to cause damage or harm to the person induced in body, mind, reputation or property.

In the present case the prosecution's allegations were twofold: (i) though the Indira Gandhi Pratibha Pratishthan was not a State Government Trust, publicity was given by the respondent himself and through his agents as also through news media owned by the State Government and the public press to the fact that IGPP was a government trust; and (ii) though Mrs Gandhi had never agreed to the trust being named after her, the respondent associated her name for the purpose of creating an impression in the mind of the people at large that the then Prime Minister, Mrs Indira Gandhi had associated herself with the respondent's trust. The evidence, oral and documentary, taken together justified the framing of a charge for offence under S. 420 on the basis of these allegations. However, the position is a presumptive one open to rebuttal by the respondent. R.S. Nayak v. A.R. Antulay, (1986) 2 SCC 716: 1986 SCC (Cri) 256: AIR 1986 SC 2045: 1986 Cri LJ 1922.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and Ranganath Misra[2], J. [Date of decision: 17-4-1986]

[10375] — S. 420 — Cheating — Ingredients — Stated — In the instant case, held, those ingredients were absent (Paras 16 and 17). V.R. Dalal v. Yougendra Naranji Thakkar, (2008) 15 SCC 625: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1141: AIR 2008 SC 2793: (2008) 66 AIC 113 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2008]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678, relied on

[10376] — S. 420 — Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property — Essential ingredients for, restated — Making of a false representation, held, is one of the ingredients — Not necessary that a false pretence should be made in express words — It may be inferred from all the circumstances including the conduct of the accused in obtaining the property

The essential ingredients to attract Section 420 are: (i) cheating; (ii) dishonest inducement to deliver property or to make, alter or destroy any valuable security or anything which is sealed or signed or is capable of being converted into a valuable security; and (iii) the mens rea of the accused at the time of making the inducement. The making of a false representation is one of the ingredients for the offence of cheating under Section 420. It is not necessary that a false pretence should be made in express words by the accused. It may be inferred from all the circumstances including the conduct of the accused in obtaining the property. (Para 8). Devender Kumar Singla v. Baldev Krishan Singla, (2005) 9 SCC 15: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1185: AIR 2004 SC 3084: 2004 Cri LJ 1778.

(6)(i) Broadly (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-2004]

Bashirbhai Mohamedbhai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 979: 1960 Cri LJ 1383; Shivanarayan Kabra v. State of Madras, AIR 1967 SC 986: 1967 Cri LJ 946, relied on

[10377] — S. 420 — Ingredients of

When somebody suffers injury to his person, property or reputation, he may have remedies both under civil and criminal law. The injury alleged may form the basis of civil claim and may also constitute the ingredients of some crime punishable under criminal law. When there is dispute between the parties arising out of a transaction involving passing of valuable properties between them, the aggrieved person may have a right to sue for damages or compensation and at the same time law permits the victim to proceed against the wrongdoer for having committed an offence of criminal breach of trust or cheating. Here the main offence alleged by the appellant is that the respondents committed the offence under Section 420 IPC and the case of the appellant is that the respondents have cheated him and thereby dishonestly induced him to deliver property. To deceive is to induce a man to believe that a thing is true which is false and which the person practising the deceit knows or believes to be false. It must also be shown that there existed a fraudulent and dishonest intention at the time of commission of the offence. There is no allegation that the respondents made any wilful misrepresentation. Even according to the appellant, the parties entered into a valid lease agreement and the grievance of the appellant is that the respondents failed to discharge their contractual obligations. In the complaint, there is no allegation that there was fraud or dishonest inducement on the part of the respondents and thereby the respondents parted with the property. It is trite law and common sense that an honest man entering into a contract is deemed to represent that he has the present intention of carrying it out but if, having accepted the pecuniary advantage involved in the transaction, he fails to pay his debt, he does not necessarily evade the debt by deception. Moreover, the appellant has no case that the respondents obtained the article by any fraudulent inducement or by wilful misrepresentation. It has been informed that the respondents, though committed default in paying some instalments, have paid substantial amount towards the consideration. Having regard to the facts and circumstances, it is difficult to discern an element of deception in the whole transaction, whereas it is palpably evident that the appellant had an oblique motive of causing harassment to the respondents by seizing the entire articles through magisterial proceedings. Therefore, the Single Judge of the High Court was perfectly justified in quashing the proceedings. (Paras 11 and 12). Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565: AIR 2001 SC 1226: 2001 Cri LJ 1247.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2001]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180, relied on

[10378] — S. 420 — Penalty greater than existing — What is — Provision for unlimited fine under S. 420 and limited fine fixed under Ordinance of 29 of 1943 — Constitution of India, Art. 20(1)

Under Art. 20 of the Constitution all that has to be considered is whether the ex-post facto law imposes penalty greater than that which might be inflicted under the law in force at the time of the commission of the offence.

The fine which could have been imposed upon him under S. 420 was unlimited. A law which provides for a minimum sentence of fine on conviction cannot be read as one which imposes a greater penalty than that which might have been inflicted under the law at the time of the commission of the offence where for such an offence there was no limit as to the extent of fine which might be imposed.

Hence it cannot be said that S. 10 of the Ordinance imposed any such penalty and therefore was in contravention of the provisions of Art. 20. K. Satwant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 266, 276, 27: (1960) 2 SCR 89, 113: 1960 Cri LJ 410.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J.[1] and Syed Jafer Imam[1], J.L. Kapur[1], K.N. Wanchoo[1] and K.C. Das Gupta[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1959]

[10379] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating — Consigner of goods drawing a hundi for the price of consignment supporting it with forged or inflated railway receipt — Discounting is unlawful and fraudulent — Offence under S. 420 is proved where act is fraudulent and intention to cause injury is proved even though wrongful loss to the person cheated or wrongful gain to the accused is not proved

Where a consigner of goods draws a hundi for the price of the consignment on some firm and supports that hundi with the railway receipt obtained by him in respect of the consignment, the party in fact pledges the consignment to the bank discounting the hundi and, therefore, in such a transaction the railway receipt cannot be regarded as anything else than a security for that transaction. If that security turns out to be worthless or practically worthless because the value of the consignment is only a fraction of what it was represented to be, the discounting of the hundi by the party drawing it must necessarily be regarded as unlawful. It would thus follow that the firm in question made a gain by obtaining credits and that these credits were obtained by them by resorting to unlawful means.

Where no pecuniary question arises the element of dishonesty need not be established and it would be sufficient to establish that the act was fraudulent and, therefore, it may be, as the learned Judge has held, that where an act is fraudulent the intention to cause injury to the person defrauded must be established. But where the allegation is that a person has dishonestly induced another to part with property something different has to be considered and that is whether he has thereby caused a wrongful loss to the person who parted with property or has made a wrongful gain to himself. There are the two facets of the definition of dishonesty and it is enough to establish the existence of one of them. The law does not require that both should be established.

Accused booked small consignment by railway, executed forwarding notes and obtained railway receipt in respect of the consignment. These consignments foils were tampered with by altering and thereby inflating quantity and freight charges. These forged railway receipts were then endorsed in favour of various firms and large amounts commensurate with large quantities of goods specified in forged receipts were drawn from various bankers and on the security of these railway receipts drew demand drafts or hundies in favour of the various bankers as payee on a firm at Calcutta which belonged to the family of the accused as drawee. The debts of all the bankers were paid in due course. Held, charge under S. 420, IPC was proved against the accused. Tulsi Ram v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 666: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 382: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 623: ILR (1963) 1 All 840.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K. Subba Rao, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-1962]

AIR 1932 Bom 545: 34 Cri LJ 357 and 28 Mad 90, distinguished

This may be compared with offence under Ss. 467 & 468. See 1963 (2) Cri LJ 434: AIR 1963 SC 1572

[10380] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating — Ingredients of

For a person to be convicted under S. 420, IPC it has to be established not only that he has cheated someone but also that by doing so he has dishonestly induced the person who was cheated to deliver any property etc. A person can be said to have done a thing dishonestly if he does so with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person. Wrongful loss is the loss by unlawful means of property to which a person is entitled while wrongful gain to a person means a gain to him by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled. Tulsi Ram v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 666: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 382: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 623: ILR (1963) 1 All 840.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K. Subba Rao, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-1962]

[10381] — Ss. 420, 463, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B — Misappropriation of public funds by appellant (an MLA) — State trying to protect appellant from being prosecuted under Ss. 420, 463, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B IPC, by issuing consecutive G.Os. and tampering with course of justice by getting filed consecutive petitions to withdraw prosecution under S. 321 CrPC — Impropriety — Respondents 3 and 4 herein levelling charges of misappropriation of public funds against appellant on premise that he obtained huge amount on basis of false and fabricated medical bills — Appellant, being an MLA, matter referred to Ethics Committee of State Legislature, which accepted apology tendered by him and having regard to the fact that amount was refunded by him to Government, recommended for withdrawal of the criminal case — State issuing G.O. for directions to Public Prosecutor to withdraw case — Application filed under S. 321 CrPC by Public Prosecutor for withdrawal of case, rejected — Revisions filed thereagainst by State and appellant, dismissed, while writ of Respondents 3 and 4 allowed by High Court — Sustainability — Held, Ethics Committee was empowered to deal with disciplinary action — So criminal case against an MLA, ordinarily, should be allowed to be continued on its own merit — Action of State on basis of recommendations of Ethics Committee, vitiated in law — Recommendations being unauthorised, action of State would attract doctrine of malice in law — Even otherwise, action of State suffers from malice on fact as well — State being protector of law, when it deals with a public fund, it must act in terms of procedure established by law — In respect of public fund, doctrine of public trust would also be applicable so far as State and its officers are concerned — Herein, State was not acting in public interest — It showed unusual interest in appellant, which is not expected of an executive which believes in good governance — Therefore, impugned judgment, held, unassailable — However, clarified that High Court committed error in entering into merit of the matter — In the circumstances, Magistrate directed to proceed with the matter independently — Also, in the peculiar facts and circumstances of instant case, State directed to pay Rs 1,00,000 to State Legal Services Authority — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13 — CrPC, 1973, S. 321 (Paras 15 to 22). Yerneni Raja Ramchandar v. State of A.P., (2009) 15 SCC 604: (2009) 81 AIC 107 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

(ii) Property — What is

See also '(3)(ii) Ingredients of cheating — Property —What is', above

See also under 'Ss. 405-409 — CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST', above

[10382] — S. 420 — Held, property includes money — Constitution of India, Art. 300-A (Para 8). N. Devindrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 228: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 2007 SC 1741: (2007) 55 AIC 74 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 2949.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2007]

[10383] — S. 420 — 'Passport' is property within the meaning of the section. Nrisingha Murari Chakraborty v. State of W.B., (1977) 3 SCC 7: 1977 SCC (Cri) 417: AIR 1977 SC 1174: 1977 Cri LJ 961: (1977) 14 ACC 309: (1977) 3 SCR 521.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.K. Goswami, P.N. Shinghal and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1977]

[10384] — S. 420 — "Property" — Meaning of — Does not necessarily mean a thing which must have money value or a market value — Order of assessment determining total income of assessee and tax payable by him is "property" within the meaning of the section

The word 'property' occurring in S. 420, IPC does not necessarily mean that the thing, of which a delivery is dishonestly desired by the person who cheats, must have a money value or a market value in the hand of the person cheated. Even if the thing has no money value, in the hand of the person cheated, but becomes a thing of value, in the hand of the person, who may get possession of it, as a result of the cheating practised by him, it would still fall within the connotation of the term 'property' in S. 420, IPC

Under the scheme of the Income Tax Act, it is clear that the assessment order determines the total income of the assessee, and the tax payable, on the basis of such assessment. The assessment order has to be served, on the assessee. The tax is demanded by the issue of a notice, under S. 29; but the tax demanded is on the basis of the assessment order communicated to an assessee. The communicated order of assessment, received by an assessee is 'property', since it is of great importance, to an assessee, as containing a computation, of his total assessable income and as a determination of his tax liability. Ishwarlal Girdharilal Parekh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1969 SC 40: (1969) 1 SCR 193: (1968) 70 ITR 95: 1969 Cri LJ 271, 273.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Ramaswami and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1968]

Followed in (1977) 3 SCC 7: 1977 SCC (Cri) 417

(iii) Cheating and dishonestly inducing — Proof of dishonest intention

See also '(3)(vi) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing delivery or retention of property by or with consent of deceived person', above, and

'(6)(iv) Inducing delivery of property — S. 420 vis-à-vis mere cheating', below

[10385] — S. 420 — Dishonest intention — Proof of — Direct evidence, held, not always possible in respect thereof — Reasonable inference can be drawn from a number of circumstances

In the true nature of things, it is not always possible to prove dishonest Intention by any direct evidence. It can be proved by a number of circumstances from which a reasonable inference can be drawn. (Para 8). Devender Kumar Singla v. Baldev Krishan Singla, (2005) 9 SCC 15: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1185: AIR 2004 SC 3084: 2004 Cri LJ 1778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-2004]

Bashirbhai Mohamedbhai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 979: 1960 Cri LJ 1383; Shivanarayan Kabra v. State of Madras, AIR 1967 SC 986: 1967 Cri LJ 946, relied on

[10386] — S. 420 — Dishonestly — Accused required to deposit certain amount by way of security under rules — Accused delivering a cheque which was not supported by credit in bank — Cheque returned to accused as prescribed procedure required the accused to make deposit in cash or postal securities — Accused's brother promising to cash the cheque — Cheque sent for encashment but dishonoured — Held, conviction not sustainable

There was no dishonest intention in delivering the cheque. There is nothing to support any charge of cheating. Even the cheque, the delivery of which is the foundation for this charge, had been returned unaccepted by the Department and therefore there was no question of cheating. There is no ground for holding the appellant responsible for the representations made by his brother. General authority had been given by the appellant to his brother to act for him. Laxmi Narain Kalra v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 544: 1956 Cri LJ 948, 949.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar and Syed Jafer Imam, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1955]

[10387] — S. 420 — Dishonestly inducing delivery of property — Complainant induced by accused to part with his goods by latter's promise to pay cash against delivery — Goods delivered to accused — Non-payment when amounts to cheating

If the accused had at the time he promised to pay cash against delivery an intention to do so, the fact that he did not pay would not convert the transaction into one of cheating. But if on the other hand he had no intention whatsoever to pay but merely said that he would do so in order to induce the complainant to part with the goods then a case of cheating would be established.

Held, on evidence that the accused had no intention of making payment to the complainant and, therefore, was guilty of the said offence.

That the bill sent with the goods provided for payment of interest would not militate against an initial agreement that the price of the goods would be paid in cash against delivery. That would give rise to only a civil liability for payment of interest but would not eschew the criminal liability arising here.

A subsequent attempt at settlement can only be to escape the criminal liability. If the appellant had at the time of taking delivery of the goods no intention whatsoever to pay (as revealed by his circumstances, the evidence and his conduct) but merely promised to pay cash against delivery in order to induce the complainant to part with the goods, an offence under S. 420 was made out. Mahadeo Prasad v. State of W.B., AIR 1954 SC 724: 1954 Cri LJ 1806.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-1954]

[10388] — S. 420 — False pretence need not be in express words for constituting offence of cheating — It can be inferred from all the circumstances including the conduct of the accused

Accused sent a letter along with a copy of business terms stating that the terms were those on which he undertook business of his clients. In the document containing the terms it was represented that the accused could do business in forward contracts in cotton, grains, seeds, bullion, black peppers etc. in accordance with the usual practice and usage of the various associations concerned. Later the accused sent a telegram that buying is advisable for quick profits. The accused knew that he had no right to do forward business and that he was not a member of any recognized association and that he could not advertise to the complainant for investment in forward contracts. It was contended that no case of cheating was made out.

Held, it is not necessary that a false pretence should be made in express words by the appellant. It may be inferred from all the circumstances including the conduct of the appellant in obtaining the property. The appellant stated something which was not true and concealed from the appellant the fact that he was not a member of any recognised association and that he was not entitled to carry on the forward contract business. The complainant would not have parted with the sum of Rs 12, 000 but for the inducement and the representation of the appellant that he could lawfully carry on forward contract business. Shivanarayan Kabra v. State of Madras, AIR 1967 SC 986: (1967) 1 SCR 138: (1967) 1 MLJ (SC) 159: 1967 Cri LJ 946, 948-49.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-1966]

[10389] — S. 420 — Market purchase by government servant at higher prices — Purchases made by military officer for military purposes in local market — That the prescribed procedure was not strictly followed does not lead to an inference of fraud — Even gross negligence does not prove criminal intent — Fact of paying prices higher than the quoted ones by itself would not lead to inference of fraudulent intent or conspiracy. Union of India v. Major J.S. Khanna, (1972) 3 SCC 873: 1973 SCC (Cri) 94: 1972 Cri LJ 849.

(6)(iii) Cheating and dishonestly inducing — Proof of dishonest intention (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, I.D. Dua and S.C. Roy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-1971]

[10390] — Ss. 420, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B — Fraud and misappropriation of Government money — Responsibility for signing a document — Accused alleged to have dishonestly processed and verified fake bills — Plea of accused that she signed the said bills in normal course of her duty and it was account section which was negligent in not verifying those bills — Sustainability of — Held, the said plea was not tenable as when a person signs on a document he or she is expected to make some enquiry before signing it — CrPC, 1973, S. 228 (Para 14). Soma Chakravarty v. State, (2007) 5 SCC 403: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 514: AIR 2007 SC 2149.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2] and Markandey Katju[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2007]

[10391] — Ss. 420/34 — Dishonest intention — Delivery of consignment of goods obtained by accused-respondents by misrepresentation and deceit from carriers by making only a part payment instead of adopting the agreed procedure of retiring documents from the negotiating bank by making full payment — Substantial part of the price had to be paid by the carries and never paid by the accused either to the carriers or to the consignors — Held on facts, conviction under Ss. 420/34 proper. Ram Avtar Gupta v. Gopal Das Taliwal, (1983) 2 SCC 431: 1983 SCC (Cri) 531: AIR 1983 SC 1149: 1983 ALJ 522.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-1983]

[10392] — Ss. 420/448/34 — Land sold by bhumidhars/landholders to appellants after its acquisition by Government under Land Acquisition Act — Complaint filed by appellant under Ss. 420/448/34 IPC — Cognizance taken and charges framed under those sections by trial court — But revision preferred by the landholders allowed by Addl. Sessions Judge and his decision upheld by High Court without giving any reasons — Held, it was not a fit case for exercising the revisional jurisdiction to quash the charges which had been framed — Prima facie a case was made out for filing the complaint since what was material was that at the time when the land was sold the landholders had no right, title or interest to sell the land in view of the acquisition and whether the sellers were bhumidhars or not was not material — Hence judgments of Addl. Sessions Judge and High Court set aside and the order of trial court restored — CrPC, 1973 — S. 400. Mohan Singh v. State of Delhi, (2000) 10 SCC 239.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Kirpal and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1999]

[10393] — Ss. 420/465/467/468/471 — Appellants alleged to have transferred a portion of the property without having complete ownership over it — Appellants, however, in possession of the same and a decree restraining the respondents from interfering with their possession, and construction carried by them, passed in their favour — Order of mutation passed in their favour was, however, cancelled — Held, unless there exists a statutory interdict, a person in possession may transfer his right, title and interest in favour of a third party — Further held, only because the appellants are said to have transferred a portion of the property without having complete ownership over it by itself does not satisfy the ingredients of Ss. 467, 468 and 469 IPC — Furthermore, it is one thing to say that the appellants had committed acts of criminal misconduct while trying to obtain orders of mutation but it is another thing to say that only because they filed such an application, the same by itself would tantamount to commission of a criminal offence — Hence, institution of a criminal case must be held to be an act of mala fide on the part of the respondents — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Alleged commission of the offences punishable under Ss. 420/465/467/468/471 and 120-B IPC (Paras 14, 15, 16 and 19). Ramesh Dutt v. State of Punjab, (2009) 15 SCC 429: (2009) 81 AIC 183 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

(iv) Inducing delivery of property — S. 420 vis-à-vis mere cheating

See also '(3)(vi) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing delivery or retention of property by or with consent of deceived person', and

'(6)(iii) Cheating and dishonestly inducing — Proof of dishonest intention', above

[10394] — S. 420 — Accused purchasing an article for another person — That the accused induced that person to pay higher price than the worth of the article, not proved by prosecution —

Held, conviction under S. 420 not justified. Jageshwar Singh Rastogi v. State of M.P., 1980 Supp SCC 179: 1980 SCC (Cri) 901: AIR 1980 SC 366: 1980 Cri LJ 323.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.S. Kailasam and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-1978]

[10395] — S. 420 — Cheating — Offence under, whether made out — Post-dated cheques issued in 1996 (of an operative account of accused) presented at a much later date i.e. on 10-1-2001 dishonoured, allegedly because account was closed — Appellant-accused allegedly had returned the borrowed money by cash to respondent complainant — On facts, held, offence under S. 420 IPC not made out — Subsequent closure of the account does not necessarily mean an intention to cheat where the post-dated cheques were issued 5 years back — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138

In the fact situation obtaining in the instant case, it is difficult to hold that the provisions of Section 420 IPC were attracted. The cheques were post-dated ones. Admittedly they were issued in the year 1996. They were presented before the bank on a much later date. They were in fact presented only on 10-1-2001. When the cheques were issued, the accounts were operative. Even assuming that the account was closed subsequently the same would not mean that the appellant had an intention to cheat when the post-dated cheques were issued. Even otherwise the allegations made in the complaint petition, even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety do not disclose commission of an offence under Section 420 IPC. They do not satisfy the ingredients of the said provision. (Para 31). Subodh S. Salaskar v. Jayprakash M. Shah, (2008) 13 SCC 689: AIR 2008 SC 3086: (2008) 3 KLT 616: (2008) 145 Comp Cas 121: (2008) 69 AIC 228 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2008]

Punjab Tin Supply Co. v. Central Govt., (1984) 1 SCC 206; Devender Kumar Singla v. Baldev Krishan Singla, (2005) 9 SCC 15: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1185; Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678, relied on [10396] — S. 420 — Dishonest intention — Issuance of bogus receipts — Finding of fact by courts below that appellant-accused dishonestly induced complainant to deliver him Rs 2000 as advance in cash, as part-payment allegedly for sale of the plot of land, knowing fully that he was not the owner of the said plot — Evidence of complainant corroborated by bogus receipts issued by the accused bearing signatures of the accused and complainant — Handwriting of the accused testified by handwriting expert — Held, the issuance of bogus receipts by the accused given to complainant amounts to cheating as also inducement to complainant of being provided a plot by the accused — Since property includes money, hence offence under S. 420 IPC made out (Paras 8 and 10). N. Devindrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 228: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 2007 SC 1741: (2007) 55 AIC 74 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 2949.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2007]

[10397] — S. 420 — Return of delivered property — Advocate and client — Client's son filing a complaint of cheating against advocate without authority of his father or examining him as witness — Alleged sum already returned by appellant to complainant's father on conclusion of the case — Prosecution, held, not maintainable. Vasudeo Kulkarni v. Surya Kant Bhatt, (1977) 2 SCC 298: 1977 SCC (Cri) 343: AIR 1977 SC 1760: 1977 Cri LJ 1152: (1977) 3 SCR 102.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1977]

[10398] — Ss. 420, 417 and 109 — Liability under — Appellant submitting false claims before Government of Burma and obtaining payment — Claims verified by officers — Prosecution of appellant for cheating — Contention that offence of cheating was committed by officers verifying the claim and not by appellant not accepted — Appellant, held, liable to be convicted under S. 420 and not under S. 417

The appellant submitted a number of claims in respect of various works which he claimed had been executed by him as well as for supply of materials. These claims were in the form of bills and were in respect of works which he claimed had been carried out under the instructions of various units of the army. These bills were sent for verification to three different officers, and after their verification, payments were made to the appellant in respect of those bills.

It was contended that after the claims, which had been found bogus were put forward by the appellant, they were sent for verification to various officers and the payments were the result not of any representations made by the appellant, but of the wrong representations contained in the reports of those officers, so that if any offence of cheating at all was committed, it was by those officers and not by the appellant.

(6)(v) Inducing making of, alteration or destruction of valuable security or signed or sealed thing convertible into valuable security

Held, the officers who verified the claims wrongly could certainly be held guilty of abetting the appellant by supporting his false representations. It cannot be said that the payments that were made to the appellant were not connected with or induced by the representations made by the appellant himself in his bills. In fact, primarily, it were those representations by the appellant which ultimately culminated the Government of Burma parting with the money to satisfy those claims put forward by the appellant.

Subsequent payments, after the orders sanctioning the bills, were a part of the same transaction which started with the false representations being made by the appellant in putting forward bogus claims and which transaction only concluded after the payments were made and did not come to an end merely on orders of sanction being passed in those proceedings. In fact, in every case where property is delivered by a person cheated, there must always be a stage when the person makes up his mind to give the property on accepting the false representations made to him. It cannot be said that in such cases the person committing the offence can only be tried for the simple offence of cheating under S. 417, IPC, and cannot be tried under S. 420 because the person cheated parts with his property subsequent to making up his mind to do so. The conviction of the appellant for the offence under S. 420, IPC, in these circumstances is in no way vitiated. Bakhshish Singh Dhaliwal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 752: (1967) 1 SCR 211: 1967 Cri LJ 656.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1966]

AIR 1965 SC 706: 1965 (1) Cri LJ 630, distinguished

(v) Inducing making of, alteration or destruction of valuable security or signed or sealed thing convertible into valuable security

[10399] — S. 420 — Whether offence made out in the facts and circumstances of case — Dates "6-5-2002" and "7-5-2002" alleged to have been changed to "16-5-2002", "17-5-2002" and "27-5-2002" in certified copy of revenue records and tampered document alleged to have used in civil suits relating to property — Held, offence under S. 420 not made out (Para 29). Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2009]

[10400] — Ss. 420, 29 and 30 — "Valuable Security" — Meaning of — Assessment order by Income Tax authorities is a valuable security for purpose of S. 420

The assessment order is certainly a 'document', under S. 29 IPC. The order of assessment does create a right in the assessee, in the sense that he has a right to pay tax only on the total amount assessed therein and his liability to pay tax is also restricted to that extent. Therefore, an 'order of assessment' is a 'valuable security' under S. 420, IPC. Therefore, if the cheating, employed by the accused, resulted in inducing the Income Tax Officer to make a wrong assessment order, it would amount to inducing the Income Tax Officer, to make a 'valuable security'. Ishwarlal Girdharilal Parekh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1969 SC 40: (1969) 1 SCR 193: (1968) 70 ITR 95: 1969 Cri LJ 271, 274.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Ramaswami and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1968]

See also (1977) 3 SCC 7: 1977 SCC (Cri) 417

(vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist

See also '(3)(v) Ingredients of cheating — Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist', above, and

'(10)(xi) Quashment', below

[10401] — S. 420 — Applicability — Existence of fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation, held, necessary — Where machines were imported availing the benefit of exemption notification on the basis of exemption certificate containing necessary conditions required to be complied with after importation but those conditions could not be complied with and the importer paid the necessary customs duties without taking the advantage of the exemption certificate, held, such conduct of the importer indicated that there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention right at the time of making of application for exemption — Hence, the importer, held, not guilty of offence under S. 420 — More so, when the importer was a non-profit organisation — Customs Act, 1962, S. 25 — Exemption — Availing of the benefit of exemption subject to certain conditions to be complied with later but on failure to comply therewith paying the necessary duties without taking advantage of exemption — Such conduct, held, does not attract S. 420 IPC

The ingredients of Section 420 IPC are not made out. There is no reason as to why the appellants must be made to undergo the agony of a criminal trial. (Para 33)

It is settled law that for establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. From his failure to keep promise subsequently, such a culpable intention right at the beginning cannot be presumed. The records show that the exemption certificate contained necessary conditions which were required to be complied with after importation of the machine. Since GCS could not comply with it, it rightly paid the necessary duties without taking advantage of the exemption certificate. The conduct of GCS clearly indicates that there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention of either GCS or the appellants in their capacities as office-bearers right at the time of making application for exemption. Therefore, the question of committing an offence under Section 420 IPC does not arise. There is no allegation in the first information report or the charge-sheet indicating expressly or impliedly any intentional deception or fraudulent/dishonest intention on the part of the appellants right from the time of making the promise or misrepresentation. Nothing has been said on what those misrepresentations were and how the Ministry of Health was duped and what were the roles played by the appellants in the alleged offence. The appellants could not be attributed any mens rea of evasion of customs duty or cheating the Government of India as the Cancer Society is a non-profit organisation and, therefore, the allegations against the appellants levelled by the prosecution are unsustainable. (Para 40). Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2003 SC 2545: (2003) 104 DLT 699: 2003 Cri LJ 3041: (2003) 155 ELT 433: (2003) 262 ITR 466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Brijesh Kumar[2] and Dr. AR. Lakshmanan[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2003]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, relied on

[10402] — S. 420 — Cheating — Dishonest intention should be present at the time of making the promise — Firm of the accused having overdraft and discounting facilities with the bank — Bank also agreeing to accept bank drafts first and railway receipts of consignments later — Accused sending 13 demand drafts and later 13 railway receipts in support thereof to the bank but not actually consigning goods against the railway receipt — Accused giving sufficient guarantees to the bank for the credit — According to established practice, bank crediting demand drafts without railway receipts — Held, misrepresentation by the accused to the bank about consignments sent by railway receipt does not amount to the offence of cheating — Mens rea lacking

The firm A carried on the business of selling coconut oil. It had an account with bank F and was allowed overdraft facilities to the extent of Rs 50,000 and discounting facilities to the extent of Rs 5,00,000, the firm having furnished sufficient securities to the satisfaction of bank authorities for these facilities. The accused P and K-1 on behalf of the firm entered into a conspiracy with K-2 and resorted to the device of obtaining railway receipts without actually delivering oil tins for booking. In pursuance of the conspiracy 13 such bogus railway receipts were obtained and 13 demand drafts and later 13 bogus railway receipts in support of the drafts were deposited with the bank. There was a practice in vogue according to which the bank used to accept demand drafts before depositing railway receipts. The bank was able to realise the amount of two demand drafts from the consignee firm. The amounts of remaining demand drafts could not be realised and the credit entries of these were reversed in the bank in the accounts of the firm. It is contended that P and K-1 made false representations in respect of the booking tins of coconut oil and thereby induced the bank to act to their detriment and were thereby guilty under S. 420, IPC.

Held, as there was no cogent evidence to show that the accused did not have the intention to fulfil their promise to supply coconut oil tins at the time of making the representation, the offence of cheating against the accused was not proved. The practice followed by the bank in the case of the firm of the accused-respondent was to give credit to the firm for the amount of demand drafts without production of the railway receipts. Therefore it was not in pursuance of any representation regarding the consignment of oil tins to the railway that the bank gave credit to the firm of the accused for the amounts of the demand drafts. On the contrary, the amounts of demand draft were credited in the account of the firm immediately on the receipt of the demand drafts even though they were not accompanied by railway receipts. It may be that the firm could not keep up the delivery of the oil tins to the railway and no tins were despatched in respect of the 13 railway receipts, but that fact is not sufficient to fasten a criminal liability on them. It has not been shown that the intention of the accused was guilty at the time of making the promise which is an essential ingredient to prove the offence of cheating. Such an intention cannot also be inferred from the fact that the accused could not subsequently fulfil the promise.

(6)(vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist (contd.)

The case of two demand drafts the amount whereof was paid by the consignee firm cannot be considered in isolation from the remaining 11 demand drafts.

The offence of cheating is, therefore, not proved. State of Kerala v. A. Pareed Pillai, (1972) 3 SCC 661: 1972 SCC (Cri) 705: AIR 1973 SC 326: 1972 Cri LJ 1243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1972]

[10403] — S. 420 — Cheating — Ingredients and proof of — Existence of fraudulent intention at the time of making promise or misrepresentation, held, a necessary ingredient — Mere failure of the accused to keep up the promise, held, not sufficient to prove the existence of such intention right from the beginning

In the instant case, the charge of conspiracy has not been proved to bring home the charge of conspiracy within the ambit of Section 120-B IPC. It is also settled law that for establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making the promise or misrepresentation. From his failure to keep up the promise subsequently, such a culpable intention right at the beginning, that is, at the time when the promise was made cannot be presumed. As there was absence of dishonest and fraudulent intention, the question of committing offence under Section 420 IPC does not arise. (Para 29). K.C. Builders v. CIT, (2004) 2 SCC 731: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1092: (2004) 265 ITR 562: (2004) 1 KLT 596.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2004]

[10404] — S. 420 — Cheating — Mens rea at the time of inducing the person deceived to deliver any property to any person essential to constitute offence under — Where A-1 entered into an agreement with complainant authorising the latter to manufacture and sell certain specified beverages under trademark owned by the former for 5 years whereafter either party could terminate the agreement by giving 12 months' notice to the other party, but subsequently, another company having purchased the trademarks from A-1, the agreement with the complainant was assigned to that company under information to the complainant, held, when that company gave 12 months notice to the complainant before expiry of the period of 5 years to terminate the agreement, offence under S. 420 not made out in absence of mens rea

M/s Cadbury Schweppes Beverages India Private Ltd. entered into three identical bottling agreements with the complainant Sanjiva Bottling Company Private Limited on 1-3-1996 pursuant to a master trademark licence entered into by associate companies of Cadbury Schweppes plc United Kingdom and Cadbury Schweppes Beverages India Private Limited. In terms of these three agreements, M/s Sanjiva Bottling Company was authorised to manufacture and sell certain specified beverages under specified trademarks owned by Cadbury Schweppes plc UK or its associate companies. The agreements provided that they shall continue for an initial term of five years and for further successive period of five years, unless terminated by either party by giving to the other not less than 12 calendar months' notice in writing to terminate the agreement. On 29-7-1999, Atlantic Industries (a wholly owned indirect subsidiary of Coca Cola Export Corporation, USA) purchased about 3500 trademarks in 155 countries from Cadbury Schweppes plc, upon which the bottling agreements between Cadbury Schweppes Beverages India Pvt. Ltd. and Sanjiva Bottling Company were duly assigned to Atlantic Industries and an information regarding the same was given to Sanjiva Bottling Company in writing. On 14-2-2000, Atlantic Industries gave notice in writing to the complainant, Sanjiva Bottling Company that the bottling agreements shall not be renewed after their expiry on 28-2-2001. Sanjiva Bottling Company through its Director filed a criminal complaint against eleven accused including the appellants [Cadbury Schweppes Beverages (A-1), its Chairman, MD and Finance Director, Coca Cola India (A-6) and others] for their prosecution under Section 420 r/w Section 511 IPC. According to allegations made in the complaint, modernisation of the bottling plant was done and a considerable amount of money had to be spent by the complainant for improvement of the plant pursuant to the agreement, but by a letter A-6 informed that they would not renew the agreements after expiry of initial period of five years. The complainant alleged that A-6 was adopting all sorts of unfair trade practices and made wrongful gain of over Rs 100 crores and that A-1 and A-6 had not replied properly to the letters of the complainant and the accused had, therefore, cheated the complainant by making false representation. The Magistrate passed an order under Section 156(3) CrPC on 27-7-2000 directing the police to investigate the offence as the same was cognizable offence. The police thereafter submitted a report, stating that prima facie "a case of business competition and violation of agreements is made out and the complainant is advised to approach the civil court".

However, after consideration of the report which had been submitted on a plain paper, the Magistrate directed the police officer concerned to submit a report in the prescribed pro forma. Accordingly, the police submitted a report that on the basis of the complaint three criminal cases had been registered under Sections 420, 120-B and 34 IPC. While investigation was carried on and a date was fixed by the Magistrate, the appellants filed criminal miscellaneous petitions under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing of the FIR and the proceedings of the case before the Magistrate. After hearing the parties, the High Court held that the investigation had not yet commenced in connection with the FIRs which had been registered at the police station and, therefore, the petitions were premature and accordingly, all the three petitions were rejected. Hence the appeals by special leave.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

A guilty intention is an essential ingredient of the offence of cheating. In other words "mens rea" on the part of the accused must be established before he can be convicted of an offence of cheating. In order to constitute the offence of cheating, the intention to deceive should be in existence at the time when the inducement was offered. Unless the complaint showed that the accused had dishonest or fraudulent intention at the time the complainant parted with the money, it would not amount to an offence under Section 420 IPC and it may only amount to breach of contract. (Paras 16 and 17)

In the present case, the appellants came into the picture much later in July 1999, when various trademarks and brands of A-1 were purchased by A-6. Since the appellants were not in the picture at all at the time when the complainant alleges to have spent money in improving the bottling plant, neither can any guilty intention be attributed to them nor can there possibly be any intention on their part to deceive the complainant. No offence of cheating can, therefore, be said to have been committed by the appellants on account of the fact that a notice was given to the complainant that the bottling agreements will not be renewed any further after expiry of the initial term. Thus, even if the allegations made in the complaint are accepted to be absolutely true and correct, the appellants cannot be said to have committed any offence of cheating as provided in Section 420 IPC. (Para 18). Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703: AIR 2003 SC 1069: (2003) 3 MPLJ 49: 2003 Cri LJ 1249.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, Brijesh Kumar and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2003]

Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116; Mahadeo Prasad v. State of W.B., AIR 1954 SC 724: 1954 Cri LJ 1806; Hari Prasad Chamaria v. Bishun Kumar Surekha, (1973) 2 SCC 823: 1973 SCC (Cri) 1082; G.V. Rao v. L.H.V. Prasad, (2000) 3 SCC 693: 2000 SCC (Cri) 733, relied on

[10405] — S. 420 — Cheating or dispute of civil nature

The complainant who was a displaced person from East Bengal was trying to do some business in Calcutta. He got a consignment of 850 pieces of Hollowong wood by steamer from Assam under invoice No. 45 and steamer receipt No. 25380 and went to Nimtala Ghat, Calcutta, in order to secure a purchaser for the said consignment. Appellant 1 is said to be the partner of a company dealing in timber at this Ghat and Appellant 2 the Manager thereof. The complainant was persuaded to part with the invoice and steamer receipt and to endorse it over to the appellants on the understanding that after the consignment was taken delivery of and the timber measured, the price thereof would be immediately paid at the rate of Rs 7-8-0 per cubic foot. The appellants took delivery of the consignment and on measurement thereof, the complainant presented to them his bill on April 26, 1951, for the sum of Rs 2262-15-6. It is the complainant's case that the appellants did not pay the bill in spite of repeated demands but were putting it off for a considerable time and that ultimately on or about June 8, 1951, denied having taken the goods and repudiated their liability. It was also alleged that on enquiry the complainant came to know that the appellants had disposed of the timber. The complain accordingly is that the appellants induced the complainant to part with possession of the invoice and the receipt for the consignment by a dishonest promise to pay ready cash immediately on delivery and measurement which from the very outset they had no intention to keep and that accordingly they were guilty of cheating. The defence of the appellants was that on taking delivery of the timber, it was found that the timber was not Hollowong timber which it was represented to be, but soft wood of inferior variety and that they accordingly sent a letter to the complainant bringing this to his notice and calling upon him to present a bill at the rate of Rs 4-8-0, per cubic foot. They also alleged that a sum of Rs 500 had been paid as advance when the transaction was entered into. Both the Courts below held that the appellants put forward a totally false defence. They also found in favour of the complainant's allegation that the timber had been sold away by the appellants without reference to him and without making any payment. On these findings it was held that the appellants having obtained possession of the timber by a false promise of ready payment, which from the inception they had no intention of keeping, were guilty of the offence under S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code.

(6)(vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist (contd.)

Held, on the findings of both the Courts below, the appellants had not only repudiated liability but sold away the timber without reference to the complainant. Even on the defence put forward by the appellants, the sale of timber must have fetched a sum of about Rs 1600 and giving credit for a sum of Rs 500 for advance said to have been paid, a sum of more than Rs1000 must have been in the hands of the appellants. There is nothing on the record to show that they tendered at least this amount to the complainant. The conviction is upheld and no interference is called for. Ashu Sen v. State of Bengal, Criminal Appeal No. 25 of 1953.

[Date of decision: 24-11-1953]

[10406] — S. 420 — Complaint arising out of breach of contractual obligations — Proceedings, held, rightly quashed — No offence of cheating made out

The appellant in good faith gave large sums of money to respondents for starting business. Respondents started business in their own name and refused to render accounts or return the money. Against a charge of cheating

Held :

The complaint does not disclose the commission of any offence on the part of the respondents under S. 420, Indian Penal Code. There is nothing in the complaint to show that the respondents had dishonest or fraudulent intention at the time the appellant parted with Rs 35,000. There is also nothing to indicate that the respondents induced the appellant to pay them Rs 35,000 by deceiving him. It is further not the case of the appellant that a representation was made by the respondents to him at or before the time he paid the money to them and that at the time the representation was made, the respondents knew the same to be false. The fact that the respondents subsequently did not abide by their commitment that they would show the appellant to be the proprietor of Drang Transport Corporation and would also render accounts to him in the month of December, might create civil liability for them, but this fact would not be sufficient to fasten criminal liability on the respondents for the offence of cheating. Hari Prasad Chamaria v. Bishun Kumar Surekha, (1973) 2 SCC 823: 1973 SCC (Cri) 1082: AIR 1974 SC 301: 1974 Cri LJ 352.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and A. Alagiriswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1973]

[10407] — S. 420 — Question whether evidence discloses breach of civil liability or criminal offence — Determination of

The question whether the evidence discloses only a breach of civil liability or a criminal offence depend upon whether the complainant in parting with his money acted on the representations of the appellant and in belief of the truth thereof and whether those representations, when made were in fact false to the knowledge of the appellant and in belief of the truth thereof and whether those representations, when made were in fact false to the knowledge of the appellant and whether the appellant had a dishonest intention from the outside. Mobarik Ali Ahmed v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857: 1958 SCR 328: 1957 Cri LJ 1346, 1352.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1957]

[10408] — Ss. 420, 120-B, 193, 24 and 25 — Criminal intent not proved — Prosecution of General Manager of a transport company under Ss. 420, 193 and 120-B — Allegation that accused obtained petrol coupons by giving false particulars in application to rationing authorities — Plea of accused that he signed the application in routine way depending upon office staff — Held, accused could not be imputed with criminal intent — Conviction set aside

Prosecution alleged that A, the General Manager of a transport company, running a large number of trucks entered into a criminal conspiracy with the Director and Manager of the company for the purpose of cheating the Government by procuring petrol coupons during the years 1947-1948, when petrol rationing was in operation in the State of Bihar. The modus operandi attributed to the accused persons was that in the application for coupons for petrol a number of trucks and buses which were not in a road-worthy condition and for which taxes had not been paid, were included as being in running condition and on that misrepresentation the rationing authorities were induced to part with petrol coupons which they would not have done if they were apprised of the real state of circumstances. A pleaded that he being General Manager signed the applications for coupons, which were not in fact filled in by him or on his direction following the usual practice of depending upon the office staff who made the necessary entries and put the documents before him for signature. It was alleged that the company being a fairly big one the General Manager could not be expected to know the accurate details of what had happened but would have to depend upon his office staff for the correctness of the statements contained in the applications. In this way it was contended that A did not consciously make any false representation.

Held, had the question of conspiracy been proved the case against A might have been stronger but that having been found against the prosecution on the remaining evidence A cannot be imputed with any knowledge of the falsity of the allegations made in the applications. The explanation offered by A, though he has not been able to prove it conclusively is a reasonable one. Taking into consideration the fact of the ordinary run of official business in the concerns like the one in which A was the General Manager it must be held that the prosecution has not been able to prove that A appended his signature to the applications knowing or having reason to believe that the contents contained therein were false. It is the duty of the prosecution to prove affirmatively that the appellant knew that the representations made are false and in the absence of circumstances from which it can be gathered that any such knowledge can be imputed to the appellant, the benefit of reasonable doubt should be given to A. Therefore A cannot be convicted for offences under Ss. 193 and 420 IPC. Sudhdeo Jha Utpal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1957 SC 466: 1957 Cri LJ 583, 585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-1956]

Daud Shaikh v. King Emperor, 40 Cal WN 159, approved

[10409] — Ss. 420 and 406 — Offences under — Averments necessary to make out — Petitioner failing to honour the agreement to sell in spite of three legal notices being sent to him and the complainant respondent fulfilling his part — Held, in absence of any averments in the complaint so as to infer fraudulent or dishonest inducement having been made by the petitioner, pursuant to which the respondent parted with his money, it cannot be said that the petitioner had cheated the respondent — No case for prosecution under S. 420 or S. 406, even prima facie, made out (Para 6). Murari Lal Gupta v. Gopi Singh, (2005) 13 SCC 699: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 430.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-2005]

[10410] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating — Essentials to constitute offence of — Intention to cheat — Held, misrepresentation from the very beginning is a sine qua non for constitution of an offence of cheating, although in some cases, intention to cheat may develop at a later stage of formation of the contract — Respondent co-sharer in joint property, lodging FIR against appellant co-sharers by levelling allegation against them that they executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they had one-third share in the joint property although they were not entitled therefor — On such facts, considering that appellants had not made any representation to respondent complainant and that no contract and/or transaction had been entered into by and between the complainant and the appellants, held, it could not be said that by reason of the alleged act of the appellants, the complainant had been cheated — Hence, criminal proceedings against appellants quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 14 to 16). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

V.Y. Jose v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 3 SCC 78: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 996; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; Ravindra Kumar Madhanlal Goenka v. Rugmini Ram Raghav Spinners (P) Ltd., (2009) 11 SCC 529, relied on

[10411] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating — Ingredients — Fraudulent or dishonest intention — Held, must exist at the time of making initial promise or formation of contract — The complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation — No offence is made out under S. 420 if culpable intention is missing at the time of making initial promise

An offence of cheating cannot be said to have been made out unless the following ingredients are satisfied, (i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; (ii) fraudulently or dishonestly inducing any person to deliver any property; or (iii) to consent that any person shall retain any property and finally intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit. For the purpose of constituting an offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in the absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 of the Penal Code can be said to have been made out. One of the ingredients of cheating as defined in Section 415, is existence of a fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making initial promise or existence thereof from the very beginning of formation of contract. The element of wrongful intention should ordinarily exist from the inception of the contract. The FIR in the present case does not satisfy the aforementioned test. (Paras 25 and 30). Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620: 2009 Cri LJ 3462.

(6)(vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703; Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575; Mahadeo Prasad v. State of W.B., AIR 1954 SC 724; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 103, relied on [10412] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating — Ingredients of — Mere failure to perform the promise, held, by itself not enough — To hold a person guilty of cheating, reiterated, it is necessary to show that at time of making promise he had fraudulent or dishonest intention to deceive or to induce person so deceived to do something which he would not otherwise do — Such a culpable intention right at the time of entering into an agreement cannot be presumed merely from his failure to keep the promise subsequently — In present case, there were no specific averments that appellant a retired senior employee of FCIL, officer-in-charge of supply of ammonium nitrate by FCIL at the time had dishonestly "induced" respondent IEL to enter into any agreement/arrangement with FCIL — On the contrary, complaint clearly reveals that IEL was fully conscious of precarious financial health of FCIL at the time IEL decided to enter into tripartite agreement — Basis of complaint was that by deliberately suppressing fact that FCIL had already been referred to BIFR after erosion of net worth and thus likely to be declared a "sick company", appellant induced IEL to pay about Rs 4.2 crores as advance payment and in return FCIL did not supply goods as promised — Mere mention of words "defraud" and "cheat" in complaint is not sufficient to infer that appellants had dishonest intention right at the beginning — A tripartite agreement was signed after due deliberations considered to be in the interest of all parties concerned — Held, at best, it was a case of breach of contract, for which FCIL was already defending civil suit filed by IEL — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 22 and 25 to 32). V.P. Shrivastava v. Indian Explosives Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 361: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2010]

Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129; Kuriachan Chacko v. State of Kerala, (2008) 8 SCC 708: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 631; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 746, relied on

[10413] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating — Stage at which fraudulent or dishonest intention should exist in order to make out the offence of cheating — Held, such intention must be shown to exist at the time of making of the inducement — Otherwise, mere failure to keep up promise subsequently, held, cannot be presumed as an act leading to cheating

It is clear from the allegations made in the complaint and the sworn statements that Appellant 1 Company entered into an agreement with Respondent 2 on certain terms and conditions. It is alleged that Appellant 7 contacted Respondent 2 and induced him to enter into an agreement assuring him of huge profit. At the time of arriving at such an agreement, none of the other appellants either met Respondent 2 or induced him to enter into any agreement with a view to cheat him. It is not the case that there was no supply of goods at all as it has come on record that there was supply of 400 tons of fertilizer, maybe it was far less than the required quantity. From the material that was placed before the Magistrate, even prima facie, it cannot be said that there was conspiracy or connivance between the other appellants and Appellant 7. If the appellants have committed breach of agreement it is open to Respondent 2 to seek redressal in a competent court or forum to recover damages. In order to constitute an offence of cheating the intention to deceive should be in existence at the time when the inducement was made. It is necessary to show that a person had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making the promise, to say that he committed an act of cheating. A mere failure to keep up promise subsequently cannot be presumed as an act leading to cheating. (Para 21). S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2001 SC 2960: 2002 Cri LJ 548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; G.V. Rao v. L.H.V. Prasad, (2000) 3 SCC 693: 2000 SCC (Cri) 733, followed

[10414] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating and dishonest inducement to deliver property — Ingredients of offence — Fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation — Need for — Held, in the absence of culpable intention at the time of making initial promise, offence under S. 420 is not proved — Further held, mere breach of contract does not necessarily involve cheating — Contract Act, 1872, S. 73

The complainant, in order to prove offence of cheating, is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in the absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 can be said to have been made out. (Para 14)

One of the ingredients of cheating is the existence of (sic fraudulent or dishonest) intention of making initial promise or existence thereof, from the very beginning of formation of contract. It is one thing to say that a case has been made out for trial and as such criminal proceedings should not be quashed but it is another thing to say that a person should undergo a criminal trial despite the fact that no case has been made out at all. (Paras 22 and 24)

Offence of cheating consists of two classes of cases: (1) where the complainant has been induced fraudulently or dishonestly, but it is not so in the present case; (2) when by reason of such deception, the complainant has not done or omitted to do anything which he would not do or omit to do if he was not deceived or induced by the accused. Distinction between mere breach of contract and the offence of cheating should be borne in mind. No case has been made out against the appellant to hold that he should face criminal trial. (Para 29). V.Y. Jose v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 3 SCC 78: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 996: (2009) 77 AIC 151 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2008]

Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (I) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776, relied on

[10415] — Ss. 420, 415, 405 and 406 — Ingredients of cheating — Fraudulent and dishonest intention must exist from the very inception when the promise or representation was made — Non-refunding of amount of advance which results in simply a breach of contract, held, does not constitute cheating or criminal breach of trust

The ingredients of Section 420 of the Penal Code are:

(i) Deception of any persons;

(ii) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing any person to deliver any property; or

(iii) To consent that any person shall retain any property and finally intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit.

An offence of cheating would be constituted when the accused has fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. A pure and simple breach of contract does not constitute an offence of cheating. The High Court, therefore, should have posed a question as to whether any act of inducement on the part of the appellant has been raised by the second respondent and whether the appellant had an intention to cheat him from the very inception. If the dispute between the parties was essentially a civil dispute resulting from a breach of contract on the part of the appellants by non-refunding the amount of advance the same would not constitute an offence of cheating. Similar is the legal position in respect of an offence of criminal breach of trust having regard to its definition contained in Section 405 of the Penal Code. (Paras 8 and 10). Dalip Kaur v. Jagnar Singh, (2009) 14 SCC 696: (2009) 80 AIC 212 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703; Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620, relied on

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Hira Lal v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 89, applied

[10416] — Ss. 420, 415, 405, 409 and 120-B — Cheating — Ingredients — Existence of an intention to cheat at the time of making initial promise or formation of contract — Importance of and need to prove — Held, complainant is required to show that accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation — In the absence of culpable intention at the time of making initial promise, no offence is made out under S. 420 — In present case, held, allowing of cheque discounting facility by bank officials to customers of Bank, without any criminal intent being proved, did not amount to commission of offence, particularly as facility allowed was not contrary to RBI Guidelines — It could not therefore also be said that there was meeting of minds in a conspiracy to commit an offence, nor could the act of corruption be inferred from transactions between Bank and its customers — Further, held, accused officials might have been prosecuted under S. 409 but they were not charged under this section — Their conviction therefore set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d)

(6)(vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist (contd.)

Appellant was a Branch Manager of State Bank of India. He and some of his colleagues were prosecuted under Sections 415 and 420 read with Section 120-B IPC, and Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, for permitting discounting of local cheques to some customers of the Bank. Accused 4 and 5 were bank officials while Accused 1 to 3 were private parties having account with the Bank.

The issues involved were whether the bank officials and the customers had entered into criminal conspiracy to commit the offence of cheating against the Bank under Sections 415 and 420 IPC, and whether the accused persons had obtained any illegitimate advantage, warranting punishment under the Prevention of Corruption Act.

Trial court convicted the accused persons. High Court upheld their conviction. The Supreme Court however took note of the fact that there was no evidence on record to prove that there was an intention to cheat the Bank. On the other hand, there was evidence on record that appellant had stopped cheque discounting facility and he had resumed it only after verbal instructions from a superior officer, PW 20. Moreover, the bank officials appeared to have acted in the overall interest of the Bank for the purpose of promoting its business, though there might have been some irregularity in doing so.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

One of the ingredients of cheating, as defined in Section 415 IPC, is existence of an intention to cheat at the time of making initial promise or existence thereof from the very beginning of formation of contract. The complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 IPC can be said to have been made out. (Paras 41 and 42)

No evidence has been brought on record to show that Accused 4 or for that matter, Accused 5 i.e. the bank officials entered into any conspiracy with others. Accused 4 had stopped grant of the said facility and only at the instance of PW 20, was the said facility restored. It may be that there had been certain procedural irregularities in the transaction. However, sufficient evidence is available on record to show that the officers had extended the discounting facility for the purpose of promoting the business of the Bank, for which initiative had been taken by PWs 19 and 20. It has not been disputed that after cheque discounting facility was stopped in April 1989 by Accused 4, there had been a meeting at the residence of PW 20. In his deposition, PW 20 categorically admitted that the said meeting was arranged at the instance of Accused 1. This meeting was arranged at PW 20's residence on the day he was on leave. Accused 1 must have developed grievance against Accused 4 on account of stoppage of the cheque discounting facility. If immediately thereafter the said facility had been restored by Accused 4, a stand taken by him that it was done under the oral instructions of the higher authorities appears to be plausible. The prosecution, apart from the fact that it had failed to bring on record any evidence of conspiracy, must also be held to have failed to bring on record any evidence of wrongful gain so as to attract provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 or otherwise. (Paras 38, 46 and 47)

The accused persons have not been charged for commission of the offence under Section 409. Conspiracy by and between the Bank officials and Accused 1 to 3 has been stated to be for commission of the offence of cheating. It was necessary for the prosecution to establish that there had been meeting of minds at the time when the facility had been granted. Such meeting of minds on the part of the accused persons has not been proved. (Para 48)

Furthermore, the prosecution case even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety does not lead to a finding that even Accused 1 to 3 had any wrongful intention at the time when the contract was initiated. (Para 49)

The Special Judge as also the High Court proceeded on the basis that cheque discounting facility could under no circumstances be made available to them. This was not a correct approach. RBI Guidelines categorically show that it was not a wrong practice. It is one thing to say that there has been an abuse of a prevalent banking practice for the purpose of causing wrongful loss to the bank and causing wrongful gain to others but it is another thing to say that by reason thereof, ingredients of cheating are attracted. (Para 50)

The offence, if any, was committed under Section 409 IPC but the accused persons have not been charged under Section 409 IPC; even Accused 1 to 3 have not been charged for entering into a conspiracy with Accused 4, 5 and 6 in respect of commission of offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act. It is in the aforementioned situation, the judgment of conviction and sentence cannot be upheld. (Para 51)

The conclusions can be summarised as follows:

(a) The prosecution did not lay down any foundational facts to arrive at a finding of dishonest intention on the part of the appellants, nor has any such finding has been arrived at by the trial court or the High Court.

(b) The circumstances which were considered sufficient to bring home the charges against the appellants were: the cheques of Accused 1, 2 and 3 were discounted after purchasing cheques; cheques were deposited after a gap of one to four days; only later were the amounts deposited in the account, which circumstances are not sufficient to hold the appellants guilty for commission of offence under Section 420 IPC as all the actions on the part of the bank officers were in consonance with the long-standing banking practice.

(c) Accused 4 had taken care of having adequate security to ensure that the bank does not suffer any loss, the gain if any was caused to the bank.

(d) The appellants acted on instructions by the higher authority.

(e) The prosecution evidence does not establish any conspiracy on their part vis-à-vis Accused 1, 2 and 3. (Para 55). S.V.L. Murthy v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 77: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 941.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 103, relied on

[10417] — Ss. 420/34 — Mens rea an essential ingredient of — Charge of preparing fictitious pay bills and disbursing the same to fictitious persons — Conviction on ground of failure to perform duties or to observe rules of procedure laid down in the Duty Chart in proper manner by concerned employees — Administrative lapses cannot establish the charge of cheating under

A failure on the part of the concerned employees to perform their duties or to observe the rules of procedure laid down in the Duty Chart in a proper manner may be an administrative lapse on their part and may be at the highest a case of an error of judgment or breach of performance of duty which per se, cannot be equated with dishonest intention. Mens rea is one of the essential ingredients of the offence of cheating under S. 420, IPC. Anil Kumar Bose v. State of Bihar, (1974) 4 SCC 616: 1974 SCC (Cri) 652: AIR 1974 SC 1560: (1974) 3 SCR 902: 1974 Cri LJ 1026: 1975 (12) ACC 35.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1974]

[10418] — Ss. 420/34 and 427 & 384 — Applicability — Non-supply of sales tax exemption forms — Whether amounted to cheating or fraud — Quashment of criminal complaint if warranted — Disputes arising under a commercial transaction due to failure to supply by the authorised dealer to the purchasing dealer sales tax exemption forms under the Bihar Sales Tax Rules — Purchasing dealer filing a complaint alleging commission of criminal offences of cheating and fraud — Availability of remedy under Sales Tax Act and the Rules framed thereunder — Held, the transactions between the parties were for supply of goods — Except for supply of Form IX-C other terms and conditions of the contract had been complied with — Per se, supply or non-supply of Form IX-C of the Bihar Sales Tax Rules had nothing to do with the transactions for which the parties had entered into a contract — Non-issuance of the said form ex facie cannot give rise to commission of any offence — If the appellant or his principal were obligated to act under a statute and failed to perform their duties the statute itself provides for a remedy — In any event, the second respondent could have filed a suit for damages — Held, High Court erred in not quashing the complaint — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Paras 10 to 13). Anil Ritolla v. State of Bihar, (2007) 10 SCC 110: (2007) 59 AIC 211 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, distinguished

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

(2007) 1 Pat LJR 255, reversed

[10419] — Ss. 420/120-B — Cheating — Requisites to constitute an offence of — Breach of contract, held, would amount to cheating only if intention to cheat was existing at the very inception — If such intention developed later on, the same would not amount to cheating — Remedy in the latter case lies before the civil court by filing a properly constituted suit — Accused U and his deceased brother (Directors of a finance company) financing the truck purchased by complainant C on hire-purchase agreement — Subsequently, the said truck becoming traceless — C submitting claim before insurance company — U asking C to permit him to handle the insurance claim — C acceding to said request on assurances given by U that out of the claim of Rs 4,20,000 received, C would be paid Rs 2,60,000 — Despite the claim being allowed, U however failing to pay to C the assured amount — In the absence of any allegation in complaint that at the very inception there was any intention on behalf of the accused to cheat, held, offences under Ss. 420/120-B not made out (Para 6). Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

(7) Fraudulent financial schemes — What are

See also under Ss. 405-409 — CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST, '(9) Criminal breach of trust by banker, merchant, factor, broker or agent, etc. (S. 409)', above

[10420] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Ingredients of cheating — Held on facts, prima facie offence under S. 420 made out

Per Ranganath Misra, J. (Bhagwati, C.J. concurring)

(i) there should be fraudulent or dishonest inducement of a person by deceiving him;

(ii) (a) the person so induced should be intentionally induced to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or

(b) the person so induced should be intentionally induced to do or to omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived; and

(iii) in cases covered by the second part of (ii), the act or omission should be one which caused or is likely to cause damage or harm to the person induced in body, mind, reputation or property.

In the present case the prosecution's allegations were twofold: (i) though the Indira Gandhi Pratibha Pratishthan was not a State Government Trust, publicity was given by the respondent himself and through his agents as also through news media owned by the State Government and the public press to the fact that IGPP was a government trust; and (ii) though Mrs Gandhi had never agreed to the trust being named after her, the respondent associated her name for the purpose of creating an impression in the mind of the people at large that the then Prime Minister, Mrs Indira Gandhi had associated herself with the respondent's trust. The evidence, oral and documentary, taken together justified the framing of a charge for offence under S. 420 on the basis of these allegations. However, the position is a presumptive one open to rebuttal by the respondent. R.S. Nayak v. A.R. Antulay, (1986) 2 SCC 716: 1986 SCC (Cri) 256: AIR 1986 SC 2045: 1986 Cri LJ 1922.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and Ranganath Misra[2], J. [Date of decision: 17-4-1986]

[10421] — Ss. 415, 420 and 34 — Cheating — Ingredients — Appellant-accused promising/ propagating/inducing public through promotions/advertisements to invest money in an impracticable money circulation scheme — Double the invested amount only to be given to a member when 14 new members enrolled under the member — Scheme, held, is practically impossible — As people would not have parted with their money but for such false/impossible representations made by the accused, held, there was an element of cheating — Conviction of appellant-accused, under Ss. 420/34 IPC, therefore, upheld

Prima facie, the courts were satisfied that but for the representation and the benefit sought to be given under the Scheme, the victims would not have acted on such representation. It was, therefore, a case of application of Section 415 IPC. The trial court as well as the High Court considered the facts of the case and held that there is an element of cheating inasmuch as a representation was made by the accused that every unit-holder will get double the amount invested by him; the representation was false, the maker of the representation was aware that the representation was not true and by such representation, he deceived the victim to believe the representation to be true and actuated him to act on such representation. The promoters induced the common public to part with money on the lure of doubling the amount. The advertisement clearly declared that a member would get double the amount when after his enrolment, two members were enrolled under him and thereafter, 4 other persons were enrolled and after the enrolled 4 persons, 8 persons were enrolled under them. Thus, only after 14 persons under the first enrolled person become members under the Scheme, the first person would get Rs 1250 i.e. double the amount of Rs 625. (Paras 47 and 39)

Prima facie case had been made out in absence of better explanation by the accused. The High Court also upheld the argument of the prosecution that the Scheme was a "mathematical impossibility". The promoters of the Scheme very well knew that it is certain that the Scheme was impracticable and unworkable making tall promises which the makers of the promises knew fully well that it could not work successfully. It could work for some time in that "Paul can be robbed to pay Peter" but ultimately when there is a large mass of Peters, they will be left in the lurch without any remedy as they would by then have been deceived and deprived of their money. If it is so, it could be said to be a case for application of Section 420 read with Section 34 IPC, of course, at this stage. (Paras 47 and 41). Kuriachan Chacko v. State of Kerala, (2008) 8 SCC 708: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 631: (2008) 69 AIC 129 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2008]

Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2000) 1 SCC 241: 2000 SCC (Cri) 129, relied on

State of M.P. v. Mir Basit Ali Khan, (1971) 2 SCC 96: 1971 SCC (Cri) 417, distinguished

[10422] — S. 415 Expln. and Ss. 24 and 23 — Deception — Scope of — Non-disclosure of relevant information — Held, to be treated as misrepresentation leading to deception — Further held, S. 415 Expln. gives statutory recognition to the judicially evolved principle that misleading statements which withhold vital facts for intentionally inducing a person to do or omit to do something, would amount to deception — Misleading statement causing damage wrongfully to the person deceived, amounts to cheating — A corporate body seeking investment by means of misleading statement may therefore be subjected to prosecution for cheating — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 56, 58-A, 60-A, 60-B and 61 to 68 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

Section 415 can be divided into two parts. The first part makes it necessary that the deception by the accused of the person deceived, must be fraudulent or dishonest. Such deception must induce the person deceived to either: (a) deliver property to any person; or (b) consent that any person shall retain any property. The second part also requires that the accused must by deception intentionally induce the person deceived either to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit, if he was not so deceived. Furthermore, such act or omission must cause or must be likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. Thus, it is evident that deception is a necessary ingredient for the offences of cheating under both parts of this section. The complainant, therefore, necessarily needs to prove that the inducement had been caused by the deception exercised by the accused. Such deception must necessarily produce the inducement to part with or deliver property, which the complainant would not have parted with or delivered, but for the inducement resulting from deception. The Explanation to the section would clearly indicate that there must be no dishonest concealment of facts. In other words, non-disclosure of relevant information would also be treated as a misrepresentation of facts leading to deception. (Para 68)

The Explanation appended to Section 415 gives a statutory recognition to the legal principles established through various judicial pronouncements that misleading statements which withhold the vital facts for intentionally inducing a person to do or to omit to do something would amount to deception. Further, in case it is found that misleading statement has wrongfully caused damage to the person deceived it would amount to cheating. (Para 72)

The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to prove the averments made in the complaint. They were entitled to establish that they have been deliberately induced into making huge investments on the basis of representations made by Respondent 1 and its representatives, which representations subsequently turned out to be completely false and fraudulent. The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to establish that Respondent 1 and its representatives were aware of the falsity of the representations at the time when they were made. The appellants have given elaborate details of the positive assertions made by Respondent 1 which were allegedly false to its knowledge. It is also claimed by the appellants that Respondent 1 and its representatives wilfully concealed facts which were material and ought to have been disclosed, but were intentionally withheld so as to deceive the appellant into advancing and expending a sum of Rs 500 crores. (Para 75). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

Central Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, 1867 LR 2 HL 99; New Brunswick and Canada Railway Co. v. Muggeridge, (1860) 1 Dr. & Sm 363 at pp. 381-82: 62 ER 418, relied on

[10423] — S. 420 — Snowball Schemes — Society registered — Use of expression "Government of India registered firm No. 1468" — Working of scheme fully explained — Does not amount to cheating

The Scheme is one of those snowball schemes which are speculative to the highest degree and unworkable but it was not dishonest or fraudulent in the sense that it either represented to the public something which was not true or concealed from them something which should have been disclosed. At worst it was an appeal to the gambling instinct of humanity but this cannot per se amount to cheating. State of M.P. v. Mir Basit Ali Khan, (1971) 2 SCC 96: 1971 SCC (Cri) 417: AIR 1971 SC 1620: 1971 Cri LJ 1184.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and P. Jaganmohan Reddy and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-1971]

Distinguished in Kuriachan Chacko v. State of Kerala, (2008) 8 SCC 708

[10424] — Ss. 420, 406, 409, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471 — Relief — Transfer of investigations in different cases to one agency — Finance companies accepting deposits from a large number of persons but not repaying them — FIRs lodged by depositors against Directors of such companies at different places in different States — Prayer of accused persons for transferring the investigation in all such cases to CBI, rejected — CrPC, 1973, S. 156 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India, Art. 32

The petitioners' prayer that the investigations of all cases should be transferred to CBI has to be rejected. (Para 62). Narinderjit Singh Sahni v. Union of India, (2002) 2 SCC 210: AIR 2001 SC 3810.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

[10425] — Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471 — In the present case, the writ petitioners charged with offences at different places in different States though were granted bail in one case could not avail of the benefit thereof due to incarceration on account of production warrant in another case — Such a situation, held, not ipso facto violative of Art. 21 — In absence of material to substantiate the allegation of infraction of Art. 21, relief of release on bail by a blanket order refused — However, in view of the right under Art. 21 to speedy trial, Central Government directed to evolve a formula or procedure for early conclusion of the trial — CrPC, 1973, S. 438 — Natural justice — Held, warrants a fair opportunity — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(2) & (1)(d) — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India, Art. 21

Admittedly, the protection of personal liberty stands expanded to make the right to life under Article 21 more meaningful, the language of the article itself records an exception indicating thereby that a person may be deprived of his liberty in accordance with the procedure established by law and it is in this sphere the courts will scrupulously observe as to whether the alleged violation of Article 21 stands differently and contra as regards the procedure established by law and in the event it is not so done, it would be a plain exercise of judicial power to grant redress to the petitioner. While there is no difficulty in appreciating the grievance and grant of relief in a given case but facts are too insufficient however, to come to a conclusion as regards the infraction of Article 21. Production warrants have been spoken of without any details whatsoever therefor — the reason offered is that the petitioners, in fact, are not in the know of things being behind the prison bars and it starts pouring in from all parts of the country and in the factual backdrop, it is a well-nigh impossible to come to a finding as regards the infraction of Article 21. In any event the liberty of the petitioners cannot be said to have been trifled with in the absence of due process of law. Deprivation, if any, cannot be claimed to be not in accordance with due process of law. (Para 50)

It cannot be held that an accused involved in large number of criminal cases in different parts of the country, if is not able to be released from custody even on getting bail orders in some cases, itself would tantamount to violation of the right of a citizen under Article 21 of the Constitution. The object of Article 21 is to prevent encroachment upon personal liberty by the executive save in accordance with law, and in conformity with the provisions thereof. It is, therefore, imperative that before a person is deprived of his life or personal liberty, the procedure established by law must strictly be followed and must not be departed from, to the disadvantage of the person affected. In each case where a person complains of the deprivation of his life or personal liberty, the Court, in exercise of its constitutional power of judicial review, has to decide whether there is a law authorising such deprivation and whether in the given case, the procedure prescribed by such law is reasonable, fair and just, and not arbitrary, whimsical and fanciful. On account of liberal interpretation of the words "life" and "liberty" in Article 21, the said article has now come to be invoked almost as a residuary right, even to an extent which the founding fathers of the Constitution never dreamt of. Issuance of production warrants by the court and the production of accused in the court, in cases where he is involved is a procedure established by law and consequently, the accused cannot be permitted to complain of infraction of his rights under Article 21. However, in a given case, the court may be justified in directing release of the accused, taking a stock of the entire situation in the case. While, therefore, holding that an accused could maintain a petition under Article 21, it has to be held that the court would not be justified in directing the release of such accused under a blanket order. (Paras 57 and 63)

The right of an accused to have speedy trial is now recognised as a right under Article 21. Even it has been extended to investigation of offences against child offenders. The procedural fairness required by Article 21, including the right to a speedy trial, has, therefore to be observed throughout and to be borne in mind. (Para 58)

Therefore, while no relief is granted herein to the accused persons, the Central Government should evolve certain formula or procedure, so that the accused will not complain of undue harassment on account of protraction of their cases and the persons deceived who have filed complaints, will be satisfied with the early conclusions of the trial. (Para 58). Narinderjit Singh Sahni v. Union of India, (2002) 2 SCC 210: AIR 2001 SC 3810.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 565: 1980 SCC (Cri) 465, followed

Sheela Barse (I) v. Union of India, (1986) 3 SCC 632: 1986 SCC (Cri) 352, relied on

JVG Group of Companies, Re, WP (Crl.) No. 256 of 1999, decided on 28-3-2000 (quoted in Para 1) and Kuber Group of Companies, Re, WPs (Crl) Nos. 72-75 of 2000, decided on 5-5-2000 (quoted in Para 2) overruled on this point

[10426] — Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471 — Relief — Consolidation of cases — Finance companies accepting deposits from a large number of persons but not repaying the same — Consequently, criminal cases initiated against Directors of such companies in courts in different States — Prayer of accused persons for consolidation of such cases, rejected by Supreme Court — However, liberty granted to approach the High Court, or as the case may be, the Appellate Consumer Forum in that regard — CrPC, 1973, S. 407(1)(c) — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India, Art. 32

In regard to the prayer for consolidation the petitioner would be at liberty to approach the High Court in accordance with law. Similar is the situation as regards the orders of the Consumer Forum and the petitioner in the normal course of events would be at liberty to ventilate the grievance if any, before the Appellate Forum in accordance with law. (Para 63). Narinderjit Singh Sahni v. Union of India, (2002) 2 SCC 210: AIR 2001 SC 3810.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

[10427] — Ss. 420, 415, 418 & 25 — Commission of fraud on investors by promoters of company — Liability of promoters who were minors — Unsustainability of — Held, as the appellants were minors at the relevant time, they could not have entered into the contract in view of S. 11 of the Contract Act, 1872 — Thus, they being not party to fraud, they could not have been subjected to penalty under the SEBI Act — It was promoter S i.e. father of appellant minors who committed fraud in names of appellants — Hence, held, S himself should have been proceeded against not only for commission of act of fraud on his own behalf but also on behalf of minors — Contention that offence was continuing one, rejected — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 11, 10 & 17 — Minors party to contract later found to be fraudulent — Effect — Minors, held, cannot be prosecuted or held liable in such a case — SEBI (Prohibition of Fraudulent and Unfair Trade Practices relating to Securities Markets) Regulations, 1995 — Regns. 4 to 6 & 11 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 62, 63 and 68 — SEBI Act, 1992, Ss. 11(2)(e), 11-B, 24, 27 & S. 15-HA (inserted post the event). Ritesh Agarwal v. SEBI, (2008) 8 SCC 205: (2008) 144 Comp Cas 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

(8) Tax evasion and cheating

[10428] — S. 420 — Applicability — Existence of fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation, held, necessary — Where machines were imported availing the benefit of exemption notification on the basis of exemption certificate containing necessary conditions required to be complied with after importation but those conditions could not be complied with and the importer paid the necessary customs duties without taking the advantage of the exemption certificate, held, such conduct of the importer indicated that there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention right at the time of making of application for exemption — Hence, the importer, held, not guilty of offence under S. 420 — More so, when the importer was a non-profit organisation — Customs Act, 1962, S. 25 — Exemption — Availing of the benefit of exemption subject to certain conditions to be complied with later but on failure to comply therewith paying the necessary duties without taking advantage of exemption — Such conduct, held, does not attract S. 420 IPC

The ingredients of Section 420 IPC are not made out. There is no reason as to why the appellants must be made to undergo the agony of a criminal trial. (Para 33)

It is settled law that for establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. From his failure to keep promise subsequently, such a culpable intention right at the beginning cannot be presumed. The records show that the exemption certificate contained necessary conditions which were required to be complied with after importation of the machine. Since GCS could not comply with it, it rightly paid the necessary duties without taking advantage of the exemption certificate. The conduct of GCS clearly indicates that there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention of either GCS or the appellants in their capacities as office-bearers right at the time of making application for exemption. Therefore, the question of committing an offence under Section 420 IPC does not arise. There is no allegation in the first information report or the charge-sheet indicating expressly or impliedly any intentional deception or fraudulent/dishonest intention on the part of the appellants right from the time of making the promise or misrepresentation. Nothing has been said on what those misrepresentations were and how the Ministry of Health was duped and what were the roles played by the appellants in the alleged offence. The appellants could not be attributed any mens rea of evasion of customs duty or cheating the Government of India as the Cancer Society is a non-profit organisation and, therefore, the allegations against the appellants levelled by the prosecution are unsustainable. (Para 40). Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2003 SC 2545: (2003) 104 DLT 699: 2003 Cri LJ 3041: (2003) 155 ELT 433: (2003) 262 ITR 466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Brijesh Kumar[2] and Dr. AR. Lakshmanan[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2003]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, relied on [10429] — S. 420 — Default under S. 271(1)(c) IT Act — Ingredients of, and conditions precedent for imposition of penalty thereunder — Prosecution under S. 420 IPC and S. 276-C IT Act — Maintainability — AYs 1983-84 to 1986-87 — Word "concealment", held, implies a deliberate act and existence of mens rea — Penalty can be imposed only when it is proved that the assessee has made conscious concealment or furnished inaccurate particulars of his income — Where the assessment or reassessment, on the basis of which penalty is levied held, is finally annulled, held, the order of penalty cannot stand — Assessee, engaged in construction and sale of flats, submitting returns for AYs 1983-84 to 1986-87 — Consequent to search under S. 132, IT Act, it filing revised returns on the basis of approved valuer's report, showing construction cost accordingly — Department treating the difference between the income shown in original return and the income shown in the revised return as concealed income and levying penalty — Assessing authority thereafter filing complaints before Magistrate under, inter alia, Ss. 276-C(2), 277 & 278-B, IT Act and S. 420 IPC — ITAT finding that additions in the income were on the basis of settlement between the assessee and the Revenue and represented the assessee's voluntary offer — ITAT therefore holding that there was no concealment of income and, accordingly, it cancelling the penalty — Assessing authority giving effect to ITAT's order — ITAT's order not challenged and becoming final — In such circumstances, held, no offence survived under IT Act — Hence, prosecution of the assessee under S. 276-C, held, could not be maintained — Further held, in the absence of culpable intention under S. 420 IPC, the matter adjudicated by ITAT, should not have been dragged to criminal court — IT Act, 1961, Ss. 271(1)(c), 276-C, 277, 278-B and 132. K.C. Builders v. CIT, (2004) 2 SCC 731: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1092: (2004) 265 ITR 562: (2004) 1 KLT 596.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2004]

Doubted in Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2006) 4 SCC 278 in para 24, p. 295

Distinguished in State, CBI v. Sashi Balasubramanian, (2006) 13 SCC 252: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 337

[10430] — S. 420 — Property — Whether Assessment Order is "property" and/or "valuable property" — Charge can be framed if Income Tax Officer induced to deliver an assessment order for less income tax than due

One income tax consultant, two income tax clerks, and two partners of premier Industries were charged for "dishonestly or fraudulently inducing the Income Tax Authorities and obtaining assessment order for less income tax than due "from the two partners. Question was whether an assessment order is "property" and/or "valuable security" within the meaning of S. 420, IPC.

Held :

The word "property", occurring in S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code, does not necessarily mean that the thing, of which a delivery is dishonestly desired by the person who cheats, must have a money value or a market value in the hand of the person cheated. Even if the thing has no money value in the hand of the person cheated, but becomes a thing of value in the hand of the person who may get possession of it as a result of the cheating practised by him, it would still fall within the connotation of the term "property" in S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. The communicated order of assessment received by an assessee is, "property", since it is of great importance to an assessee, as containing a computation of his total assessable income and as a determination of his tax liability.

The assessment order is certainly a "document" under S. 29 of the Indian Penal Code. The order of assessment does create a right in the assessee, in the sense that he has a right to pay tax only on the total amount assessed therein and his liability to pay tax is also restricted to that extent. Therefore, an order of assessment is a "valuable security" under S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. Therefore, if the cheating employed by the accused resulted in inducing the Income Tax Officer to make a wrong assessment order, it would amount to inducing the Income Tax Officer to make a "valuable security". Ishwarlal Girdharilal Parekh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1969 SC 40: (1969) 1 SCR 193: (1968) 70 ITR 95, 98, 99: 1969 Cri LJ 271.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Ramaswami and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1968]

[10431] — Ss. 420, 415 and 120-B — Ingredients of offences under, on facts, held, not made out — Immunity from prosecution granted under S. 91 Kar Vivad Scheme — Scope — Per Ar. Lakshmanan, J.: Held, protects from proceeding under any and all laws and not only from the proceedings under the taxing statutes — In the present case, Gujarat Cancer Society (GCS) importing certain machines availing of duty exemption under Customs Noti. Nos. 279/83-Cus. and 64/88-Cus. on the basis of exemption certificate issued in the name of Gujarat Cancer and Research Institute (GCRI) on the bona fide belief that since GCS funded all the activities of GCRI and all the operations of GCS were carried out through GCRI, the same was permissible — However, Collector of Customs holding otherwise and raising a demand but in view of charitable and philanthropic activities of GCS, not recommending any prosecution and imposing only a token redemption fine of Re 1 — CEGAT affirming Collector's decision and GCS filing appeal before Supreme Court — KVSS, 1998 coming into effect and GCS making a declaration thereunder — Designated authority determining the liability to duty — GCS withdrawing its appeal from Supreme Court — Certificate of full and final settlement issued granting to GCS immunity from prosecution for any offence under Customs Act or from imposition of penalty thereunder — In such circumstances, prosecution of office-bearers of GCS under Ss. 120-B/420 IPC on the ground of cheating the Government by evasion of customs duty and violation of the "actual-user" condition as per import-export policy, held, not maintainable — Further held, continuance of such prosecution would amount to subjecting the accused persons to double jeopardy after honourable acquittal by Collector of Customs — More so, when the accused persons were senior citizens aged 92 and 70 years — Further held, in penal law there is no vicarious liability unless provided in the statute — On facts held, the ingredients of Ss. 120-B, 420 and 415 were not made out — Further held, such offences, if any, stood compounded by virtue of the settlement — Hence, the process issued by the Magistrate was liable to be quashed under S. 482 CrPC and Art. 227 — Per Brijesh Kumar, J.: Concurring in view of S. 95(iii), subsequent to the settlement, the Government cannot turn around and get the declarant convicted — More so, when under S. 90(4) the declarant was obliged to withdraw his appeal from the Supreme Court which might have affected the criminal proceedings too on merits — Hence, the prosecution would amount to abuse of the process of court — Per curiam: Therefore, the proceedings under S. 420 read with S. 120 IPC are quashed — Ingredients of offences under, on facts, held, not made out — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Constitution of India, Arts. 227 and 20(2) — Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme, 1998, Ss. 91, 90(2), (3) & (4), 95(ii) & (iii), 88, 89 and 87(h) & (j)

The Gujarat Cancer Society (for short "GCS") imported MRI and lithotripsy machines availing of duty exemption under Notifications Nos. 279/83-Cus. and 64/88-Cus. on the basis of exemption certificate issued in the name of Gujarat Cancer and Research Institute (for short "GCRI"). GCS did so on a bona fide premise that since all the activities of GCRI were funded by GCS and all the operations of GCS were carried out through GCRI and that they were akin to holding a subsidiary company, the same was permissible. Later, the Customs Authority raided the premises of GCRI and seized the machines and necessary paperwork on the ground that the exemption certificate was issued in the name of GCRI and not in the name of GCS and thus GCS was not entitled to exemption and was, therefore, liable to pay customs duty. The machines were immediately released on giving the usual undertaking. After issuing a show-cause notice on 11-10-1991 under the proviso to Section 28(1), Customs Act, the Collector of Customs held GCS to be liable to pay the customs duty and not entitled to exemption. Therefore, he raised a demand in a certain sum against GCS. However, considering the charitable and philanthropic activities of GCS, no prosecution was recommended and only a token redemption fine of Re 1 was imposed. Personal penalty under Section 112(a), Customs Act was also imposed on certain parties. After unsuccessfully approaching CEGAT, GCS filed an appeal before the Supreme Court. During the pendency of the appeal, the Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme, 1998 (for short "KVSS") came into effect. The case of GCS was settled under KVSS and the tax liability was determined on 10-2-1999 by the Designated Authority. On 16-3-1999, the appellants withdrew the appeal from the Supreme Court. On 19-7-1999, a certificate for full and final settlement of tax arrears in respect of the KVSS, 1998 was issued to GCS. The said certificate, inter alia, certified the receipt of payment from GCS towards full and final settlement of tax arrears determined in the order dated 10-2-1999 and further granted immunity to GCS from any proceedings for prosecution for any offence under the Customs Act, 1962 or from the imposition of penalty under the said enactment, in respect of the matters covered in the declaration made by GCS. However, on 6-1-1999, consequent to an FIR lodged by the Joint Secretary, Ministry of Health, Government of India, the respondent CBI registered a case alleging that the appellants herein, who were office-bearers of GCS, in conspiracy with the Director of GCRI, Secretary of GCS and certain others had cheated the Government of India in terms of evasion of customs duty and had violated the provisions of "actual-user" condition as per the import-export policy during the year 1987-88. A charge-sheet was filed under Sections 120-B and 420 IPC. The trial court took cognizance and issued process. The appellants filed petitions under Section 482 CrPC read with Article 227 before the Delhi High Court seeking quashment of the FIR. The High Court dismissed the said petitions. Therefore, the appellants filed the instant two appeals by way of SLPs. Opposing the appeals and supporting the High Court's order as well as the issue of process by the Magistrate, the respondent CBI contended that the charges of cheating and other offences under IPC against the appellants were supported by documentary evidence. That it was not a civil dispute but a case of commission of criminal offences. That subsequent payment of duty could not be a ground for quashing criminal proceedings or absolving the accused persons of their criminal liability. That the settlement under KVSS, 1998 protected the individual only from prosecution under the taxing statute and not from criminal proceedings under the Penal Code. That the criminal proceedings could not be quashed merely on account of the fact that customs duty payment had been settled. That the machines were liable to confiscation under Section 111(o), Customs Act.

Allowing the appeals

Held :

Per Ar. Lakshmanan, J.

The grant of immunity by the Designated Authority (KVSS-98) from instituting any proceeding for prosecution for any offence under the Customs Act, 1962, or from the imposition of penalty under the said enactment, in respect of matters covered in the declaration made by the declarant, the decision of the Collector not to recommend prosecution and to impose only a token fine of Re 1 only show that the Customs Authorities were satisfied that there was no intention to evade the customs duty. GCS is immune from any criminal proceedings pursuant to the certificate issued under KVSS. The appellants are being prosecuted in their capacity as office-bearers of GCS. As the customs duty has already been paid, the Central Government has not suffered any financial loss. Moreover, as per KVSS, 1998, whoever is granted the benefit under the said Scheme is granted immunity from prosecution for any offence under the Customs Act, 1962 including the offence of evasion of duty. In the circumstances, the complaint filed against the appellants is unsustainable. (Paras 23 and 24)

From the case of Sushila Rani, (2002) 2 SCC 697, it is clear that if an assessee takes the option under KVSS, he obtains immediate immunity under any proceeding under any and all laws in force. As such the present proceedings initiated under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC are bad and ought to have been quashed with immediate effect. (Para 27)

Moreover, in the present case, the alleged criminal liability stands compounded on a settlement with respect to the civil issues and, therefore, the FIR was erroneously issued and was totally unwarranted. From the judgment in Duncans Agro Industries Ltd. case, (1996) 5 SCC 591, the proposition that follows is that KVSS, 1998 was a voluntary scheme whereby if the disputed demand was settled by the authority and pending proceedings were withdrawn by the importer, the balance demand against the importer shall be dropped and the importer shall be immune from penal proceedings under any law in force. Therefore, the respondent's argument that KVSS, 1998 did not absolve the appellants of criminal liability under IPC cannot be sustained. The continuance of the proceedings in the instant case would only tantamount to driving the present appellants to double jeopardy when they had been honourably exonerated by the Collector of Customs, and further, GCS of which one of the appellants is the General Secretary in which capacity he is accused in the present case was granted amnesty under KVSS, 1998. The present case does not warrant subjecting a citizen especially senior citizens of the age of 92 and 70 years to fresh investigation and prosecution on an incident or fact situation giving rise to offence under both the Customs Act and IPC when the matter has already been settled. (Para 29)

Under the penal law, there is no concept of vicarious liability unless the statute covers the same within its ambit. In the instant case, under the said law which prevails in the field i.e. the Customs Act, 1962 the appellants have been wholly discharged and GCS granted immunity from prosecution. It is a well-established principle of law that the matter which has been adjudicated and settled need not be dragged into the criminal courts unless and until the act of the appellants could have been described as culpable. The true fact and import of KVSS, 1998 is that once the said Scheme is availed of and all the formalities complied with including the payment of the duty, the immunity granted under the provisions of the Customs Act, 1962 also extends to such offences that may prima facie be made out on identical allegations i.e. of evasion of customs duty and violation of any notification issued under the said Act. (Para 30)

In the present case, there is no prima facie case made out in respect of the alleged offence under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC and, therefore, the charge-sheet and the process issued thereunder has to be quashed. To bring home the charge of conspiracy within the ambit of Section 120-B IPC, it is necessary to establish that there was an agreement between the parties for doing an unlawful act. It is difficult to establish conspiracy by direct evidence. (Paras 31 and 32)

The ingredients of Section 420 IPC are also not made out. There is no reason as to why the appellants must be made to undergo the agony of a criminal trial. (Para 33)

To hold a person guilty of cheating under Section 415 IPC, it is necessary to show that he had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making the promise with an intention to retain the property. As the customs duty was paid by GCS, there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention on the part of GCS or its office-bearers to retain the property. Moreover, there was no inducing on the part of GCS or its office-bearers intentionally to retain the property since customs duty had been paid by GCS and, therefore the ingredients of the offence of cheating are missing for issuing the process against the appellants and, therefore, the same is liable to be quashed and set aside. (Paras 34 and 35)

Section 111(o) of the Customs Act, 1962 is not attracted in the present case. The subsequent proceedings initiated for confiscation of the goods is of no relevance nor does it retrospectively render the import illegal. (Para 37)

It is settled law that for establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. From his failure to keep promise subsequently, such a culpable intention right at the beginning cannot be presumed. The records show that the exemption certificate contained necessary conditions which were required to be complied with after importation of the machine. Since GCS could not comply with it, it rightly paid the necessary duties without taking advantage of the exemption certificate. The conduct of GCS clearly indicates that there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention of either GCS or the appellants in their capacities as office-bearers right at the time of making application for exemption. Therefore, the question of committing an offence under Section 420 IPC does not arise. There is no allegation in the first information report or the charge-sheet indicating expressly or impliedly any intentional deception or fraudulent/dishonest intention on the part of the appellants right from the time of making the promise or misrepresentation. Nothing has been said on what those misrepresentations were and how the Ministry of Health was duped and what were the roles played by the appellants in the alleged offence. The appellants could not be attributed any mens rea of evasion of customs duty or cheating the Government of India as the Cancer Society is a non-profit organisation and, therefore, the allegations against the appellants levelled by the prosecution are unsustainable. The KVSS certificate and the law laid down by the Supreme Court clearly absolve the appellants herein of all charges and allegations under any other law once the duty so demanded has been paid and the alleged offence has been compounded. It is also settled law that once a civil case has been compromised and the alleged offence has been compounded, to continue the criminal proceedings thereafter would be an abuse of the judicial process. (Para 40)

Per Brijesh Kumar, J. (concurring)

On the one hand final settlement was made after determining the tax liability, as postulated in Section 95(iii), KVSS, 1998, that the appellants were neither convicted nor criminal proceedings were pending, relating to any offence under Chapter IX or XVII IPC, yet the criminal proceedings are being prosecuted which is apparently against the very spirit of KVSS. In view of the condition precedent under Section 95(iii) for settlement, when on that basis a settlement is brought about, it does not mean that later on, one could turn around and get the declarant convicted for a criminal offence too. More so, when in view of Section 90(4) of the Scheme the declarant is obliged to withdraw an appeal or proceedings regarding tax liability pending before the High Court or the Supreme Court, which had also been done in the present case. The declarant could not be dragged and chased in criminal proceedings after closing the other opening, making it a dead end. It is highly unreasonable and arbitrary to do so and initiation and continuance of such proceedings lack bona fides. (Para 44)

Therefore, it has to be inferred that the position as it stood, in regard to the criminal prosecution and conviction on the date the declaration was filed, as conditions precedent to settlement under the Scheme, would also stand finalized on full and final settlement of the matter under the Scheme. Later on, the declarant could not be or continued to be subjected to criminal prosecution to alter the position as it stood on the relevant date of the submission of declaration. The appellants virtually foreclosed their right to further pursue the proceedings before the authorities or courts of law challenging the legality, validity or the tax liability in terms of the Scheme. Undoubtedly, if the appellants' appeal which was pending in the Supreme Court had been allowed it might have affected the criminal proceeding too on merits. In certain circumstances, it could be put up as a defence by the declarant, in the criminal case but in terms of the Scheme he was bound to withdraw his appeal. The criminal prosecution could not be allowed to proceed by putting an end to a possible defence, beforehand. It certainly amounts to abuse of the process of law. (Para 45)

Per curiam

The FIR in question and the proceedings initiated in pursuance thereto against the appellants in the Court of Chief Metropolitan Magistrate under Sections 120-B and 420 IPC are quashed. (Para 46). Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2003 SC 2545: (2003) 104 DLT 699: 2003 Cri LJ 3041: (2003) 155 ELT 433: (2003) 262 ITR 466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Brijesh Kumar^{2} and Dr. AR. Lakshmanan^{1}, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2003]

Sushila Rani v. CIT, (2002) 2 SCC 697; CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045; Union of India v. Sampat Raj Dugar, (1992) 2 SCC 66, followed

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, relied on

Distinguished on facts in M. Natarajan v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 413

Held limited in M. Natarajan v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 413

[10432] — Ss. 420/34 and 427 & 384 — Applicability — Non-supply of sales tax exemption forms — Whether amounted to cheating or fraud — Quashment of criminal complaint if warranted — Disputes arising under a commercial transaction due to failure to supply by the authorised dealer to the purchasing dealer sales tax exemption forms under the Bihar Sales Tax Rules — Purchasing dealer filing a complaint alleging commission of criminal offences of cheating and fraud — Availability of remedy under Sales Tax Act and the Rules framed thereunder — Held, the transactions between the parties were for supply of goods — Except for supply of Form IX-C other terms and conditions of the contract had been complied with — Per se, supply or non-supply of Form IX-C of the Bihar Sales Tax Rules had nothing to do with the transactions for which the parties had entered into a contract — Non-issuance of the said form ex facie cannot give rise to commission of any offence — If the appellant or his principal were obligated to act under a statute and failed to perform their duties the statute itself provides for a remedy — In any event, the second respondent could have filed a suit for damages — Held, High Court erred in not quashing the complaint — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Paras 10 to 13). Anil Ritolla v. State of Bihar, (2007) 10 SCC 110: (2007) 59 AIC 211 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, distinguished

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

(2007) 1 Pat LJR 255, reversed

(9) Attempt to cheat

— Ss. 420/511 r/w S. 120-B See also Ss. 408, 409 r/w 109, 420 and 420/511 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 408, 420 and 420/511 r/w S. 120-B

[10433] — S. 420 r/w S. 511 — Attempting to cheat — 'A' applying for admission to M.A. class as a private candidate and filing forged certificates purporting to be from a Headmaster and Inspector of Schools as a proof of the fact that he had passed B.A. examination and was teaching in a school — It being found that the certificates were forged and 'A' had neither passed B.A. examination nor he was a teacher, no admission card issued to A — Held, 'A' was guilty of the offence of attempting to cheat under the sections

The preparation was complete when he had prepared the application for the purpose of submission to the University. The moment he despatched it, he entered the realm of attempting to commit the offence of "cheating". He did succeed in deceiving the University and inducing it to issue the admission card. He just failed to get it and sit for the examination because something beyond his control took place inasmuch as the University was informed about his being neither a graduate nor a teacher. Therefore, A was rightly convicted of the offence under S. 420 read with S. 511, IPC. Abhayanand Mishra v. State of Bihar, AIR 1961 SC 1698: (1962) 2 SCR 241: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 822, 827.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1961]

[10434] — S. 420 r/w S. 511 — Technical offence under — Accused altering his own affidavit for securing customs clearance — Accused's explanation that he did so under an honest belief found reasonable on facts and as such act complained of may or may not amount to offence under S. 420 r/w S. 511 — Accused neither cheated nor attempted to cheat the Customs Deptt. — Accused already suffered a prosecution under S. 420 — Nearly 20 years elapsed since commission of the alleged act — In the circumstances held, it would not be expedient in the interest of justice to maintain High Court's order passed about ten years ago remanding the case to the Magistrate concerned for trying the accused under S. 420 r/w S. 511. Kapoor Chand Maganlal Chanderia v. Delhi State (Admn.), 1985 Supp SCC 268: 1985 SCC (Cri) 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-1985]

[10435] — Ss. 420/511 — Attempt to cheat — Failure irrelevant — Accused making false representation to complainant that he could duplicate currency notes — Complainant delivering currency notes to accused — Held, offence of attempt to cheat complete — The fact that accused failed in his attempt is irrelevant

In fact the making of the false representation is one of the ingredients for an offence of cheating under S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. So also the delivery of property is another of such ingredients. Both these ingredients took place in this case and the accused brought them about. Therefore, it cannot be said that the accused had only made a preparation and not an attempt to commit the offence.

It is true that the complainant had not been taken in. He had never believed that the accused could actually duplicate currency notes. He feigned belief only in order to trap the accused. That however clearly makes no difference so far as an attempt to cheat is concerned. The accused had attempted to cheat the complainant. That they had failed in their attempt is irrelevant in considering whether they had committed the offence of attempting to cheat. Bashirbhai Mohamedbhai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 979: (1960) 3 SCR 554: 1960 Cri LJ 1383, 1384: 62 Bom LR 908.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1960]

[10436] — Ss. 420/511 — Trap by complainant by feigning belief in false representation and delivering property after informing police — Offence of attempt to cheat completed. Bashirbhai Mohamedbhai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 979: (1960) 3 SCR 554: 1960 Cri LJ 1383, 1384: 62 Bom LR 908.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1960]

Govt. of W.B. v. Umesh Chandra Mitter, ILR 16 Cal 310, approved

(10) Trial, Proof and Other issues

See in detail CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vols. 18, 19 and 20, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

Synopsis

(i) Acquittal justified 1000
(ii) Appeal/Revision 1000
(iii) Bail 1001
(iv) Circumstantial evidence 1005
(v) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation 1005
(vi) Conspiracy/Multiple accused/ Abetment 1010
(vii) Conviction justified 1015
(viii) Jurisdiction 1015
(ix) Juvenile accused 1019
(x) Limitation 1019
(xi) Quashment 1019
(xii) Sanction for prosecution 1041
(xiii) Transfer/Consolidation of Cases 1042
(xiv) Vicarious liability — Offence by company 1043
(xv) Witnesses 1046

(i) Acquittal justified

[10437] — S. 420 — Cheating — Acquittal upheld — Responding to a telephone call, to get information about his missing son, complainant putting Rs 50,000 in a dustbin at the instructed place, where he found an envelope containing an address — However, such address found to be non-existent — Evidence of PWs whose telephones accused was alleged to have used, and of police constable deputed to tap conversation on complainant's telephone, not establishing any proximity of accused with the crime — Trial court acquitting appellant-accused, taking the view that there was no connecting link between accused and the money being taken and hence charge of cheating not established — High Court in appeal, however, reversing acquittal, relying heavily on report of handwriting expert who found that handwriting on the envelope tallied with that of appellant — Held, in absence of any kind of material to establish link between accused and the money that was kept in a dustbin being taken by him, it is difficult to rely merely upon handwriting expert's opinion to base such a conclusion — Hence, High Court's order set aside and that of trial court restored — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 45 (Paras 2 to 4). K. Sadanand v. Public Prosecutor, (2009) 16 SCC 375: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 301.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2002]

(ii) Appeal/Revision

[10438] — Ss. 420 and 477-A — Appeal before High Court against acquittal — Remand to trial court — If proper, on facts — Charge against appellant under Ss. 420, 477-A IPC and S. 5(2) r/w S. 5(1)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act for cheating the Bank by falsifying bank account while working as Branch Manager during 1984-86 — While audit reports of 1984 and 1985 showing no lapses, audit report of 1986 referring to the irregularities on the basis of which complaint lodged against appellant — Trial court after considering oral and documentary evidence acquitting the appellant taking the view that prosecution ought to have taken into account the earlier audit reports of 1984 and 1985 before filing charge-sheet against appellant — Evidence of material witnesses considered in a perfunctory manner and various other circumstances relied upon by prosecution overlooked by trial court — High Court observing that trial court should have considered the evidence adduced during the trial to find out the guilt or otherwise of appellant and accordingly remanding the matter back to trial court for disposal in accordance with law as some of the documents should also have been brought on record for effective disposal of the controversy raised in the case and to do justice between the parties — Held on facts, High Court was justified in doing so — Thereby it cannot be said that High Court had afforded opportunity to the prosecution to cure the lacunae in its evidence — High Court had also not faulted in preferring to remand the matter instead of recording additional evidence in terms of S. 391 CrPC — Trial court will strictly adhere to the observations and directions given by the High Court in its judgment — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(2) & 5(1)(d) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 386. V. Srinivasa Reddy v. State of A.P., (1998) 9 SCC 331: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1023: AIR 1998 SC 2079.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.P. Kurdukar and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-1998]

Ukha Kolhe v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1531: (1964) 1 SCR 926; Mohd. Iqbal Ahmed v. State of A.P., (1979) 4 SCC 172: 1979 SCC (Cri) 926, distinguished [10439] — Ss. 420, 477-A, 468, 109 & 409 — Appeal against conviction — Mode of disposal of — Lower appellate court not applying mind to the factual aspects of the case and merely considering the question of quantum of sentence — Such disposal of appeal, held, resulted in denial of opportunity to the appellants to agitate their case on facts — Denial of statutory right of appeal offends Arts. 21 and 14 of the Constitution — Hence, matter rendered back to the said appellate court to hear and decide the appeals on merits — Constitution of India, Arts. 21 and 14 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 374(3)(a) (Para 8). K. Pandurangan v. S.S.R. Velusamy, (2003) 8 SCC 625: AIR 2003 SC 3318.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2003]

A.R. Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1988) 2 SCC 602: 1988 SCC (Cri) 372, relied on

[10440] — Ss. 420 and 498-A — Delay if bar to appeal against acquittal — Order of acquittal passed by the trial court in a complaint case under Ss. 420 and 498-A IPC — Refusal to grant leave on ground that the complaint was belated by two years — Held, improper — Case remanded to the High Court with a direction to grant leave and dispose of the appeal on merits — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 378(4) and 468

When Section 498-A of the Indian Penal Code is brought to use in the case of cruelty on women, the law of limitation is not that rigid so as to non-suit the aggrieved wife. A fair dose of liberalities is warranted, so that the law as an instrument comes in aid of the aggrieved due to gender inequalities. Vijaya v. Laxmanrao, (1998) 8 SCC 415: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1543.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1997]

[10441] — Ss. 420/120-B — Revision — Disposal of, by High Court on the basis of observations made earlier by a coordinate bench — Held, not proper — High Court in revision must go into the merits of the case — When the trial court, having regard to the High Court's order, took the cognizance of the offence under Ss. 420/120-B IPC against the accused-appellant, dismissal of revision petition, which was filed against the trial court's aforesaid action, by another Single Judge merely on the basis of the observations made earlier by the High Court, held, was not proper — Impugned order resulted in avoidance of the function of judicial determination of the question of acceptability or otherwise of the plea raised by the accused persons for setting aside the cognizance order and for quashing the criminal proceedings — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138/141 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 401, 397 and 398

On a perusal of the order under challenge it is clear that the learned Single Judge disposed of the revision petition filed by the appellant Company for setting aside the cognizance order and for quashing the criminal proceedings without entering into the merits of the case. The learned Single Judge did not consider the nature of the contract between the parties and the arrangement for payment of dues by the accused persons to the complainant. Further, there is no finding to the effect that the ingredients of the offence of cheating defined under Section 415 IPC were prima facie made out from the averments in the complaint petition and the statement on oath by the complainant before the learned Magistrate. The learned Single Judge felt bound by the observations made in the order passed on 21-3-1997 in which another Single Judge while accepting the position that the Magistrate rightly did not take cognizance of the offence under Sections 138/141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, had observed that the learned Magistrate should have taken cognizance of the offence punishable under Section 420 IPC. From the order under challenge it is manifest that the learned Single Judge did not pay due attention to the part of the order in which the learned Magistrate was directed to hold further enquiry into the complaint. While judging the question whether the cognizance order passed by the learned Magistrate was sustainable in law it was incumbent for the learned Single Judge to go into the question whether the complainant has been able to make out a prima facie case for the offence of cheating on the averments in the complaint petition and his statement on oath. The matter should have been examined in the light of the contentions raised by the accused applicant in the revision petition and finding recorded. The learned Single Judge also did not try to find out if the learned Magistrate held any further enquiry before passing the cognizance order and whether the dispute raised in the case is of a civil nature and continuing the criminal proceedings will give rise to abuse of process of court. (Para 8)

Thus, the impugned order reveals that there has been an avoidance of the function of judicial determination of the question of acceptability or otherwise of the plea raised by the accused persons for setting aside the cognizance order and for quashing the criminal proceedings. Hence, the order under challenge being unsustainable in law is set aside and the matter is remitted to the High Court for disposal afresh in accordance with law. (Paras 9 and 10). Indseam Services Ltd. v. Bimal Kumar Kejriwal (HUF), (2001) 8 SCC 15: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1402: AIR 2001 SC 3512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2001]

(iii) Bail

[10442] — Ss. 415, 463 and 467 — Anticipatory bail — Grant of, after challan has been filed in criminal court — Permissibility — Relevance of defence taken, that dispute purely of civil nature — Held, S. 438 contains a salutary provision which has been introduced to prevent deprivation of personal liberty — It cannot be jettisoned on technicalities such as challan having been filed, anticipatory bail cannot be granted — Court must exercise its discretion judiciously — Anticipatory bail can be granted at any time so long the applicant has not been arrested — Anticipatory bail cannot also be denied merely because allegations of cheating and forgery have been made — Further held on facts, High Court could not ignore appellant's plea that dispute between him and complainant regarding sale of specific flats, was purely of civil nature and complainant had already filed suit for specific performance — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 438 and 173

There was dispute between appellant and complainant regarding sale of specific flats. The complainant apart from filing suit for specific performance, also got an FIR registered against appellant for alleged commission of offences under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 120-B IPC. Appellant's repeated applications for anticipatory bail were rejected. High Court rejected third application on the ground that challan had already been filed in criminal court.

(10)(iii) Bail (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Anticipatory bail can be granted at any time so long as the applicant has not been arrested. When application is made to High Court or Court of Session, it must apply its own mind on the question and decide when the case is made out for granting such relief. The High Court ought not to have left the matter to Magistrate only on the ground that challan has now been presented. There is also no reason to deny anticipatory bail merely because allegation in this case pertains to cheating or forgery of a valuable security. Merits of these issues are to be assessed at the time of trial of accused persons and denial of anticipatory bail only on the ground that the challan has been presented would not satisfy the requirements of Sections 437 and 438 CrPC. High Court is required to exercise its discretion upon examination of facts and circumstances, and to grant anticipatory bail "if it thinks fit". Salutary provision contained in Section 438 was introduced to enable the court to prevent deprivation of personal liberty. It cannot be permitted to be jettisoned on technicalities such as the challan having been presented, anticipatory bail cannot be granted. (Paras 7 to 11)

The defence put forward by appellant cannot be obliterated at this stage itself. Appellant's plea cannot be ignored that dispute between parties is purely of a civil nature. Anticipatory bail is therefore granted to appellant. (Para 12). Ravindra Saxena v. State of Rajasthan, (2010) 1 SCC 684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2009]

Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 565: 1980 SCC (Cri) 465, relied on

[Ed.: See however HDFC Bank Ltd. v. J.J. Mannan, (2010) 1 SCC 679, which was decided on 16-12-2009 i.e. next day the present case was decided. In HDFC Bank case, the Supreme Court has adopted strict approach regarding grant of anticipatory bail, holding that anticipatory bail should be granted for a limited period to enable the accused to surrender to court and to obtain regular bail. On expiry of limited period, the court granting anticipatory bail should leave it to regular court to consider granting bail by taking into consideration evidence collected as a result of investigation or charge-sheet filed in court.]

[10443] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Bail application — Matter/Claim which cannot be adjudicated therein — Cheating and conspiracy — Allegation that accused obtained money from complainants for sending them abroad — N (one of the accused) depositing in court the amount claimed in complaint to show his bona fides for the purpose of obtaining bail — Amount deposited was to be paid to complainants only on settlement between the parties — No settlement arrived at — Nature of claim, a civil dispute — Held, the High Court erred in allowing complainants' application filed in bail petition of the appellants (accused other than N) whereby they sought disbursement of the said amount to them — In a bail application, it could not have adjudicated upon the rights between the parties in regard to the amount in deposit — Impugned directions might also prejudice the defence of the accused — Amount in question directed to be kept in interest-bearing account till appropriate orders were passed by the competent court in this regard — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 439 and 438

While accepting the deposit, the Magistrate had made it clear that the amount in question would be paid to the complainants only if a settlement is arrived at. He had also directed that in the event of no settlement being arrived at within the time stipulated in his order the amount in question should be kept in interest-bearing deposit. The fact that there was no settlement between the parties is not in dispute. Even an attempt to settle the dispute through the Lok Adalat has failed. Therefore, the claim of the complainants for the amount in deposit being in the nature of a civil dispute, the High Court ought not to have directed the payment. The High Court in a bail application could not have adjudicated upon the rights between the parties in regard to the amount in deposit and the impugned directions might also prejudice the defence of the accused. Hence, the impugned orders are set aside. The amount in question be kept in interest-bearing deposit in a nationalised bank till such time as appropriate orders are passed by the competent court in this regard. (Paras 12, 13 and 15). Jagtar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 13 SCC 289: 2005 SCC (Cri) 208.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2004]

[10444] — Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 & 471 — In the present case, the writ petitioners charged with offences at different places in different States though were granted bail in one case could not avail of the benefit thereof due to incarceration on account of production warrant

in another case — Such a situation, held, not ipso facto violative of Art. 21 — In absence of material to substantiate the allegation of infraction of Art. 21, relief of release on bail by a blanket order refused — However, in view of the right under Art. 21 to speedy trial, Central Government directed to evolve a formula or procedure for early conclusion of the trial — CrPC, 1973, S. 438 — Natural justice — Held, warrants a fair opportunity — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(2) & (1)(d) — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India, Art. 21

Admittedly, the protection of personal liberty stands expanded to make the right to life under Article 21 more meaningful, the language of the article itself records an exception indicating thereby that a person may be deprived of his liberty in accordance with the procedure established by law and it is in this sphere the courts will scrupulously observe as to whether the alleged violation of Article 21 stands differently and contra as regards the procedure established by law and in the event it is not so done, it would be a plain exercise of judicial power to grant redress to the petitioner. While there is no difficulty in appreciating the grievance and grant of relief in a given case but facts are too insufficient however, to come to a conclusion as regards the infraction of Article 21. Production warrants have been spoken of without any details whatsoever therefor — the reason offered is that the petitioners, in fact, are not in the know of things being behind the prison bars and it starts pouring in from all parts of the country and in the factual backdrop, it is a well-nigh impossible to come to a finding as regards the infraction of Article 21. In any event the liberty of the petitioners cannot be said to have been trifled with in the absence of due process of law. Deprivation, if any, cannot be claimed to be not in accordance with due process of law. (Para 50)

It cannot be held that an accused involved in large number of criminal cases in different parts of the country, if is not able to be released from custody even on getting bail orders in some cases, itself would tantamount to violation of the right of a citizen under Article 21 of the Constitution. The object of Article 21 is to prevent encroachment upon personal liberty by the executive save in accordance with law, and in conformity with the provisions thereof. It is, therefore, imperative that before a person is deprived of his life or personal liberty, the procedure established by law must strictly be followed and must not be departed from, to the disadvantage of the person affected. In each case where a person complains of the deprivation of his life or personal liberty, the Court, in exercise of its constitutional power of judicial review, has to decide whether there is a law authorising such deprivation and whether in the given case, the procedure prescribed by such law is reasonable, fair and just, and not arbitrary, whimsical and fanciful. On account of liberal interpretation of the words "life" and "liberty" in Article 21, the said article has now come to be invoked almost as a residuary right, even to an extent which the founding fathers of the Constitution never dreamt of. Issuance of production warrants by the court and the production of accused in the court, in cases where he is involved is a procedure established by law and consequently, the accused cannot be permitted to complain of infraction of his rights under Article 21. However, in a given case, the court may be justified in directing release of the accused, taking a stock of the entire situation in the case. While, therefore, holding that an accused could maintain a petition under Article 21, it has to be held that the court would not be justified in directing the release of such accused under a blanket order. (Paras 57 and 63)

The right of an accused to have speedy trial is now recognised as a right under Article 21. Even it has been extended to investigation of offences against child offenders. The procedural fairness required by Article 21, including the right to a speedy trial, has, therefore to be observed throughout and to be borne in mind. (Para 58)

Therefore, while no relief is granted herein to the accused persons, the Central Government should evolve certain formula or procedure, so that the accused will not complain of undue harassment on account of protraction of their cases and the persons deceived who have filed complaints, will be satisfied with the early conclusions of the trial. (Para 58). Narinderjit Singh Sahni v. Union of India, (2002) 2 SCC 210: AIR 2001 SC 3810.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 565: 1980 SCC (Cri) 465, followed

Sheela Barse (I) v. Union of India, (1986) 3 SCC 632: 1986 SCC (Cri) 352, relied on

JVG Group of Companies, Re, WP (Crl.) No. 256 of 1999, decided on 28-3-2000 (quoted in Para 1) and Kuber Group of Companies, Re, WPs (Crl) Nos. 72-75 of 2000, decided on 5-5-2000 (quoted in Para 2) overruled on this point

[10445] — Ss. 420, 467 and 468 — Exercise of power under Art. 142 — Doing of complete justice to parties — Appellant ready and willing to settle contractual dispute wherein allegations of forgery and fraud had been made — Bail

(10)(iii) Bail (contd.)

granted subject to appellant's appearance before Magistrate within four weeks and filing bail petition — Directions given to consider petition for exemption from personal appearance on merits — CrPC, 1973, S. 438 — Constitution of India, Art. 142 (Paras 17 and 18). Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332: (2009) 2 ECrN 1051 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2009]

[10446] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 — When bail should be granted — Case registered against appellant under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC for allegedly driving a car by using a forged registration certificate as genuine — Car owned by appellant's uncle who had handed it over to appellant for getting registration certificate from RTO — Forged documents prepared by the co-accused, an agent of RTO — While the co-accused had been granted bail by High Court in October 2007, appellant still in jail since June 2007 — Counsel for the State failed to state about the progress and stage of trial of the case registered against appellant and the co-accused — Custody of appellant not required by IO for further interrogation — Bail application filed by appellant before High Court rejected — In the facts and circumstances of the case, held, it is a fit case where appellant deserves to be released on bail — CrPC, 1973, S. 439. Anwar Ali v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2008) 16 SCC 501: (2009) 1 ECrN 360 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4572.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-2008]

[10447] — Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B — Grant of anticipatory bail — Matters to be considered — Anticipatory bail — Purpose of — Nature and extent of order that may be passed — Matters to be considered — Held, inter alia is to protect a person against harassment or humiliation sought to be achieved by complainant due to grudge or personal vendetta — However, protective mechanism of S. 438 does not imply passing of a blanket order which would exempt an accused from surrendering to court if charge-sheet is filed against him on completion of investigation — Anticipatory bail should be given for a limited period to enable accused to surrender to court and to obtain regular bail — On expiry of limited period, the court granting anticipatory bail should leave it to regular court to consider granting bail by taking into consideration evidence collected as a result of investigation or charge-sheet filed in court — CrPC, 1973, S. 438

Respondent 1 in his capacity as Managing Director of a company, had taken loan from appellant Bank for purchase of electronic sensor paver finishers from a specified supplier. The appellant Bank after sanctioning loan, drew cheques in the name of specified supplier and handed over cheques to Respondent 1. It was alleged that Respondent 1 instead of making purchases from specified supplier, deposited cheques in a fictitious account and diverted the amount to himself. A complaint was therefore filed for commission of offences under Sections 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B of the Penal Code, 1860.

On 3-7-2006, the Single Judge of the High Court granted anticipatory bail to Respondent 1 under Section 438 CrPC on the ground that investigating agency had already seized all relevant and vital documents and had recorded statements of all important witnesses, custodial interrogation of Respondent 1 was therefore not required. The appellant Bank filed present appeal for cancellation of anticipatory bail. One of the grounds taken by Respondent 1 for opposing the appeal was that anticipatory bail was granted on 3-7-2006 and Respondent 1 has never misused the privilege and had in fact cooperated with the investigating agencies all through.

Partly allowing the appeal and modifying the High Court order,

Held :

Section 438 CrPC contemplates arrest at the stage of investigation and provides a mechanism for an accused to be released on bail, should he be arrested during the period of investigation. Once investigation makes out a case against him and he is included as an accused in the charge-sheet, the accused has to surrender to the custody of court and pray for regular bail. On the strength of an order granting anticipatory bail, an accused against whom charge has been framed, cannot avoid appearing before the trial court. A person should not be harassed or humiliated in order to satisfy grudge or personal vendetta of complainant but at the same time, provisions of Section 438 CrPC cannot also be invoked to exempt accused from surrendering to court after investigation is complete and if charge-sheet is filed against him. Such an interpretation would amount to violence to the provisions of Section 438 CrPC, since even though a charge-sheet may be filed against an accused and charge is framed against him, he may still not appear before court at all, even during trial. No blanket order could be passed under Section 438 CrPC to prevent accused from being arrested at all in connection with the case. Anticipatory bail is given for a limited duration to enable accused to surrender and to obtain regular bail. Anticipatory bail should be of limited duration only and primarily on expiry of that duration or extended duration, the court granting anticipatory bail should leave it to the regular court to deal with the matter on an appreciation of evidence placed before it after the investigation has made progress or the charge-sheet is submitted. (Paras 18 to 20)

Role of Respondent 1 in the entire episode did not entitle him to relief of anticipatory bail, much less a blanket order of bail. However, that is now a closed chapter but what is of relevance is whether High Court should have worded its order in such a way that it could be interpreted to mean that Respondent 1 was not required to even appear and surrender before court during entire investigation stage and trial. Taking advantage of the same, Respondent 1 has successfully avoided court from very initial stage of investigation and even trial. Such kind of an order is not contemplated under Section 438 CrPC. The order of High Court is modified to the extent that Respondent 1 shall surrender before trial court forthwith and pray for regular bail and trial court shall dispose of the same on merits, in accordance with law, before proceeding further with the trial. (Paras 17 and 22). HDFC Bank Ltd. v. J.J. Mannan, (2010) 1 SCC 679.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2009]

Adri Dharan Das v. State of W.B., (2005) 4 SCC 303: 2005 SCC (Cri) 933; Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 1 SCC 667: 1996 SCC (Cri) 198, relied on

[Ed.: See however Ravindra Saxena v. State of Rajasthan, (2010) 1 SCC 684, which was decided by the Supreme Court one day before the present case i.e. on 15-12-2009. In Ravindra Saxena case, the Supreme Court has adopted somewhat liberal approach in granting anticipatory bail whereas in the present case, the Supreme Court has adopted a strict approach.]

[10448] — Ss. 420 and 477-A — Suspension of sentence and grant of bail by High Court pending appeal, does not obliterate the conviction — Canara Bank employee convicted under Ss. 420, 477-A, IPC and S. 5(2) read with S. 5(1)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act — Notwithstanding the suspension of his sentence and grant of bail to him by the appellate court his conviction, held, not obliterated — Hence, provision in R. 11 of Discipline and Appeal Regulations for imposing penalty without following the ordinary procedure, held, attracted — Since the person concerned was not governed by Art. 311(2), the question whether disciplinary action could be taken during the pendency of criminal proceedings, left open — Canara Bank Officer Employees' (Discipline and Appeal) Regulations — Regns. 11, 6, 7 & 8 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(d) & (2) — CrPC, 1973, S. 439 — Constitution of India, Art. 311(2). S. Vasundara v. Canara Bank, (1997) 9 SCC 523: 1997 SCC (L&S) 1204: (1997) 1 CLR 181: (1997) 1 LLJ 687.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1996]

(iv) Circumstantial evidence

[10449] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Circumstantial evidence — False claim for compensation against Government — Held on facts, circumstances do not establish any dishonesty or fraud. Kedar Nath Bajoria v. State of W.B., AIR 1954 SC 660: 1954 Cri LJ 1679.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati and B. Jagannadhadas, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1954]

(v) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation

See also '(10)(xi) Quashment', below

[10450] — S. 420 — Power of Magistrate under S. 156(3) CrPC — Magistrate, before taking cognizance of an offence and without examining the complainant on oath, if could direct the police to register an FIR and investigate the matter concerned — Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978, S. 3 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 156(3) and 200

Any Judicial Magistrate, before taking cognizance of the offence, can order investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. If he does so, he is not to examine the complainant on oath because he was not taking cognizance of any offence therein. For the purpose of enabling the police to start investigation it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to register an FIR. There is nothing illegal in doing so. Even if a Magistrate does not say in so many words while directing investigation under Section 156(3) of the Code that an FIR should be registered, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register the FIR regarding the cognizable offence disclosed by the complaint because that police officer could take further steps contemplated in Chapter XII of the Code only thereafter. (Para 10). Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2001 SC 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-1-2001]

Ram Narain v. Lokuram, (1986) 37 Raj LW 143, distinguished

Suresh Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1996) 3 Rec Cri R 137, overruled

Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39; Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621: AIR 1977 SC 2401, followed

(10)(v) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation (contd.)

[10451] — Ss. 420, 120-B and 426 — Second complaint, on dismissal of first complaint on merit, which dismissal had attained finality, on identical facts — Maintainability — Held, though there is no statutory bar to filing second complaint on same facts, but same can be entertained only in exceptional circumstances enumerated in Pramatha Nath Talukdar case, AIR 1962 SC 876 — In the instant case, second complaint was on almost identical facts raised in first complaint, which was dismissed on merit — Hence, second complaint not maintainable — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 190 and 202 to 204 (Paras 14 to 21). Poonam Chand Jain v. Fazru, (2010) 2 SCC 631.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2010]

Pramatha Nath Talukdar v. Saroj Ranjan Sarkar, AIR 1962 SC 876: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 770; Jatinder Singh v. Ranjit Kaur, (2001) 2 SCC 570: 2001 SCC (Cri) 354; Mahesh Chand v. B. Janardhan Reddy, (2003) 1 SCC 734: 2003 SCC (Cri) 425; Hira Lal v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 89: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1247, discussed and applied

[Ed.: See also Poonam Chand Jainv. Fazru, (2004) 13 SCC 269.]

[10452] — Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B — Person not included as accused in charge-sheet — If could be summoned after the cognizance of offence is taken — Held, such person can also be summoned by Magistrate after taking cognizance of offence, if some material is found against him having regard to the FIR, his statement recorded by police and other documents — S. 319 CrPC does not operate in such a situation — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 190, 204, 173(2), 154, 162 and 319

The appellant Company lodged an FIR against another concern MCIP and its partners. During investigation, it was revealed that Respondent 2 was the Managing Director of another sister Company PIC and two letters of credit given by the appellant were transferred by one of the accused S to PIC. On this discovery, notice under Section 160 CrPC was issued to Respondent 2 by the police. Because of stay order issued by the High Court, it was not possible for the police to interrogate Respondent 2 and to ascertain whether he was involved in the conspiracy. He was, therefore, not joined as accused in the charge-sheet submitted by the police, but his name was shown in column 2, which is meant for the accused who are not sent for the trial. It was also stated that the accused had cheated, misappropriated and caused wrongful loss to the appellant to the tune of Rs 2,10,60,000. On the basis of the said charge-sheet, the Metropolitan Magistrate issued summons against all the accused shown in the FIR for the offence under Sections 420/406/120-B IPC. On the next date of posting, he also issued the summons to Respondent 2. That part of the order was challenged by Respondent 2 by filing a criminal miscellaneous petition before the High Court. The High Court held that "the court was totally unjustified in summoning the petitioner when the petitioner was not shown in the column of accused persons in the charge-sheet". Relying on Section 319 CrPC, the High Court held that such persons could be summoned by the court under Section 319 only after the evidence has been recorded. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

At the stage of taking cognizance of the offence, provisions of Section 190 CrPC would be applicable. As per this provision, the Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence and not the offender. After taking cognizance of the offence, the Magistrate under Section 204 CrPC is empowered to issue process to the accused. At the stage of issuing process, it is for the Magistrate to decide whether process should be issued against particular person/persons named in the charge-sheet and also not named therein. For that purpose, he is required to consider the FIR and the statements recorded by the police officer and other documents tendered along with charge-sheet. Further, upon receipt of police report under Section 173(2) CrPC, the Magistrate is entitled to take cognizance of an offence under Section 190(1)(b) even if the police report is to the effect that no case is made out against the accused by ignoring the conclusion arrived at by the investigating officer and independently applying his mind to the facts emerging from the investigation by taking into account the statement of the witnesses examined by the police. At this stage, there is no question of application of Section 319 CrPC. That provision would come into operation in the course of any enquiry into or trial of an offence. In the present case, neither the Magistrate was holding enquiry as contemplated under Section 2(g) CrPC nor had the trial started. He was exercising his jurisdiction under Section 190 by taking cognizance of an offence and issuing process. There is no bar under Section 190 CrPC that once the process is issued against some accused, on the next date, the Magistrate cannot issue process to some other person against whom there is some material on record, but his name is not included as accused in the charge-sheet. (Paras 6 and 7). SWIL Ltd. v. State of Delhi, (2001) 6 SCC 670: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1205: AIR 2001 SC 2747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-2001]

Raghubans Dubey v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 1167: 1967 Cri LJ 1081: (1967) 2 SCR 423, relied on [10453] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Private complaint — Order taking cognizance of alleged offence — Sustainability of — Delay/laches in filing complaint — Dispute of civil nature — Absence of ingredients of alleged offence of cheating — As per the complaint A-1 executed an agreement to sell dated 25-12-1988 in respect of a house in favour of the wife of the complainant C and a sum of Rs 1,25,000 was paid in advance in respect thereof — Allegation that A-1 instead sold the said property to wife of A-4 — Legal notice dated 11-7-1996 issued by C calling upon A-1 to execute the sale deed — Replying to that notice on 18-7-1996, A-1 specifically denying the very existence of the said agreement and the receipt of Rs 1,25,000 — C, after keeping quiet for nearly 3 years from the date of reply of A-1, filing complaint on 17-5-1999 i.e. after a lapse of 10½ years from the date of the alleged agreement — Held, the said complaint was not at all maintainable at this distance of time — It was liable to be dismissed on the question of inordinate laches on the part of the complainant himself — Further, the allegations in complaint were of a civil nature and did not prima facie disclose commission of alleged offence under S. 420 IPC — Police had given clean chit to A-2 to A-4 — Hence, the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the alleged offence, as confirmed by High Court in revision, was not sustainable — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 190(1)(b) & 204, 200, 156(3), 468 and 401 (Paras 10 to 12). Suresh v. Mahadevappa Shivappa Danannava, (2005) 3 SCC 670: 2005 SCC (Cri) 783: AIR 2005 SC 1047.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2005]

Suresh v. Mahadevappa Shivappa Danannavar, 2004 Cri LJ 3580 (Kant), reversed

[10454] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 120-B — Scope of applicability — Investigation into corruption charges against State Government Minister and officers — Whether excluded from the jurisdiction of CBI officers — FIR lodged by the State Vigilance Department against several persons including Appellant 1 (ex-Minister) for alleged commission of offences under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC and Ss. 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act in relation to appointment and selection of panchayat secretaries — State Government issued notification under S. 6 of Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 referring the case to CBI — CBI thereafter registered a second FIR on 26-6-2003 considering the nature and extent of crime — Held, when S. 36 CrPC uses the words "in rank", it should be given a purposive construction — Although S. 36 appears to limit jurisdiction to State police, in the context of the power of the State vis-à-vis the provisions of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946, the same deserves a wider application — Hence validity of investigation made by CBI, upheld — As investigations were complete, CBI permitted to file charge-sheet before the appropriate court — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Ss. 5, 6, 6-A and 2 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) — CrPC, 1973, S. 36. Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523: AIR 2009 SC 984: 2009 Cri LJ 958.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

[10455] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 120-B — Public trust doctrine — Duty/Power of State in preserving law and order and proper/specialised investigation of serious crimes in larger public interest — State has a larger obligation i.e. to maintain law and order, public order and preservation of peace and harmony in the society — When serious allegations are made against a former Minister of the State, save and except the cases of political revenge amounting to malice, the State may consider handing over of investigation to CBI which has acquired specialisation in such cases — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), S. 6 — Grounds for referring investigation to CBI — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) — Constitution of India, Arts. 162 and 73

On 14-6-2002, an FIR was lodged by the State Vigilance Department against several persons including Appellant 1 (ex-Minister, Rural Development and Panchayats), for alleged commission of offences under Sections 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC and Sections 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act in terms of recommendations of the Financial Commissioner, Rural Development and Panchayat Department giving an enquiry report to set aside the selection of panchayat secretaries due to involvement of favouritism and corruption in the selection process. In a writ petition filed with regard to the selection process the High Court changed the writ from private interest litigation to public interest litigation. A charge-sheet was filed against Appellant 1. Appellants 2 and 3 were shown as the witnesses in the said report. Despite the same a statement was made before the High Court on behalf of the State on 1-11-2002 that the investigation was proposed to be handed over to CBI. Initially, CBI was reluctant to take up investigation on the ground of lack of manpower and infrastructure and the State Government delayed in issuing a notification under Section 6 of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (the Act). However, with the intervention of the High Court (by order dated 30-4-2003), the State Government, on 2-5-2003, issued the Section 6 notification. In view of the said notification the High Court (by order dated 7-5-2003) directed the Director, CBI to take up the investigation by requesting the Central Government for more funds and manpower as per requirement. CBI, thereafter, informed the High Court on 13-8-2003 that a special team had been sent for a meaningful investigation in respect of the allegations, and the same had proceeded to a considerable length. CBI thereafter registered a second FIR on 26-6-2003. The appellants filed applications for recalling of the orders dated 30-4-2003 and 7-5-2003 of the High Court. By reason of the impugned judgment dated 4-10-2005, the said applications were dismissed.

(10)(v) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation (contd.)

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

An accused is entitled to a fair investigation. Fair investigation and fair trial are concomitant to preservation of fundamental right of an accused under Article 21 of the Constitution of India. But the State has a larger obligation i.e. to maintain law and order, public order and preservation of peace and harmony in the society. A victim of a crime, thus, is equally entitled to a fair investigation. When serious allegations were made against a former Minister of the State, save and except the cases of political revenge amounting to malice, it is for the State to entrust one or the other agency for the purpose of investigating into the matter. The State for achieving the said object at any point of time may consider handing over of investigation to any other agency including a Central agency which has acquired specialisation in such cases. (Para 28)

As the investigations are complete, CBI is allowed to file charge-sheet before a court having appropriate jurisdiction. (Para 76). Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523: AIR 2009 SC 984: 2009 Cri LJ 958.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

[10456] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 120-B — Second FIR and further investigation (by CBI) in case of distinct and separate offences on a wider scale — Permissibility of — Power of High Court and State Government regarding — High Court, as proposed by State Government, directing State Government to refer matter to CBI — CBI during preliminary investigation detecting material for lodging second FIR when charge-sheet had already been filed in the first FIR — No fair investigation by the State police on the first FIR — CBI after preliminary inquiry discovering new factual materials — CBI detecting conspiracy neither detected by State police nor alleged in the first FIR — CBI detecting involvement of large number of persons on a wider canvas — Held, it was open to the State and/or High Court to direct investigation in respect of an offence which is distinct and separate from the one for which the FIR had already been lodged — It is one thing to say that an accused acted in his individual capacity and it is another thing to say that he conspired with a large number of persons to facilitate commission of crime by him as a result whereof all of them had made unlawful gains — Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Ss. 4 and 6 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 173(8) and 154. Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523: AIR 2009 SC 984: 2009 Cri LJ 958.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

[10457] — Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511 — Exercise of powers and jurisdiction by CBI in a State — Consent of State Government under S. 6, Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946) — Manner of giving of — Instance of — Letter of Deputy Secretary to the State Government, Home (Police) Department addressed to Secretary to GoI, MHA on the subject "consent of the State Government to the functioning of the Special Police Establishment in the State" stating "this State Government have no objection to the members of the Delhi Special Police Establishment exercising powers and jurisdiction within this State" — It also referring to file/reference number — Such a letter, held, set out all the particulars required by S. 6 — Therefore, prosecution, pursuant to such consent, instituted by CBI under Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468 and 417 r/w S. 511 IPC for offences committed in the State concerned, held, not without jurisdiction — After examining case law on the nature of the provisions of Art. 166 of the Constitution, contention of the accused that the said provisions were mandatory and omission to comply therewith had vitiated the said consent, rejected — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Ss. 6, 5 and 3. M. Balakrishna Reddy v. CBI, (2008) 4 SCC 409: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 391: AIR 2008 SC 1754: (2008) 66 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

[10458] — Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511 — Police agency that has jurisdiction — Territorial jurisdiction of CBI to initiate prosecution — Offences under Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468 and 417 r/w S. 511 IPC allegedly committed by candidate in examination conducted by UPSC in a State — In such circumstances, the mere fact that the head office of UPSC was located at New Delhi, held, could not confer jurisdiction on CBI to invoke the 1946 Act in a criminal case lodged by Secretary, UPSC against the said candidate — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Preamble and Ss. 1, 3 and 5 (Paras 15 and 10). M. Balakrishna Reddy v. CBI, (2008) 4 SCC 409: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 391: AIR 2008 SC 1754: (2008) 66 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

[10459] — Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511 — Territorial jurisdiction of CBI to initiate prosecution — Offences under Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468 and 417 r/w S. 511 IPC allegedly committed in a State in an examination by a candidate who was an employee of the Central Government — In such circumstances the mere fact that the delinquent candidate was an employee of the Central Government, held, could not confer jurisdiction on CBI to invoke the 1946 Act — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Preamble and Ss. 1, 3 and 5 (Paras 15 and 11). M. Balakrishna Reddy v. CBI, (2008) 4 SCC 409: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 391: AIR 2008 SC 1754: (2008) 66 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

[10460] — Ss. 420/34 — Filing of second complaint on same cause of action and between same parties, when earlier complaint dismissed for non-filing of process fees, but not on merits — Maintainability — Held, even if a complaint is dismissed under S. 203, a second complaint would still lie under exceptional circumstances e.g. where previous order was passed on an incomplete record or on misunderstanding of nature of complaint or it was manifestly absurd, unjust, fallacious or false or where new facts, which could not, with reasonable diligence, have been brought on record in a previous proceeding, have been adduced — Although prayer for recalling order of dismissal would not be maintainable before Magistrate in view of S. 362, but such is not the case here — Herein, neither was complaint dismissed on merits nor at stage of S. 203, but was dismissed for failure of complainant to put in process fees for effecting service — In fact, only on being satisfied of prima facie case, Magistrate issued process on complaint — Therefore, held, in absence of any provision in CrPC barring a second complaint being filed on same allegation, there would be no bar to a second complaint being filed on same facts, if first complaint did not result in conviction or acquittal or even discharge of accused, and if dismissal was not on merits but on account of a default by complainant — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 22 and 19 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 203, 202, 190, 204(1) and 362 (Paras 23 to 29)

In the instant case, the complainant (Respondent 2) filed a complaint on 1-7-1999 against the petitioner under Sections 420/34 IPC, on allegations of payment having been received by him to perform certain favours for the complainant's son-in-law by making use of his official position, on which process was issued by the trial court, which matter is still pending.

Another complaint was filed by Respondent 2 on 8-4-2002 under the provisions of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, against the petitioner, which was entertained by trial court and process was issued. However, this complaint came to be dismissed on 24-7-2003, for non-filing of the process fees. An application filed by the complainant on 18-9-2003, for recall of the order dated 24-7-2003, was dismissed. Thereafter, yet another complaint was filed by Respondent 2 on 29-9-2003, on the same grounds, under the provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, on which process was issued on 8-1-2004.

The petitioner filed two criminal revision cases for quashing the aforesaid complaints dated 1-7-1999 and 29-9-2003, before the High Court, which were dismissed by a common judgment and order. The same is assailed in present special leave petitions.

As far as the first complaint dated 1-7-1999 under Sections 420/34 IPC was concerned, the petitioner did not seriously question the order of the High Court rejecting the petitioner's prayer for quashing the same. He confined his case mainly to the complaint dated 29-9-2003, wherein the trial court took cognizance and issued process under the provisions of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, despite an earlier complaint on the same ground and on the same set of facts having been dismissed earlier for non-filing of the process fees.

Dismissing the special leave petitions, the Supreme Court held as above. Ranvir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2009) 9 SCC 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-9-2009]

Jatinder Singh v. Ranjit Kaur, (2001) 2 SCC 570: 2001 SCC (Cri) 354; Pramatha Nath Talukdar v. Saroj Ranjan Sarkar, AIR 1962 SC 876, followed

(vi) Conspiracy/Multiple accused/ Abetment

[10461] — Ss. 419, 420 and 120-B — A-3 alleged to have obtained fake passport by submitting false documents with help of A-4 to A-9 — Involvement of A-3 at both stages i.e. pre-passport application stage and post-passport application stage established — Held, it was for her benefit that entire conspiracy was hatched involving more than one individual — Hence, her conviction sustained — However, considering that she had undergone more than 2½ years of imprisonment, sentence reduced to period already undergone — Passports Act, 1967, Ss. 12 and 3 (Paras 51 and 54)

A-3 was alleged to have obtained a fake passport by submitting false documents with the help of A-4 to A-9, which was used by her to travel to Lisbon, Portugal. She had to face the prosecution and suffer conviction and sentence in Portugal.

The trial court found her guilty of the offences punishable under Sections 120-B, 419 and 420 IPC, A-5 was found guilty of the offences under Section 120-B, Section 419 read with Section 109, Section 420 read with Section 109, Section 468 IPC and Section 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, A-7 guilty of the offence under Section 468 IPC, while A-8 was held guilty of the offences under Sections 120-B, 420, Section 419 read with Section 109 IPC, Section 420 read with Section 109 IPC and under Section 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. In appeal filed thereagainst, the High Court while confirming conviction of A-3, reduced the sentence of RI on all counts while maintaining the fine imposed. The conviction of A-5 and A-8 was also upheld but sentence imposed was reduced. As far as A-7 is concerned his conviction was altered from Section 468 IPC to Section 465 IPC and sentence of RI for 6 months and fine of Rs 500 with default stipulation was imposed. Hence, instant appeals by the appellant-accused. Monica Bedi v. State of A.P., (2011) 1 SCC 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2010]

[10462] — Ss. 419 & 420 r/w Ss. 109, 120-B & 468 and S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988 — Conviction — Sustainability — A-8, Postman, Head Post-Office alleged to have collected two speed post articles containing fake passports, which were actually entrusted to PW 11 for delivery, falsely representing that he knew the addressees and would personally deliver the same — Evidence establishing that A-8 was aware of contents of the articles — Thus, his participation in conspiracy in securing fake passports clearly proved — Hence, his conviction sustained — Passports Act, 1967, Ss. 12 and 3 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — Conviction confirmed (Para 48). Monica Bedi v. State of A.P., (2011) 1 SCC 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2010]

[10463] — Ss. 419 & 420 r/w Ss. 109, 120-B & 468 and S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988 — Conviction — Sustainability — Evidence establishing that A-5, Head Constable submitted false inquiry report, knowing it to be false, certifying passport application particulars of A-3 — Hence, his conviction for charged offences upheld — Passports Act, 1967, Ss. 12 and 3 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — Conviction confirmed (Paras 49 and 50). Monica Bedi v. State of A.P., (2011) 1 SCC 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2010]

[10464] — Ss. 420 and 34 — Conviction under — No evidence that the appellant practised fraud, induced the complainant to part with goods or had knowledge of non-payment of money to the complainant — Mere evidence that the appellant was a partner of an accused and had hired a room where the goods were stored, held, not sufficient to show that the appellant had any knowledge of inducement practised by the accused — Conviction being based on surmises and conjectures, set aside. Bhikalal Ramjibhai Zaveri v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 1 SCC 491: 1980 SCC (Cri) 253: AIR 1981 SC 476: 1980 Cri LJ 1474.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-1979]

[10465] — Ss. 420 and 109 — Accused tried with an officer of Government — Accused charged under S. 420 and officer charged for abetment of the offence — Trial of accused not bad if the officer was being tried without sanction under S. 197, CrPC. Bakhshish Singh Dhaliwal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 752: (1967) 1 SCR 211: 1967 Cri LJ 656, 658, 66.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1966]

[10466] — Ss. 420 and 109 — Permission for prosecution not necessary when an officer of Government prosecuted for abetment of the offence of cheating committed by persons submitting bogus bills by falsely certifying the correctness of bills

H was not being prosecuted for the act of certification of the correctness of the bills which were sent to him for verification, but was to be prosecuted for abetment of the offence of cheating committed by those persons who had submitted the bills by falsely certifying the correctness of those bills. The act of thus abetting the principal offenders could not possibly be held to have been done in the discharge of official duties as a public servant. Bakhshish Singh Dhaliwal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 752: (1967) 1 SCR 211: 1967 Cri LJ 656.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1966]

[10467] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Charge of criminal conspiracy to fraudulently deprive an illiterate woman of her land — In spite of coming to know about the alleged fraud, names of the accused not mentioned in the complaint and FIR — No civil suit filed to protect title to the property — On facts, testimony of complainant and approver doubtful — Held, charge not established. Lal Chand v. State of Haryana, (1984) 1 SCC 686: 1984 SCC (Cri) 355: AIR 1984 SC 226: 1984 Cri LJ 164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and M.P. Thakkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1983]

[10468] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Corroboration of the offence of conspiracy in a case of cheating — If a specific instance of cheating was proved beyond doubt against any of the accused that would furnish the best corroboration of the offence of conspiracy because conspiracy was the root and the specific instances were the fruit. S. Swamirathnam v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 340: 1957 Cri LJ 422, 426.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1956]

[10469] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Non-examination of one of the witnesses — Effect — Appellant, a postal clerk, charged with taking out a bank draft from a registered letter and handing it over to the other two accused for encashment, in pursuance of a conspiracy — Appellant pleading that the said registered letter was handed over to the postman in due course of his duties — Plea not accepted by courts below on the basis of the evidence of PW 8, another clerk, and the entries in the register — Accordingly, appellant convicted under S. 420 read with S. 120-B, IPC — In appeal to SC conviction challenged on the ground of non-examination of the postman as a witness — Held, admittedly the appellant received the registered letter and it was his duty to make the necessary entries as to whether it was delivered but there was no such definite entry — This coupled with the evidence of PW 8 was enough to bring home the guilt of the appellant — Non-examination of the postman did not make any difference. Nand Kumar v. State of Punjab, 1994 SCC (Cri) 158.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1993]

[10470] — Ss. 420, 120-B and 34 — Conspirary — Quashment of proceedings — Evaluation of plausibility/credibility of averments in complaint — Permissibility — Doubt as to the same, held, must be based on some material — High Court cannot quash complaint if allegations prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — Complaint alleging sale of cooperative society land illegally for higher price but showing lesser price in records and conspiracy to cheat society and its members — High Court quashing entire criminal proceedings holding that averments in complaint were "imaginary" — Sustainability — In present case, allegations in complaint disclose conspiracy to put cooperative society and its members to loss in view of report of Registrar and hence prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — High Court's conclusion that averments in complaint are imaginary is not based on any material — Hence, judgment of High Court is unsustainable — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now a well-settled principle of law that the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code may quash a criminal proceeding inter alia in the event the allegations made in the complaint petition even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not disclose commission of a cognizable offence. (Para 14)

The opinion of the High Court that the averments made in the complaint petition are imaginary is not based on any material. Even assuming that the complainant had a score to settle against the accused, the same by itself may not be a ground to quash the entire criminal proceedings particularly in view of the fact that at least a prima facie case has been established in view of the report of the Registrar. (Para 22)

(10)(vi) Conspiracy/Multiple accused/Abetment (contd.)

The allegations made in the complaint petition disclose commission of a cognizable offence. A conspiracy is said to have been entered into for putting the Society and consequentially the members to a great loss. A conspiracy is also said to have been hatched for the aforementioned purpose as a result whereof not only an allotment was made in favour of a person who was not entitled thereto but also the allotted plot was assigned in favour of a third party for a huge sum. Whether the allegations made in the complaint petition are correct or not have to be considered during trial. It may be true that the question as to whether the report of the Registrar can be relied upon for the purpose of showing as to how the act of cheating has been committed by the respondents is a matter which must be considered at the time of trial but there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that so long as the report is not set aside, the same could form the basis for forming of an opinion at least for the purpose of proceeding against the respondents that they manipulated the records of the cooperative Society to make unlawful gain for themselves and causing unlawful loss to the Society. (Paras 16, 17 and 19). K. Ashoka v. N.L. Chandrashekar, (2009) 5 SCC 199: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 730: (2009) 77 AIC 58 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 2952.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, followed

[10471] — Ss. 420, 120-B and 405 — Essential ingredients — Whether complaint petition given its face value and taken to be correct in its entirety constitutes an offence under — Respondent 1 who was a partner of M/s R Co. alleging that Accused 1 to 6 who were also partners of said firm had conspired with appellant-Accused 8 to 13 who were partners of another firm D&S and deprived him from deriving benefits of M/s R Co. by dissolving it behind his back — A new company M/s GD&S was sought to be constituted on premise that four partners of M/s R Co. would be representing D&S along with an outsider — It was also alleged that he had lion's share in building up the reputation and goodwill of M/s R Co.; that he had no control over income of the firm and in spite of repeated demands for rendering accounts the accused had failed to do so; appellants were the conspirators in cheating and committing criminal breach of trust which amounted to theft of valuable property of complainant — Partnership cancelled from the very inception as the same was said to have not been acted upon — Held, once the said partnership did not take off and the partnership deed was cancelled as it had never been acted upon, the question of any wrongful act on the part of the appellants did not arise — Respondent 1 thus suffered no loss — Further held, it is one thing to say that there exists a dispute amongst the partners inter se but it is another thing to say that by constituting another firm wherein two firms would be represented by their respective nominees together with an outsider would itself indicate an act of conspiracy — Once it has been accepted as a fact that the said partnership has been cancelled, the question of relying thereupon for any purpose would not arise — Moreover, in the instant case, essential ingredients for constituting the offence of criminal breach of trust and cheating were missing (Paras 2, 3, 9, 10, 15 to 17). V.R. Dalal v. Yougendra Naranji Thakkar, (2008) 15 SCC 625: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1141: AIR 2008 SC 2793: (2008) 66 AIC 113 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2008]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678, relied on

[10472] — Ss. 420 and 415 — Cheating — D purchasing shares from complainant B and giving him a postdated cheque signed by his wife towards payment thereof — Dishonour of cheque due to stop-payment instruction by wife — Conviction of D and acquittal of wife by High Court — Propriety — Receipt executed by D indicating that he had received the shares — Inability of B to tell the number of shares and the fact that the cheque was filled in by B held, not fatal — Plea that receipt was given in anticipation of future delivery, not raised before the courts below — Statement of D under S. 313 CrPC that he did not receive the shares or that the transaction did not take place on 7-8-1992 (date stated by B*) but on 27-7-1992, was of no consequence — Wife totally denying any such transaction — She stating to have stopped payment on finding her chequebook (containing some signed blank cheques) missing — Held,* D rightly convicted under S. 420 — However, his custodial sentence reduced from one year to three months — Wife's presence at the time of transaction, not proved — Cheque, though signed by her, handed over to B by D — Held, acquittal of wife proper

It is proved that a cheque was handed over to the complainant and in the receipt it was stated that the shares have been received. The mere fact that the cheque was filled in by the complainant is not sufficient to take away the effect of the statement in the receipt. The plea that it was an advance receipt does not appear to have been even agitated before the courts below. Significantly, there was no suggestion to the complainant that the shares had not been delivered. When there was definite assertion about delivery of shares evidenced by a receipt, the inability of the complainant to tell the number of shares is not sufficient to discard his case. (Paras 9 to 11)

Further, what appears to have weighed with the trial court while acquitting the accused is that the transaction allegedly took place on 27-7-1992. Significantly, there is also no suggestion to the complainant during cross-examination by the accused that the transaction was done on 27-7-1992 and not on 7-8-1992 as claimed by the complainant. Merely because the accused stated that he had not received the shares or that the transaction took place on 27-7-1992 in his examination under Section 313 CrPC, that is really of no consequence. The statement under Section 313 is not evidence. (Para 11)

Prevaricating stands have been taken as to why stoppage of payment was done. Thus, in view of the above position, the High Court's judgment convicting D suffers from no infirmity. But, considering the peculiar circumstances of the case, his sentence is reduced from one year to three months. (Paras 13 and 14)

As regards acquittal of wife of D, her presence at the time of the transaction has not been established. Though she had signed the cheque, admittedly, the same was handed over to the complainant only by D. Therefore, there was no deception established so far as she is concerned. (Para 15). Devender Kumar Singla v. Baldev Krishan Singla, (2005) 9 SCC 15: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1185: AIR 2004 SC 3084: 2004 Cri LJ 1778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-2004]

[10473] — Ss. 420, 415, 405, 409 and 120-B — Cheating — Ingredients — Existence of an intention to cheat at the time of making initial promise or formation of contract — Importance of and need to prove — Held, complainant is required to show that accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation — In the absence of culpable intention at the time of making initial promise, no offence is made out under S. 420 — In present case, held, allowing of cheque discounting facility by bank officials to customers of Bank, without any criminal intent being proved, did not amount to commission of offence, particularly as facility allowed was not contrary to RBI Guidelines — It could not therefore also be said that there was meeting of minds in a conspiracy to commit an offence, nor could the act of corruption be inferred from transactions between Bank and its customers — Further, held, accused officials might have been prosecuted under S. 409 but they were not charged under this section — Their conviction therefore set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d)

Appellant was a Branch Manager of State Bank of India. He and some of his colleagues were prosecuted under Sections 415 and 420 read with Section 120-B IPC, and Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, for permitting discounting of local cheques to some customers of the Bank. Accused 4 and 5 were bank officials while Accused 1 to 3 were private parties having account with the Bank.

The issues involved were whether the bank officials and the customers had entered into criminal conspiracy to commit the offence of cheating against the Bank under Sections 415 and 420 IPC, and whether the accused persons had obtained any illegitimate advantage, warranting punishment under the Prevention of Corruption Act.

Trial court convicted the accused persons. High Court upheld their conviction. The Supreme Court however took note of the fact that there was no evidence on record to prove that there was an intention to cheat the Bank. On the other hand, there was evidence on record that appellant had stopped cheque discounting facility and he had resumed it only after verbal instructions from a superior officer, PW 20. Moreover, the bank officials appeared to have acted in the overall interest of the Bank for the purpose of promoting its business, though there might have been some irregularity in doing so.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

One of the ingredients of cheating, as defined in Section 415 IPC, is existence of an intention to cheat at the time of making initial promise or existence thereof from the very beginning of formation of contract. The complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 IPC can be said to have been made out. (Paras 41 and 42)

(10)(vi) Conspiracy/Multiple accused/Abetment (contd.)

No evidence has been brought on record to show that Accused 4 or for that matter, Accused 5 i.e. the bank officials entered into any conspiracy with others. Accused 4 had stopped grant of the said facility and only at the instance of PW 20, was the said facility restored. It may be that there had been certain procedural irregularities in the transaction. However, sufficient evidence is available on record to show that the officers had extended the discounting facility for the purpose of promoting the business of the Bank, for which initiative had been taken by PWs 19 and 20. It has not been disputed that after cheque discounting facility was stopped in April 1989 by Accused 4, there had been a meeting at the residence of PW 20. In his deposition, PW 20 categorically admitted that the said meeting was arranged at the instance of Accused 1. This meeting was arranged at PW 20's residence on the day he was on leave. Accused 1 must have developed grievance against Accused 4 on account of stoppage of the cheque discounting facility. If immediately thereafter the said facility had been restored by Accused 4, a stand taken by him that it was done under the oral instructions of the higher authorities appears to be plausible. The prosecution, apart from the fact that it had failed to bring on record any evidence of conspiracy, must also be held to have failed to bring on record any evidence of wrongful gain so as to attract provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 or otherwise. (Paras 38, 46 and 47)

The accused persons have not been charged for commission of the offence under Section 409. Conspiracy by and between the Bank officials and Accused 1 to 3 has been stated to be for commission of the offence of cheating. It was necessary for the prosecution to establish that there had been meeting of minds at the time when the facility had been granted. Such meeting of minds on the part of the accused persons has not been proved. (Para 48)

Furthermore, the prosecution case even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety does not lead to a finding that even Accused 1 to 3 had any wrongful intention at the time when the contract was initiated. (Para 49)

The Special Judge as also the High Court proceeded on the basis that cheque discounting facility could under no circumstances be made available to them. This was not a correct approach. RBI Guidelines categorically show that it was not a wrong practice. It is one thing to say that there has been an abuse of a prevalent banking practice for the purpose of causing wrongful loss to the bank and causing wrongful gain to others but it is another thing to say that by reason thereof, ingredients of cheating are attracted. (Para 50)

The offence, if any, was committed under Section 409 IPC but the accused persons have not been charged under Section 409 IPC; even Accused 1 to 3 have not been charged for entering into a conspiracy with Accused 4, 5 and 6 in respect of commission of offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act. It is in the aforementioned situation, the judgment of conviction and sentence cannot be upheld. (Para 51)

The conclusions can be summarised as follows:

(a) The prosecution did not lay down any foundational facts to arrive at a finding of dishonest intention on the part of the appellants, nor has any such finding has been arrived at by the trial court or the High Court.

(b) The circumstances which were considered sufficient to bring home the charges against the appellants were: the cheques of Accused 1, 2 and 3 were discounted after purchasing cheques; cheques were deposited after a gap of one to four days; only later were the amounts deposited in the account, which circumstances are not sufficient to hold the appellants guilty for commission of offence under Section 420 IPC as all the actions on the part of the bank officers were in consonance with the long-standing banking practice.

(c) Accused 4 had taken care of having adequate security to ensure that the bank does not suffer any loss, the gain if any was caused to the bank.

(d) The appellants acted on instructions by the higher authority.

(e) The prosecution evidence does not establish any conspiracy on their part vis-à-vis Accused 1, 2 and 3. (Para 55). S.V.L. Murthy v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 77: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 941.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 103, relied on [10474] — Ss. 420/34 and 471/34 — Principal accused printing false receipts and collecting donations for relief fund — Appellant, accused 2, neither shown to have knowledge that the receipts were forged nor shown to have derived any benefit from the funds so collected — That appellant shared the fraudulent intention with accused 1 not proved — Conviction improper — Merely going along with the principal accused not sufficient. Dasrathlal Chandulal Joshi v. State of Gujarat, (1979) 4 SCC 338: 1979 SCC (Cri) 974: AIR 1979 SC 1342: 1979 Cri LJ 1078.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1979]

[10475] — Ss. 420/109 — Abetment of cheating/fraud — One L, who had been introduced to respondent Bank by appellant, committing fraud on Bank — Responsibility of appellant therefor — Held, appellant had introduced L to the Bank only for opening an account and that by itself does not spell out any fraud or cheating — On facts, there was no evidence to show that the appellant was in any way related to the fraud committed by L on the Bank — Moreover, the appellant was in no way responsible for the loss sustained by the Bank due to said fraud — Hence appellant acquitted of all charges

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There is nothing on record to show that the appellant was in any way related to the fraud committed by L on the Bank. The prosecution did not even produce the form in which the appellant had signed for introducing L for starting a current account with the Bank. The evidence of the three witnesses also does not show any complicity by the appellant in committing any act of cheating. The appellant had introduced L to the Bank only for opening an account and that by itself does not spell out any fraud or cheating. There is no evidence to show that the present appellant instigated L to present bogus drafts before the complainant Bank. It is also not correct to say that the appellant was in any way responsible for the loss sustained by the Bank when the Bank passed the cheque for Rs 27,000 at a time when the account-holder L had not sufficient money in his credit. They acted on the bogus drafts given by him for which the appellant who had introduced the account-holder about six months back cannot be made liable for commission of offence or abetting offence of cheating. (Paras 5 and 6). Manoranjan Das v. State of Jharkhand, (2004) 12 SCC 90: AIR 2004 SC 3623: (2004) 121 Comp Cas 8: 2004 Cri LJ 3042.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

(vii) Conviction justified

[10476] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Cheating — Held, concurrent findings of courts below calls for no interference — Conviction upheld — However, in the circumstances, sentence reduced — No law point laid down. Gurbachan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1994 SC 1589.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-1993]

[10477] — Ss. 420/511, 420/120-B, 468 and 477-A — Sentence — Accused, a Development Officer in LIC, introducing false and fake insurance proposals to LIC with a view to earn promotion on the basis of inflated business — Contents of proposals and Moral Hazard Report found to be in the handwriting of the accused — Plea of the accused that he was then imparting training to newly-recruited agents and in that process he had filled in the proposal forms, held, not acceptable — Policies not issued due to dishonour of cheques towards first premium and, therefore, loss to LIC might be negligible but the fact remains that the accused sought to take advantage of his inflated business — Held, in the circumstances of the case, accused rightly convicted by the courts below — However, in view of long lapse of time, loss of job and other retiral benefits, sentence altered to simple imprisonment for six months — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Ss. 5(1)(d), 5(3-A) and 5(2) — Insurance Act, 1938 — S. 104. Ram Prakash Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 1 SCC 173: 1998 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1998 SC 296: 1998 Cri LJ 502.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-1997]

(viii) Jurisdiction

[10478] — S. 420 — Place of trial — Complainant parting with his money on misrepresentation by accused — Misrepresentation made to the complainant residing at Bombay by the accused from Karachi through letters, telegrams, telephone talks and through a person — Held, misrepresentations made to the complainant at Bombay — Entire offences committed at Bombay which is a proper place of trial

The offence of cheating under S. 420 of the Penal Code as defined in S. 415 of the Code has two essential ingredients, viz. (1) deceit i.e., dishonest or fraudulent misrepresentation to a person, and (2) the inducing of that person thereby to deliver property. In the present case the appellant though at Karachi was making representations to the complainant through letters, telegrams and telephone talks, sometimes directly to the complainant and sometimes through Jaswalla, that he had already stock of rice, that he had reserved shipping space and that on receipt of money he would be in a position to ship the rice forthwith. These representations were made to the complainant at Bombay, notwithstanding that the appellant was making the representations from Karachi. The position is quite clear where the representations were made through the trunk phone. The statement of the appellant at the Karachi-end of the telephone becomes a representation to the complainant only when it reaches cognition of the complainant at the Bombay-end. It makes no difference in principle if the representations have in some stages been conveyed by telegrams or by letters to the complainant directly or to some one of the appellant's agents, including Jaswalla in that category. There is also no question that it is as a result of these representations that the complainant parted with his money on three different dates. It has been found that the representations were made without being supported by the requisite facts and that this was so to the knowledge of the appellant and that the representations were so made with an initial dishonest intention. On these facts it is clear that all the ingredients necessary for finding the offence of cheating under S. 420 read with S. 415 have occurred at Bombay. In that sense the entire offence was committed at Bombay and not merely the consequence viz., delivery of money which was one of the ingredients of the offence.

(10)(viii) Jurisdiction (contd.)

The place of trial was, therefore, Bombay. Mobarik Ali Ahmed v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857: 1958 SCR 328: 1957 Cri LJ 1346, 1356.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1957]

[10479] — S. 420 — Presentation and encashment of a false bill by a clerk of an office as a bill of the office — Offence held covered by Item 3 of Schedule to West Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949 and exclusively triable by Special Court. Sunil Kumar Paul v. State of W.B., AIR 1965 SC 706: (1964) 7 SCR 70: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 630.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1964]

[10480] — Ss. 420 and 406 — Territorial jurisdiction of a court/Judicial Magistrate to entertain criminal matter — Determination of — Offences of cheating and criminal misappropriation — Considering S. 178 CrPC, held, commission of even a part of offence within the jurisdiction of the court/Magistrate concerned, is sufficient for exercise of jurisdiction by the said court/Magistrate in relation to the offence committed — Fraudulent representation being one of the essential ingredients of the offence of cheating, the person accused of cheating could be prosecuted at the place where such fraudulent representation was made — As regards the offence of criminal misappropriation, the court within whose jurisdiction the property had been entrusted or was to be accounted for could take the cognizance — Appellant Company, having its place of business at place C (i.e. Calcutta), filing a criminal complaint under S. 156(3) CrPC before Judicial Magistrate at C seeking direction for investigation in several offences of cheating, criminal misappropriation, etc. committed by its agents in another State i.e. State of U.P. — Agents admitting that reconciliation of accounts took place at C — Held, if there was a fraudulent representation by accused at C and a conspiracy was hatched there to commit the offences, a part of cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of Magistrate at C — On facts, the said Magistrate directing the police concerned to investigate the said offences had jurisdiction in relation to those offences in terms of S. 178 r/w S. 181(4) CrPC — High Court (functioning in State of U.P.) erred in interfering with the said order by transferring the investigation to State of U.P. where major part of offences took place — Since order of High Court had been complied with, certain necessary directions issued by Supreme Court in the matter — Constitution of India, Art. 142 — Exercise of power under, to subserve the interest of justice where an improper order of High Court transferring the investigation from one State to another was complied with — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 178, 181(4) & 156(3)

The appellant was awarded contracts for exporting wheat, rice, etc. upon purchasing the same from Food Corporation of India and certain other State Corporations. Respondents 1 and 2 allegedly approached him for appointment as its agent to arrange and supply foodgrains of Food Corporation of India on commission basis. Pursuant to the said agreement, Respondent 1 under the direction of Respondent 2 used to make arrangement of railway rakes at different railway stations in various States for export of rice and wheat from Food Corporation of India to Bangladesh for and on behalf of the appellant. Allegedly, in the course of rendition of such services, the respondents committed various acts of breach of trust, cheating, forgery, etc. Hence, a complaint petition was filed under Section 156(3) CrPC by the appellant Company before the Chief

Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. In that complaint it was alleged that the accused entered into a criminal conspiracy with a view to cheat the complainant Company and/or dishonestly misappropriate a huge amount by making forged and false documents. The accused fraudulently prepared the letterheads and seals of the appellant and used the same. They, thus, committed breach of trust and withdrew an amount of about Rs 1.5 crores.

The said purported acts were committed outside the State of West Bengal and principally in the State of U.P. Various other criminal misconducts were also said to have been committed by the accused in the State of U.P.

The Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta upon consideration of the said complaint directed the officer in charge of the police station concerned to make an investigation into the allegations contained in the complaint. Pursuant to the said direction, investigation was carried out. As the respondents did not appear before the court, warrants of arrest were issued by the said Magistrate. Thereafter, the respondents filed a criminal writ petition before the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad. The High Court allowed the said writ petition in part. While declining to quash the FIR, the High Court directed that the FIR lodged at the Calcutta police station be transmitted to the appropriate police station of U.P. Further direction was made that the investigating officer concerned would make all efforts to conclude the investigation preferably within a period of three months from the date of receipt of transmitted FIR. That apart, the arrest of the accused was stayed till the submission of charge-sheet/final report, if any. Hence, the present appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant complainant submitted that the High Court committed a manifest error in passing the impugned judgment insofar as it failed to take into consideration the effect and purport of Section 181(4) CrPC which categorically provides that a court within whose local jurisdiction the property was to be accounted for by the accused persons will also have jurisdiction to try the case. Further, the respondents having made false representations at Calcutta, a part of the offence must be held to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. It was contended that the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta having exercised its judicial power not only by issuing a direction in terms of Section 156(3) CrPC but also issuing a non-bailable warrant of arrest, the Allahabad High Court had no territorial jurisdiction to interfere therewith, as the said Court was not under its supervisory jurisdiction. It was further argued that only because a part of cause of action had arisen within the State of U.P., the same by itself would not entitle the respondents to pray for transfer of investigation from one State to the other. The High Court had no jurisdiction to transfer the investigation of a criminal case from one statutory authority to another in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India or otherwise.

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

The necessary ingredients for proving a criminal offence must exist in a complaint petition. Such ingredients of offence must be referable to the places where the cause of action in regard to commission of offence has arisen. A cause of action as understood in its ordinary parlance may be relevant for exercise of jurisdiction under clause (2) of Article 226 of the Constitution of India but its definition stricto sensu may not be applicable for the purpose of bringing home a charge of criminal offence. (Para 23)

Section 178 CrPC clearly suggest that even if a part of cause of action has arisen, the police station concerned situate within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance under Section 190(1) CrPC will have the jurisdiction to make investigation. (Paras 20 and 22)

Further, as regards commission of offence of criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust, Section 181(4) CrPC provides that such an offence may be inquired into or tried by the court within whose jurisdiction the accused was bound by law or by contract to render accounts or return the entrusted property, but failed to discharge that obligation. (Para 21)

Fraudulent representation being one of the essential ingredients in respect of commission of an offence under Section 420 IPC, a place where such fraudulent misrepresentation has been made would, thus, give rise to a cause of action for prosecuting the accused. Similarly, having regard to the ingredients of an offence under Section 406 IPC where the entrustments were made as also the situs where the offence was completed in the sense that the amount entrusted had not been accounted for by the agent to the principal will also have a nexus so as to enable the court concerned to exercise its jurisdiction of taking cognizance. (Para 29)

(10)(viii) Jurisdiction (contd.)

The application filed by the appellant under Section 156(3) CrPC disclosed commission of a large number of offences. The fact that major part of the offences took place outside the jurisdiction of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta is not in dispute. But, even if a part of the offence committed by the respondents related to the appellant Company was committed within the jurisdiction of the said court, the High Court of Allahabad should not have interfered in the matter. A major part of the cause of action might have arisen in the State of U.P., but the same by itself would not mean that the Calcutta Court had no jurisdiction whatsoever. If there had been a fraudulent misrepresentation by some of the respondents at Calcutta and a conspiracy was hatched to commit offences of cheating or misappropriation, indisputably a part of cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. (Paras 23, 33 and 25)

Thus, the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta had jurisdiction in the matter in terms of Section 178 read with Section 181(4) CrPC. (Para 29)

However, the order passed by the Allahabad High Court has been complied with. Some offences at various places situated within the State of U.P. had been committed. The High Court had not issued any direction as to which investigating officer attached to which police station of U.P. will have jurisdiction in the matter. The direction of the High Court, in that way is vague and indefinite. Investigating officer attached to one police station may feel handicapped in carrying out the investigation within the entire State. In this case, it may be necessary for the investigating officer to make investigation even in other States for the aforementioned purpose. (Para 36)

Therefore, by exercising extraordinary jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution to subserve the interest of justice, the appeal is disposed of with directions that (i) further investigation must be carried out by CB CID of the State of U.P., (ii) the accused must surrender before the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Allahabad and their applications for grant of bail, if any, may be considered by the said court on its own merits, (iii) investigation must be carried out inter alia on the premise that the jurisdiction to make investigation would be subject to the ultimate decision of the Court of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta as if investigations are being carried out by CB CID of the State of U.P. in continuation of the investigation made by the police officer of Calcutta, and (iv) the report on completion of the investigation must be forwarded to the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta who would determine the question of his own jurisdiction at an appropriate stage. (Para 38). Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31: AIR 2007 SC 1925: 2007 Cri LJ 3181: (2007) 104 Cut LT 488: (2007) 4 All LJ 567: (2007) 54 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2007]

Mosaraf Hossain Khan v. Bhagheeratha Engg. Ltd., (2006) 3 SCC 658: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 98, relied on

Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 7 SCC 640: 2001 SCC (Cri) 215, held distinguished

[10481] — Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511 — Police agency that has jurisdiction — Territorial jurisdiction of CBI to initiate prosecution — Offences under Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468 and 417 r/w S. 511 IPC allegedly committed by candidate in examination conducted by UPSC in a State — In such circumstances, the mere fact that the head office of UPSC was located at New Delhi, held, could not confer jurisdiction on CBI to invoke the 1946 Act in a criminal case lodged by Secretary, UPSC against the said candidate — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Preamble and Ss. 1, 3 and 5 (Paras 15 and 10). M. Balakrishna Reddy v. CBI, (2008) 4 SCC 409: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 391: AIR 2008 SC 1754: (2008) 66 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

[10482] — Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511 — Territorial jurisdiction of CBI to initiate prosecution — Offences under Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468 and 417 r/w S. 511 IPC allegedly committed in a State in an examination by a candidate who was an employee of the Central Government — In such circumstances the mere fact that the delinquent candidate was an employee of the Central Government, held, could not confer jurisdiction on CBI to invoke the 1946 Act — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Preamble and Ss. 1, 3 and 5 (Paras 15 and 11). M. Balakrishna Reddy v. CBI, (2008) 4 SCC 409: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 391: AIR 2008 SC 1754: (2008) 66 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

(ix) Juvenile accused

[10483] — Ss. 420, 415, 418 & 25 — Commission of fraud on investors by promoters of company — Liability of promoters who were minors — Unsustainability of — Held, as the appellants were minors at the relevant time, they could not have entered into the contract in view of S. 11 of the Contract Act, 1872 — Thus, they being not party to fraud, they could not have been subjected to penalty under the SEBI Act — It was promoter S i.e. father of appellant minors who committed fraud in names of appellants — Hence, held, S himself should have been proceeded against not only for commission of act of fraud on his own behalf but also on behalf of minors — Contention that offence was continuing one, rejected — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 11, 10 & 17 — SEBI (Prohibition of Fraudulent and Unfair Trade Practices relating to Securities Markets) Regulations, 1995 — Regns. 4 to 6 & 11 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 62, 63 and 68 — SEBI Act, 1992, Ss. 11(2)(e), 11-B, 24, 27 & S. 15-HA (inserted post the event). Ritesh Agarwal v. SEBI, (2008) 8 SCC 205: (2008) 144 Comp Cas 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

(x) Limitation

[10484] — Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474 — Offences under — Quashing of complaint by High Court on the ground that it was filed belatedly — Legality — Bar of limitation under S. 468 CrPC — Applicability of — Most of the offences in question punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding three years — Hence held, bar of limitation not attracted — Further, if the effect of delay, if any, in instituting the complaint was necessary to be determined for considering the merits of the charge, that could only be done at the stage of trial on the basis of the evidence on record — Accordingly, High Court's order set aside — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 468 (Para 6). Harnam Singh v. Everest Construction Co., (2004) 6 SCC 754: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[10485] — Ss. 420, 468 and 127 — Limitation — Commencement of — Suit against termination of service — Temporary employee charged with cheating and forgery for producing false certificates and placed under suspension — Independent of that action, his services terminated in exercise of statutory power under R. 5 of the Central Government Services (Temporary Service) Rules, 1949 — Criminal proceedings ultimately ending in acquittal — Even in such circumstances, the period of limitation to file a suit for declaring the termination order to be unconstitutional, held, commenced on the date of termination of the service and not on the date of acquittal — Hence, on expiry of three years from that date the said employee lost his right to sue for the said declaration — Central Government Services (Temporary Service) Rules, 1949, R. 5 — Limitation Act, 1963 — S. 3 and Art. 58. Ministry of Works & Housing Govt. of India v. Mohinder Singh Jagdev, (1996) 6 SCC 229.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1996]

State of Punjab v. Gurdev Singh, (1991) 4 SCC 1: 1991 SCC (L&S) 1082: (1991) 17 ATC 287, affirmed

Babu Lal v. State of Haryana, (1991) 2 SCC 335: 1991 SCC (L&S) 488: (1991) 16 ATC 481; State of M.P. v. Syed Qamarali, 1967 SLR 228 (SC), distinguished

Impliedly overruled in (2004) 2 SCC 747

(xi) Quashment

See also '(3)(v) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist', and

'(6)(vi) Mens rea — If civil offence(s) only — Dishonest intention when must exist', above

See also S. 482 CrPC, 1973 '(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc.', and

'(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies'

'(11)(xxii) Quashment re taxation offences', in Vol. 18, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 2 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[10486] — Ss. 415, 418, 420 and 120-B — Quashing of complaint or charge-sheet — Scope of High Court's jurisdiction — Mere fact that the offence was committed during the course of a commercial transaction by itself not sufficient to quash the complaint — For quashing the complaint Court has to see whether on the fact situation 'civic profile' outweighs the 'criminal outfit' — Commission of offence under Ss. 120-B, 418, 415 and 420 r/w 34 IPC by respondent in the course of a contractual transaction alleged — Held, on facts, in the factual matrix quashing of complaint not warranted — Complaint has to be examined as a whole without going into merits of the allegations made therein — If a prima facie case is made out disclosing the ingredients of the offence alleged against the accused, Court should not quash the complaint — But if the allegations do not constitute any offence as alleged and appear to be patently absurd and improbable, Court should not hesitate to quash the complaint — Court's approach should, however, be very circumspect, cautious and careful — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

The respondents approached the appellant for the purpose of securing ethambutol hydrochloride drug in bulk for sale and use in various pharmaceutical drugs and products being manufactured by the respondent Company. The appellant has come out with a definite case that by reason of a promise of maintaining a continuous supply of raw materials to the appellant for the purpose of manufacturing ethambutol hydrochloride and in such a way so as not to cause any interruption or hindrance to the manufacturing activity of the appellant-complainant's factory, the complainant entered into an agreement. On failure to comply with that agreement the appellant filed a complaint alleging to have lost a substantial amount of money to the extent of about rupees one crore and the sufferance of loss has been by reason of specific assurance and representation which turned out to be false. Misrepresentation on the part of the accused-respondent persons to the complainant, had been the major grievance and a definite and specific case had been made out that such a misrepresentation was intentionally effected since the accused persons were in the know of things that in the event the supplies were not effected, as per the agreement, the complainant was likely to suffer a wrongful loss which in the interest of the transaction between the parties, the accused persons were bound to protect. Proceedings were initiated against the respondents under Sections 120-B, 418, 415 and 420 read with Section 34 IPC. Against the said proceedings the respondents moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. A Single Judge of the High Court taking the view that the complaint did not disclose any offence allowed the petition for quashing the complaint. Allowing the appeal of the complainant,

Held :

Exercise of jurisdiction under the inherent power as envisaged in Section 482 of the Code to have the complaint or the charge-sheet quashed is an exception rather than a rule and the case for quashing at the initial stage must have to be treated as rarest of rare so as not to scuttle the prosecution. With the lodgement of first information report the ball is set to roll and thenceforth the law takes its own course and the investigation ensues in accordance with the provisions of law. The jurisdiction as such is rather limited and restricted and its undue expansion is neither practicable nor warranted. In the event, however, the court on a perusal of the complaint comes to a conclusion that the allegations levelled in the complaint or charge-sheet on the face of it do not constitute or disclose any offence as alleged, there ought not to be any hesitation to rise up to the expectation of the people and deal with the situation as is required under the law. To exercise powers under Section 482 of the Code, the complaint in its entirety will have to be examined on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint and the High Court at that stage has no authority or jurisdiction to go into the matter or examine its correctness. Whatever appears on the face of the complaint shall be taken into consideration without any critical examination of the same. But the offence ought to appear ex facie on the complaint. The truth or falsity of the allegations would not be gone into by the Court at this earliest stage. Whether or not the allegations in the complaint were true is to be decided on the basis of the evidence led at the trial. So the question is: Can it be said that the allegations in the complaint do not make out any case against the accused nor do they disclose the ingredients of an offence alleged against the accused or the allegations are patently absurd and inherently improbable so that no prudent person can ever reach to such a conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused? (Paras 2, 14 and 15)

The factual matrix would be relevant in the matter of assessment of the situation as to whether "civic profile" would outweigh the "criminal outfit". (Para 3)

In the matter of exercise of the High Court's inherent power, the only requirement is to see whether continuance of the proceeding would be a total abuse of the process of court. The Criminal Procedure Code contains a detailed procedure for investigation, charge and trial, and in the event the High Court is desirous of putting a stop to the known procedure of law, the High Court must use a proper circumspection and very great care and caution to quash the complaint in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. (Para 16)

While Section 415 is an offence of cheating, Section 418 deals with cheating with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to a person whose interest the offender is bound to protect and Section 420 is cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property. In order to attract the provisions of Sections 418 and 420 the guilty intent, at the time of making the promise is a requirement and an essential ingredient thereto and subsequent failure to fulfil the promise by itself would not attract the provisions of Section 418 or Section 420. Mens rea is one of the essential ingredients of the offence of cheating under Section 420. As a matter of fact

Illustration (g) to Section 415 makes the position clear enough to indicate that mere failure to deliver in breach of an agreement would not amount to cheating but is liable only to a civil action for breach of contract and it is this concept which obviously has weighed with the Single Judge. But considering the factual aspect of the matter it must be held that the issue involved in this case is not one in which the criminal trial should have been short-circuited. (Paras 11 and 19). Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615: AIR 2000 SC 1869: 2000 Cri LJ 1487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2000]

Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; L.V. Jadhav v. Shankarrao Abasaheb Pawar, (1983) 4 SCC 231: 1983 SCC (Cri) 813; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Nagpur Steel & Alloys (P) Ltd. v. P. Radhakrishna, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1073; Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516, relied on

Dr. Sharma's Nursing Home v. Delhi Admn., (1998) 8 SCC 745: 1999 SCC (Cri) 91, distinguished

[10487] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Petition under S. 482 CrPC for quashing of criminal complaint under Ss. 415/420 IPC — High Court directing the CJM, with whom the matter was pending for disposal on merits, to consider all the objections raised by the petitioner and to pass a reasoned order — Petitioner-appellant then filing objections before CJM and seeking dropping of the proceeding — By a reasoned order CJM rejecting the application taking the view that summons should be issued to the accused — Appellant once again moving the High Court under S. 482 CrPC — High Court disposing of the petition with the observation that the applicant shall have right to raise all the grounds at the time of framing of charge — Held, High Court was not justified in declining to exercise its jurisdiction and adjudicating the matter on merits — Objection regarding maintainability of the complaint need not always be raised only at the time of framing the charge — Matter remitted to High Court for disposal afresh — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

On an earlier occasion when the appellant had moved the High Court, the High Court had directed the CJM, to consider the objections raised by the appellant and to pass a reasoned order. Thereafter, the CJM, passed an order overruling the objections and decided to proceed with the case. When the appellant approached the High Court again against the speaking order passed by the CJM, the High Court once again declined to decide the petition on merits, but left it to be raised before the trial court at the time of framing the charge. Now, raising the very same objections at the time of framing the charge would practically be an empty formality as the trial court had already taken a definite view in the matter. The High Court in passing the impugned order has virtually ignored the spirit behind the direction given and observations made in the earlier order. There is no hard-and-fast rule that the objection as to cognizability of offence and maintainability of the complaint should be allowed to be raised only at the time of framing the charge. Such was not the intention of the High Court in passing the earlier order. The determination of the question as regards the propriety of the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance and issuing process need not necessarily wait till the stage of framing the charge. It may be that in a given case it would be more appropriate and proper to raise objections of this nature at the time of the charge-framing, but this is not a case of that nature, especially looking at the observations made in the earlier order of the High Court. Therefore, the subsequent order of the High Court is set aside and the matter is remitted back to the High Court for fresh disposal of the petition for a decision expeditiously. As the High Court declined to express any view on the crucial question whether the alleged offence has been made out, it is not appropriate and proper to undertake the task of deciding the question which the High Court ought to have decided. (Paras 8 and 9). Kunstocom Electronics (I) (P) Ltd. v. Gilt Pack Ltd., (2002) 2 SCC 383: 2002 SCC (Cri) 336: AIR 2002 SC 739: 2002 Cri LJ 1012.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2002]

Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1704, relied on

[10488] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Powers of High Court under, for quashing criminal proceedings — Pendency of civil suit in respect of same subject-matter — Effect — Held, jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC can be exercised in a case where a civil suit is also pending between the parties in respect of the same subject-matter and contrary stand is taken by the complainant in the civil suit — When contrary stands are taken by a party in civil and the criminal courts, it assumes significance — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The parties hereto entered into an agreement for sale in respect of a house, a sale deed was also executed on 30-9-2005 by the appellant herein. Indisputably on or about 29-9-2005, two rooms, allegedly, constructed on the said lands were demolished. A suit was filed in relation thereto. Respondent 1 who was also defendant in the said suit did not allege that she has been cheated by the appellant herein but later on filed a complaint in the court alleging commission of an offence by the appellant purported to be under Section 420 IPC. A petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint had been dismissed by the High Court.

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

The short question which arose for consideration was as to whether a case of cheating within the meaning of Section 415 of the Penal Code had been made out or not.

Answering in negative and allowing the appeal,

Held :

While executing the sale deed, the appellant did not make any false or misleading representation. There had also not been any dishonest act of inducement on his part to do or omit to do anything which he could not have done or omitted to have done if he were not so deceived. Admittedly, the matter is pending before a competent civil court. A decision of a competent court of law is required to be taken in this behalf. Essentially, the dispute between the parties is a civil dispute. (Para 12)

For the purpose of establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. In a case of this nature, it is permissible in law to consider the stand taken by a party in a pending civil litigation. This does not mean that the liability of a person cannot be both civil and criminal at the same time. But when a stand has been taken in a complaint petition which is contrary to or inconsistent with the stand taken by him in a civil suit, it assumes significance. Had the fact as purported to have been represented before the Supreme Court that the appellant got the said two rooms demolished and concealed the said fact at the time of execution of the deed of sale, the matter might have been different. As the deed of sale was executed on 30-9-2005 and the purported demolition took place on 29-9-2005, it was expected that the complainant/first respondent would come out with her real grievance in the written statement filed by her in the aforementioned suit. She, for reasons best known to her, did not choose to do so. In this view of the matter, in the facts and circumstances obtaining herein, no case has been made out for proceeding with the criminal case. (Paras 13 and 14). B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107: AIR 2008 SC 210: 2008 Cri LJ 431.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 746; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121, relied on

[10489] — Ss. 415 and 420 — Quashing of complaint or FIR — Cheating alleged — Criminal prosecution, held, cannot be thwarted merely because a civil proceedings are also maintainable — Existence of an arbitration clause in the contract for supply of goods between appellant Company and another company, held, not a sufficient ground for quashing the complaint filed by the appellant against the supplier company alleging cheating by supplying inferior goods — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

The Chairman of the appellant Company filed a complaint before the Judicial Magistrate of the First Class alleging that the directors of another company offered to supply "toasted soyabean extractions" for a price higher than the market price. The appellant had to pay the price in advance as demanded by the accused. So the same was paid through cheques. But the accused sent the commodity which was of the most inferior and sub-standard quality, thereby the complainant suffered a loss of Rs 17 lakhs. According to the appellant he was induced to pay the price on the representation that the best quality commodity would be supplied and the price was paid on such representation. But by supplying the most inferior quality the accused deceived the complainant. The Magistrate forwarded the complaint of the appellant for investigation as per his order passed under Section 156(3) CrPC. The accused Directors thereupon moved the High Court of Gujarat under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. The respondent's counsel in the High Court put forward mainly two contentions. The first was that the dispute was purely of a civil nature and hence no prosecution should have been permitted, and the second was that the Judicial Magistrate of the First Class had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint. On the first count the Single Judge pointed out that there was a specific clause in the memorandum of understanding arrived at between the parties that disputes, if any, arising between them in respect of any transaction could be resolved through arbitration. The High Court took the view that the question whether the complainant Company did suffer the loss as alleged by it are matters to be adjudicated by the civil court and cannot be the subject-matter of criminal prosecution. The Single Judge also accepted the alternative contention regarding want of jurisdiction of the Magistrate. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Quashing of FIR or a complaint in exercise of the inherent powers of the High Court should be limited to very extreme exceptions. Merely because an act has a civil profile is not sufficient to denude it of its criminal outfit. The provision incorporated in the agreement for referring the disputes to arbitration is not an effective substitute for a criminal prosecution when the disputed act is an offence. Arbitration is a remedy for affording reliefs to the party affected by breach of the agreement but the arbitrator cannot conduct a trial of any act which amounted to an offence albeit the same act may be connected with the discharge of any function under the agreement. Hence, those are not good reasons for the High Court to axe down the complaint at the threshold itself. The investigating agency should have had the freedom to go into the whole gamut of the allegations and to reach a conclusion of its own. Pre-emption of such investigation would be justified only in very extreme cases. (Paras 7 to 9). Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: AIR 1999 SC 3499: 1999 Cri LJ 4325.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259, relied on

Followed in Sri Krishna Agencies v. State of A.P., (2009) 1 SCC 69*

[10490] — Ss. 419, 467, 420 and 120-B — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Power of High Court to interfere with the investigation — Limitations and factors to be considered — FIR u/Ss. 419, 467, 420 and 120-B IPC filed against respondents (two private persons) and 6 revenue officers for committing forgery of assessment order of compensation payable under Bihar Land Reforms Act and misappropriating govt. money — High Court quashed entire investigation against respondents — Held, the extraordinary power under Article 226 or inherent power under Section 482 CrPC can be exercised by the High Court either to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice — Such power should be exercised sparingly and with circumspection and that too in rarest of the rare cases — In view of the settled law, where there were specific allegations in FIR against the accused persons disclosing commission of a cognizable offence, High Court erred in interfering with the investigation against the accused respondents — Constitution of India, Art. 226 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The respondents, two persons, on being helped in an illegal manner by the revenue officers committed the forgery of the assessment order of compensation payable under the Bihar Land Reforms Act and misappropriated the govt. money. The State impugned herein the judgment of the High Court which quashed the entire investigation against the respondents.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Law is well settled regarding interference by the High Court with an investigation of a case. The extraordinary power under Article 226 or inherent power under Section 482 CrPC can be exercised by the High Court either to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The power of quashing a criminal proceeding should be exercised sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of the rare cases. (Paras 4 and 7)

Thus, where specific allegations were made in the FIR and a prima facie case was made out against the accused persons including the respondents disclosing a cognizable offence, the High Court committed a grave error in quashing the entire proceedings against the respondents. (Para 8). State of Bihar v. Mohd. Khalique, (2002) 1 SCC 652: 2002 SCC (Cri) 228: 2002 Cri LJ 553: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 28.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-2001]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed [10491] — S. 420 — Delay as a ground for quashing the prosecution — Case registered for cheating on December 30, 1958 and charge-sheet filed in court on November 20, 1959 — But for separate offences single charge framed by Magistrate — High Court accepting revision on July 27, 1977 and remanding for separate charges — Appeal by State to Supreme Court — Held, in view of the inordinate delay in commencing the trial it would be a travesty of justice to permit the prosecution to continue — Hence prosecution quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — CrPC, 1898 — S. 561-A. State of U.P. v. Parshottam, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 124: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1016: AIR 1991 SC 1015: 1991 Cri LJ 741.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[10492] — S. 420 — Prosecution under, held, permissible despite pendency of a civil suit in related matter — Criminal proceedings initiated against the accused for offence under S. 420 IPC, held, were wrongly quashed by the High Court merely on the ground of pendency of a civil suit for specific performance in the matter concerned — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482. Vitoori Pradeep Kumar v. Kaisula Dharmaiah, (2002) 9 SCC 581: 2001 Cri LJ 4948.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2000]

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

[10493] — S. 420 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Ground — Abuse of process of court — Cognizance taken of offence under S. 420 IPC — Ingredients of offence in question conspicuously lacking in the complaint — On facts, held, allowing the criminal proceedings to go on against the appellant, would result in abuse of the process of the court — Hence, proceedings against the appellant quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Constitution of India, Art. 136

Except using the expressions "fraudulent misappropriation" and "mala fide intention", the allegations in the complaint do not at all disclose as to how the appellant can be found guilty of the offence under Section 420 IPC. The ingredients constituting Section 420 are conspicuously lacking in the complaint. All the courts have failed to address themselves to the crucial question whether as far as the appellant is concerned any offence under Section 420 or for that matter any offence under Section 409 has been committed. Even going by the allegations in the complaint, allowing the criminal proceedings to go on against the appellant, would result in abuse of the process of the court. Hence, the proceedings against the appellant are quashed. (Para 5). Vijaya Rao v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 7 SCC 69: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1600.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2005]

[10494] — S. 420 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Offence under S. 420 alleged — Allegation in complaint that the complainant supplied material to the accused on unequivocal assurance given by him and accepted cheque which was later dishonoured for lack of funds — Held, merely because the alleged offence was committed during the course of a commercial transaction the High Court was not justified in quashing the complaint — Whether or not the allegations in the complaint were true is to be decided on the basis of the evidence led at the trial — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482. Nagpur Steel & Alloys (P) Ltd. v. P. Radhakrishna, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1073.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1997]

[10495] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Bar to criminal proceedings, if any — Offence under Ss. 420 and 120-B IPC, as well as S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act — Held, taking cognizance of criminal proceedings is not barred under the RBI Act — Bar under Ss. 45-QA and 58-E of the RBI Act applies only to offences committed under the RBI Act — High Court, held, rightly acted by not quashing the order of cognizance taken by the criminal court — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934 — Ss. 45-QA and 58-E. Prudential Capital Mkt. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 539: 2001 SCC (Cri) 644: AIR 2000 SC 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2000]

[10496] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Quashing of criminal proceedings without notice to original complainant — Held, unsustainable — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

It is uncontroverted that proceedings under Section 156(3) CrPC for offences under Sections 420/120-B IPC against the respondent-accused had been quashed under Section 482 CrPC without notice to the appellant, who was the original complainant. The impugned order was, therefore, set aside and remitted back to the High Court for a fresh decision in accordance with law. (Para 4). Mosiruddin Munshi v. Mohd. Siraj, (2008) 8 SCC 434: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 525: (2008) 67 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2008]

[10497] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Where dispute purely civil in nature whether offence under S. 420 or S. 120-B of Penal Code cannot be said to have been made out — Held, it may be true that in the event court finds that dispute between parties is civil in nature, it may not allow criminal proceedings to go on — But, no law as such can be laid down, since in a given case both civil suit and criminal complaint would be maintainable although the cause of action for both the proceedings is the same (Paras 12 and 13). V.R. Dalal v. Yougendra Naranji Thakkar, (2008) 15 SCC 625: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1141: AIR 2008 SC 2793: (2008) 66 AIC 113 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2008]

Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49, considered

[10498] — Ss. 420, 120-B and 34 — Quashment of proceedings — Evaluation of plausibility/credibility of averments in complaint — Permissibility — Doubt as to the same, held, must be based on some material — High Court cannot quash complaint if allegations prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — Complaint alleging sale of cooperative society land illegally for higher price but showing lesser price in records and conspiracy to cheat society and its members — High Court quashing entire criminal proceedings holding that averments in complaint were "imaginary" — Sustainability — In present case, allegations in complaint disclose conspiracy to put cooperative society and its members to loss in view of report of Registrar and hence prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — High Court's conclusion that averments in complaint are imaginary is not based on any material — Hence, judgment of High Court is unsustainable — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now a well-settled principle of law that the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code may quash a criminal proceeding inter alia in the event the allegations made in the complaint petition even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not disclose commission of a cognizable offence. (Para 14)

The opinion of the High Court that the averments made in the complaint petition are imaginary is not based on any material. Even assuming that the complainant had a score to settle against the accused, the same by itself may not be a ground to quash the entire criminal proceedings particularly in view of the fact that at least a prima facie case has been established in view of the report of the Registrar. (Para 22)

The allegations made in the complaint petition disclose commission of a cognizable offence. A conspiracy is said to have been entered into for putting the Society and consequentially the members to a great loss. A conspiracy is also said to have been hatched for the aforementioned purpose as a result whereof not only an allotment was made in favour of a person who was not entitled thereto but also the allotted plot was assigned in favour of a third party for a huge sum. Whether the allegations made in the complaint petition are correct or not have to be considered during trial. It may be true that the question as to whether the report of the Registrar can be relied upon for the purpose of showing as to how the act of cheating has been committed by the respondents is a matter which must be considered at the time of trial but there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that so long as the report is not set aside, the same could form the basis for forming of an opinion at least for the purpose of proceeding against the respondents that they manipulated the records of the cooperative Society to make unlawful gain for themselves and causing unlawful loss to the Society. (Paras 16, 17 and 19). K. Ashoka v. N.L. Chandrashekar, (2009) 5 SCC 199: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 730: (2009) 77 AIC 58 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 2952.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, followed

[10499] — Ss. 420 and 201 r/w S. 120-B — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Material collected by investigating agency not gone through by High Court — Offences under Ss. 420, 201 r/w S. 120-B IPC as well as under Ss. 13(1) and 13(2), Prevention of Corruption Act — Proceedings quashed by High Court on the ground that accused persons have been exonerated of the charges in departmental proceedings conducted for the same cause of action — Held, before quashing the proceedings, High Court ought to have considered the aforesaid material so as to find out if the charges could be framed against the accused on the basis of it — Order passed by High Court set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1) and 13(2) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482. State of Bihar v. Purushottam Singh, (2002) 10 SCC 333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2000]

[10500] — Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B — Quashing of complaint — Complaints alleging commission of offences under Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B IPC, etc. — Held, no prima facie case made out against appellants in respect of alleged offences under Ss. 420 and 406 IPC, hence question of alleged conspiracy between appellants does not arise — Complaint lacks any such substance regarding conspiracy — It was a fit case where High Court should have exercised its jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC — Complaint case, quashed (Paras 8 to 10, 14, 15 and 39 to 41). V.P. Shrivastava v. Indian Explosives Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 361: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2010]

All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Dinesh Dutt Joshi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 570: 2002 SCC (Cri) 24; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, relied on [10501] — Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B — Quashment — Relevant considerations — Results of/material collected during preliminary investigations — Offences in relation to civil dispute — Though FIR disclosing only a pure civil case, preliminary investigations revealing offences under Ss. 406 and 120-B IPC and under RBI Act, 1934 — Effect — But High Court going by contents of FIR alone holding that S. 420 IPC not attracted and that it was a simple breach of contract and pure civil dispute and therefore quashing FIR — Sustainability — Held, materials collected during preliminary investigations are relevant — Hence quashment of FIR not sustainable — Fair and impartial investigation directed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482 and 154

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

Respondent 1, accused was the Director of a Company, which floated a car buying and rental scheme, whereby, it promised to give its investors (investing a sum of Rs 97,907), a monthly rent of Rs 4000 and also give an option to the investor to take back his car at the end of sixty months. Respondent 2 complainant invested in the scheme, got his monthly rent of Rs 4000 as agreed upon but when after the expiry of sixty months, he demanded back his car, it was not given. Instead the Company gave Respondent 2 post-dated cheques amounting to Rs 25,000, Rs 20,000 and Rs 10,000. Respondent 2, therefore, filed an FIR, which however, was quashed under Section 482 CrPC by the impugned judgment of the High Court.

Grounds taken in the memorandum of SLP revealed that during investigations statements of various witnesses had been recorded. Public at large, especially middle class and lower class people had invested their hard-earned money in the scheme. It was also complained of by an investor that no vehicle had been purchased in his name. Statements of witnesses during preliminary investigations also revealed that the Company had resorted to false registrations of vehicles in the name of investors which were actually owned and registered by non-investors who had no link with the Company. For instance, as per the statement of a non-investor his Maruti Esteem car was shown in the Company data as being registered in the name of an investor.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There cannot be any doubt or dispute whatsoever that a simple breach of contract or a case involving a pure civil dispute would not attract any offence either under Section 406 or Section 420 IPC. Had the dispute between the parties rested on the aforementioned premise, interference with the judgment of the High Court probably would not have been warranted. The petition of the complainant did not disclose any criminal offence at all much less any offence either under Section 420 or Section 120-B IPC. It was purely civil in nature. But then, certain evidences surfaced during investigation which are disclosed in the grounds stated in the memo of this appeal. (Paras 13 and 19)

The allegation made in the FIR and the materials collected during investigation, should be allowed to be taken to its logical end. A large number of illegalities were committed by the said Company including the violation of the provisions of the Reserve Bank of India Act. The High Court in its judgment only considered the case from the point of view of Section 420 IPC and not Sections 406 and 120-B thereof. The legal position in regard to exercise of jurisdiction by the High Court for quashing of an FIR is now well settled. The State contended that having regard to the well-settled principle of law, the High Court should not quash an FIR save and except sparingly and in the rarest of rare cases. In the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case and particularly in view of the materials which have surfaced during investigation, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. (Paras 6, 10, 14 and 20)

The investigating officer shall conduct the investigation fairly and impartially and shall allow the Company to carry on its business without any hindrance whatsoever. If any books of account or other documents are required, the investigating officer subject to just exceptions may take the xerox copies thereof duly certified by the accused as also an undertaking that, as and when called upon, they would produce the said books of account in a court of law. Subject to the aforementioned directions, the investigating officer shall carry out the investigation in accordance with law. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Sayed Mohammed Masood, (2009) 8 SCC 787: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 945.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, relied on

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Radha Ballav Pal v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Cal 327; Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; New India Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Sadanand Mukhi, (2009) 2 SCC 417: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 815; Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49, distinguished [10502] — Ss. 420 and 415 — On facts, ingredients to make out an offence under S. 420 not brought out for framing any charge against the appellant — No law point laid down. Prabhat Kumar Bose v. Tarun Kanti Bagchi, AIR 1994 SC 960: 1994 Cri LJ 1211.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, K. Jayachandra Reddy and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1992]

[10503] — Ss. 420, 415, 24 and 25 — Quashment of proceedings — When justified — Offence by company — Ex-Director proceeded against — Where basic ingredients of the offence alleged against accused are altogether absent, held, he should not be compelled to face criminal prosecu- tion — On totality of facts, such being the case, proceedings pending before Magistrate under S. 420 IPC r/w Ss. 3, 4, 5 and 6, Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978 against ex-Director of company which had invited deposits from public but had subsequently closed its business without paying interest and repaying dues of investors, quashed — Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978, Ss. 3 to 6 — Companies Act, 1956, S. 290 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The appellant was one of the Directors of a company. He resigned w.e.f. 27-12-1997. Respondent 2 filed a complaint FIR with the police alleging that the said company had invited deposits from the public and that monies had been invested by Respondent 2 and his wife in the Pensioner's Benefit Fund, pursuant to the approval of the scheme by Reserve Bank of India. That the company had since closed its business without repaying the money due to the complainant. Respondent 2 lodged an FIR alleging offences under Section 420, Penal Code, 1860 read with Sections 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978. Consequent to the FIR, the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate issued a non-bailable warrant against the appellant.

The appellant filed a petition before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of the proceedings on the ground that the appellant could not be held liable for any of the alleged illegalities committed by the company after he had resigned from the company. However, the High Court held that it was for the trial court to ascertain the questions arising in the petition and pass necessary orders. The appellant then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that even according to the averments of the complaint in the first information report there were no allegations whatsoever against the appellant, and the High Court ought to have quashed the proceedings against the appellant.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle the legitimate prosecution but at the same time no person be compelled to face criminal prosecution if basic ingredients of the offence alleged against him are altogether absent. (Para 38)

In the instant case, the appellant ceased to be a Director of the company from 27-12-1997 whereas the alleged offences, if any, were committed during the period from 24-5-1998 to 17-9-1999. There were no allegations against the appellant in the first information report. The company had invited investment from the depositors to invest in the business/benefit funds after receiving due approval of the scheme from Reserve Bank of India. Therefore, in any event, the element of cheating as alleged cannot be made out by any stretch of imagination. [Paras 37(a) to (c)]

Respondent 2 complainant has submitted in writing to that he does not want to proceed against the appellant because according to him the appellant has been inadvertently included as an accused by the investigating officer. He further mentioned in the letter that he had already received 55% of the deposited amount from the Official Liquidator and he did not want to proceed against the appellant. [Para 37(d)]

Even assuming that there could have been a vicarious liability thrust on the appellant, even then there cannot be any such vicarious liability in the absence of any allegations and material to show that the appellant was in charge of or responsible for the conduct of the company's business which had given rise to the offence. From any angle of the matter, the appellant cannot be compelled to face the criminal trial in the present case. [Para 37(e)]

On consideration of the totality of the facts and circumstances of the present case, the proceedings initiated against the appellant are quashed. (Para 39). M.A.A. Annamalai v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 8 SCC 524: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 950: (2010) 158 Comp Cas 369.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2010]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, considered

Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615, considered and relied on

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49; S.V.L. Murthy v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 77: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 941; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370, relied on

[10504] — Ss. 420, 417 and 415 — Quashing of complaint — If averments in complaint prima facie make out a case for investigation the High Court cannot quash the complaint merely because one or two ingredients of the offence have not been stated in detail — Quashing of complaint on ground that the complaint disclosed a commercial or money transaction not justified — Many a cheating is committed in the course of commercial or money transaction — Constitution of India, Art. 226 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 2(d), 154, 155 and 190, 200

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

It is not necessary that a complainant should verbatim reproduce in the body of his complaint all the ingredients of the offence he is alleging. Nor is it necessary that the complainant should state in so many words that the intention of the accused was dishonest or fraudulent. Splitting up of the definition into different components of the offence to make a meticulous scrutiny, whether all the ingredients have been precisely spelled out in the complaint, is not the need at this stage. If factual foundation for the offence has been laid in the complaint the court should not hasten to quash criminal proceedings during investigation stage merely on the premise that one or two ingredients have not been stated with details. For quashing an FIR (a step which is permitted only in extremely rare cases) the information in the complaint must be so bereft of even the basic facts which are absolutely necessary for making out the offence.

It may be that the facts narrated in the present complaint would as well reveal a commercial transaction or money transaction. But that is hardly a reason for holding that the offence of cheating would elude from such a transaction. In fact, many a cheatings were committed in the course of commercial and also money transactions.

The crux of the postulate is the intention of the person who induces the victim of his representation and not the nature of the transaction which would become decisive in discerning whether there was commission of offence or not. The complainant has stated in the body of the complaint that he was induced to believe that the respondent would honour payment on receipt of invoices, and that the complainant realised later that the intentions of the respondent were not clear. He also mentioned that the respondent after receiving the goods had sold them to others and still he did not pay the money. Such averments would prima facie make out a case for investigation by the authorities.

In the present case the High Court seems to have adopted a strictly hypertechnical approach and sieved the complaint through a cullendar of finest gauzes for testing the ingredients under Section 415 IPC. Such an endeavour may be justified during trial, but certainly not during the stage of investigation. At any rate, it is too premature a stage for the High Court to step in and stall the investigation by declaring that it is a commercial transaction simpliciter wherein no semblance of criminal offence is involved. Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 1999 SC 1216: 1999 Cri LJ 1833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

(1998) 3 Chand Cri Cases 238 (P&H), reversed

Distinguished in Anil Ritolla v. State of Bihar, (2007) 10 SCC 110

[10505] — Ss. 420, 423, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B — Proceedings under when abuse of process — Exercise of power under Art. 142 — Relief — Doing substantial justice — Impugned judgment although not sustainable, in view of facts of case and with a view to do substantial justice, interference refused — Parallel sale agreements with respondents and appellants in respect of same property — Consequent to decree in specific performance suit, passed seven long years later, sale deed executed in favour of respondents — Appellants' suit for annulment of said decree dismissed with a finding that sale agreement in favour of respondents was not forged or fabricated — Still six long years after decree in former suit, appellants lodging FIR under Ss. 420/323/467/468/471/120-B IPC against respondents reiterating allegation of forgery as made by them in their civil suit for annulment — High Court quashing FIR on the ground of the finding recorded by court in civil suit — Said judgment of High Court, held, legally not sustainable — However, FIR, in view of unexplained inordinate delay in its filing and that too after losing civil suit, held, not bona fide and amounted to abuse of process of law — Hence, for doing substantial justice, said judgment left undisturbed — Constitution of India, Arts. 142 and 136

One K executed an agreement dated 4-1-1988 to sell the land specified, in favour of the respondents. The land was already mortgaged with the respondents. The sale deed was to be executed and registered by 10-6-1989. According to the appellants herein, on 22-10-1988, K entered into an agreement with their father to sell the same land, and received a certain amount as earnest money. The sale was to be executed and registered by 15-6-1989.

The respondents filed a suit for specific performance of the sale deed against K in 1989 which was decreed in 1996 and in pursuance thereof, the sale was executed by K in favour of the respondents. The father of the appellants filed a suit seeking cancellation/setting aside of the said decree but the same stood dismissed. An appeal filed thereagainst continued to be pending.

In 2002, the father of the appellants filed an FIR under Sections 420/423/467/468/120-B IPC alleging that K's signatures on the agreement to sell dated 4-1-1988 were forged. At the instance of the respondents, the High Court quashed the FIR on the ground that the civil court had recorded a finding that the document in question was not forged or fabricated. The first informants then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Finding the order of the High Court to be not sustainable legally but in the facts and circumstances of the case refusing interference,

Held :

The findings of fact recorded by the civil court do not have any bearing so far as the criminal case is concerned and vice versa. Standard of proof is different in civil and criminal cases. In civil cases it is preponderance of probabilities while in criminal cases it is proof beyond reasonable doubt. There is neither any statutory nor any legal principle that findings recorded by the court either in civil or criminal proceedings shall be binding between the same parties while dealing with the same subject-matter and both the cases have to be decided on the basis of the evidence adduced therein. However, there may be cases where the provisions of Sections 41 to 43 of the Evidence Act, 1872, dealing with the relevance of previous judgments in subsequent cases may be taken into consideration. (Para 18)

No explanation has been furnished as to why after expiry of the date of execution of the sale deed in favour of the appellants' father i.e. 15-6-1989, the appellants' father did not file the suit for specific performance which was subsequently filed on 6-2-1996. Even if it is presumed that he was not aware of the suit filed by the respondents, no explanation could be furnished that in case the appellants' father filed another suit for setting aside the decree passed in the respondents' suit, why did he wait till the decision of that suit for lodging FIR, as the civil and criminal proceedings could have proceeded simultaneously. The FIR was filed only after filing of appeal thereagainst before High Court on 15-7-2002. (Para 20)

Prompt and early reporting of the occurrence by the informant with all its vivid details gives an assurance regarding truth of its version. In case there is some delay in filing the FIR, the complainant must give explanation for the same. Undoubtedly, delay in lodging the FIR does not make the complainant's case improbable when such delay is properly explained. However, deliberate delay in lodging the complaint is always fatal. (Paras 21 and 24)

In cases where there is a delay in lodging an FIR, the court has to look for a plausible explanation for such delay. In the absence of such an explanation, the delay may be fatal. The reason for quashing such proceedings may not be merely that the allegations were an afterthought or had given a coloured version of events. In such cases the court should carefully examine the facts before it for the reason that a frustrated litigant who failed to succeed before the civil court may initiate criminal proceedings just to harass the other side with mala fide intentions or the ulterior motive of wreaking vengeance on the other party. Chagrined and frustrated litigants should not be permitted to give vent to their frustrations by cheaply invoking the jurisdiction of the criminal court. The court proceedings ought not to be permitted to degenerate into a weapon of harassment and persecution. In such a case, where an FIR is lodged clearly with a view to spite the other party because of a private and personal grudge and to enmesh the other party in long and arduous criminal proceedings, the court may take a view that it amounts to an abuse of the process of law in the facts and circumstances of the case. (Para 22)

The appellants' father lodged FIR under Sections 420/423/467/468/471/120-B IPC, against the respondents. The allegations made in the FIR were substantially similar to the allegations made by the appellants in the civil suit which had been decided against them. It is evident that the aforesaid FIR was filed with inordinate delay and there has been no plausible explanation for the same. The appellants lodged the aforesaid FIR only after meeting their Waterloo in the civil court. Thus, it is evident that the FIR was lodged with the sole intention of harassing the respondents and enmeshing them in long and arduous criminal proceedings. Such an action on the part of the appellants' father would not be bona fide, and the criminal proceedings initiated by him against the respondents amount to an abuse of the process of law. (Para 25)

In view of the said facts, and to do substantial justice, it would not be appropriate to interfere with the order passed by the High Court quashing the criminal proceedings against the respondents in spite of the fact that the impugned judgment is not sustainable in the eye of the law. (Para 26). Kishan Singh v. Gurpal Singh, (2010) 8 SCC 775: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1091: AIR 2010 SC 3624: (2010) 94 AIC 35 (SC): (2010) 3 SCC (Civ) 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2010]

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

M.S. Sheriff v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 397: 1954 Cri LJ 1019; K.G. Premshanker v. Inspector of Police, (2002) 8 SCC 87: 2003 SCC (Cri) 223; P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 79; Syed Askari Hadi Ali Augustine Imam v. State (Delhi Admn.), (2009) 5 SCC 528; Vishnu Dutt Sharma v. Daya Sapra, (2009) 13 SCC 729: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1229; Sahib Singh v. State of Haryana, (1997) 7 SCC 231: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1049; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Gorige Pentaiah v. State of A.P., (2008) 12 SCC 531: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 446, relied on

King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1943-44) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, considered

Karam Chand Ganga Prasad v. Union of India, (1970) 3 SCC 694; V.M. Shah v. State of Maharashtra, (1995) 5 SCC 767: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1077, held, overruled [10506] — Ss. 420 and 424 — High Court dismissing writ petition for quashing FIR by applying ratio of the decision by which High Court had previously disposed of large number of cases involving more or less similar prayers to quash FIR in each case — Sustainability — Held, on facts, impugned order of High Court does not show as to how the ratio of decision in a batch of writ petitions disposed by it previously had any application or relevance to the present case — Hence, impugned order of High Court set aside and matter remitted — U.P. Gangsters and Anti-Social Activities (Prevention) Act, 1986 (7 of 1986), Ss. 2 and 3 — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 — Constitution of India, Art. 226 (Paras 2 to 6). Ashfaq Khan v. State of U.P., (2008) 11 SCC 143: 2008 Cri LJ 1598: (2008) 2 All LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2008]

[10507] — Ss. 420 and 467 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Grounds — Abuse of process of court — Dispute purely of civil nature — Absence of ingredients of offences alleged in FIR — A charitable society executing a power of attorney and sale agreement in respect of a land in favour of Respondent 3 — Respondent 3 failing to pay the balance amount in respect of sale in question despite several requests made by appellant office-bearers of the society — Respondents misusing the said deeds for further sale of the property in question — Hence, appellants, after giving due notice to respondents, forfeiting the earnest money and cancelling the said deeds and thereafter selling the part of land in question (which was subject-matter of above sale agreement) to one S to protect the interest of the society — Aggrieved against the said action, Respondent 3 lodging a criminal case against appellants under Ss. 420 and 467 IPC — Held, the present matter was purely a civil dispute — Even taking into account the entire averments made in FIR to be correct, no offence under Ss. 420 and 467 IPC made out against appellants — Hence, filing of criminal case against appellants was an abuse of process of court — In order to secure the ends of justice, it was imperative to quash FIR/criminal proceedings against appellants — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The impugned judgment was passed by the High Court declining to quash the criminal proceedings initiated against the appellants by the respondents.

In 1923, a Sanatan Dharma Pratinidhi Sabha (for short "the Sabha") was founded. The said Sabha was registered in the year 1949 under the Societies Registration Act. In order to develop a ghat on the banks of a river, the Sabha issued an advertisement in the newspapers. It invited bids from the eligible civil contractors to construct the ghat in consideration of 13.5 bighas (approximately) of its land. The ghat was so constructed by Respondent 3. On completion of the construction of the ghat, the Sabha through its President executed a general power of attorney in favour of Respondent 3 in regard to the abovementioned land. A receipt of Rs 17,92,000 lakhs (approximately) was issued by the Sabha to Respondent 3 as an adjustment towards the cost of construction. On the same day the parties executed an agreement to sell the remaining land which was approximately 11.19 bighas. In pursuance to this, an earnest money of Rs 4,00,000 was received by the Sabha from Respondent 3. As per the agreement, Respondent 3 had to pay another Rs 1,00,000 to the Sabha by 31-1-1997. Respondent 3 paid the said amount on 21-3-1997. The balance amount of Rs 10,10,650 was to be paid by 31-3-1997.

According to the appellants (office-bearers of the society in question), time was the essence of the contract and Respondent 3 had failed to pay the balance amount. The Sabha had sent a legal notice to Respondent 3 to fulfil his contractual obligations under the sale agreement and informed him that if he failed to do so, the agreement to sell would stand cancelled and the amount paid as earnest money would be forfeited. In reply to the said notice, Respondent 3 stated that he had not defaulted in payment of the remaining amount. He stated that as per the agreement the land had to be measured and that he was ready to pay the balance amount once that was done. Subsequently, both the parties met at the site of the disputed land in the presence of Patwari (Revenue Official). The land was measured by the Patwari. The Sabha reduced the balance amount and gave some concession to Respondent 3. Respondent 3 was asked to pay Rs 8 lakhs. In the meantime the President of the Sabha had expired. Therefore, the general power of attorney executed by him had ceased to be in effect. Need of a fresh power of attorney was felt. Respondent 3 desired that the fresh power of attorney be executed in the name of his son i.e. Respondent 4 for the very same 13.5 bighas of land in regard to which earlier power of attorney had been given. Accordingly, the General Secretary of the Sabha, Appellant 1 herein, executed a fresh general power of attorney.

As per the appellants, the Sabha made several requests to Respondents 3 and 4 asking them to pay the balance amount of Rs 8,00,000. However, despite repeated requests, the respondents failed to do so. The appellants submitted that the Sabha had learnt from reliable sources that Respondent 3, by misrepresentation and by misusing his general power of attorney for the 13.5 bighas of land, was attempting to sell the entire 26 bighas of the Sabha's land to other parties and was executing sale deeds without any right whatsoever in respect of the remaining 11.19 bighas. Thereafter, Appellant 1 sent a legal notice (second notice) to Respondents 3 and 4 informing them that if the balance amount of Rs 8,00,000 was not paid, he would have to cancel the general power of attorney. No reply to the said notice was received from the respondents nor was Rs 8,00,000 paid. In these circumstances, Appellant 1 cancelled the power of attorney issued in favour of Respondent 4 and informed Respondent 4 accordingly. A public notice of the same was also published by the Sabha in a local newspaper. According to the appellants, in order to protect the interest of the Sabha, the remaining land of 11.19 bighas was sold to one S.

After the said action of the appellants, Respondent 3 lodged a first information report against the appellants. Respondent 3 also filed a civil suit in the said matter. On being aggrieved by the filing of the false and incorrect charge-sheet in the said criminal case, the appellants filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing the proceedings. The High Court dismissed the said petition on the ground that the record showed that the allegations in the FIR constituted an offence as alleged by the complainant. Hence, the present appeal.

Setting aside the judgment of the High Court, Held :

The appellants who are office-bearers of a charitable organisation in order to protect the interests of the Sabha cancelled the power of attorney by executing a registered cancellation deed after giving notice to the power-of-attorney holders. The appellants sold only that part of the land to S on behalf of the society for which an agreement to sell with the complainants (the respondents) had already been terminated. The respondents' earnest money had been forfeited. All this was done only after the appellants had given the respondents due notice. (Para 21)

The veracity of the facts alleged by the appellants and the respondents can only be ascertained on the basis of evidence and documents by a civil court of competent jurisdiction. The dispute in question is purely of civil nature and Respondent 3 has already instituted a civil suit in the Court of the Civil Judge. In the facts and circumstances of this case, initiation of criminal proceedings by the respondents against the appellants is clearly an abuse of the process of the court. (Para 22)

Even if all the averments made in the FIR are taken to be correct, the case for prosecution under Sections 420 and 467 IPC is not made out against the appellants. To prevent abuse of the process of the court and to secure the ends of justice, it becomes imperative to quash the FIR and any further proceedings emanating therefrom. (Paras 45, 58 and 60). Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259: AIR 2008 SC 251: (2007) 144 DLT 257: (2007) 59 AIC 30 (SC): (2008) 1 All LJ 40.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, R.V. Raveendran and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2007]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

[10508] — Ss. 420, 467 and 468 — Quashing of charge-sheet — Inherent jurisdiction of High Court — Scope and limitations — Allegations of fraud and forgery — Held, power under is to be exercised to prevent abuse of process of court or to secure ends of justice — Court can quash charge-sheet if allegations in FIR or complaint petition do not disclose commission of offence even if on face value they are taken to be correct in their entirety — While doing so, High Court is not to embark upon appreciation of evidence but to consider only material on record as a whole though the High Court is required to consider as to whether the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint petition fulfil the ingredients of the offences alleged against the accused — Further held, dispute being primarily of civil nature is not by itself a ground to quash criminal proceedings because in cases of forgery and fraud there would always be some element of civil nature — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

The appellant, a partner of a firm entered into a contract with complainant's firm to get knowledge and know-how for carpet production and in turn to pay 10% commission on the invoice value of each and every invoice. Alleging that the appellant has committed the offences of criminal breach of trust and/or of cheating and forgery, on the premise that he had made sale of about Rs 9 crores through a sister concern wherefor no commission was paid although the technical know-how was made available by the complainant's firm, a complaint petition was filed and an FIR was lodged. On completion of the investigation, a detailed charge-sheet was submitted. In the said charge-sheet, it was stated that the amount of commission in the invoices was falsely and wrongly shown by showing less sale turnover for paying less commission than the actual due commission amounting to commission of offences under Sections 420, 467, 468 IPC. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offences against the appellant. The appellant filed an application for quashing of the order before the High Court which was dismissed by reason of the impugned judgment.

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court, held as above.

Held :

The principles providing for exercise of the power by a High Court under Section 482 to quash a criminal proceeding are well known. The Court shall ordinarily exercise the said jurisdiction, inter alia, in the event the allegations contained in the FIR or the complaint petition even if on face value are taken to be correct in their entirety do not disclose commission of an offence. (Para 11)

The High Court's power under Section 482 is primarily either to prevent abuse of the process of any court or to secure the ends of justice. The Court at that stage would not embark upon appreciation of evidence. The Court shall moreover consider the materials on record as a whole. (Para 14)

Except in very exceptional circumstances, the Court would not look to any document relied upon by the accused in support of his defence. Although allegations contained in the complaint petition may disclose a civil dispute, the same by itself may not be a ground to hold that the criminal proceedings should not be allowed to continue. The High Court should be slow in interfering with the proceedings at the initial stage. Merely because the nature of the dispute is primarily of a civil nature, the criminal prosecution cannot be quashed because in cases of forgery and fraud there would always be some element of civil nature. For the purpose of exercising its jurisdiction, the superior courts are also required to consider as to whether the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint petition fulfil the ingredients of the offences alleged against the accused. (Paras 12 and 14)

In the instant case, the charge-sheet prima facie discloses commission of offences. A fair investigation was carried out by the investigating officer. The charge-sheet is a detailed one. If an order of cognizance has been passed relying on or on the basis thereof by the learned Magistrate, no exception thereto can be taken. Therefore, there is no legal infirmity in the impugned orders. (Paras 17 and 18). Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332: (2009) 2 ECrN 1051 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2009]

Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200; B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 282; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567, applied

[10509] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 469 — Quashing of criminal proceeding — Exercise of jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC when justified — Principles reiterated — Dispute purely of civil nature — No offence made out from allegations in FIR — Initiation of criminal proceedings (under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 469 IPC) in such a case, held, was not justified — Proceedings quashed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482 and 154

One S had five sons i.e. G, N, B, R and H. Appellants 1 and 2 were grandsons of G. Legal proceedings were initiated by son of H i.e. L claiming partition of his 1/3rd share in the suit property. The said suit was decreed by the Additional Sub- Divisional Officer. However, aggrieved thereby L challenged that decision in an appeal before the Commissioner. Aggrieved by the order of the Commissioner, son of R filed an appeal before the Board of Revenue, which set aside the order passed by the Commissioner and affirmed the order of the Additional Sub-Divisional Officer. Aggrieved thereby, L preferred a writ petition before the High Court wherein Appellants 1 and 2 were not impleaded. The High Court, while issuing notice, stayed the operation of the order passed by the Board of Revenue.

Thereafter, a sale deed was executed by Appellants 1 and 2 in favour of Appellants 3 and 4 stating therein that they had one-third share in the joint property although, according to the respondent co-sharer, they were not entitled therefor. Subsequent thereto, the respondent co-sharer filed a suit for cancellation of the said deed. He also lodged an FIR against the appellants.

The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of FIR. The High Court, while dismissing the said application, directed the investigating officer to conclude the investigation within three months. After conclusion of the investigation, a charge-sheet was submitted before the Chief Judicial Magistrate concerned. The said Magistrate took cognizance of the offence. Questioning the legality of the said order, the appellants filed another application under Section 482 CrPC, which by reason of the impugned judgment had been dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now well settled that the High Court ordinarily would exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC if the allegations made in the first information report, even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, do not make out any offence. When the allegations made in the first information report or the evidences collected during investigation do not satisfy the ingredients of an offence, the superior courts would not encourage harassment of a person in a criminal court for nothing. (Para 24)

A distinction must be made between a civil wrong and a criminal wrong. When dispute between the parties constitute only a civil wrong and not a criminal wrong, the courts would not permit a person to be harassed although no case for taking cognizance of the offence has been made out. (Para 27)

The fact that the appellants are co-sharers is not in dispute. The dispute between the parties is confined to the extent of their respective shares. It must be determined only in a civil suit. (Para 11)

If Appellants 1 and 2 had executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they have one-third share in the entire properties, the same would not be binding on the respondent complainant. If any cause of action arose by reason of a threat of dispossession at the hands of the co-sharer or at the hands of the third party, as was contended, recourse to legal action could always be taken. Even for that purpose, a proceeding under Sections 144 and 145 CrPC would be maintainable. The decision of a criminal court in a case of this nature would not be binding on the civil court. (Paras 11). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, considered

[10510] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 — Circumstances warranting quashing of prosecution — Malicious prosecution — Alleged facts disclosing no offence — Appellant, an old lady, prosecuted for tampering with certified copy of revenue records wherein dates "6-5-2002" and "7-5-2002" were alleged to have been changed to "16-5-2002", "17-5-2002" and "27-5-2002" and tampered copy was made use of in civil suits — On appreciation of facts found that appellant was not to gain anything in the civil suits by tampering — Facts also did not disclose commission of offences under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC — It was also doubtful whether appellant had filed civil suits or they were filed by someone else in her name — Prosecution, held, was abuse of process of law and therefore quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

The appellant was an old lady against whom Respondent 2 filed an FIR that she had tampered certified copy of revenue records and made of use this tampered document in civil suits filed by her so as to save the cases from bar of limitation. It was alleged that dates relating to application for certified copy and receipt of certified copy had been changed from "6-5-2002" and "7-5-2002" to "16-5-2002" and "17-5-2002" and "27-5-2002". It was alleged that appellant applied for certified copy of revenue records on 6-5-2002 and she got it on 7-5-2002 but she made interpolations in the document. The appellant denied that civil suits were filed by her though civil suits appeared to have been filed through her counsel on 27-5-2002.

The appellant approached the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of prosecution but High Court took view that FIR as well as material collected by prosecution were good enough at least to proceed, and it could not be said that no offence was disclosed from the same.

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held:

It is clear from the manner in which litigation is being fought that it is nothing but to wreak vengeance against appellant. There is absence of bona fides on the part of Respondent 2 to file FIR. The appellant has committed no offence. This is a classic example where investigating officer has subverted investigation system and started prosecution of an old lady. The Court is also surprised that appellant who is an old lady was arrested and had to stay behind the bars for more than a week. It is also not understood as to how trial court mechanically took cognizance of a non-existent offence. Even if it is presumed that somebody interpolated records by adding figure "1" and even if it is presumed that the appellant did so, still it does not become a forged document. The Court is also surprised at the manner in which investigation was done and the manner in which cognizance was taken by the courts below. In its written submissions also the State has merely justified that figure of "1" was added in order to show that there were no laches or negligence for filing civil suits. It is not understood as to how ten days could have amounted to laches or negligence because ultimately suits seem to have been filed after ten days. Attitude of State is surprising that it is insisting on trial despite the fact that prosecution is mala fide, malicious and vengeful only to settle scores by Respondent 2 against the appellant. (Paras 25, 28, 35 and 36)

Respondent 2 has not been able to show as to how the appellant could be benefitted in any manner by changing the dates. Since there was no question of the appellant gaining anything, she would not have made changes in the document. It is not for the Court to explain how the document was changed. Whosoever may have changed those documents, the said change did not result in any illegal gains to the appellant or illegal loss to anybody. Such changes were innocuous and did not give rise to any offence. This is a case of malicious and vengeful prosecution which has no base. Exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC is justified in this case. The Court is convinced of whole lack of bona fides on the part of investigating officer. Affidavit filed by him in the Supreme Court does not give any explanation or justification for arrest and subsequent investigation of non-existing crimes. The prosecution in this case is nothing but an abuse of process of law and is therefore quashed. (Paras 40 to 43). Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2007) 6 All LJ (NOC) 954, reversed

[10511] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 — Inherent powers of High Court — Parameters of — Appellant's petition for quashing the charge-sheet and consequent proceedings initiated against him by complainant (Respondent 2) for allegedly committing offences punishable under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC, dismissed by High Court on ground that it was not permissible for it to look into the materials placed before the Magistrate — Held, such an approach was not in consonance with the broad parameters, enumerated in a series of decisions of Supreme Court to be applied while dealing with a petition under S. 482 for discharge and therefore, impugned order unsustainable — To arrive at the conclusion whether or not the appellant had made out a case for quashing of charge-sheet against him, High Court ought to have taken into consideration the material which was placed before the Magistrate — For dismissal of petition, High Court had to record a finding that uncontroverted allegations, as made, establish a prima facie case against appellant — In absence of material stated to have been filed along with charge-sheet, High Court did not get an opportunity to apply its mind as to whether on the basis of material before the Magistrate, a prima facie case had been made out against appellant-accused — Impugned order set aside and matter is remitted to High Court for fresh consideration in accordance with law — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 19, 21 and 22). Fakhruddin Ahmad v. State of Uttaranchal, (2008) 17 SCC 157: (2008) 6 All LJ 249: (2009) 1 ECrN 455 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4377: (2008) 3 APLJ 163 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2008]

[10512] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 — Petition under, for quashing of criminal complaint under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471 and 506 IPC — Principles for exercise of power under, restated — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

The parameters of interference with a criminal proceeding by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC are well known. One of the grounds on which such interference is permissible is that the allegations contained in the complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, commission of an offence is not disclosed. The High Court may also interfere where the action on the part of the complainant is mala fide. (Para 12). Hira Lal v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 89: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1247: AIR 2009 SC 2380: 2009 Cri LJ 2849: (2009) 4 All LJ 520: (2009) 78 AIC 134 (SC): (2009) 2 APLJ 42 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

Applied in Dalip Kaur v. Jagnar Singh, (2009) 14 SCC 696 at p. 700

[10513] — Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — No case made out against accused — Criminal complaint alleging collusion and fraud between Special Officer of Board and allottees of developed land given in lieu of compensation — Disputes arising out of agreement of sale of 20 bighas of land to Society which was refused compensation for lands acquired by Board — No complaint with respect to lands of Respondents 1 and 2 — High Court quashing FIR against Respondents 1 and 2 and Special Officer of Board — Sustainability — Held, no complaint of commission of any offence regarding 13 bighas of land of first respondent, therefore no question of involvement in any offence of cheating or forgery — Quashing of FIR qua Respondents 1 and 2, upheld — But, finding of High Court that Collector/Special Officer was a Judge set aside, quashing of FIR with reference to the Special Officer unwarranted — CrPC, 1973, S. 482

One C entered into an agreement of sale agreeing to sell 20 bighas of land in Khasra No. 9 in Sukhalpura Village to Shiva Cooperative Housing Society Ltd. Some lands in Sukhalpura Village, including 31 bighas in Khasra No. 9, were acquired for a housing scheme floated by the Rajasthan Housing Board. C filed a revenue suit for a declaration that Khasra No. 9 was not government land and that he was one of the owners of the said land and for consequential reliefs which suit was decreed and was affirmed by the Revenue Board. In pursuance of it, the following five persons were shown as owners of Khasra No. 9 in the revenue records, their share being shown in brackets: C (15/33), M (2/33), G (2/33), KD (1/33) and KL (13/33).

The State Government formulated a scheme enabling the landowners to opt for allotment of developed land equal to 15% of the acquired land in lieu of the compensation for the acquired land.

The landowners/power-of-attorney holders of Khasra No. 9 approached the Board for such allotment. One KC, the successor (legatee) of C was one of them and he claimed allotment of developed land in lieu of 15 bighas of acquired land. The Society also filed an application before the Board claiming compensation in respect of 20 bighas in Khasra No. 9 on the basis of the agreement of sale which claim was rejected.

The power-of-attorney holders of four owners of Khasra No. 9 (KC, M, G and KL) entered into separate agreements with the Housing Board, consenting for allotment of developed land (15% of the extent of the acquired land) in lieu of compensation. In the said agreements, the landowners asserted and declared that their respective shares in the land were not subject to any encumbrance and no dispute or litigation was pending in regard to the same. A settlement award was passed by the Special Officer of the Rajasthan Housing Board recording the agreement to allot 15% developed land in lieu of compensation in respect of 28 bighas 17 biswas in Khasra No. 9 and pattas were issued in regard to such allotted land. Thereafter, the members of the Society filed a complaint before the Board claiming that the Society ought to have received the said 15% developed land in lieu of compensation relating to the 20 bighas of the acquired land. Some members of the Society, through a forum also made a representation to the Chief Minister alleging that the khatedars/power-of-attorney holders of Khasra No. 9 in collusion with the Special Officer had practised fraud and grabbed the valuable land from the Rajasthan Housing Board. The Chief Minister's office suggested action on such representation in pursuance of which the appellant on behalf of the Board lodged an FIR alleging that the khatedars/power-of-attorney holders of Khasra No. 9 had made false representations to the Board and in collusion with the Special Officer of the Board and office-bearers of the Society had fraudulently obtained allotment pattas.

The first respondent herein who claimed to be the owner of 13 bighas in Khasra No. 9 and Respondent 2 herein who was his power-of-attorney holder filed a petition under Section 482 of the Code for quashing the FIR. The High Court allowed the said petition and quashed the FIR insofar as Respondents 1 and 2 are concerned as also the Special Officer of the Board on the following two grounds:

(i) The Land Acquisition Officer, when passing an award under Section 11(2) of the Act functions as a "Judge" as defined in Section 19 of the Penal Code, 1860 ("IPC", for short) and therefore, is entitled to the protection of Section 77 IPC. Therefore making a settlement award by the Special Officer of the Board granting developed land in lieu of compensation to the landowners could not, under any circumstances, give rise to an offence under the Penal Code.

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

(ii) The allegations in the FIR did not constitute an offence of cheating or forgery punishable under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC.

Disposing of the appeal in terms below,

Held :

The question whether the Collector/Land Acquisition Officer while making an enquiry and award under the Act, acts in a judicial capacity or not, has been considered in a series of judgments. The well-settled principles are:

(a) Any inquiry as to the market value of property and determination of the amount of compensation by the Collector is administrative and not judicial in nature even though the Collector may have the power to summon and enforce the attendance of witnesses and production of documents. In making an award or making a reference or serving a notice, the Collector neither acts in a judicial nor quasi-judicial capacity but purely in an administrative capacity, exercising statutory powers as an agent and representative of the Government/acquiring authority.

(b) The award by a Collector is merely an offer of the amount mentioned as compensation on behalf of the Government/acquiring authority to the person(s) interested. It is neither an executable decree, nor binds the owners or persons interested in the acquired property.

(c) The Collector does not function as a Judicial Officer who is required to base his decision only on the material placed in the enquiry in the presence of parties, but functions as a valuer who ascertains the market value on material collected from all sources, personal inspection and his own knowledge and experience. (Para 22)

Only Judges (as defined in Section 19 IPC) acting judicially are entitled to the protection under Section 77 IPC. The Collector is neither a Judge as defined under Section 19 nor does he act judicially, when discharging any of the functions under the Act. Therefore he is not entitled to the protection under Section 77 IPC. The decision of the High Court that the FIR is to be quashed as the subject-matter of the complaint related to the action taken by the Collector/Special Officer in his capacity as a "Judge" is opposed to law and therefore, liable to be set aside. (Para 23)

Respondents 1 and 2 approached the High Court pointing out that neither the Society nor the members of the Society at any point of time had made any claim in regard to the 13 bighas in Khasra No. 9 which belonged to the first respondent, that the entire complaint related to 20 bighas agreed to be sold by C to the Society, and that as there was no complaint of irregularity or commission of any offence in regard to the 13 bighas of land belonging to the first respondent, there was no question of involvement of the first respondent or his power-of-attorney holder (second respondent) in any offence of cheating or forgery. Even the suit filed by the Society that was said to be pending at the relevant time was against C in regard to the 20 bighas in Khasra No. 9 and that no suit or proceeding was pending in regard to the remaining 13 bighas claimed by the first respondent. Only in January 2003, the second respondent and some others were impleaded in the said suit relating to 20 bighas in pursuance of an application filed on 14-11-2002, long after Respondents 1 and 2 had executed the agreement and consent award had been made. The High Court rightly held that the allegations in the FIR, even if accepted as true, did not relate to Respondents 1 and 2 but to others who had claimed to be the owners/the attorney holders in regard to power-of-remaining 20 bighas of land. The High Court was justified in holding that the allegations even if taken at their face value did not prima facie constitute an offence under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC by Respondents 1 and 2. (Paras 25 to 27)

The FIR specifically alleged collusion between KC and the Special Officer of the Board in regard to 20 bighas of land which was agreed to be sold to the Society by C. In fact the writ petition filed by KC for quashing the FIR was rejected by the High Court. As the finding of the High Court that the Collector/Special Officer was a Judge has been set aside, the quashing of the FIR with reference to the Special Officer cannot be upheld. The quashing of the FIR with reference to the then Special Officer is set aside. The quashing of FIR as against Respondents 1 and 2 will have no bearing on the FIR insofar as the other accused with reference to the 20 bighas of land are concerned. (Paras 28 and 29). Surendra Kumar Bhatia v. Kanhaiya Lal, (2009) 12 SCC 184: AIR 2009 SC 1961.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2009]

Ezra v. Secy. of State for India in Council, (1904-05) 32 IA 93; Raja Harish Chandra Raj Singh v. Land Acquisition Officer, AIR 1961 SC 1500: (1962) 1 SCR 676; N. Boman Behram v. State of Mysore, (1974) 2 SCC 316; Khorshed Shapoor Chenai v. Controller of Estate Duty, (1980) 2 SCC 1: 1980 SCC (Tax) 156; Sharda Devi v. State of Bihar, (2003) 3 SCC 128; Kiran Tandon v. Allahabad Development Authority, (2004) 10 SCC 745; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259, relied on

Gokul Krishna Banerji v. Secy. of State, AIR 1932 Pat 134, approved

[10514] — Ss. 420, 467, 471, 323, 506-B and 120-B — Quashment — Matters to be considered — Enquiry to be made — Need for reasoned order — Quashing of complaint as also the summons issued against accused-Respondents 2 and 3 by a cryptic order opining that it was abuse of process of court — Propriety — Held, while arriving at said conclusion High Court had not even taken pains to look into the complaint and other materials produced by the complainant — It was alleged that accused persons in criminal conspiracy with each other had cheated the complainant and his sons by getting their (complainant's sons) invention of petrol from polythene published in their (i.e. accused's) names and affixing their own photographs for taking direct or indirect benefits by committing forgery — It was further alleged that accused abused complainant and his sons by using words like "chamar" and also threatened to kill them — Held, the question is not whether there was any truth in allegations made, but whether on basis of allegations a cognizable offence had been alleged — Judicial Magistrate had taken cognizance under SCST Act, 1989 and IPC — Hence, held, High Court erred in exercising its extraordinary power and inherent jurisdiction in quashing the proceedings — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 — S. 3(2)(v) — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 3 to 7 and 13 to 16). Ram Babu v. State of M.P., (2009) 7 SCC 194: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 343: (2009) 80 AIC 39 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Maharashtra v. Ishwar Piraji Kalpatri, (1996) 1 SCC 542: 1996 SCC (Cri) 150, considered and followed

Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, relied on [10515] — Ss. 420, 468 and 471 — Scope of exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC restated — Held, factual scenario clearly showed that impugned proceedings were initiated as a counterblast to the proceedings initiated by appellants under Ss. 138/142/141 of NI Act, 1881 — Hence, continuance of such proceedings would be an abuse of the process of law — Case falls under Category (7) of Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 — Therefore, proceedings accordingly quashed — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138, 141 and 142 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 2, 6, 9, 10, 13 and 14). Eicher Tractor Ltd. v. Harihar Singh, (2008) 16 SCC 763: (2009) 1 ECrN 422 (SC): (2009) 73 AIC 198 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on [10516] — Ss. 420, 468, 471 and 120-B — Power to quash criminal proceeding — Where FIR ex facie makes out no offence criminal proceeding instituted on the basis of such FIR liable to be quashed — Allegations same against all accused — Prosecution of bank officials and account-holders for withdrawing certain amount from bank by making false credit entries in books of account and connected credit and debit vouchers — No particulars of alleged entries given in FIR — Absence of deliberate intention to cause any wrongful gain or wrongful loss — High Court rightly held that allegations made in FIR did not constitute any offence of cheating or forgery as such proceedings amounted to abuse of process of court — Failure to make entries in books of account cannot be characterised as false entries — Since allegations same against all accused persons entire proceedings and not only against one, as High Court did, liable to be quashed — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) read with S. 5(1)(d) — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 154. State of U.P. v. R.K. Srivastava, (1989) 4 SCC 59: 1989 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 1989 SC 2222: 1989 Cri LJ 2301.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Dutt, S. Ratnavel Pandian and Dr. T.K. Thommen, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1989]

[10517] — Ss. 420, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B — Charges against a person appearing on the scene subsequently and unlikely to be a party to the conspiracy — Held, charges rightly quashed under S. 439, CrPC, 1898. State of W.B. v. Raj Kumar Agarwalla, (1976) 2 SCC 204: 1976 SCC (Cri) 259: AIR 1977 SC 301: 1977 Cri LJ 206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and M.H. Beg, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1975]

[10518] — Ss. 420, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B — Framing of charges — Propriety — Offence of fraud and misappropriation of huge amount of Govt. money by accused persons — Charges against appellant government employee that she dishonestly processed and verified fake bills to cause undue pecuniary advantage to herself — Though appellant was not assigned any duty to process or sign the bills in question, she did so — Said bills were not sanctioned/approved by competent authority — Also, those bills were not entered in bill register — No file had been opened in respect thereof — File numbers written on fictitious bills were fake — Held (Per Katju, J.), there was existence of material on record to show a prima facie

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

case against appellant — Hence, framing of charges against her was proper — Plea that appellant signed the fake bills by negligence but without any mala fide intention, held, could be considered during trial — Per Sinha, J. (concurring) though there was improper application of mind by trial court while framing charges, considering that prosecution already started examination of witnesses and assured that all endeavours would be made for early disposal of matter, the discretionary jurisdiction under Art. 136 of the Constitution would not be exercised at this stage for remitting the matter to trial court for consideration afresh — Thus, the order framing charges against appellant is upheld — Trial court directed to complete trial as expeditiously as possible — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 228

Charges were framed against the appellant and the other accused for various offences under the Indian Penal Code and the Prevention of Corruption Act. Allegations were made that by misusing their official position, the accused public servants, employees of Indian Trade Promotion Organisation (ITPO), caused an undue pecuniary advantage to themselves to the tune of Rs 30,30,057 and led to a corresponding loss to ITPO.

The prosecution case was that the publicity department of ITPO was concerned with the release of advertisements in newspapers. There were two types of advertisements: (1) regular advertisements; and (2) ad hoc advertisements. Regular advertisements were given to the national dailies and other leading newspapers and magazines, whereas ad hoc advertisements were those which were issued on ad hoc basis from time to time with the specific approval of the Chief Managing Director or Executive Director only.

At the relevant time, Deputy Manager B was in charge of the work relating to ad hoc advertisements. He was the authorised officer to process the bills for such advertisements. One U, Proof Reader/Senior Assistant of ITPO, floated 6 bogus firms and submitted 76 bogus bills worth Rs 30,30,057 for payment by signing under fictitious names. With these bills he enclosed photocopies of fake advertisements. Out of 76 bogus bills, 14 were dishonestly processed and verified by the appellant and one J, in connivance with the other accused to cheat ITPO and give wrongful gain to themselves. All the bogus vouchers had been filled in by the co-accused G who was neither posted in the publicity division nor was authorised to do so. The appellant knew that the said bogus bills had not been entered in the bill register of the Publicity Division of ITPO and no file had been opened/created in respect thereof. The file numbers written on the fictitious bills were also fake. None of the above bills bore initials or signatures of B, who was in charge of the ad hoc advertisements.

After examining the allegations and evidence collected by investigation, the trial court framed the impugned charges against the appellant and J. Against the order framing charges, a criminal revision was filed before the High Court. The said revision was dismissed by the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Per Katju, J.

It cannot be accepted there was no material to show that the appellant was prima facie guilty or had any mens rea. There are serious allegations of misappropriation of a huge amount of money belonging to the Government, and it cannot be said at this stage that there is no material at all for framing the charge against the appellant. Hence, the view taken by the High Court in this connection is proper. (Paras 11, 9, 12 and 15)

The appellant was never assigned any duty in respect of processing or signing the bills for ad hoc advertisements, and she was assigned duty only of regular advertisements. Moreover, these bills were not sanctioned/approved by the competent authority i.e. the Chairman/Executive Director. No doubt the appellant contended that she signed the fake bills by negligence but without any mala fide intention, but this is a matter which is to be seen at the time of the trial. (Paras 14 and 15)

Per Sinha, J. (concurring)

The trial Judge, it appears, did not properly apply its mind in regard to the different categories of the accused while framing charges. It ought to have been done. (Para 19)

Ordinarily, the matter would have been remitted to the trial Judge for consideration afresh, but as the prosecution has already started examination of witnesses and it is assured that all endeavours would be made for early disposal of the matter, the discretionary jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution may not be exercised at this point of time. However, keeping in view the fact that a large number of officers of the Union of India are involved in the present case and as it is stated at the Bar that they have not been promoted because of the pendency of this case, the trial Judge is requested to dispose of the matter as expeditiously as possible. (Para 25). Soma Chakravarty v. State, (2007) 5 SCC 403: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 514: AIR 2007 SC 2149.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2] and Markandey Katju[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2007]

[10519] — S. 420 r/w S. 34 — Fraud — Question to be determined — Quashment of proceedings if warranted — Positive assertion in complaint that assurance had been given by petitioner (attorney of Accused 1) to complainant that property in question was free from all encumbrances and that Accused 1 was sole owner and that had not such a representation been made relating to status of ownership of property in question, complainant may not have entered into transaction at all — Held, whether petitioner was truly mistaken as regards information given by him is an important issue which needs to be decided in answering the charge made — Prima facie case for going to trial, thus, made out — Hence, no interference with impugned judgment dismissing petitioner's application under S. 482 CrPC called for — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 15 to 20). S.P. Gupta v. Ashutosh Gupta, (2010) 6 SCC 562.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2010]

[10520] — S. 420 r/w S. 511 — Technical offence under — Accused altering his own affidavit for securing customs clearance — Accused's explanation that he did so under an honest belief found reasonable on facts and as such act complained of may or may not amount to offence under S. 420 r/w S. 511 — Accused neither cheated nor attempted to cheat the Customs Deptt. — Accused already suffered a prosecution under S. 420 — Nearly 20 years elapsed since commission of the alleged act — In the circumstances held, it would not be expedient in the interest of justice to maintain High Court's order passed about ten years ago remanding the case to the Magistrate concerned for trying the accused under S. 420 r/w S. 511. Kapoor Chand Maganlal Chanderia v. Delhi State (Admn.), 1985 Supp SCC 268: 1985 SCC (Cri) 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-1985]

[10521] — Ss. 420/120-B — Quashing of prosecution — When warranted — Complaint not disclosing any offence either under S. 420 or S. 120-B IPC — Case in question, a purely civil dispute — On such facts, held, allowing investigation to continue would amount to abuse of process of court — Hence, prosecution quashed (Para 7). Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

[10522] — Ss. 420/406/468 — Offence if made out on facts by presenting cheque allegedly given blank — Abuse of process of court — FIR not making out any offence — Rightly quashed — Cheque given by the appellant to respondents bouncing — Appellants filing FIR under Ss. 420/406/468 alleging therein that respondents by an act of conspiracy committed criminal breach of trust by presenting for encashment blank cheques signed by the appellant for a purpose other than that for which the cheque had been given to them and thereby causing to the appellant loss of a certain amount — Apart from the fact that the said allegations did not make out the offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust, attendant circumstances indicating that FIR was lodged to pre-empt the filing of complaint under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act against the appellant — In such circumstances, held, High Court was well within its jurisdiction to quash the FIR as amounting to abuse of the process of court — Hence, High Court's decision called for no interference under Art. 136 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 154 (Para 5). Sunil Kumar v. Escorts Yamaha Motors Ltd., (1999) 8 SCC 468: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1466: AIR 2000 SC 27.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149, considered

[10523] — Ss. 420/468/444/34 — Simultaneous civil and criminal proceedings in a given matter — Stay of one of the proceedings — Factors to be considered therefor — Primacy of criminal proceeding over civil proceeding — Consideration of general rule as to — Mode of determination of civil suit, if primacy to be given to criminal proceeding — Reiterated, in a given case, a civil proceeding as also a criminal proceeding can proceed simultaneously — Whether in the facts and circumstances of the case one or the other proceedings would be stayed would depend upon several factors including the nature and the stage of the case — Ordinarily, a criminal proceeding will have primacy over the civil proceeding in view of the fact that disposal of a civil proceeding generally takes a long time — If primacy is to be given to a criminal proceeding, the civil suit must be determined on its own merit, keeping in view the evidence brought therein and not in terms of the evidence brought in the criminal proceeding — Simultaneous pendency of criminal proceeding for forgery of will, etc. as well as probate proceeding as to said will — Having regard to facts as to: (i) institution of criminal case much prior to initiation of probate proceeding, (ii) conduct of appellant-accused (criminal case not proceeding further for the last 7 years in view of pendency of matters before High Courts in different proceedings initiated by accused, though the charge-sheet was filed and cognizance of offence was taken), (iii) stage of pending probate proceeding (absence of much progress therein after about 6 years of filing of proceeding as the will in question was not yet sent to handwriting expert for his opinion), and (iv) the fact that the criminal case involved offence not only of forgery of will but also of house trespass, held, impugned judgment refusing to stay criminal proceeding not liable to be interfered with — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 309 & 190(1) — CPC, 1908, Ss. 151 & 9 — Succession Act, 1925, S. 276

(10)(xi) Quashment (contd.)

A criminal case under Sections 420/468/444/34 IPC was instituted against the appellants alleging commission of forgery of a will by them. Prior to the said case, a civil suit was filed against the appellants, which was still pending, questioning the genuineness of the said will based on which the appellants had claimed mutation in respect of the property concerned.

Cognizance of offences in the said criminal case was taken in the year 2002. The appellants were granted anticipatory bail. On or about 30-1-2003, the appellants filed an application under Section 276 of the Succession Act, 1925 before the Jharkhand High Court for grant of probate in respect of the said will. Thereafter, the appellants preferred a writ petition before the Delhi High Court for quashing of the FIR. The said petition was disposed of making observations that the petitioners therein (i.e. the accused) could move the trial court by filing an application for stay of the criminal trial pending adjudication of the question of genuineness of the will by the civil court.

Pursuant to the said order of the High Court, the appellants filed an application under Section 309 CrPC before the Magistrate concerned seeking stay of the criminal proceedings. But that application was dismissed. Aggrieved thereby, the appellants preferred a criminal revision petition but they did not succeed. Hence, the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Indisputably, in a given case, a civil proceeding as also a criminal proceeding may proceed simultaneously. Cognizance in a criminal proceeding can be taken by the criminal court upon arriving at the satisfaction that there exists a prima facie case. The question as to whether in the facts and circumstances of the case one or the other proceedings would be stayed would depend upon several factors including the nature and the stage of the case. (Para 21)

It is now well settled that ordinarily a criminal proceeding will have primacy over the civil proceeding. Precedence to a criminal proceeding is given having regard to the fact that disposal of a civil proceeding ordinarily takes a long time and in the interest of justice the former should be disposed of as expeditiously as possible. (Para 22)

If primacy is to be given to a criminal proceeding, the civil suit must be determined on its own merit, keeping in view the evidence brought on record therein and not in terms of the evidence brought in the criminal proceeding. (Para 24)

In the present case, the impugned judgment refusing to stay the criminal proceeding cannot be interfered with. Firstly, because the criminal case was instituted much prior to the initiation of the probate proceeding and secondly, because of the conduct of the appellants and the stage at which the probate proceeding is pending. (Para 41)

Whereas the criminal case is pending before the Delhi Court, the testamentary suit has been filed before the Jharkhand High Court. Since 2003 not much progress has been made therein. The will has not been sent to the handwriting expert for his opinion, which is essential for determination of the question in regard to the genuineness of the will. Further, for the last seven years, in view of the pendency of the matters before the High Courts in different proceedings initiated by the appellants, the criminal case has not proceeded, although charge-sheet has been filed and cognizance of the offence has been taken. (Para 44)

Further, the FIR was lodged not only in regard to forgery of the will but also on the cause of action of a trespass. It is, thus, possible that even if the will is found to be genuine and that no case under Section 468 IPC is found to have been made out, the appellants may be convicted for commission of other offences for which they have been charged against, namely, trespass into the property and cheating. (Para 43)

Therefore, in view of the above, the impugned judgment cannot be interfered with exercising discretionary jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution. (Para 46). Syed Askari Hadi Ali Augustine Imam v. State (Delhi Admn.), (2009) 5 SCC 528: (2009) 5 Mah LJ 127.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, L.S. Panta and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2009]

M.S. Sheriff v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 397; K.G. Premshanker v. Inspector of Police, (2002) 8 SCC 87: 2003 SCC (Cri) 223; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101; P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 79, relied on

Sardool Singh v. Nasib Kaur, 1987 Supp SCC 146: 1987 SCC (Cri) 672, distinguished

[10524] — Ss. 420/468/471/477-A/167/120-B — Settlement of land in tenant's favour (and his successors-in-interest) — Fraud by tenant/successor(s)-in-interest/government officials — Criminal case under Ss. 420/468/471/477-A/167/120-B IPC pending with Crime Branch — Effect not considered by High Court — Matter, therefore, remanded for fresh consideration — State directed to unravel the truth and punish the erring officials and take all permissible actions (including criminal action) against everyone involved

The High Court did not considered the effect of alleged fraud. As there were various fraudulent claims on the prime government land in the city of Bhubaneshwar on the basis of fraudulent title papers called "Hatapattas" allegedly issued by ex-intermediaries, the GA Department handed over the matter to Crime Branch. An interim report of the Crime Branch with respect to the suit land has been submitted. The Crime Branch report states that the power of attorney through which the suit land was sought to be alienated in favour of H (respondent-vendee successor in interest of KD, lessee) was tampered and manipulated by the power-of-attorney holder, A (son of H). The vendor, KC (successor of KD) had not given any powers of alienation to A. The report concludes that prima facie offences under Sections 420/468/471/477-A/167/120-B IPC, inter alia, have been made out against respondents H and A. Again the Sale Deed executed in favour of H, was impounded for non-payment of adequate stamp duty with the deficit stamp duty and registration fee amounting to about Rs 1.03 crores. (Paras 39 and 34 to 36)

In the background of the massiveness of apparent fraud involved, effective and participative role of officials of the State cannot be lost sight of. Without their active and effective participation manipulation of records, tampering with documents could not have been possible. The State would do well to pursue the matter with seriousness to unravel the truth and punish the erring officials and take all permissible actions (including criminal action) against everyone involved. (Para 43)

There is another statute which has great relevance to the present dispute i.e. the Orissa Communal Forest and Private Lands (Prohibition of Alienation) Act, 1948 which was enacted to prevent indiscriminate alienation of communal forest and private lands in the erstwhile estates. In view of the interpretations of these provisions in Maganti Subrahmanyam case, (1969) 2 SCC 96 the present matter needs to be reconsidered by the High Court. The High Court while rehearing the matter should also consider the effect of the observations of judgment, and various aspects highlighted above. (Paras 41, 42 and 44). State of Orissa v. Harapriya Bisoi, (2009) 12 SCC 378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-2009]

(xii) Sanction for prosecution

See also under 'Ss. 405-409 — CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST', above

[10525] — Ss. 420, 465, 466, 467, 468 and 471 — Sanction for prosecution — When not required — Relatability of offence to official duty necessary — False allotment of premises and false issuance of rent receipts by public servant to various persons to show false possession of tenements — Appellant-accused working with Maharashthon Housing and Area Development Authority (MHADA) allotted premises to various persons under his signature, issued rent receipts so that the said persons could claim that they were in possession of the tenements, though in fact, the tenements, in question, were vacant and were not in possession of MHADA — Appellant charged for offences punishable under Ss. 420, 465, 466, 467, 468 and 471 IPC — Held, the charged offences are not relatable to any official duty — Sanction under S. 197(1) CrPC, therefore, not needed — CrPC, 1973 — S. 197(1)

The allegation against the appellant-accused was that while working with Maharashthon Housing and Area Development Authority (MHADA) the appellant allotted premises to various persons under his signature, issued rent receipts so that the said persons could claim that they were in possession of the tenements, though in fact, the tenements, in question, were vacant and were not in possession of MHADA. According to the prosecution, the appellant committed offences punishable under Sections 420, 465, 466, 467, 468 and 471 IPC.

Before the trial court, the appellant filed an application for discharge in terms of Section 228 CrPC primarily on the ground that sanction under Section 197 CrPC had not been obtained. It was also submitted that proceedings could not have been initiated after his retirement in view of Rule 27 of the Maharashtra Civil Services (Pension) Rules, 1982. The application was dismissed by the trial court. It was noted that the appellant was in government service till 31-8-1989. The complaint was filed on 17-7-1989 which was treated as an FIR and, therefore, Rule 27 of the Pension Rules had no application. As regards the requirement of sanction in terms of Section 197 CrPC it was held that acts done by the accused did not fall within the ambit of official duty and, therefore, question of sanction did not arise.

(10)(xii) Sanction for prosecution (contd.)

The High Court by the impugned order dismissed the criminal writ petition filed by the appellant, affirming the view taken by the trial court although it held that on 10-8-1992 when the cognizance was taken, the appellant had ceased to be a public servant and that no sanction under Section 197(1) CrPC is needed in the case of retired government servant.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Though the view of the High Court that no sanction under Section 197(1) CrPC is needed in the case of retired government servant is erroneous, in view of the finding that the charged offences are not relatable to any official duty, the appeal fails and deserves to be dismissed. The High Court, was in error in observing that sanction was not necessary because the expression used in Section 197(1) CrPC to refer to a public servant is "was". But the question is really of academic nature because the alleged offences cannot be related to any official duty. (Paras 13, 8 and 9). Raghunath Anant Govilkar v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 11 SCC 289: 2008 Cri LJ 2054: (2008) 63 AIC 28 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2008]

Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432; R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104; S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096, relied on

[10526] — Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B — Sanction under S. 197 CrPC for prosecution for offences under — Held, there is no such requirement — CrPC, 1973 — S. 197

The offence of cheating under Section 420 or for that matter offences relatable to Sections 467, 468, 471 and 120-B, Penal Code, 1860 can by no stretch of imagination by their very nature be regarded as having been committed by any public servant while acting or purporting to act in discharge of official duty. In such cases, official status only provides an opportunity for commission of the offence. (Para 50). Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2007 SC 1274: (2007) 51 AIC 623 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432, distinguished [10527] — Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474 — Offences under Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474 IPC — Bar under S. 195 CrPC regarding court's power to take cognizance — Applicability — High Court not expressing any view on this aspect — Since it was a contentious issue and High Court's order under Ss. 482 and 468 CrPC found unsustainable, held, proper course would be to remit the matter to the High Court for fresh consideration — CrPC, 1973 — S. 195 (Para 7). Harnam Singh v. Everest Construction Co., (2004) 6 SCC 754: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

(xiii) Transfer/Consolidation of Cases

[10528] — Ss. 420 and 109 — Accused tried with an officer of Government — Accused charged under S. 420 IPC and officer charged for abetment of the offence — Trial of accused not bad if the officer was being tried without sanction under S. 197, CrPC. Bakhshish Singh Dhaliwal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 752: (1967) 1 SCR 211: 1967 Cri LJ 656, 658, 66.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1966]

[10529] — Ss. 420 and 109 — Permission for prosecution not necessary when an officer of Government prosecuted for abetment of the offence of cheating committed by persons submitting bogus bills by falsely certifying the correctness of bills

H was not being prosecuted for the act of certification of the correctness of the bills which were sent to him for verification, but was to be prosecuted for abetment of the offence of cheating committed by those persons who had submitted the bills by falsely certifying the correctness of those bills. The act of thus abetting the principal offenders could not possibly be held to have been done in the discharge of official duties as a public servant. Bakhshish Singh Dhaliwal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 752: (1967) 1 SCR 211: 1967 Cri LJ 656.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V. Ramaswami, V. Bhargava and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1966]

[10530] — Ss. 420 and 161 — Sanction for prosecution — Accused certifying a false claim knowing it to be false and thereby abetting offence of cheating — Sanction for prosecution under CrPC, 1898 is not necessary — Offence cannot be regarded as having been committed by public servant while acting or purporting to act in discharge of his official duty. K. Satwant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 266: (1960) 2 SCR 89: 1960 Cri LJ 410.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J.[1] and Syed Jafer Imam[1], J.L. Kapur[1], K.N. Wanchoo[1] and K.C. Das Gupta[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1959]

Applied in AIR 1966 SC 220: 1966 Cri LJ 179
See also AIR 1967 SC 752: 1967 Cri LJ 656

[10531] — Ss. 420, 406, 409, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471 — Relief — Transfer of investigations in different cases to one agency — Finance companies accepting deposits from a large number of persons but not repaying them — FIRs lodged by depositors against Directors of such companies at different places in different States — Prayer of accused persons for transferring the investigation in all such cases to CBI, rejected — CrPC, 1973, S. 156 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India, Art. 32

The petitioners' prayer that the investigations of all cases should be transferred to CBI has to be rejected. (Para 62). Narinderjit Singh Sahni v. Union of India, (2002) 2 SCC 210: AIR 2001 SC 3810.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

[10532] — Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471 — Relief — Consolidation of cases — Finance companies accepting deposits from a large number of persons but not repaying the same — Consequently, criminal cases initiated against Directors of such companies in courts in different States — Prayer of accused persons for consolidation of such cases, rejected by Supreme Court — However, liberty granted to approach the High Court, or as the case may be, the Appellate Consumer Forum in that regard — CrPC, 1973, S. 407(1)(c) — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India, Art. 32

In regard to the prayer for consolidation the petitioner would be at liberty to approach the High Court in accordance with law. Similar is the situation as regards the orders of the Consumer Forum and the petitioner in the normal course of events would be at liberty to ventilate the grievance if any, before the Appellate Forum in accordance with law. (Para 63). Narinderjit Singh Sahni v. Union of India, (2002) 2 SCC 210: AIR 2001 SC 3810.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

(xiv) Vicarious liability — Offence by company

See also S. 482 CrPC, '(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies' in Vol. 18, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 2 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[10533] — Ss. 415, 24, 25 and 23 — Offences requiring mens rea or a particular state of mind (like dishonesty) — Whether a corporate body can be prosecuted when offence is committed in relation to business of a company — Doctrine of attribution and imputation — Degree of control exercised by persons in charge of affairs of company — Principle of alter ego — Held, if degree of control is so intense that a corporation may be said to think and act through a person or body of persons, mens rea of person or persons in control is attributable to the corporation — A corporate body cannot also escape criminal liability merely on the ground that punishment prescribed is imprisonment and fine — On facts held, prosecution could be launched against respondent Company for offence of cheating under S. 415 IPC — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 34 and 291

The respondent Company had effective control over another company which was engaged in a project known as Iridium project, for developing world's first commercial system designed to provide global digital hand-held telephone data, facsimile, paging, geolocation services but the project ultimately did not succeed, with the result that huge investment made by appellant Company in the project resulted in loss. It was the case of appellant Company that Respondent 1 had knowledge of unviability of the project yet they made misleading statements to attract investment. The appellant further alleged that the entire exercise of Respondent 1, besides generating money for itself, was to experiment with others' money and at others' risk. The appellant therefore filed a detailed criminal complaint dated 3-10-2001 of thirty-five pages giving all the necessary facts which constituted the offence of cheating under Section 415 IPC. The trial court vide its order dated 6-11-2001 issued process against the accused persons including Respondent 1 Company. The High Court initially stayed the proceedings before the trial court and finally quashed the criminal complaint dated 3-10-2001

(10)(xiv) Vicarious liability — Offence by company (contd.)

vide its judgment dated 8-8-2003, inter alia on the ground that Respondent 1 being a juristic person, could not be proceeded against, for an offence like cheating.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There is much substance in the submission that virtually in all jurisdictions across the world governed by the rule of law, companies and corporate houses can no longer claim immunity from criminal prosecution on the ground that they are incapable of possessing the necessary mens rea for the commission of criminal offences. The legal position in England and the United States has now crystallised to leave no manner of doubt that a corporation would be liable for crimes of intent. The courts in England have emphatically rejected the notion that a body corporate could not commit a criminal offence which was an outcome of an act of will needing a particular state of mind. The aforesaid notion has been rejected by adopting the doctrine of attribution and imputation. The criminal intent of the "alter ego" of the company/body corporate i.e. the persons or group of persons that guide the business of the company, would be imputed to the corporation. (Paras 55 and 59)

A corporation is virtually in the same position as any individual and may be convicted of common law as well as statutory offences including those requiring mens rea. The criminal liability of a corporation would arise when an offence is committed in relation to the business of the corporation by a person or body of persons in control of its affairs. In such circumstances, it would be necessary to ascertain that the degree and control of the person or body of persons is so intense that a corporation may be said to think and act through the person or the body of persons. The position of law on this issue in Canada is almost the same. Mens rea is attributed to corporations on the principle of "alter ego" of the company. (Para 63)

A company/corporation cannot escape liability for a criminal offence merely because the punishment prescribed is that of imprisonment and fine. The conclusion reached by the High Court that the respondent could not have the necessary mens rea is clearly erroneous. (Para 66). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Co. v. United States, 53 L Ed 613: 212 US 481 (1908); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Kent and Sussex Contractors Ltd., 1944 KB 146: (1944) 1 All ER 119 (DC); Bolton (H.L.) (Engg.) Co. Ltd. v. T.J. Graham & Sons Ltd., (1957) 1 QB 159: (1956) 3 WLR 804: (1956) 3 All ER 624 (CA); Lennard's Carrying Co. Ltd. v. Asiatic Petroleum Co. Ltd., 1915 AC 705: (1914-15) All ER Rep 280 (HL); Tesco Supermarkets Ltd. v. Nattrass, 1972 AC 153: (1971) 2 WLR 1166: (1971) 2 All ER 127 (HL); Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2005) 4 SCC 530: 2005 SCC (Cri) 961, relied on

19 American Jurisprudence 2d, Para 1434; 19 Corpus Juris Secundum, Para 1363, quoted

[10534] — S. 420 — Dishonour of cheque — Dishonour of cheque — Offence by company — Legislative intention — Complaint, against any and every person of the company — If maintainable — Harassment and hardship — Held, legislative intention is not to implead all and sundry as accused if requirements of Ss. 138 and 141 of NI Act are not fulfilled, as the trauma, harassment and hardship in such cases is more serious than the ultimate punishment — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 141 and 138. K.K. Ahuja v. V.K. Vora, (2009) 10 SCC 48: (2009) 80 AIC 202 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

[10535] — S. 420 — Dishonour of cheque — Offence by company — Vicarious liability of persons of the company — When arises — Essential averments in complaint, requirement of — Held, persons/officers who were in charge of and also responsible for the conduct of business of the company, are vicariously liable for offences of company — Hence, no specific averment in complaint as to role of each is required — Duly affirmed sworn statement to that effect, may be sufficient — However, complaint against persons/officers who were either not responsible for conduct of business of the company, or were not in charge of the company should be specific as to their position, duties and role in the issue of said dishonoured cheque disclosing consent, connivance or negligence — Distinction between Ss. 141(1) and (2) NI Act as to nature of averment — Averments that are to be specifically made in complaint against officers of company who fall under Ss. 141(1) and (2) NI Act summarised — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 141 and 138. K.K. Ahuja v. V.K. Vora, (2009) 10 SCC 48: (2009) 80 AIC 202 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

[10536] — Ss. 420, 415, 24 and 25 — Quashment of proceedings — When justified — Offence by company — Ex-Director proceeded against — Where basic ingredients of the offence alleged against accused are altogether absent, held, he should not be compelled to face criminal prosecution — On totality of facts, such being the case, proceedings pending before Magistrate under S. 420 IPC r/w Ss. 3, 4, 5 and 6, Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978 against ex-Director of company which had invited deposits from public but had subsequently closed its business without paying interest and repaying dues of investors, quashed — Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978, Ss. 3 to 6 — Companies Act, 1956, S. 290 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482 and 190

The appellant was one of the Directors of a company. He resigned w.e.f. 27-12-1997. Respondent 2 filed a complaint FIR with the police alleging that the said company had invited deposits from the public and that monies had been invested by Respondent 2 and his wife in the Pensioner's Benefit Fund, pursuant to the approval of the scheme by Reserve Bank of India. That the company had since closed its business without repaying the money due to the complainant. Respondent 2 lodged an FIR alleging offences under Section 420, Penal Code, 1860 read with Sections 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978. Consequent to the FIR, the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate issued a non-bailable warrant against the appellant.

The appellant filed a petition before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of the proceedings on the ground that the appellant could not be held liable for any of the alleged illegalities committed by the company after he had resigned from the company. However, the High Court held that it was for the trial court to ascertain the questions arising in the petition and pass necessary orders. The appellant then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that even according to the averments of the complaint in the first information report there were no allegations whatsoever against the appellant, and the High Court ought to have quashed the proceedings against the appellant.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle the legitimate prosecution but at the same time no person be compelled to face criminal prosecution if basic ingredients of the offence alleged against him are altogether absent. (Para 38)

In the instant case, the appellant ceased to be a Director of the company from 27-12-1997 whereas the alleged offences, if any, were committed during the period from 24-5-1998 to 17-9-1999. There were no allegations against the appellant in the first information report. The company had invited investment from the depositors to invest in the business/benefit funds after receiving due approval of the scheme from Reserve Bank of India. Therefore, in any event, the element of cheating as alleged cannot be made out by any stretch of imagination. [Paras 37(a) to (c)]

Respondent 2 complainant has submitted in writing to that he does not want to proceed against the appellant because according to him the appellant has been inadvertently included as an accused by the investigating officer. He further mentioned in the letter that he had already received 55% of the deposited amount from the Official Liquidator and he did not want to proceed against the appellant. [Para 37(d)]

Even assuming that there could have been a vicarious liability thrust on the appellant, even then there cannot be any such vicarious liability in the absence of any allegations and material to show that the appellant was in charge of or responsible for the conduct of the company's business which had given rise to the offence. From any angle of the matter, the appellant cannot be compelled to face the criminal trial in the present case. [Para 37(e)]

On consideration of the totality of the facts and circumstances of the present case, the proceedings initiated against the appellant are quashed. (Para 39). M.A.A. Annamalai v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 8 SCC 524: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 950: (2010) 158 Comp Cas 369.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2010]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, considered

Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615, considered and relied on

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49; S.V.L. Murthy v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 77: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 941; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370, relied on [10537] — Ss. 420, 463 and 405 — Company involved — Fastening of vicarious liability on persons running the affairs of the company — Requirements for — In the instant case, Respondents 1 and 2 were sought to be proceeded against on the premise that they were vicariously liable for the affairs of the company — For that the company must be made an accused as legal fiction is raised both against the company as well as the person responsible for the acts of the company — Besides, when the vicarious criminal liability is fastened on a person on the premise that he was in charge of the affairs of the company and responsible to it, all the ingredients laid down under the statute must be fulfilled — Respondents 1 and 2 were charged in their individual capacity for commission of offences of cheating, criminal breach of trust and forgery — As there had never been any interaction between the appellant and them, the question of any representation which is one of the main ingredients for constituting an offence of cheating, would not arise — So far as allegations in regard to commission of the offence of forgery are concerned, the same had been made only against Respondent 3 and not against Respondent 2 — Sending a copy thereof to the National Stock Exchange without there being anything further to show that Respondent 2 had any knowledge of the fact that the same was a forged and fabricated document cannot constitute an offence — Similarly, it has not been alleged that they were entrusted with or otherwise had dominion over the property of the appellant or they have committed any criminal breach of trust — Hence, impugned judgment quashing FIR against Respondents 1 and 2 calls for no interference — CrPC, 1973, S. 482. R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

(xv) Witnesses

[10538] — Ss. 420 and 120-B — Non-examination of one of the witnesses — Effect — Appellant, a postal clerk, charged with taking out a bank draft from a registered letter and handing it over to the other two accused for encashment, in pursuance of a conspiracy — Appellant pleading that the said registered letter was handed over to the postman in due course of his duties — Plea not accepted by courts below on the basis of the evidence of PW 8, another clerk, and the entries in the register — Accordingly, appellant convicted under S. 420 read with S. 120-B, IPC — In appeal to SC conviction challenged on the ground of non-examination of the postman as a witness — Held, admittedly the appellant received the registered letter and it was his duty to make the necessary entries as to whether it was delivered but there was no such definite entry — This coupled with the evidence of PW 8 was enough to bring home the guilt of the appellant — Non-examination of the postman did not make any difference. Nand Kumar v. State of Punjab, 1994 SCC (Cri) 158.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1993]

(11) Sentence/Fine/Compensation/ Other punishment/relief

[10539] — Ss. 417, 493 and 496 — Sentence — Reduction of sentence — Appellant not shown to be inspired by any dishonest or mean motive — Other mitigatory circumstances — Sentence reduced to that already undergone. Ashwin Nanabhai Vyas v. State of Maharashtra, (1970) 3 SCC 95: 1970 SCC (Cri) 567: AIR 1970 SC 1998: 1970 Cri LJ 1668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-1970]

[10540] — Ss. 419 and 420 — Release of offender on probation of good conduct — Considerations for — Nature of the offence and character of the offender — Character — Meaning of — Accused managing to get entry into legal profession by representing that he was a qualified legal practitioner having enrolled himself with the State Bar Council — Accused practising law for a period of eight years and also holding post of Secretary of Bar Association — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the accused must be dealt with deterrently and the courts below not justified in giving him benefit of S. 4 — Fact that the accused expressed repentance over his conduct or that later he obtained a law degree and got himself enrolled as an advocate is of no consequence — Accused awarded six months' RI under each count (Ss. 419 and 420 IPC) and a fine of Rs 5000 each (total Rs 10,000) to be added to fund of the Legal Service Board — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 360 and 361 — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 — S. 4

The respondent approached the Nilgiris Bar Association in the year 1978 for admitting him as a member therein by representing that he was a qualified legal practitioner having enrolled himself with the State Bar Council. Without suspecting the bona fides of the application he was admitted to the membership of the Bar Association. He started his practice at the new station and built up a good clientele and involved himself in all the activities of the Association. He contested for the post of Secretary and won it. In this way, he continued till 1985. But by then some members of the Bar who developed suspicion of his credentials made secret inquiries and discovered that he was imposturing as an advocate and his credentials were bogus. A complaint was lodged with the police who, after investigation, charge-sheeted the accused for offences under Sections 419 and 420 IPC. He pleaded guilty and prayed for mercy. The trial court released him under Section 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act. The High Court declined to interfere but made an endeavour to console the Bar by directing the delinquent person to donate a sum of Rs 15,000 to the Association for buying books to their library. Allowing the appeal by special leave filed by the Bar Council

Held :

Before the relief envisaged in Section 4(1) of the Probation of Offenders Act is granted court must take into account the circumstances of the case, among which "the nature of the offence and the character of the offender" must have overriding considerations. After bestowing judicial consideration on those factors, the court must form an opinion as to whether it would be appropriate in that case to release the particular accused therein as envisaged in the sub-section. The benefits mentioned in Sections 3 and 4 are subject to the limitations laid down in those provisions and the word 'may' in Section 4 of the Act is not to be understood as 'must.'

When considering the nature of the offence the court must have a realistic view of the gravity of the offence, the impact which the offence could have had on the victims and whether considerations of deterrence can be overlooked etc. No fixed yardstick can be laid down to measure the nature of the offence for affording or denying the reliefs envisaged in Section 4 of the Act. However, as the court is enjoined to take into consideration the character of the offender it is well to remember that character is not the abstract opinion in which the offender is held by others. The word "character" is not defined in the Act. Hence, it must be given the ordinary meaning.

Character of the offender in this case reflects in the modality in which he was inveigling in a noble profession duping everybody concerned. In such a view of the matter the two courts could not have formed an opinion in favour of the character of the respondent. It is apposite to observe here that the learned Single Judge did not mention anything about the character of the respondent qua the accusations found against him.

While adverting to the nature of offence the court must bear in mind the necessity to weed out impostors in the professions which require special learning and training, particularly at a time when such impostors are proliferating in the society. Any leniency shown to such wiles would certainly tend to sprout up weeds at menacing scales. The case of the respondent is not one of single lapse or even multiple delinquencies confined to a few days. The long period of 8 years during which the mountebank had successfully indulged in interloping as a qualified and learned counsel would have considerably eroded public confidence in the probity of the legal profession particularly in that area and besmirched the reputation of that Bar as the public might be looking upon every other member of the profession with suspectful eyes. The trial Magistrate and the learned Single Judge, who found a repenting mind in the respondent, have failed to notice that repentance had dawned on him, even if that also was not a pretension, only when he reached a cul-de-sac. When he was masquerading himself everyday in sartorial costumes prescribed only for accredited members of the legal profession it did not occur to him even once during the long period of eight years to think of repentance. On the contrary, he was flourishing at large and had even become the Secretary of the Bar Association. If the vigilant Bar had not discovered the trickery, perhaps he would still have persisted in his art of cheating. Therefore, the crimes committed by him should have been dealt with deterrently and the ameliorative reliefs envisaged in Section 4 of the Act should have been kept at bay. Nilgiris Bar Assn. v. T.K. Mahalingam, (1998) 1 SCC 550: 1998 SCC (Cri) 450: AIR 1998 SC 398: 1998 Cri LJ 398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1997]

Ramji Missar v. State of Bihar, AIR 1963 SC 1088: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 173; Rattan Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 444: (1964) 7 SCR 676; Ishar Das v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 65: 1973 SCC (Cri) 708; Ram Parkash v. State of H.P., (1972) 4 SCC 46: 1973 SCC (Cri) 119, relied on [10541] — Ss. 419, 420, 468 and 471 — Sentence under — Reduction of — Cheating a financial corporation by obtaining loan in the name of a fake firm — Offence committed more than 20 long years ago, amount involved being only Rs 39,352.50, accused already remaining in jail for some time under the order of conviction and under Supreme Court's direction depositing Rs 40,000 with the financial corporation — In such circumstances, sentence of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone but a fine of Rs 2000 also imposed — Financial corporation granted liberty to recover its further dues, if any. Surender Kumar Garg v. State of U.P., 1993 Supp (3) SCC 359: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1032: 1993 Cri LJ 2085: (1993) 2 Crimes 424: 1993 ALJ 728.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-1993]

[10542] — S. 420 — Compounding of offences — Offences under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 and S. 420 IPC — Both the parties filing joint petition for compromise before the Supreme Court — Held, said compromise was lawful — Hence, permission granted to compromise the disputes — Convictions and sentences awarded against appellant, set aside — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — CrPC, 1973, S. 320 (Paras 4 and 5). Sayeed Ishaque Memon v. Ansari Naseer Ahmed, (2005) 12 SCC 140.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-2005]

[10543] — S. 420 — Sentence — Reduced to the period already undergone, the accused having deposited the amount in question to the Court in pursuance of the Court's directions. Abdul Hamid v. State of U.P., 1981 Supp SCC 82: 1982 SCC (Cri) 470(1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and E.S. Venkataramiah, J. [Date of decision: 14-2-1980]

[10544] — S. 420 — Sentence — Strong indications that there were other and bigger persons involved in the fraud who were not brought to book — Circumstance has a bearing on the sentence — Trial protracted one and the appellant remaining in jail for a long time — Crime could be prevented by the precautions of senior officers — In the circumstances sentence of 18 months' R.I. was reduced to the period already undergone. K. Damodaran v. State of Travancore-Cochin, AIR 1953 SC 462: 1953 Ker LJ 295: 1953 Cri LJ 1928, 1932.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.C. Mahajan and S.R. Das, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-1953]

[10545] — S. 420 — Sentence — Is a matter of discretion — Supreme Court not to interfere unless discretion has been improperly exercised — Sentence of 6 months' R.I. under S. 420 not held severe. Dharamdas Hukamatrai Dorwani v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 734: 1960 Cri LJ 1148: (1960) 2 Ker LR 32.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, K. Subba Rao and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-1959]

[10546] — S. 420 — Sentence — Technical offence — Token sentence called for — Sentence reduced to that already undergone. State of M.P. v. M.V. Narasimhan, (1975) 2 SCC 377: 1975 SCC (Cri) 589: AIR 1975 SC 1835: (1976) 1 SCR 6: 1975 Cri LJ 1639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-1975]

[10547] — S. 420 — Sentence reduced — Cheating in respect of a sum of Rs 31.89 only — Conviction under S. 420, IPC and under S. 5(1)(d) r/w S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act which lays down that the sentence shall not be less than one year except for special reasons — Offences committed more than 12 years ago — Accused having already undergone some rigorous imprisonment — Delay in final decision owing to no fault of accused — Held, sentences of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone — The long period for which the sentence imposed remained undecided should be taken into account — Possibility that in the period of 12 years the condition of life and outlook of a man may have changed entirely. Bhagwandas Keshwani v. State of Rajasthan, (1974) 4 SCC 611: 1974 SCC (Cri) 647: AIR 1974 SC 898: 1974 Cri LJ 751.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1974]

[10548] — S. 420 — White-collar crimes — Punishment merited — Conviction under S. 420 for cheating young unemployed persons by taking money from them by false pretences — Congenial work of a mental-cum-manual type with wages for the educated 28 years' old accused proposed plus opportunity to stimulate his creativity and sensitivity recommended. Mohd. Giasuddin v. State of A.P., (1977) 3 SCC 287: 1977 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 1977 SC 1926: 1977 Cri LJ 1557.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1977]

[10549] — Ss. 420, 421, 466, 468, 471, 465 & 120-B — Health and old age as factors — Alteration of sentence to period already undergone i.e. 70 days — Relief of — Entitlement to — Forgery case — Girl B securing admission on basis of forged marksheets — Sentence of 3 months and 6 months passed against B and her father F respectively by High Court — B, a housewife, having no job/source of income of her own — She was a heart patient and had undergone two open heart surgeries — F, a retired Engineer of 81 years, was also a heart patient and having no income other than his pension — Incident occurred a quarter of century back — Considering peculiar facts of the case and an earlier order of Supreme Court, held, sentence could be reduced to period already undergone by B and F i.e. 70 days — However, fine imposed by courts below would remain unaltered — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 28 and 29 (Paras 7, 8 and 10). Beena Philipose v. State of Kerala, (2006) 7 SCC 414: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 288.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Lokeshwar Singh Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2006]

[10550] — Ss. 420, 468 and 471 — Matter compromised and fraud amount repaid — Effect — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Accused charged under Ss. 420, 468, 471 IPC for defrauding a bank — Merely for the reason that a compromise had been reached between the bank officials and the accused and accused paid the disputed amount found due to the bank, held, High Court was not justified in quashing the trial which had reached almost the penultimate stage — Matter compromised and fraud amount repaid — Effect — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482. Inspector of Police, CBI v. B. Raja Gopal, (2002) 9 SCC 533.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2002]

[10551] — Ss. 420/511, 420/120-B, 468 and 477-A — Sentence — Accused, a Development Officer in LIC, introducing false and fake insurance proposals to LIC with a view to earn promotion on the basis of inflated business — Contents of proposals and Moral Hazard Report found to be in the handwriting of the accused — Plea of the accused that he was then imparting training to newly-recruited agents and in that process he had filled in the proposal forms, held, not acceptable — Policies not issued due to dishonour of cheques towards first premium and, therefore, loss to LIC might be negligible but the fact remains that the accused sought to take advantage of his inflated business — Held, in the circumstances of the case, accused rightly convicted by the courts below — However, in view of long lapse of time, loss of job and other retiral benefits, sentence altered to simple imprisonment for six months — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Ss. 5(1)(d), 5(3-A) and 5(2) — Insurance Act, 1938 — S. 104. Ram Prakash Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 1 SCC 173: 1998 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1998 SC 296: 1998 Cri LJ 502.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-1997]

— S. 421 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 420, 421, 466, 468, 471, 465 and 120-B

— S. 422 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 409, 422, 426 and 120-B

— S. 423 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34

See also Ss. 464, 423, 420 r/w S. 34

— S. 424 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 420 and 424

[10552] — Ss. 424 and 441 — After attachment under Ors. 21 and 43, CPC the attaching officer giving the cattle in supurdar's possession — Supurdar keeping the cattle with decree-holder — Judgment-debtor using force and enticing the cattle from decree-holder's enclosures — Judgment-debtor causes wrongful loss to the court and wrongful gain to himself and is guilty under S. 424

Where a property has been legally attached by a court, the possession of the same passes from the owner to the Court or its agent. In that situation, the owner of the said property cannot take the law into his own hands, but can file a claim petition to enforce his right. If he resorts to force to get back his property, he acts unlawfully and by taking the property from the legal possession of the Court or its agent, he is causing wrongful loss to the Court. As long as the attachment is subsisting, he is not entitled to the possession of the property and by taking that property by unlawful means he is causing wrongful gain to himself. Where the accused persons unlawfully took away the cattle from the possession of the decree-holder, who is only a bailee of the supurdar caused wrongful loss to him and therefore are guilty of an offence under S. 424 IPC. Teeka v. State of U.P., AIR 1961 SC 803: (1962) 1 SCR 75: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 859, 863: 1961 All Cri R 198: 1961 MPC 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1961]

Emperor v. Ghasi, AIR 1930 All 329: ILR 52 All 214: 31 Cri LJ 711, overruled

Emperor v. Kamlapat, AIR 1926 All 382: ILR 48 All 368: 27 Cri LJ 860; Dalganjan v. State, AIR 1956 All 630: 1956 Cri LJ 1176; State v. Rama, AIR 1956 Raj 190: ILR (1956) 6 Raj 772: 1956 Cri LJ 1430, approved

— S. 424 r/w S. 37 See also Ss. 406, 420 and 424 r/w S. 37

— S. 425 See also Ss. 34, 120-B, 177, 181, 191, 192, 425 and 500

See also Ss. 120-B, 177, 181, 191, 192, 425 and 500

See also Ss. 268, 290, 291 and 425

See also Ss. 378, 403, 405, 415 and 425

See also Ss. 427 and 425

[10553] — S. 425 — Mischief — Arson and burning of property and records

The target of arson, was an educational institution and particularly the registers and other papers maintained by it. The object obviously was vandalism, to disrupt its working by burning its records and to create a scare so that neither the teaching staff nor the pupils would dare attend it for prosecution of studies. The parents dare not henceforth send their wards for fear that the school might be set on fire while they are in it. The bomb was manifestly placed in the premises for creating that scare. It could not have been intended for any other purpose after the records and furniture had been set on fire. In these circumstances, the alleged acts did not merely constitute mischief under S. 425 of the Penal Code, but constituted such mischief which disturbed or was likely to disturb public order. Nagendra Nath Mondal v. State of W.B., (1972) 1 SCC 498: 1972 SCC (Cri) 227: AIR 1972 SC 665: (1972) 3 SCR 75: 1972 Cri LJ 482.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-1972]

[10554] — S. 425 — Mischief — Ingredients — Ownership and possession of the property is not relevant — Even though the property belongs to the accused, if the ingredients are made out, accused can be held to have committed mischief

There are three ingredients of the section which are: (i) intention to cause or knowledge that he is likely to cause wrongful loss or damage to the public or to any person; (ii) causing destruction of some property or any change in the property or in the situation thereof; and (iii) the change so made destroying or diminishing the value or utility or affecting it injuriously. For the purpose of Section 425, ownership or possession of the property is not relevant. Even if the property belongs to the accused himself, if the ingredients are made out, mischief is committed, as is evident from Illustrations (d) and (e) to Section 425. The complaints clearly allege that NEPC India had removed the engines thereby making a change in the aircrafts and that such removal has diminished the value and utility of the aircrafts and affected them injuriously, thereby causing loss and damage to IOC, which has the right to possess the entire aircraft. The allegations clearly constitute the offence of "mischief". The Court is not concerned with the proof or ultimate decision. (Para 37)

Thus the High Court was not justified in quashing the complaints/criminal proceedings in entirety. The allegations in the complaints are sufficient to constitute offences under Sections 415 and 425 IPC. Accordingly, the appeals are allowed in part and the order of the High Court insofar as it quashes the complaints under Sections 415 and 425 is set aside. (Para 38). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[10555] — Ss. 425 and 429 — Ingredients and applicability of S. 429 — If commission of 'mischief' as defined under S. 425 is not made out S. 429 is not attracted

Once the applicability of Section 425 IPC dealing with 'mischief' is ruled out on such material there would remain no occasion to invoke Section 429 which for its applicability requires the prosecution to show in the first instance any material against the accused concerned indicating the commission of mischief by the accused. Keshub Mahindra v. State of M.P., (1996) 6 SCC 129: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1124.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.B. Majmudar, J. [Date of decision: 13-9-1996]

— S. 426 See also Ss. 302, 506, 324, 426, 427, 435, 143, 144, 147 and 148

See also Ss. 409, 422, 426 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 120-B and 426

See also Ss. 447 and 426

See also Ss. 503, 506, 447 and 426

— S. 427 See also Ss. 147, 148, 323, 324, 149, 427 and 395

See also Ss. 147, 148, 324, 447, 448, 427, 379, 307 and 302 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 147, 427 r/w 149 and 323 r/w 149

See also Ss. 167, 109 and 427

See also Ss. 302, 148, 147, 452 and 427

See also Ss. 302, 307, 323, 324, 427, 448 and 34

See also Ss. 302, 307, 324, 323, 427, 453, 506 Pt. II, S. 147 r/w S. 149 and S. 148

See also Ss. 302, 506, 324, 426, 427, 435, 143, 144, 147 and 148

See also Ss. 304 Pt. II/149 and Ss. 148, 452, 427, 325 and S. 302

See also Ss. 307, 149, 147, 427 and 324

See also Ss. 307, 427, 323/120-B, 148 and 149

See also Ss. 307, 427 and 448

See also Ss. 323, 506, 427, 354 and 452

See also Ss. 324, 427 and 504

See also Ss. 395, 427, 506 Pt. II and S. 34

See also Ss. 420/34 and 427 and 384

See also Ss. 436, 447, 427, 147 and 506

See also Ss. 447, 341, 323 and 427

See also Ss. 452, 232, 427, 506 and 147 to 149

[10556] — Ss. 427 and 425 — Applicability of S. 427 — Where the allegations against the accused did not cover the ingredients of S. 425, held, the accused could not be convicted under S. 427 either (Para 5). Krishna Gopal Singh v. State of U.P., 2000 SCC (Cri) 93: AIR 2000 SC 3616.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1999]

— S. 427 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 302, 148, 323, 325, 452, 436, 427 r/w S. 149

— Ss. 427/34 See also Ss. 149, 326/34, 324/34, 427/34, 450 and 392, 395 and 397

— Ss. 428/34 See also Ss. 447/379 and 428/34

— S. 429 See also Ss. 147, 323, 325, 429 and 436 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 304 Pt. II, 326, 324 and 429 and 304-A, 336, 337 and 338

See also Ss. 425 and 429

[10557] — S. 429 — Ingredients of offence under, different from those under Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972, S. 9(1) r/w S. 50(1)

Prima facie, the ingredients of an offence under S. 9(1) r/w S. 50(1) of the Act require for establishment of that offence certain ingredients which are not part of the offence under S. 429 and vice versa. State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27: AIR 1989 SC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.N. Venkatachaliah, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1988]

— S. 429 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 302 r/w S. 149, S. 364 r/w S. 149, S. 429 r/w S. 149 and S. 436 r/w S. 149

— S. 430 See also Ss. 409 and 430

[10558] — Ss. 430/120-B — Matter of civil nature — Attempt of complainant to involve the appellant's harassment — Commitment quashed. Sk. Alimuddin Ahmed v. State of W.B., (1972) 4 SCC 845: AIR 1971 SC 1371: 1971 Cri LJ 1100.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and P. Jaganmohan Reddy, J. [Date of decision: 22-3-1971]

— S. 435 See also Ss. 149, 323, 325 and 435

See also Ss. 302, 307, 435, 148, 120-B and 149

See also Ss. 302, 506, 324, 426, 427, 435, 143, 144, 147 and 148

See also Ss. 323, 325 and 435

— S. 436 See also Ss. 107, 109 and 436

See also Ss. 109, 115 and 436

See also Ss. 153-A, 201, 302, 326, 324, 419 and 436

See also Ss. 300 Exception 1, 304 Pt. I, 302/149, 436 and 147

See also Ss. 302, 148, 302/149 and 436

See also Ss. 302, 148, 323, 325, 452, 436, 427 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 302, 307 and 436

See also Ss. 302, 307, 436 and 147 to 149

See also Ss. 302, 307, 436 and 440 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 302, 326, 436, 147, 148 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 302 r/w 34 and 436

See also Ss. 302 r/w 148 and 149, 323, 324 and 436

See also Ss. 302/34, 201 and 436

[10559] — S. 436 — Absence of name of accused in FIR lodged under S. 436 — Act of setting fire to school building and placing bomb in its premises — Accused granted bail — Accused obtaining certificate of good character — Held, these circumstances would not affect legality of detention W.B. (Prevention of Violent Activities) Act, 1970 (19 of 1970), S. 3(2)(b) & (d)

Absence of name of the accused in the first information report can only mean that the Headmaster and other members of the staff refrained from doing so out of fear. Neither the fact of the petitioner having been granted conditional bail nor the fact of his having procured the certificate of good character by themselves further his contention that the impugned order was passed on baseless or false allegations. What the Court has to see is whether the incidents set out in the grounds for detention would clearly fall under S. 3(2)(b) and (d) of the Act. Sasthi Chandra Roy v. State of W.B., (1973) 4 SCC 82: 1973 SCC (Cri) 729: AIR 1972 SC 2134.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1972]

[10560] — S. 436 — Sentence — Period already undergone — Mitigating circumstances — Appellant-accused convicted under S. 436 and sentenced to RI for 3 years — In order to live in peace and tranquillity, appellant and widow of complainant entering into compromise on intervention of local elders whereunder an amount of Rs 1 lakh was given by appellant to the widow aged about 61 years as solatium — Appellant was a young married man having small children, only earning member of the family, and had spend more than seven months in jail — Held, offence punishable under S. 436 being non-compoundable, the same cannot be compounded on basis of compromise entered into between the parties — However, having regard to the circumstances interest of justice would be met if sentence is reduced to period already undergone — CrPC, 1973, S. 320 (Paras 7 to 10). Amar Nath Shukla v. State of Uttaranchal, (2009) 9 SCC 390: (2009) 82 AIC 14 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-2009]

[10561] — Ss. 436, 447, 427, 147 and 506 — Refusal by High Court to grant leave to appeal against acquittal of respondent-accused without assigning reasons — Impropriety — Counsel for appellant State contending that it was imperative for the High Court to indicate reasons as to why prayer for grant of leave was found untenable — In absence of any such reasons, the order of High Court, contended, was indefensible — Relying on Bhag Singh case, (2004) 1 SCC 547, held, impugned judgment of High Court is unsustainable and is set aside — Leave granted to the State to file appeal — High Court directed to entertain the appeal and after formal notice to the respondents, to hear and dispose it of in accordance with law, uninfluenced by any observation made in the present appeal — CrPC, 1973 — S. 378(3) (Paras 2, 6 and 8). State of H.P. v. Paras Ram, (2008) 3 SCC 655: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 117: AIR 2008 SC 930: (2008) 62 AIC 47 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1026: (2008) 105 Cut LT 392.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-1-2008]

State of Punjab v. Bhag Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 547: 2004 SCC (Cri) 341, followed [10562] — Ss. 436 and 477-A — Respondent alleged to have set on fire his office causing damage to the office building and the documents therein, with a view to destroy the evidence that was likely to be used against him in a pending departmental enquiry — Circumstantial evidence — Held, out of the seven circumstances relied on by the prosecution at least five based on evidence of PW 9 alone and if that evidence is disbelieved then leftover circumstances like existence of motive and the respondent's conduct, are not sufficient to base the conviction — Hence, High Court's judgment acquitting the respondent affirmed (Paras 4 and 7). State of H.P. v. Rajinder Singh, (2008) 17 SCC 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

— S. 436 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 302 and S. 436 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 396 and 436 r/w S. 34

— S. 436 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 147, 323, 325, 429 and 436 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 302 r/w S. 149, S. 364 r/w S. 149, S. 429 r/w S. 149 and S. 436 r/w S. 149

[10563] — Ss. 436 r/w 149, 364 r/w 149 and 302 r/w 149 — Houses burnt and two persons charred to death by mob — Two persons also found to be missing — Accused-appellants members of the mob — Specific overt act of actively participating in setting fire and throwing the victims into the fire disbelieved — No evidence adduced showing that the missing persons had been murdered — None of the accused shown to be armed — On facts held, common object of the unlawful assembly of committing murder not established — In absence of any evidence missing persons also cannot also be held to have been murdered — But common object of setting fire punishable under Ss. 436 read with 149 established beyond reasonable doubt — Hence conviction under Ss. 302 read with 149 and sentence of life imprisonment set aside — Sentence under Ss. 436 read with 149 and 364 read with 149 reduced from 10 years to 5 years. Mukteshwar Rai v. State of Bihar, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 727: 1992 SCC (Cri) 349: AIR 1992 SC 483: 1992 Cri LJ 518.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1991]

— Ss. 436/34 See also Ss. 302/34 and Ss. 436/34

[10564] — Ss. 436/34, 304, Pt. II/34 and 323/34 — On facts held, there was no infirmity in the appreciation of evidence by the High Court calling for any interference with the convictions under the various counts. Bisram v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1984 Supp SCC 620: 1983 SCC (Cri) 129.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1982]

— Ss. 436/149 See also Ss. 149, 302/149, 148, 436/149, 380 and 201/149

See also Ss. 302/149 and 436/149

— Ss. 438/34 See also Ss. 353/34 and 438/34

— S. 439 See also Ss. 406, 409, 420, 439, 471, 473 and 120-B

— S. 440 See also Ss. 302, 307, 341, 440 and 120-B

See also Ss. 302 and 440

— S. 440 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 302, 307, 436 and 440 r/w S. 149

— S. 441 See also Ss. 96, 97, 99, 104, 300 Exception 2 and 441

See also Ss. 97 Secondly, 99, 103, 441 and 300 Exception 2

See also Ss. 302 and 441

See also Ss. 424 and 441

[10565] — S. 441 — Accused, held, committed no trespass if they acted under bona fide claim of their legal right. Hathi Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1979) 4 SCC 340: 1979 SCC (Cri) 976.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-1979]

[10566] — S. 441 — Criminal trespass — Meaning of — Intention to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession of property essential

It is evident from the provision of Section 441 IPC that unauthorised entry into or upon property in the possession of another or unlawfully remaining there after lawful entry can answer the definition of criminal trespass if, and only if, such entry or unlawful remaining is with the intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession of the property. In other words, unless any of the intentions referred in Section 441 is proved no offence of criminal trespass can be said to have been committed. Such an intention has to be gathered from the facts and circumstances of a given case. (Para 21). Rajinder v. State of Haryana, (1995) 5 SCC 187: 1995 SCC (Cri) 852.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1995]

[10567] — S. 441 — Criminal trespass — Encroachment on public properties by raising hutments on payments and in slum areas by poor people — Held, on facts, does not amount to criminal trespass

The encroachments committed by the petitioners are involuntary acts in the sense that those acts are compelled by inevitable circumstances and are not guided by choice. They manage to find a habitat in the pavements or slums out of sheer helplessness. Their intention or object in doing so is not to 'commit an offence or intimidate, insult or annoy any person', which is the gist of the offence of 'criminal trespass' under S. 441 of the Penal Code. Olga Tellis v. Bombay Municipal Corpn., (1985) 3 SCC 545: AIR 1986 SC 180.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, V.D. Tulzapurkar, O. Chinnappa Reddy and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-1985]

[10568] — S. 441 — Entry and stay of striking employees in the employer's premises does not constitute criminal trespass — Intention to pressurise the management does not constitute the necessary mens rea under S. 441

Even if one assumes that the employees' entry in the premises was unlawful or that their continuance in the premises became unlawful, it is difficult to appreciate the argument that the said entry was made with intent to insult or annoy the superior officers. The sole intention of the strikers obviously was to put pressure on the Bank to concede their demands. Even if the strikers might have known that the strike may annoy or insult the Bank's officers it is difficult to hold that such knowledge would necessarily lead to the inference of the requisite intention. In every case where the impugned entry causes annoyance or insult it cannot be said to be actuated by the intention to cause the said result. The distinction between knowledge and intention is quite clear, and that distinction must be borne in mind in deciding whether or not in the present case the strikers were actuated by the requisite intention. Punjab National Bank Ltd. v. All India Punjab National Bank Employees' Federation, AIR 1960 SC 160, 176: (1960) 1 SCR 806: (1959) 2 LLJ 666: (1959-60) 17 FJR 199.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha[1], P.B. Gajendragadkar[1] and K. Subba Rao[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1959]

AIR 1934 Pat 158, distinguished

[10569] — S. 441 — Ingredients of — Warrant of execution of possession becoming unexecutable — Persons going to the land to take possession on the basis of such a warrant — Ingredients of S. 441 explained — No offence in the absence of intention to commit offence

In order to establish that the entry on the property was with the intent to annoy, intimidate or insult, it is necessary for the Court to be satisfied that causing such annoyance, intimidation or insult was the aim of the entry; that it is not sufficient for that purpose to show merely that the natural consequence of the entry was likely to be annoyance, intimidation or insult, and that this likely consequence was known to the persons entering; that in deciding whether the aim of the entry was the causing of such annoyance, intimidation or insult, the Court has to consider all the relevant circumstances including the presence of knowledge that its natural consequences would be such annoyance, intimidation or insult and including also the probability of something else than the causing of such intimidation, insult or annoyance, being the dominant intention which prompted the entry.

When the accused went to the land armed with a warrant of execution, which had become unexecutable it is reasonable to think that the intention which prompted and dominated their action was to execute the warrants. They could not reasonably be expected to know that the warrants had ceased to be executable in law. Therefore criminal trespass was not committed or apprehended from the acts of accused who entered the property. Mathri v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 986: (1964) 5 SCR 916: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 57, 62.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and K.C. Das Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1963]

Emperor v. Motilal, AIR 1925 All 540: ILR 47 ALL 855: 26 Cri LJ 1273; Bhagwant v. Kedari, ILR 25 Bom 202: 2 Bom LR 986; Emperor v. D'cunha, AIR 1936 Bom 15: 37 Bom LR 880: 1937 Cri LJ 309; Nizamuddin v. Jinnat Husain, AIR 1948 Cal 130: 49 Cri LJ 120; Satish Chandra Modak v. King, AIR 1949 Cal 107: ILR (1949) 2 Cal 171: 50 Cri LJ 161; Bala Krishna Ghosh v. State, AIR 1957 Cal 385: 1957 Cri LJ 719; State v. Abdul Sukur, AIR 1960 Cal 189: 1950 Cri LJ 342; Queen v. Rayapadayachi, ILR 19 Mad 240; Vullappa v. Bhima Row, AIR 1918 Mad 136: 19 Cri LJ 162, approved

Kesar Singh v. Rex, AIR 1950 All 157: 51 Cri LJ 496; Emperor v. Laxman Raghunath, ILR 26 Bom 558: 4 Bom LR 280; Sellamuthu v. Pallumuthu, 12 Cri LJ 30: ILR 35 Mad 186, overruled

[10570] — S. 441 — Lapse of time between commission of robbery or theft and recovery of crime articles — Whether possession of the articles recent

No fixed time limit can be laid down to determine whether possession is recent or otherwise and each case must be judged on its own facts. The question as to what amounts to recent possession sufficient to justify the presumption of guilt varies according as the stolen article is or is not calculated to pass readily from hand to hand. If the stolen articles are of the latter kind, the period of one year that elapsed cannot be said to be too long particularly when the appellant had been absconding during that period. There was no lapse of time between the date of his arrest and the recovery of the stolen property. Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447: AIR 1983 SC 446: 1983 Cri LJ 846.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1983]

[10571] — Ss. 441 and 447 — 'Intent to annoy' — Meaning of

There cannot be any doubt that the intention of the respondents was to annoy the appellant who was in possession of the case land. The litigation started in 1951 and it was on February 3, 1963, that the appellant was able to obtain possession. It is only three weeks after that day that the respondents chose to trespass and start construction. In this case, we cannot find any other dominant intention which promoted the trespass. The land in dispute was lying vacant after the appellant obtained possession and the actual possession must be of the appellant. Further the law does not require that the intention must be to annoy a person who is actually present at the time of trespass. Rash Behari Chatterjee v. Fagu Shaw, (1969) 2 SCC 216: AIR 1970 SC 20: 1970 Cri LJ 4.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, R.S. Bachawat and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1969]

[10572] — Ss. 441 and 448 — Trespass under, is a continuing offence within the meaning of S. 472 CrPC

House trespass is punishable under S. 448 of the Indian Penal Code. When entry into or upon property in possession of another is lawful then unlawfully remaining upon such property with the object of intimidating, insulting or annoying the person in possession of the property would be criminal trespass. The offence would be continuing so long as the trespass is not lifted or vacated and intimidation, insult or annoyance of the person legally in possession of the property is not stopped. (Para 14). Gokak Patel Volkart Ltd. v. Dundayya Gurushiddaiah Hiremath, (1991) 2 SCC 141: 1991 SCC (Cri) 315: (1991) 1 LLN 970: (1991) 71 Comp Cas 403.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.N. Saikia and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1991]

[10573] — Ss. 441 (as amended by U.P. Act 31 of 1961) and 448 — "Intent to commit an offence" essential condition for constituting offence under — Mere trespass in absence of this condition would not amount to 'criminal trespass' — Matter in the nature of a civil dispute regarding eviction cannot be adjudicated under

Offence under S. 441, IPC is not made out in this case and conviction under S. 448, IPC was therefore, not justified. Every trespass does not amount to criminal trespass within the meaning of S. 441, IPC. In order to satisfy the conditions of S. 441 it must be established that the appellant entered in possession over the premises with intent to commit an offence. But in the complaint made by the respondent there was absolutely no allegation in this regard. On the facts of the present case at the most it can be said that after the death of 'R', the leave and licence granted by him to the appellant came to an end and the appellant stayed in the premises thereafter as a trespasser. The appellant might be in a position to vindicate her right and justify her possession if a suit for eviction was filed in the civil court. This is thus essentially a civil matter which could be properly adjudicated upon by a competent civil court. To initiate criminal proceedings in the circumstances appears to be only an abuse of the process of the court. Kanwal Sood v. Nawal Kishore, (1983) 3 SCC 25: 1983 SCC (Cri) 553: AIR 1983 SC 159: 1983 ALJ 814: 1983 Cri LJ 173.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-1982]

— S. 447 See also Ss. 96, 100, 99 and 447

See also Ss. 96, 100, 147, 353, 447 and 307 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 100, 99 and 447

See also Ss. 100, 147, 353, 447 and 307 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 120-B, 148, 147, 447 and 302 r/w S. 34 and S. 302 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 143, 147, 447 and 448

See also Ss. 147, 148, 324, 447, 448, 427, 379, 307 and 302 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 147, 447, 325/149 and 304 Pt. II/149

See also Ss. 300 Thirdly and 302 and 304 Pt. II and 447

See also Ss. 302 and 447

See also Ss. 302, 447 and 34

See also Ss. 302/149, 148, 201 and 447

See also Ss. 304 Pt. II, 323, 447, 96, 97 and 100

See also Ss. 304 Pt. II, 325 and 447

See also Ss. 307, 323, 326 and 447

See also Ss. 395, 447 and 506

See also Ss. 436, 447, 427, 147 and 506

See also Ss. 441 and 447

See also Ss. 503, 506, 447 and 426

[10574] — S. 447 — Trespass — Whether accused were in possession of land in question — A-13 purchasing from S land in possession of deceased X — Thereafter, A-13 obtaining an order of eviction of X — Evidence indicating that the said order was followed by the execution proceeding in which actual delivery of possession was effected and A-13 came in possession of the said land — That apart, there was even an order passed by the Magistrate under S. 144 CrPC against X — Held, trial court was justified in holding that the accused were in actual physical possession of the said land — High Court erred in setting aside this finding (Para 18). Vajrapu Sambayya Naidu v. State of A.P., (2004) 10 SCC 152: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1768: AIR 2003 SC 3706: 2003 Cri LJ 4433.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2003]

[10575] — Ss. 447, 341, 323 and 427 — Summons case — Stopping of proceedings and its subsequent reopening — Reasons for — Necessary requirement of — Effect of the order passed under S. 258 CrPC whether is either acquittal or discharge — Held, reasons have to be assigned for reopening the case against accused — Further held, since appellant was not arrested in the present case, she cannot claim the benefit of discharge as no release order was passed — As such proceedings could be revived — But revival by an unreasoned order was bad — Hence matter remitted for fresh consideration — Constitution of India, Art. 20(2) — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 245, 258 and 300(1) & (5)

A first information report was lodged for commission of offences punishable under Sections 447, 341, 323 and 427 IPC. On filing of the charge-sheet cognizance of offences was taken in 2002. Processes were issued against the appellant-accused. The same having not been served, non-bailable warrant was issued. In 2004 the Magistrate, in view of non-service of non-bailable warrant passed an order under Section 258 CrPC that further proceedings against the appellant be stopped.

In 2006, a requisition was filed praying for issuance of non-bailable warrant of arrest to the accused upon reopening the case. On the basis of the said purported requisition, the case was reopened and a non-bailable warrant of arrest was issued against the appellant.

The appellant filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court which was dismissed.

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

An order of discharge can be passed in terms of Section 245 CrPC. For passing an order under the aforesaid provision, reasons are required to be recorded. It was obligatory on the part of the Magistrate to apply his mind with regard thereto. (Para 14)

In this case, no order for release of the accused was passed. No order of releasing the accused was necessary to be passed as the appellant was not before the court. She had not even been arrested.

Non-bailable warrant of arrest issued against her had not been executed. The benefit of effect of discharge could have been claimed by the appellant had she been directed to be released, the effect of discharge being correlated with release. If she had not been released, the question of her obtaining the benefit of the effect of discharge does not arise. (Paras 13 and 14)

Although the High Court was correct that the Magistrate in a situation of this nature could revive the proceedings, but, the Magistrate committed an error in not recording the reasons therefor. The Magistrate is directed to pass an appropriate order upon consideration of the requisition filed by the police authorities afresh. (Paras 14 and 15). Renuka v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 14 SCC 345: (2009) 76 AIC 147 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 2245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-2009]

Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82, relied on [10576] — Ss. 447 and 426 — Sentence — Sarpanch and panchas removing embankment mala fide on complainant's land — Enhancement of sentence justified. Nilkanth v. State of Maharashtra, (1969) 2 SCWR 432.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Sikri, Mitter and Jaganmohan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-9-1969]

[10577] — Ss. 447/379 and 428/34 — Prima facie case — Discharge under S. 253(2), CrPC, not proper

Where a prima facie case is made out regarding alleged criminal trespass etc. discharge of the accused person by bringing in a discussion of title to property is improper. Mahant Abhey Dass v. S. Gurdial Singh, (1972) 4 SCC (N) 44: 1971 SCC (Cri) 244: AIR 1971 SC 834: 1971 Cri LJ 691.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and P.Jaganmohan Reddy and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1971]

— S. 448 See also Ss. 143, 147, 447 and 448

See also Ss. 147, 148, 324, 447, 448, 427, 379, 307 and 302 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 148, 448, 307, 302 and 120-B r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 302, 307, 148 and 448

See also Ss. 302, 307, 323, 324, 427, 448 and 34

See also Ss. 302, 364, 448 and 148

See also Ss. 302, 448, 326, 147, 148, 149 and 34

See also Ss. 307, 427 and 448

See also Ss. 376 and 448

See also Ss. 441 (as amended by U.P. Act 31 of 1961) and 448

See also Ss. 441 and 448

[10578] — S. 448 — High Court refusing to quash proceedings for offence under — On meticulous examination of the record, as well as statements under S. 161, CrPC, held, there was no material connecting the appellant with the offence of criminal trespass — Allegations vague and an afterthought — Charged quashed but not to affect proceedings against other accused under Ss. 448 and 380, IPC — Constitution of India, Art. 136. Bhaskar Chattoraj v. State of W.B., 1991 Supp (2) SCC 574: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1077: AIR 1991 SC 317: 1991 Cri LJ 451.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, M. Fathima Beevi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1990]

[10579] — S. 448 — Ingredients of — Held, on facts, commission of offence under clearly established

In order to sustain the conviction under Section 448 IPC it must be found that the intention of the accused was to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy the complainant. There must be unlawful entry and there must be proof of one or the other of the intentions mentioned in Section 441 IPC. In the case at hand, evidence clearly establishes the commission of offence punishable under Section 448. (Para 10). Vidyadharan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 1 SCC 215: 2004 SCC (Cri) 260: AIR 2004 SC 536: (2004) 1 KLT 105: 2004 Cri LJ 605: (2004) 2 MPLJ 251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-2003]

[10580] — Ss. 448 and 354 — Deceased committing suicide due to outraging of her modesty by tenant/house trespasser — Conviction under Ss. 448 and 354 on the sole basis of dying declaration, upheld

The landlords of the appellant-accused (tenant) were parents of the deceased girl. The accused was soliciting the deceased for sexual intercourse. On 12-11-1999 at around 1 p.m., taking advantage of the absence of other family members, the accused allegedly came behind, caught hold of the deceased when she was collecting dried clothes. The deceased threatened him saying that she would complain to her mother about the acts of the accused, he in turn replied that he himself, would complain to her mother saying that she herself called him and thereby, would defame her and her family. Feeling disturbed and suffering from emotional turmoil, the deceased went into a room, poured kerosene and set herself on fire. On receipt of intimation from the hospital, police registered a case against the accused for the offences punishable under Sections 448, 354 and 306 IPC. The trial court placed reliance on the dying declarations (Exts. P-4 to P-9) recorded by a Civil Judge and a Head Constable on 12-11-1999. The High Court found that offence under Section 306 IPC as noted above was not made out. However, it concurred with the trial Judge that the offences punishable under Sections 354 and 448 IPC were clearly made out. Accordingly, the impugned judgment was passed.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

No interference is called for as the trial court and the High Court have analysed the evidence of the witnesses and the statements made in the dying declarations to hold the accused guilty. There is no substance in the plea that the deceased was not in a physical condition to give a statement. So far as the practicability of the deceased giving a dying declaration is concerned it is significant that the Senior Civil Judge (PW 7) and the constable (PW 10) have described in detail as to what the deceased has stated to each one of them. There was not even any suggestion to either of the witnesses that the deceased was not in a fit condition to give any statement as claimed. There is no reason to doubt the veracity of the dying declarations especially since there is consistency between them. There is no reason why the judicial officer should make a false statement about the dying declaration. (Paras 9 to 13). Sk. Nagoor v. State of A.P., (2008) 15 SCC 471: AIR 2008 SC 1500: (2008) 64 AIC 87 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2079.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2008]

Bapu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 12 SCC 73: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 545, relied on [10581] — Ss. 448 and 506 Pt. II — SLP for compounding before Supreme Court of offences under Ss. 448 and 506 Pt. II — Compounding permitted on the condition that the accused contribute Rs 3000 to the Prime Minister's Relief Fund — CrPC, 1973 — S. 320. Devender Kumar Sharma v. State of M.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1993]

— S. 449 See also Ss. 149, 302/149, 327, 336, 449 and 147

See also S. 149 r/w Ss. 302, 307, 449, 323 to 325 and 148

See also Ss. 302, 120-B, 307 r/w Ss. 149, 397, 147, 506 and 449

See also Ss. 302, 302/34 and 449

See also Ss. 302, 302/149, 148, 449, 326 and 326/149

See also Ss. 302, 307, 148, 449 and 201

See also Ss. 302, 364, 369, 376(2)(f), 392 and 449

See also Ss. 302, 392, 449 and 380

See also Ss. 302, 394, 397 and 449

See also Ss. 302 and 449

See also Ss. 302, 449 and 34

See also Ss. 302, 449, 379 and 201

See also Ss. 302 r/w Ss. 34 and 449, 460, 394

See also Ss. 302/34, 394/397 and 449

See also Ss. 302/34 and 449

See also Ss. 302/34, 449 and 326/34

See also Ss. 302/34, 457(1), 398, 120-B and 449

See also Ss. 302/149, 148 and 449

See also Ss. 302/149, 307/149, 148 and 449

See also Ss. 395, 396, 397 and 449

[10582] — S. 449 — Applicability of section does not depend upon actual accomplishment of purpose

An act can be said to be committed "in order to the committing of an offence" even though the offence may not be completed. Thus, if a person commits a house trespass with the purpose of the committing of theft but has failed to accomplish the purpose, it will be proper to say that he has committed the house trespass in order to the committing of theft. There can be no doubt that the words "in order to" have been used to mean "with the purpose of". If the purpose in committing the house trespass is the commission of an offence punishable with death the house trespass becomes punishable under S. 449 of the Penal Code. Whether or not the purpose was actually accomplished is quite irrelevant in these cases. The fact that the murder was not actually committed will not affect the applicability of S. 449 of the Penal Code. Matiullah Sheikh v. State of W.B., AIR 1965 SC 132: (1964) 6 SCR 978: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 126.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1964]

[10583] — S. 449 — Expression 'in order to' — Means 'with the purpose of'. Matiullah Sheikh v.

State of W.B., AIR 1965 SC 132: (1964) 6 SCR 978: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 126.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1964]

[10584] — Ss. 449, 394/397 and 302/34 — Robbery and murder committed in one and the same transaction — Recovery of stolen articles soon after the occurrence from the possession of the accused — Held, it can be presumed that the person in whose possession the stolen articles were found committed the robbery and murder — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114 Ill. (a). Mukund v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 130: 1997 SCC (Cri) 799: AIR 1997 SC 2622: 1997 Cri LJ 3182.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-1997]

[10585] — Ss. 449, 458, 459, 392, 397, 302 and 307 — Fingerprint expert — Though the evidence of the fingerprint expert was free from any infirmity, but in view of the suspicious manner in which the fingerprints had been obtained, held, conviction cannot be sustained on the opinion of the expert alone — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 45 (Paras 21 to 24). Chandran v. State of Kerala, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 39: 1991 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1990 SC 2148: 1990 Cri LJ 2296.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1990]

[10586] — Ss. 449, 458, 459, 392, 397, 302 and 307 — Recovery of crime articles made by police officers — Circumstantial Evidence — None of the recoveries made pursuant to any statement made by accused — On scrutiny of evidence regarding the recoveries, held, the recoveries failed to clinchingly establish the guilt of the accused — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27. Chandran v. State of Kerala, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 39: 1991 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1990 SC 2148: 1990 Cri LJ 2296.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1990]

— S. 450 See also Ss. 149, 326/34, 324/34, 427/34, 450 and 392, 395 and 397

See also Ss. 302, 307, 148, 450, r/w Ss. 149 and 120-B

See also Ss. 375, 376 and 450

See also Ss. 376 and 450

See also Ss. 395, 397 and 450

See also Ss. 396, 397, 450 and 397/149

[10587] — Ss. 450, 302 r/w S. 34 — Accused charged for offences under TADA Act as well as IPC, acquitted of the charges under TADA Act but convicted for the offences under IPC only on the basis of the confessional statement recorded during the investigation in the said case — Propriety of — Setting aside the conviction and sentence, held, confessional statement recorded during the investigation in a TADA case cannot be used for convicting an accused for offences punishable under IPC, when offences against such accused under the TADA Act have failed — TADA, 1987 — Ss. 15, 3 & 4

The confessional statement recorded during the investigation in a TADA case cannot be used for convicting an accused for offences punishable under the Penal Code, when offences against such accused under TADA have failed. In the instant case, it is an admitted fact that the appellant has been acquitted of the charges framed under TADA and that, apart from the confessional statement, there is no other material before the court to support the prosecution case. In that view of the matter, the conviction and sentence passed by the trial court has to be set aside. (Paras 5 and 6). Gurprit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2002) 10 SCC 201: 2004 SCC (Cri) 466: AIR 2002 SC 2390.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-2001]

Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v. State of A.P., (1997) 7 SCC 431: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1094, relied on

Held to be per incuriam in Prakash Kumar v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 2 SCC 409

— S. 450 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 326 and 450 r/w S. 34

[10588] — S. 450 [Ss. 302/148/149/450] — Conviction and sentence of appellants under — Sustainability — Murder trial — Five policemen accused of entering house of deceased with intention to rape her — Foiled by sons of deceased crying for help — On suggestion of one accused to prevent implication another accused killed the deceased — On facts, held, there was no evidence that present appellants (two out of the five accused) had any role in the killing of the deceased lady — There was no evidence of common intention either — Hence, their conviction under S. 302, unsustainable — However, their conviction under other provisions mentioned in trial court judgment, upheld, as there was no doubt that appellants along with other co-accused committed criminal trespass into the house of the deceased and also formed unlawful assembly, though such attempt was frustrated by the presence of sons of the deceased — They surely had ill motive, although nature thereof was not proved — What could, however, be the nature thereof, was not known — Forcible entry in the house of the deceased, however, stands estab- lished — Ingredients of S. 450, thus, stand fully satisfied — Therefore, courts below have rightly found appellants guilty of commission of offence under the said provision (Paras 1, 3 and 7 to 10). Surjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 15 SCC 391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-5-2007]

— S. 451 See also Ss. 4, 380 and 451

See also Ss. 148, 452, 392, 147 and 451

See also Ss. 149, 302/149, 148, 302, 451, 323/149 and 201/149

See also Ss. 149 and 302/149, 454, 451 and 148

See also Ss. 302/149, 454, 451 and 148

See also Ss. 376 and 451

See also Ss. 376, 511, 451 and 354

See also Ss. 452, 451 and 354

[10589] — Ss. 451 and 377 — House-trespass for committing unnatural offence — Evidence of victim of sex offence — Corroboration — Requirement of — Trial court convicting and sentencing the respondent-accused for offences punishable under Ss. 451 and 377 IPC with fine to be paid to the victim — Appeal bringing no relief — Revision was filed before High Court which by the impugned order set aside the order of conviction and sentence and directed acquittal on the primary ground of absence of corroboration and alleged suppression of a report purported to have been given before the FIR in question was lodged — Held, an accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence, even if, taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable — The evidence of a victim of sexual offence is entitled to great weight, absence of corroboration notwithstanding — The rule regarding non-requirement of corroboration is equally applicable to a case relating to S. 377 IPC — On facts, held, the High Court has directed acquittal on untenable grounds — Impugned order of High Court is unsustainable and therefore set aside — Orders of the trial court and first appellate court restored — CrPC, 1973, S. 357(1)(b)

An accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence, even if taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable. Judicial response to human rights cannot be blunted by legal jugglery. In the Indian setting refusal to act on the testimony of the victim of sexual assault in the absence of corroboration as a rule, is adding insult to injury. A girl or a woman in the tradition-bound non-permissive society of India would be extremely reluctant even to admit that any incident which is likely to reflect on her chastity or dignity had ever occurred. She would be conscious of the danger of being ostracised by the society and when in the face of these factors the crime is brought to light, there is inbuilt assurance that the charge is genuine rather than fabricated. The evidence of a victim of sex offence is entitled to great weight, absence of corroboration notwithstanding. To insist on corroboration except in the rarest of rare cases is to equate one who is a victim of the lust of another with an accomplice to a crime and thereby insult womanhood. The rule regarding non-requirement of corroboration is equally applicable to a case of this nature, relating to Section 377 IPC. (Paras 7, 8 and 11)

The evidence of the victim who was 10 years of age at the time of occurrence and was about 14 years of age at the time of deposition in the Court has categorically and elaborately described the incident. She has graphically described as to how the offence was committed. (Para 12)

In cross-examination no material inconsistency has surfaced except some minor ones which are but natural. The High Court clearly lost sight of these factors and has directed acquittal on untenable grounds. It is unsustainable and is set aside. Orders of the trial court and first appellate court stand restored. (Para 13). State of Kerala v. Kurissum Moottil Antony, (2007) 1 SCC 627: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 403: (2006) 48 AIC 53 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2006]

Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947; Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: 2004 SCC (Cri) 31, relied on [10590] — Ss. 451 and 381 r/w S. 120-B — Sentence — Absence of malicious intent — Offence committed for ulterior motive — Sentence reduced to period undergone — Appellants found to have unlawfully trespassed into workshop of employer company and taken away three radioactive resources — They sentenced to RI for period of 3 years each (sentences to run concurrently) — No ulterior motive except to cause some nuisance to employer because of grievance against management occasioned by transfer of A-1 to Bombay — No evidence to show that appellants had stored the articles for some financial gain, nor they attempting to sell the articles — Appellants already undergoing sentence of more than 1 year and 9 months — Hence, sentence reduced to period already undergone (Paras 1, 7 and 8). Alistair v. State of T.N., (2009) 17 SCC 794.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam, J. [Date of decision: 5-2-2009]

— S. 452 See also Ss. 96 and 302/34, 326, 324, 452

See also Ss. 148, 392 and 452

See also Ss. 148, 452, 392, 147 and 451

See also Ss. 149, 302/149, 325/149, 323/149 and 452

See also Ss. 302, 147, 148, 452, 341 and 149

See also Ss. 302, 148, 147, 452 and 427

See also Ss. 302, 148, 323, 325, 452, 436 and 427 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 302, 307, 324, 148 and 452

See also Ss. 302, 307, 326, 324, 323, 342, 452 and 149

See also Ss. 302, 307, 452 and 34

See also Ss. 302 and 452

See also Ss. 302, 452 and 324

See also Ss. 302, 452 and 504

See also S. 302 r/w Ss. 34 and 149, 324 and 452

See also S. 302 r/w S. 149, Ss. 148 and 452

See also Ss. 302/34, 304, 452 and 300 Exception 4

See also Ss. 302/34, 307/34 and 452

See also Ss. 302/34 and 452

See also Ss. 302/34, 452 and 323/34

See also Ss. 302/149, 148 and 452

See also Ss. 302/149, 307/149, 452, 148 and 147

See also Ss. 302/149, 325/149, 323/149 and 452

See also Ss. 302/149, 452 and 307/149

See also Ss. 304 Pt. II/149 and Ss. 148, 452, 427, 325 and S. 302

See also Ss. 307 and 452

See also Ss. 323, 506, 427, 354 and 452

See also Ss. 324, 326 and 452

See also Ss. 325 and 452

See also Ss. 326 and 452

See also Ss. 354, 452, 323 and 506 Pt. II r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323, 366 and 506

See also Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323 and 506

See also Ss. 376/149, 375, 148, 452, 342, 323, 366 and 506

See also Ss. 376(1) r/w S. 511 and Ss. 324 and 452

See also Ss. 393 and 452

[10591] — Ss. 452, 232, 427, 506 and 147 to 149 — Further investigation — Scope of — Non-investigation of vital aspects in a counter FIR even after submission of two final reports — Further investigation whether permissible — First final report in an allegation of forgery of mutation records and grievous hurt by gunshot injury submitting that no case made out — IO reinstituting investigation by seeking advice from Public Prosecutor when a writ order directed fair and impartial investigation — An SLP order (in between the submission of first and second final report) directing completion of investigation — IO seeking further investigation with regard to embezzlement of Rs 13.5 lakhs — IO seeking such further investigation after submission of second final report/charge-sheet — Magistrate granting permission for such further investigation — Legality — In terms of direction of Supreme Court, fact that Magistrate had given permission for further investigation and vital aspect of investigation not having been made, held, it was obligatory on the part of IO to complete the investigation and submit an appropriate report — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 173(8) and 482

A son MA was involved in a dispute with his sister ME and mother S over a farmhouse. The first FIR for alleged offences under Sections 147, 148, 149, 452, 232, 427 and 506 IPC was lodged by ME for alleged raiding of the farmhouse by MA and 40 others and attacking S. The accused were allegedly arrested on the spot. SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 arose out of the first FIR (FIR No. 960 of 1999). The second FIR (FIR No. 960-A of 1999) was lodged by MA against ME and her farm employees alleging grievous hurt by a gunshot injury. MA also alleged forgery of documents whereof mutation records of the farmhouse were altered. SLP (Crl.) No. 5419 of 2008 arose out of the second FIR.

Charge-sheet was filed on the first FIR. On the second FIR, a final report was made stating that no case was made out. When a writ order (in WP No. 7230 of 1999) was passed by the High Court directing impartial inquiry, the DSP concerned, after seeking opinion of the Public Prosecutor, reopened the second FIR. Apprehending arrest, ME and S also moved the writ jurisdiction, whereupon, the High Court disposed of the matter directing fair, honest investigation without coercive steps against the parties. An SLP in this regard was also disposed of directing transfer of investigation to CB CID and continuation of protection to ME.

On the first FIR, MA's trial was concluded and he was convicted. Thereafter, during pendency of appeal in the High Court, he was released on bail and his sentence was suspended. On the second FIR, charge-sheet was filed against S & ME and cognizance was taken. A petition under Section 482 CrPC (CMA No. 620 of 2006) to quash proceedings against them was dismissed but the High Court directed the trial court to consider exemption of personal attendance of S in terms of Section 205 CrPC and observed that they deserved protection. This was the impugned order in SLP (Crl.) No. 5419 of 2008.

SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 related to the issue of further investigation against ME and others with regard to embezzlement of Rs 13,50,000. The said further investigation was requested by CB CID after charge-sheet had been filed and Section 482 petition was disposed of. The said further investigation was allowed by the Magistrate and not interfered with by the High Court while exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC (CMA No. 518 of 2008).

Disposing of the appeals,

Held:

So far as the criminal appeals arising out of Special Leave Petitions (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 and Special Leave Petitions (Crl.) Nos. 6136-37 of 2008 are concerned, there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that the jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 is limited. (Para 42)

In Crime Case No. 960-A of 1999, the Supreme Court had directed CB CID to complete the investigation. It was, thus, obligatory on its part to complete the investigation and submit an appropriate report to the Court. Even otherwise the Magistrate has granted such permission. It is, however, not the case of *S*that the Magistrate had accepted the final report. Even in such a case, the Magistrate was bound to give notice to the complainant who could have objected thereto. A protest petition was also maintainable. (Paras 28, 25 and 27)

The investigation in Crime No. 960-A of 1999 runs from one extreme end to the other. Final reports were prepared twice. However, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, CB CID on the second final report so prepared sought to obtain the legal opinion of the Public Prosecutor. Such a course adopted may be irregular but it is not denied or disputed that a vital aspect of the matter of the investigation had not been carried out. It is not the case of the appellants i.e. S and ME that the opinion given by the Public Prosecutor was incorrect. (Para 25). Manoj Narain Agrawal v. Shashi Agrawal, (2009) 6 SCC 385: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1096: (2009) 4 All LJ 528.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Kamlapati Trivedi v. State of W.B., (1980) 2 SCC 91: 1980 SCC (Cri) 347; Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427; Bhagwan Samardha Sreepada Vallabha Venkata Vishwanandha Maharaj v. State of A.P., (1999) 5 SCC 740: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on

[10592] — Ss. 452, 323, 504, 506, 420 — Quashment of proceedings — When warranted — Appellants during their student career in a private MBBS College, were on bad terms with Chairman/MD of the College Trust, college staff and a police personnel (whose daughter was studying there) — In Crime Case No. 412/2005 appellants allegedly entered the house of I (Respondent 3, a teacher of the Medical College) and threatened her with knife and brickbats to kidnap her children and to have abused her — In Crime Case No. 21/2006, appellants were accused of beating up security guard and damaging college properties — FIR in Crime Case No. 412/2005 was lodged under Ss. 452, 323, 504, 506 and 427 IPC — FIR in Crime Case No. 21/2006 was lodged under Ss. 452, 323, 504, 506, 420 IPC — All disputes arose because father of the appellants demanded return of the loan taken by the Chairman/MD — Series of civil writ petitions, criminal proceedings were initiated by the appellants in which allegations of victimisation and torture were made against M*, in his personal capacity and also as Chairman/MD of the College Trust — Considering the tenor of apology tendered by the appellants for their indisciplined conduct, nature of offence alleged, history of allegations and counter-allegations, victimisation and torture of appellants by local police as well as College authorities, their lack of disciplinary conduct as MBBS students, their future career, on facts, held, it is a fit case for exercise of jurisdiction under Art. 142 of the Constitution of India — Criminal proceedings quashed and the appellants asked to tender a written apology — Constitution of India — Art. 142*

Two crime cases, Crime Case No. 412/2005 under Sections 452, 323, 504, 506 and 427 IPC and Crime Case No. 21/2006 under Sections 452, 323, 504, 506 and 420 IPC were lodged against the appellants (MO and MA), when they were pursuing their career as MBBS students. In Crime Case No. 412/2005, the appellants are alleged to have entered the house of I (Respondent 3, a teacher of the Medical College) and threatened her with knife and brickbats to kidnap her children and to have abused her. She was rescued by a security guard and some students. In Crime Case No. 21/2006, the appellants have been accused of beating up security guards and damaging college properties.

N (the father of the appellants: daughter MO and son MA) is an NRI Professor/Medical Director and practitioner in California. The appellants were born in California and completed their schooling in USA. Indisputably, both the appellants took admission in the MBBS course in the session 1996-1997 in Santosh Medical College and Hospital under the NRI quota against handsome payments of US $50,000 and US $49,700 each in addition to hostel charges and security deposit i.e. Rs 75,000 and Rs 45,000 respectively for one year. In April 2000, M (Respondent 2) Chairman/Managing Director of the Medical College took a loan of Rs 25 lakhs on interest at the rate of 11.5% from N, father of the appellants. Payment of the loan amount was assured by a handwritten slip. Disputes and differences arose after the father of the appellants demanded repayment of the loan from M (Respondent 2). A series of civil writ petitions and criminal proceedings besides contempt proceedings were initiated by the appellants in which allegations of mala fides, acts of victimisation and physical and mental harassment were alleged against M in his personal capacity and also as a Chairman/Managing Director of the College Trust.

The appellants alleged that having miserably failed in all attempts to ruin the career of the first appellant, M on 4-4-2003 got a false and frivolous report lodged under Sections 504 and 506 IPC through his yes-man and associate, A against all the members of the appellants' family whereupon case, Crime No. 286 of 2003 was registered against them. The High Court had stayed further proceedings in this case.

When in the case preferred by N, under Section 138 of the NI Act, M and others were summoned as accused persons, M got infuriated and became more and more vindictive against the appellants and their family members.

On 2-5-2004 and 2-6-2004 the appellants were allegedly assaulted mercilessly by M, AS (Station Officer, PS Vijay Nagar) and their drivers. MO (Appellant 1) was molested and she had been threatened to be kidnapped, raped and even murdered whereas MA (Appellant 2) was assaulted with kicks, fists, shoes and sticks. M is said to have challenged the order of the Magistrate but he could not succeed. In pursuance of the order of the Chief Judicial Magistrate dated 3-10-2005 and subsequent order of the High Court dated 9-11-2005, FIR bearing Crime No. 425 of 2005 was registered on 28-11-2005 under Sections 147/323/342/352/354/427/504 and 506 IPC at the police station against M and other persons named in the complaint.

Owing to constant threats and victimisation by M in collusion with the local police, the undertrial appellants (in Crime No. 412/2005 and Crime No. 21/2006) filed Miscellaneous Writ Petition No. 1947 of 2006. The High Court by the impugned order dated 24-8-2006 dismissed the prayer for CBI investigation into the matter in criminal miscellaneous applications bearing Nos. 7792 and 7791 of 2006 filed by the appellants under Section 482 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Looking to the entire backdrop of the peculiar facts of countless incidents having been faced by the appellants during their primary life as MBBS students and the nature of the offences alleged against them and allegations and counter-allegations in various complaints made by the parties against each other and coupled with the tenor and contents of the apology tendered by the appellants, it is a fit case for exercise of jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution of India. Article 142 of the Constitution of India should be exercised so as to bring the dispute between the parties to an end. As the appellants, at the relevant time, were students, no amount of compensation be directed to be paid. The criminal proceedings and charges said to have been framed by the trial court based upon the criminal cases (Crime No. 412/2005 and Crime No. 21/2006) against the appellants shall also stand quashed. They must, however, file a written apology in the courts where the proceedings are pending. There should be consideration for the future career of the appellants. (Paras 44, 47, 49 and 50)

The entire details of the facts of the present case do indicate that the appellants during their study of MBBS course had some problems with the second respondent; some staff of the College and the then SHO of PS Vijay Nagar, whose daughter was also studying in the same College. The record would reveal that both the appellants being NRI candidates have undergone physical and mental agony and torture during their student career in pursuing the MBBS course. They had spent most of their precious time in litigation in the courts fighting for their genuine and legitimate claims. They may be involved in some indisciplined activities in the College for which they have been facing criminal proceedings for the past about 3 years. Apology letters dated 13-4-2004 and 2-5-2004 stated that N, MO and MA will go to SP, City office at 9.00 a.m. the next day, that they won't go to the mess of Santosh Medical College and won't abuse any employee, and that they apologise for the quarrel that happened on that evening in the mess with K. (Paras 43 and 42). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[10593] — Ss. 452 and 323 r/w S. 34 — Sentence reduced in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case and very old age (77 years) of the accused — Constitution of India, Art. 136. Shahzade v. State of U.P., (1982) 1 SCC 349: 1982 SCC (Cri) 233: AIR 1981 SC 2008(2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1981]

[10594] — Ss. 452 and 354 — Charge for offence against Y but conviction for offence against X — Permissibility — Prejudice caused to accused, occasioning failure of justice — New trial, after proper framing of charge, directed — Appellant-accused came into house of P at night, touched/caught hand of her sleeping daughter-in-law S, and when S raised an alarm, he ran away — But, appellant charged with having trespassed into house of P with intent to assault P and having assaulted her by outraging her modesty — However, appellant convicted on ground that though he did not assault or outrage modesty of P, he had outraged modesty of S, also present at time of alleged incident — Held, when appellant defended himself in regard to aforesaid charge and concentrated on proving that said charges were not true vis-à-vis P, he cannot be convicted for having assaulted and outraging modesty of someone else, namely, S — Appellant was clearly misled by error in charge which caused prejudice to appellant, thereby occasioning failure of justice — Therefore, direction for new trial after charging appellant with offence of outraging modesty of S, issued — Hence, conviction of appellant set aside and matter remitted to trial court with aforesaid direction — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 211, 212, 215 & Ills. (e) & (d) thereto and S. 464

In the instant case, the charge was that the appellant committed trespass into the house of P for assaulting P, and assaulted the said P and outraged her modesty. The accused concentrated his cross-examination with reference to the said charge and elicited answers showing that he did not assault or outrage the modesty of P. He did not try to challenge the evidence let in to show that he had tried to outrage the modesty of S (P's daughter-in-law), as he was not charged with such an offence. The evidence of PWs 1 and 2 (P and S) was that the appellant did not touch or tease or abuse P. Their evidence was that he touched/caught the hand of S and when she raised an alarm he ran away. When the charge was that the accused attempted to commit trespass into the house of P with intent to outrage the modesty of P, the conclusion of the appellate court and the High Court that there was no failure of justice if he is punished for the offence of having assaulted S and outraging her modesty, is opposed to principles of fair play and natural justice embodied in Sections 211, 212, 215 and 464 CrPC. (Para 19)

When the accused is charged with having entered the house of P and assaulted the said P with intent to outrage her modesty and when the accused defended himself in regard to the said charge and concentrated on proving that the said charges were not true, he cannot be convicted for having assaulted and outraging the modesty of someone else, namely, S. The accused did not have any opportunity to meet or defend himself against the charge that he assaulted S and outraged her modesty. Nor did he proceed with his defence on the understanding that he was being charged with having committed the offence with reference to S. One of the fundamental principles of justice is that an accused should know what is the charge against him so that he can build his defence in regard to that charge. An accused cannot be punished for committing an offence against Y when he is charged with having committed the offence against X and the entire defence of the accused was with reference to charge of having committed offence against X. (Para 20)

Applying the guidance offered by Illustration (e) under Section 215 CrPC, as contrasted from Illustration (d) under that section, and legal principles evolved by the Supreme Court, the position will be as follows: If S alone had been present at the house at the time of the incident and the accused had assaulted and outraged the modesty of the said S, but in the charge the name of the victim had been erroneously mentioned, say as S or P (though there was no person by such name), and the inquiry exclusively referred to the assault and outraging the modesty of S, the court could infer that the accused was not misled and the error in the charge was immaterial. On the other hand, if two persons were present in the house at the time of the incident, namely, P and S and the accused is charged with trespassing into the house of P, and assaulting and outraging the modesty of the said P, and the witnesses refer only to the assault and outraging the modesty of S, the court will have to infer that the accused was prejudiced, if the accused had solely concentrated and focused his defence and entire cross-examination to show that he did not commit the offences against P. (Para 22)

The court having charged the accused with the offence of having trespassed into the house of P with the intent to assault her and having further charged him for having assaulted the said P by outraging her modesty, convicts him on the ground that though he did not assault or outrage the modesty of P, he had outraged the modesty of S, that would lead to failure of justice. There was a material error in the charge as it violated the requirement of Section 212(1) CrPC, that the charge shall contain particulars as to the person against whom the offence was committed. (Para 23)

There were two women present at the house at the time of the alleged incident, namely, P and her daughter-in-law S. In view of the specific charge, the accused concentrated on showing that the charge was false. He did not attempt to meet the case made out in the trial that the offence was against S. The accused was thus clearly misled by the error in the charge which caused prejudice to the accused thereby occasioning failure of justice. Therefore, there should be a new trial after charging him with the offence of outraging the modesty of S. (Para 24)

Hence, the conviction of the accused is set aside and the matter is remitted to the trial court with a direction for a new trial after framing a charge by substituting the words "her daughter-in-law S" for the words "abovenamed P", in the second part of the charge. (Para 25). Main Pal v. State of Haryana, (2010) 10 SCC 130: AIR 2010 SC 3292: 2010 Cri LJ 4450: (2010) 94 AIC 9 (SC): (2010) 4 UPLJ 14 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-9-2010]

State of H.P. v. Gita Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 452: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1390, distinguished on facts

[10595] — Ss. 452, 354, 323, 506 Pt. II r/w S. 34 — Outraging modesty of a tribal woman — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction confirmed — PW 4 victim, a tribal woman of 25 years giving evidence that accused persons on being enraged by her illicit relationship with PW 9 (a member of higher caste) entered her house, beat, abused, removed/tore off her clothes and paraded her naked in village from her house to a place in front of the shop of PW 3 — PW 9 not supporting actual incident but corroborating her evidence regarding illicit relationship — PW 8 proving medical certificate that there were two contusions on PW 4 — PW 2 proving panchnama of seized articles from the spot i.e. torn clothes and broken bangles of victim — Witnesses turning hostile due to fear and inducement as accused persons were powerful persons in village — Evidence of PW 4 corroborated by medical evidence of PW 8, panchnama evidence of PW 2 and partly corroborated by evidence of PW 9, held, credible — There is no reason to disbelieve PW 2 who proved the spot panchnama — Conviction of appellants by courts below, therefore, upheld

On the ground that the victim, a tribal girl (PW 4) had illicit relationship with PW 9 belonging to higher caste, four accused persons went to her house at about 5.00 p.m., beat her with fists and kicks, removed her clothes and then paraded her on the road of the village while still beating and abusing her. The Sessions Court convicted them under Sections 452, 354, 323, 506 Part II read with Section 34 IPC and sentenced to suffer RI for six months and to pay a fine of Rs 100. They were also sentenced to suffer RI for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 100 for the offence punishable under Sections 354/34 IPC. They were also sentenced under Sections 323/34 IPC and sentenced to three months' RI and to pay a fine of Rs 100. The appellants were further convicted under Section 3 of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 and sentenced to suffer RI for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 100.

In appeal before the High Court the appellants were acquitted of the offence under Section 3 of the SC/ST Act, but the conviction under the provisions of IPC was confirmed. However, that part of the order regarding fine was set aside and each of the appellant was directed to pay a fine of Rs 5000 only to the victim.

Dismissing the appeal of the accused persons,

Held :

There is no reason to interfere with the judgment of the High Court convicting the appellants under Sections 452, 354, 323, 506 Part II IPC read with Section 34 IPC and imposing fine of Rs 5000 on each accused to be paid to the victim. Rather the sentence imposed was too light considering the gravity of the offence. The victim in the present case is a young woman of 25 years of age belonging to the Bhil tribe which is a Scheduled Tribe (ST) in Maharashtra, who was beaten with fists and kicks and stripped naked by the accused persons after tearing off her blouse and brassiere and then got paraded in naked condition on the road of a village while being beaten and abused by the accused herein. (Paras 8, 5 and 3)

Although many of the witnesses turned hostile, there is no reason to disbelieve the evidence of the PW 4, the victim, herself. (Para 9)

Even though PW 9 did not support the actual incident of the victim being beaten and paraded naked in the village by the accused persons, his evidence at least on the points admitted by him corroborates the evidence of the victim. PW 9 supported the prosecution case to some extent. He has accepted his illicit relations with the victim and admitted that he had a daughter from her and she was pregnant for a second time through him. (Para 9)

The accused are powerful persons in the village inasmuch all the eyewitnesses have turned hostile out of fear or some inducement. (Para 11)

PW 8 proved his medical certificate, Ext. 26 and stated that there were two contusions on the person of the victim. (Para 11)

There is no reason to disbelieve PW 2 who proved the spot panchnama, Ext.12. It was drawn in front of the house of the victim, PW 4. PW 4 showed the entire area of the crime from her house to the place in front of the shop of PW 3. The police seized torn clothes and pieces of bangles. (Para 10)

The mentality of the accused who regard tribal people as inferior or sub-humans is totally unacceptable in modern India. The appellants alleged that the people belonging to the Bhil community live in torn clothes as they do not have proper clothes to wear. (Para 13). Kailas v. State of Maharashtra, (2011) 1 SCC 793.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and Gyan Sudha Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-2011]

[10596] — Ss. 452, 451 and 354 — Trespass to seek sexual favours, but not for causing any physical hurt or assault or wrongful restraint — Offence whether under S. 452 or S. 451 — Appellant-accused convicted under Ss. 354 and 452 by all courts below — In application for compounding of the offences, Supreme Court on finding that the appellant had entered the house to seek sexual favours, but not for causing any physical hurt or assault or wrongful restraint, converting conviction of accused to that under S. 451, and compounding both convictions — CrPC, 1973, S. 320. Moreshwar v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 11 SCC 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2005]

— S. 452 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 302, 307 and 452 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 302/34, 307/34, 394/34 and 452/34

See also Ss. 324 and 452 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 376(2)(g), 452/34 and 323/34

See also Ss. 392, 397 and 452 r/w S. 34

— S. 452 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 96, 97, 100, 101 and 302, 307, 326, 452 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 147, 148, 302, 307 and 452 r/w S. 149

[10597] — Ss. 452/149 — Conviction restored — Assailant accused coming to place of incident armed with deadly weapons and attacking complainant party — Accused 7, 9 and 15 convicted under Ss. 452/149 by trial court and sentenced to three years' RI — High Court in appeal reducing the sentence of Accused 7 to period already undergone (12 months) and acquitting Accused 9 and 15 — Eyewitnesses clearly stating that these accused along with other accused had come to complainant's home in a jeep and attacked them with deadly weapons — No cogent reason to disbelieve them — Hence, conviction and sentence passed by trial court restored (Paras 46 to 49). State of Maharashtra v. Tulshiram Bhanudas Kamble, (2007) 14 SCC 627: AIR 2007 SC 3042: 2007 Cri LJ 4319.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2007]

Ramappa Halappa Pujar v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 13 SCC 31; Chandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 4 SCC 415: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 325; Mohinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 10 SCC 418: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 578; State of U.P. v. Nawab Singh, (2005) 9 SCC 84: 2005 SCC (Cri) 33, relied on

[10598] — Ss. 452/302 and 323 r/w S. 34 — Applicability — Appellant-accused aged about 17 years at the time of occurrence (1-8-1993) — Age of juvenile increased from 16 years (Juvenile Justice Act, 1986) to 18 years by Act of 2000 — Submission by appellant-accused that S. 20 JJ Act was relevant to his case — Tenability — Held, S. 20 of the JJ Act does not in any way help the appellant — What S. 20 provides is that the proceedings shall continue as if the Act (i.e. the Act of 2000) was not in existence i.e. even if the definition of "juvenile" has undergone a change by fixing the age to be 18 years the proceedings shall continue on the footing that the accused was a juvenile under the 1986 Act — What the appellant contends is to reverse the situation i.e. take the applicable age to be 18 years which is not legally permissible — Act of 2000 has no application in the instant case — Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000 — S. 20 (Paras 2 and 8 to 10). Ranjit Singh

v. State of Haryana, (2008) 9 SCC 453: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 784: (2008) 70 AIC 110 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2008]

Jameel v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 11 SCC 420: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 748, followed

— S. 453 See also Ss. 302, 307, 324, 323, 427, 453, 506 Pt. II, S. 147 r/w S. 149 and S. 148

— S. 454 See also Ss. 149 and 302/149, 454, 451 and 148

See also Ss. 302, 324, 454 and 342 and 96, 97 and 100

See also Ss. 302/149, 454, 451 and 148

— S. 455 See also Ss. 147, 148, 149, 455 and 324

[10599] — Ss. 455 and 149 — Accused variously armed with dangerous weapons entering and attacking a police wireless station after breaking open doors and windows and assaulting a policeman — Assault being an independent act of an unknown person, all accused cannot be held responsible for the same — All accused shared common object of committing lurking house trespass under S. 455 — They should be sentenced to 7 years' RI. Chonampara Chellappan v. State of Kerala, (1979) 4 SCC 312: 1979 SCC (Cri) 1029: AIR 1979 SC 1761: 1979 Cri LJ 1335.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-1979]

[10600] — S. 456 — Offence not proved — No explanation for significant omission — PW 1, informant (brother of the deceased and a law student) did not mention about housebreaking either in FIR lodged three hours after the beating of his deceased brother or in his S. 161 CrPC statement given two days after the incident (although his mother and sister reported that A-4 and A-5 along with a child were present in flat and their luggage was thrown out by said accused) — PW 1 had no explanation for this significant omission — Held, evidence of PW 1 is tainted with certain embellishments — It is difficult to believe that their flat having been allegedly broken into and occupied by A-4 and A-5, it was an insignificant fact worthy of discussion amongst family members. State of Maharashtra v. Ahmed Shaikh Babajan, (2009) 14 SCC 267: (2009) 73 AIC 178 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 637 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

[10601] — S. 456 — Prejudiced and uncorroborated evidence of PWs 5 and 6 (mother and sister of deceased) for offence under S. 456 (accused party beating the deceased resulting in his death) — Accused party had allegedly given threat to the deceased party to vacate their flat (as per agreed terms and conditions of leave and licence agreement) — On day of incident the deceased was beaten by A-1 and A-3, which subsequently resulted in his death — PWs 5 and 6 in their evidence alleged that when they returned to the flat in the night (from Hyderabad), A-4 and A-5 along with a child were present in the flat and their luggage was thrown out by said accused — PW 3, a neighbour did not support prosecution story that A-4 and A-5 had borrowed hammer and screwdriver from her for housebreaking — PW 1 (brother of deceased and a law student) did not state the fact of housebreaking either in FIR or in S. 161 CrPC statement recorded two days after the incident — On facts, held, order of High Court acquitting all accused of the offence under S. 456 IPC did not suffer from any illegality warranting interference

The Anand family (the deceased, his brothers, sisters and parents) were staying in the house of the accused under a leave and licence agreement which was to expire on 27-4-1989. About two weeks prior to the date of incident and again on 24 to 26-4-1989, the accused persons (A-1 owner, A-3 estate agent, and A-2) approached PW 4 (the father of the deceased) and demanded delivery of vacant possession of the licensed flat by 27-4-1989 and did not listen to the difficulties explained by PW 4.

On 27-4-1989 at about 7.30 p.m., the deceased was standing in front of the shop of Accused A-3 on the ground floor in the same society, three buildings away from the building in which the deceased resided, waiting for his mother and sister, who were scheduled to return from Hyderabad in the evening. He had the keys of the flat with him. His father (PW 4), who was in the flat till evening later left the house for bringing food for the family, instructing the deceased to wait on the road. PW 1 (a brother of the deceased) also left the house at about 7.00 p.m. for paying obeisance at the gurudwara. While the deceased was standing in front of the shop of Accused A-3, Accused A-1 and A-3 came near him and started beating him. The beating of the deceased was witnessed by his brother, PW 1 who was returning from the gurudwara. He rushed to save his brother, who, by that time had fallen down on the ground and was stifling. The incident drew attention of the public and the two accused were apprehended. PW 2, a police constable (off-duty) and a family friend of the Anands, also happened to be at the spot and he too accosted the two accused. He along with PW 1 took the victim to the clinic of PW 8 (doctor) situated on the ground floor of the same building in which the Anands resided. Finding the victim in a serious condition, PW 8 advised his removal to a bigger hospital. In the meanwhile, he also contacted the police control room. In a short while the police mobile van arrived and the deceased was removed to Cooper Hospital. PW 1 also accompanied him. The deceased was examined by the doctors on duty and was declared brought dead.

High Court by the impugned order affirmed the order passed by the Sessions Judge acquitting Accused A-1 to A-3 of the charge under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC but the High Court set aside the order of the trial court convicting Accused A-1 to A-3 for offence under Section 456 read with Section 109 IPC. The High Court also set aside the conviction of Respondents 4 and 5 for offences under Section 456 IPC.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

The order of the High Court acquitting all the accused of the offence under Section 456 IPC did not suffer from any illegality warranting interference. It would be hazardous to rely solely on the uncorroborated evidence of PWs 5 and 6 (mother and sister of the deceased) to convict the accused under Section 456 IPC. Evidently, having lost their son/brother, allegedly on account of beating by A-1 to A-3, there was every reason for them to be inimical to the accused. They were keen to see that all of them were convicted. In their testimony, they have stated that when they returned to their flat in the night of 27-4-1989, they found the door of the flat open and A-4 and A-5 present there along with a child. When they entered the flat, their luggage was thrown out by the said accused. They have also stated that when a constable came to the flat and enquired about the mother of the deceased, they had shown to him the damaged latch and bolt at the entrance. The constable asked both the accused and PW 6 to follow him and all of them went to the police station. PW 3, who was examined by the prosecution to prove the vital fact that A-4 and A-5 had borrowed the hammer and screwdriver from her, being a neighbour of the complainant had not supported the version of the prosecution, the testimony of the said two witnesses cannot be said to be intrinsically credible. Moreover, having regard to the fact that neither in the FIR nor in the statement of PW 1, recorded two days after the occurrence, he had stated the fact of housebreaking. (Paras 38, 37 and 33)

The term "interested" postulates that the person concerned has some direct or indirect interest in seeing that the accused is somehow or the other convicted either because he had some animus with the accused or for some other oblique motive. A close relative, as such by virtue of being a close relative cannot be characterised as an "interested" witness. He is a natural witness. His evidence, however, must be scrutinised carefully. (Paras 35 and 36)

The evidence of PW 1 is tainted with certain embellishments. Admittedly in the FIR lodged by PW 1, a law student, more than three hours after the alleged occurrence, there was no complaint of housebreaking and occupation of the flat by A-4 and A-5 when he claims to have met them at the flat and had an altercation. In his cross-examination, he also stated that when his further statement was recorded on 29-4-1989 i.e. two days after the occurrence, even then he did not disclose the fact that A-4 and A-5 had broken open their flat and had occupied it with a child. The informant (PW 1) was not able to give any reasonable explanation for the significant omission on his part. Furthermore, even in the evidence of PW 4, the father of the deceased and PW 1, there is not even a whisper about the forcible occupation of their flat by A-4 and A-5 although admittedly even before lodging the FIR, PW 1, his father and his mother (PW 6) had already met. It is difficult to believe that their flat having been allegedly broken open and occupied by A-4 and A-5, it was an insignificant fact worthy of discussion amongst the family members. (Paras 27 to 29)

The fundamental object of an FIR is that it acts as a safeguard against embellishment, exaggeration and forgetfulness. True, that it is not the requirement of law that every minute detail of the occurrence needs to be recorded in the FIR but it must disclose the commission of an offence. Though it is trite that the FIR does not constitute substantive evidence and can, strictly speaking, be only used as a previous statement for the purpose of either corroborating or contradicting its maker, yet omission of material facts pertaining to the crime is undoubtedly relevant in judging the veracity of prosecution case. The FIR is a report relating to the commission of an offence, given to the police and recorded by it under Section 154 CrPC. Though, recording of an FIR is not a condition precedent to the setting in motion of the criminal investigation yet from the viewpoint of the investigating authorities it conveys to them earliest information regarding the circumstances in which the crime was committed; the names of the culprits and the role played by them as well as the names of the witnesses present at the scene of occurrence, so vital for effective and meaningful investigation. The information about an occurrence can be given by any person knowing about the commission of such an offence and not necessarily by an eyewitness. (Paras 26 and 24). State of Maharashtra v. Ahmed Shaikh Babajan, (2009) 14 SCC 267: (2009) 73 AIC 178 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 637 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

Hari Obula Reddy v. State of A.P., (1981) 3 SCC 675: 1981 SCC (Cri) 795; Ashok Kumar Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2008) 12 SCC 173: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 339; Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1953 SC 364: 1953 Cri LJ 1465: 1954 SCR 145; Masalti v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 202: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 226: (1964) 8 SCR 133; Rizan v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2003) 2 SCC 661: 2003 SCC (Cri) 664; Namdeo v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 14 SCC 150: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 773; King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1944) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; Sk. Hasib v. State of Bihar, (1972) 4 SCC 773; State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805, relied on

— S. 457 See also Ss. 71, 380 and 457

See also Ss. 302, 380 and 457

See also Ss. 376, 457 and 380

See also Ss. 380, 120-B, 302, 392, 201, 404, 414, 457 and 460/34

[10602] — S. 457 — Ingredients of offence

In order to support the conviction under S. 457 it is necessary to prove first that there was lurking house trespass by night or house-breaking by night. The second ingredient is that the house trespass or house-breaking was in order to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment. "Lurking house trespass" means that the accused took some active means to conceal their presence. Nasiruddin v. State of Assam, (1971) 3 SCC 408: 1971 SCC (Cri) 656: AIR 1971 SC 1254: 1971 Cri LJ 1073.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1971]

[10603] — Ss. 457 and 354 — Non-compoundable offence — Filing of petition for compounding of — Effect — Held, effect of compounding can be taken into account while awarding sentence — Compounding of offence involving S. 457 IPC, which is a non-compoundable offence — Considering the said fact, sentence liable to be reduced to period already undergone i.e. three months — CrPC, 1973 — S. 320 (Para 4). Sanjit Datta v. State of Tripura, (2006) 13 SCC 294: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 172.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2005]

[10604] — Ss. 457 and 380 — Conviction based on uncorroborated retracted confession, held, cannot stand. Arjuna Lal Misra v. State, AIR 1953 SC 411: 1953 Cri LJ 1633.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Fazl Ali[1], B.K. Mukherjea[2] and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1950]

[10605] — Ss. 457 and 380 — Failure of accused to account for his possession soon after the theft — Presumption

It would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case whether the court should draw the presumption that a person found in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft and who has not been able to account for his possession is the thief or whether he is the receiver of the goods knowing them to be stolen. Where the stolen articles were recovered within seventeen days of the theft from the possession of the accused, it is proper for a court to draw the presumption that the accused was guilty of the offence under Ss. 457 and 380, Indian Panel Code, particularly when the accused was found in possession of a very large number of stolen articles so soon after the theft. Ayodhya Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1972) 3 SCC 885: 1972 SCC (Cri) 786: AIR 1972 SC 2501: (1973) 1 SCR 880: 1972 Cri LJ 1696.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, I.D. Dua and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-1972]

[10606] — Ss. 457 and 380 — Title to seized stolen goods — Dispute as to, between complainant and one of the prosecution witnesses — Appropriate forum and action for — Appropriate forum and action for, held, is suit in competent civil court and not in criminal proceedings relating to prosecution for the theft — Specific Relief Act, 1963, S. 7 — CPC, 1908 — S. 9 and Or. 20 R. 10. Thamanna Shivalingappa Teli v. State of Karnataka, (2005) 12 SCC 171.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2005]

[10607] — Ss. 457, 380, 411, 413 and 414 — Theft of idols — Conviction — Maintainability of revision — Dismissal of S. 319 CrPC petition for proceeding against appellant by Magistrate — Persons who may bring revision against — Person neither the complainant nor having any connection with alleged offence — Long lapse of time — Effect — In a case of theft of idols, trial court convicted four persons for offences under Ss. 457, 380, 411 and 414 IPC — Magistrate dismissing prosecution's petition under S. 319 for proceeding against appellant since final report of police found no case against appellant — Sessions Court ex parte allowing revision petition filed by a third party two years thereafter for proceeding against appellant and directing Magistrate to take cognizance of offence — Appellant not having any information about these subsequent events — High Court dismissing writ petition of appellant thereagainst — Matter remitted to High Court to consider maintainability of revision petition at the instance of third party after such delay, with requirement of opportunity of hearing to appellant and notice to informant — Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 227 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 397, 399 and 401 (Paras 11 and 12). Ram Naresh Prasad v. State of Jharkhand, (2009) 11 SCC 299: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1336: (2009) 77 AIC 221 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117, impliedly followed

[10608] — Ss. 457/34, 380/34, 10/457 and 380 — Alleged conspiracy including police officer — (Accused 11 to 13 and 15) — High Court confirms convictions of accused 1 to 3, 6 to 8, 10, 11 and 13 — State appeal against acquittal of accused 12 and 15 to Supreme Court dismissed — As to police officer accused 13 retracted confession of co-accused not reliable — No evidence of conspiracy as to accused 13 — Concurrent findings as to guilt of accused 7 cannot be disturbed in special leave appeal — Clear and overwhelming evidenced as to appellant accused 13 (Probationary S. I. of Police). Baburao Bajirao Patil v. State of Maharashtra, (1970) 3 SCC 911: 1971 SCC (Cri) 155.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-1970]

— S. 457(1) See also Ss. 302/34, 457(1), 398, 120-B and 449

— S. 458 See also Ss. 376, 147, 323/149, 342, 458 and 366

See also Ss. 449, 458, 459, 392, 397, 302 and 307

[10609] — Ss. 458 and 393 — Conviction of police personnel in serious offences — Leniency in sentence in such cases, held, not proper — In these cases, the court will be justified in imposing a deterrent sentence so that it may serve as a warning to others and may restore to some extent the diminishing faith of the public in the police force — Accused police personnel attempting to commit robbery and with that in view committing house trespass in the dead of night armed with firearms — Considering that accused could not commit any other offence as police party promptly arrived at the spot and the fact that accused had been on bail for the last more than six years, High Court reducing the sentence of four years' RI imposed by trial court to period already undergone — Held, High Court was not justified in doing so — Reduction of sentence set aside — Sentence by trial court restored — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 28 and 29 (Paras 6 to 8). Ajmer Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 6 SCC 633: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1481.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-2005]

— S. 459 See also Ss. 449, 458, 459, 392, 397, 302 and 307

— S. 460 See also Ss. 302, 460, 397 and 411

See also Ss. 302 r/w Ss. 34 and 449, 460, 394

See also Ss. 302 r/w Ss. 307 and 460

See also Ss. 302/34, 396, 460 and 404

See also Ss. 302/34 and 460

See also Ss. 376, 460, 325 and 506

[10610] — Ss. 460 and 302 — Applicability — In case of housebreaking by night by several persons in course of which death caused by one of them, others would also be constructively liable under S. 460 — But offence of housebreaking by night and also murder would attract S. 302

Under Section 460 IPC constructive liability is imposed on persons jointly concerned in committing house trespass at night, in the course of which death or grievous hurt is caused. The section applies to persons who actually committed house trespass at night and the act of causing death or grievous hurt by any one of the intruders would make others, who did not cause the injury, equally liable. But if a person commits housebreaking by night and also commits murder, his act attracts Section 302 IPC. (Paras 4 and 9). Abdul Aziz v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 283: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 651: (2007) 54 AIC 15 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2007]

Jagdeo v. State of U.P., (1953) 51 All LJ 501, relied on

Singaram, In re, AIR 1954 Mad 152; Sohan Singh Kesar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 Punj 130, distinguished

— Ss. 460/34 See also Ss. 380, 120-B, 302, 392, 201, 404, 414, 457 and 460/34

See also Ss. 380/34, 460/34 and 302/34

[10611] — Ss. 460/149 and 302 — House trespass/breaking in resulting in murder — Conviction for murder when permissible — Need for charging the accused with murder — Conviction under S. 460 by trial court but conviction under S. 302 by High Court in appeal against conviction preferred by accused not justified — Appellant along with others entered the deceased's room and assaulted him causing his death — Appellant named in FIR — Appellant charged under Ss. 302, 460 and 149 but was convicted only under S.

460 by trial court — No appeal preferred by State before High Court seeking appellant's conviction under S. 302 — Instead, in appeal filed by appellant himself against his conviction under S. 460, High Court convicted him under S. 302 without issuing notice for enhancement on ground that trial court inadvertently convicted him only under S. 460 — Held, High Court was wrong in convicting appellant under S. 302 when trial court had convicted him under S. 460, particularly, in absence of any appeal from the State as this would amount to travesty of justice — Hence appellant liable to be convicted under S. 460 and sentenced to 10 years' RI and fine of Rs 500

Under Section 460 IPC constructive liability is imposed on persons jointly concerned in committing house trespass at night, in the course of which death or grievous hurt is caused. The section applies to persons who actually committed house trespass at night and the act of causing death or grievous hurt by any one of the intruders would make others, who did not cause the injury, equally liable. But if a person commits housebreaking by night and also commits murder, his act attracts Section 302 IPC. (Paras 4 and 9). Abdul Aziz v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 283: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 651: (2007) 54 AIC 15 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2007]

Jagdeo v. State of U.P., (1953) 51 All LJ 501, relied on Singaram, In re, AIR 1954 Mad 152; Sohan Singh Kesar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 Punj 130, distinguished

— S. 461 See also Ss. 463, 467, 461 and 419 r/w S. 120-B

[10612] — Ss. 461, 379, 403, 342, 166 and 167 — "Acting or purporting to act in the discharge of official duty" under S. 197 CrPC — Meaning of — Railway officials witnessing a search in the house of another Railway official at the request of the police, and not under the orders of superior Officers — During the search such officials, committing offences under Ss. 461, 379, 403, 342, 166 and 167 — No sanction under S. 197, Criminal Procedure Code necessary — CrPC, 1898 — S. 197

The accused who were in the employ of the Northern Railway were called by the Deputy Superintendent of Police to witness a search in the house of the complainant also an employee of the Northern Railway and it is alleged that during the search they committed offences under S. 461 read with Ss. 379, 403, 342, 166 and 167 of the Indian Penal Code. The complaint was dismissed by the Magistrate for want of sanction under S. 197, Criminal Procedure Code and the Sessions Judge and the High Court refused to interfere. The accused appealed to the Supreme Court.

Held :

The presence of the accused persons at the time of the search was not under the provisions of Home Office Memorandum or under the orders of their superior officers. The alleged presence of the accused persons in the complainant's house had nothing to do with the performance of their official duties. Neither were the accused persons performing any official duty in going to that house nor doing anything there nor were they purporting to do so.

Even if for the sake of argument it is assumed that the witnessing of search in the complainant's house could be in the performance of their official duties by the accused persons, the principal offence charged viz. theft or misappropriation of properties belonging to the complainant, wrongful confinement could have no direct connection with the act of witnessing the search. Their presence there as witnesses to the search of complainant's house would give them the opportunity of committing the offence complained of. The mere fact that an opportunity to commit an offence is furnished by the official duty is not such a connection of the offence with the performance of such duty as to justify even remotely the view that the acts complained of are within the scope of their official duty. Dhannjay Ram Sharma v. M.S. Uppadaya, AIR 1960 SC 745: 1960 Cri LJ 1153: (1960) 2 MLJ 98 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.C. Das Gupta and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1960]

— S. 462 See also Ss. 408 and 462

— S. 463 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 409, 463, 468, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 415, 463 and 467

See also Ss. 420, 463 and 405

See also Ss. 420, 463, 465, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 466, 468, 463, 464, 23 and 24

See also Ss. 467, 471, 463 and 464

See also Ss. 468 and 463

See also Ss. 468, 463 and 465

See also Ss. 471, 463 and 193

[10613] — S. 463 — Forgery — Basic elements of — Held, are: (1) making of a false document or part of it, and (2) such making should be with such intention viz. (i) to cause damage or injury to (a) the pub- lic, or (b) any person; or (ii) to support any claim or title; or (iii) to cause any person to part with property; or (iv) to cause any person to enter into an express or implied contract; or (v) to commit fraud or that fraud may be committed (Para 26). Sushil Suri v. CBI, (2011) 5 SCC 708.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision : 6-5-2011]

Zee Telefilms Ltd. v. Union of India, (2005) 4 SCC 649; Haryana Financial Corpn. v. Jagdamba Oil Mills, (2002) 3 SCC 496, relied on [10614] — S. 463 — Forgery of a copy falls within the section. Rama Shankar Lal v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 905: 1972 SCC (Cri) 153.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1970]

[10615] — S. 463 — In the absence of the forged document for a conclusion as to forgery the evidence must exclude all possibilities of reasonable doubt

It is not meant to be said that in the absence of the document alleged to be forged the Court can in no case hold the offence of forgery to be established, but to claim such a finding in the absence of the document said to be forged, the evidence must in our view exclude all possibility of a reasonable doubt. This is in accord with the general principle of our jurisprudence. Rama Shankar Lal v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 905: 1972 SCC (Cri) 153.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1970]

[10616] — S. 463 — Obtaining signature on a blank paper, held, by itself is not a forgery — It is an offence only when the paper is fabricated into a document contrary to Indian Penal Code or when such document is used as genuine. Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987: AIR 1979 SC 850: 1979 ALJ 634: 1980 Cri LJ 822.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1979]

[10617] — Ss. 463 and 464 — Deceased giving postal certificates as security to Ration Department — Death of deceased — Accused getting retransfer of certificates in name of deceased and encashing them by signing deceased's name and attesting the same — Accused, held, guilty of offence of forgery — The fact that accused was sole heir of deceased makes no difference

If a person who has given postal certificates as security to a department by taking them in the name of the said department dies, his heir can get the said amount by following two procedures, namely, (1) after obtaining a succession certificate, he can apply to the department concerned to release the security and then apply to the postal department for getting the certificates cashed, and (2) if the current value of the certificates at the time of the death of the holder does not exceed Rs 5000 he can, after the expiry of 3 months from the date of the death of the holder, satisfy the Postmaster General that he is the sole heir of the holder and after making the relevant declaration recover the said money. In one case he has to incur expenses for obtaining the succession certificate and in the other he has to wait for three months and thereafter produce evidence to the satisfaction of the Postmaster General that he is the sole heir of the deceased holder of the certificates. In the present case, the appellant attested the signature of the deceased on the reverse of the application form for the transfer of the Post Office National Savings Certificates in the name of his father, got fresh certificates issued in the name of his father, signed the name of his father on the back of the three certificates in token of their cancellation, placed his own attestation and stamp of his office thereon and received the money from the Post Office. By this process he got not only the certificates which stood in the name of the Ration Department transferred in the name of his deceased father but also received the money payable to his father.

The appellant had made the false documents with an intention to cause wrongful gain to himself for by adopting the aforesaid device he secured for himself a gain as otherwise he would have had to incur some expense for obtaining a succession certificate. Even on the assumption that he would have received the money after satisfying the rationing authority and the Postmaster General, he secured an advantage by resorting to the said device, as he was relieved of the trouble of satisfying the rationing authority and the postal authority that he was the sole heir of his father and avoided the risk of their refusal, which would have entailed further delay. In that event he had secured an uneconomic advantage: in the former case he had made the false documents dishonestly and in the latter case fraudulently. In either case he committed forgery within the meaning of S. 463 of the Indian Penal Code. G.S. Bansal v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1963 SC 1577: (1964) 2 SCR 470: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 439.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-1963]

AIR 1963 SC 1572: 1963 (2) Cri LJ 434, distinguished

See also AIR 1963 SC 666: 1963 (1) Cri LJ 623

[10618] — Ss. 463 and 464 — Forgery and false document — Ss. 463 and 464, held, to be read together because definition of "false document" as given in S. 464 is a part of "forgery" as defined in S. 463 — On facts held, no forgery was committed when credit/debit vouchers were prepared in bank, before banker's cheques were cleared or received

The Special Judge erred in holding that accused had prepared a false document, which having regard to provisions of law, could not have been done. Offence of forgery deals with making of a false document with specific intentions enumerated in Section 464. Since commission of forgery has not been convincingly established, the accused could not have been convicted of the offence of forgery. Definition of "false document" is a part of definition of "forgery". Both must be read together. (Paras 165 and 166). Mir Nagvi Askari v. CBI, (2009) 15 SCC 643.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

Vimla (Dr.) v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1963 SC 1572: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 585, relied on [10619] — Ss. 463, 464, 465 and 468 r/w S. 420 — Allegation that the appellant published a forged book by stating that it was on the manuscript of King Bhagyachandra and thereby deceived the Govt. to get it published and which also induced many members of public to buy the same believing it as genuine — Complaint not alleging that the appellant had himself written the manuscript and represented it to be that of King Bhagyachandra — Held, allegations made in the complaint, even if true, do not make out the case of forgery — Consequently cheating being a consequential offence also cannot stand — Hence the complaint does not make out a case under Ss. 420, 465 and 468. Guru Bipin Singh v. Chongtham Manihar Singh, (1996) 11 SCC 622: AIR 1997 SC 1448.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1996]

[10620] — Ss. 463, 464, 465, 470, 471 and 415 — Forgery — Meaning — Fraud is an essential ingredient of forgery — Forgery and fraud — How to be established

Forgery is the false making of any written instrument, for the purpose of fraud or deceit. Thus fraud is an essential ingredient of forgery.

Forgery and fraud are essentially matters of evidence which could be proved as a fact by direct evidence or by inferences drawn from proved facts. The Privy Council in Satish Chandra Chatterji laid down thus: "Suspicions and surmises and conjecture are not permissible substitutes for those facts or those inferences, but that by no means requires that every puzzling artifice or contrivance resorted to by one accused of fraud must necessarily be completely unravelled and cleared up and made plain before a verdict can be properly found against him. If this were not so, many a clever and dextrous knave would escape." This principle will apply not only to courts of law but also to statutory tribunals which, like the Commission, are conferred power to record evidence by applying certain provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure including the power to enforce attendance of the witnesses and are also given the power to receive evidence on affidavits. Indian Bank v. Satyam Fibres (India) (P) Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 550: AIR 1996 SC 2592.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-1996]

[10621] — Ss. 463 to 465 and 471 — Applicability of — Forgery of document committed prior to that document being produced or given in evidence in court proceedings — Reiterated, S. 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC would not be attracted in such a case — CrPC, 1973 — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) (Para 12). P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 79: AIR 2008 SC 1884: (2008) 65 AIC 258 (SC): (2008) 3 CHN 95 (SC): (2008) 106 Cut LT 539.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2008]

Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed [10622] — Ss. 463 and 465 — Forgery — Essentials to constitute offence of — Making of any false document, held, is a sine qua non therefor — What is necessary is that the document must have been executed with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document inter alia was made by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made — In present case, respondent co-sharer in joint property, lodging FIR against appellant co-sharers by levelling allegation against them that they executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they had one-third share in the joint property although they were not entitled thereto — Held, if somebody was aggrieved by false assertions made in sale deed, it would be the vendees and not the co-sharers — Further, appellants were not alleged to be guilty of creating any false document — Thus, offence as to forgery not made out — Hence, criminal proceedings against appellants quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 18 to 20). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[10623] — Ss. 463, 465 and 120-B — On facts, offence not established and conviction set aside. Hanumant Govind Nargundkar v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 343: 1952 SCR 1091: 1953 Cri LJ 129.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, S.R. Das and N.H. Bhagwati, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1952]

[10624] — Ss. 463, 465 and 466 — Document bearing certain date — In fact brought into existence on later date — Forgery established

Where the documents bore certain date but were in fact brought into existence on a later date, held, in the circumstances of the case, that the accused was guilty of the offences under Ss. 465 and 466 of the Indian Penal Code. Rao Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of V.P., AIR 1954 SC 322: 1954 SCR 1098: 1954 Cri LJ 910, 918, 92.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1954]

[10625] — Ss. 463 and 466 — Forgery — Overwriting or pasting or interpolation or change in digits by Chief Minister in file — File not leaving office — No one secured undue favour or advantage by the overwriting — Held, offence not made out. Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1987 SC 877: 1987 Cri LJ 793.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and E.S. Venkataramiah[2], V. Khalid[3], G.L. Oza[1] and S. Natarajan[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1986]

[10626] — Ss. 463 (forgery) and 467 (forgery of valuable security) — Whether offences made out in the facts and circumstances of case — Dates "6-5-2002" and "7-5-2002" alleged to have changed to "16-5-2002" and "17-5-2002" by interpolating "1" in certified copy of revenue records and tampered document alleged to have been used in civil suits relating to property — Held, alleged interpolation of "1" could not cause damage or injury to public or anybody — It did not support any claim to property — It also did not cause any person to part with property — It did not show any intention to commit fraud — Offence under S. 463 was not made out — Further held, in the facts and circumstances of the case, even offence under S. 467 could also not be alleged against appellant (Paras 29 and 30). Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2009]

[10627] — Ss. 463, 467, 461, 419 r/w S. 120-B — Conditional release on bail — Offence under Ss. 463, 467, 461, 419 r/w S. 120-B IPC — Accused in custody for about 1 year — Charge-sheet filed — Having regard to the fact that the trial may take long time, Supreme Court releasing accused on bail imposing certain conditions on him due to the alleged links he had with international terrorists — CrPC, 1973 — S. 439. Mehmood Mohd. Sayeed v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 10 SCC 677: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1144: AIR 2002 SC 482.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2001]

[10628] — Ss. 463, 467, 468, 24 and 25 — Liability in absence of injury to the deceased person — Expression "defraud" involves two elements, namely, deceit and injury to person deceived — Absence of injury to deceived — Accused liable to be acquitted

The expression "defraud" involves two elements, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived. Injury is something other than economic loss that is, deprivation of property, whether moveable or immovable, or of money, and it will include any harm whatever caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or such others. In short, it is a non-economic or non-pecuniary loss. A benefit or advantage to the deceiver will almost always cause loss or detriment to the deceived. Even in those rare cases where there is a benefit or advantage to the deceiver, but no corresponding loss to the deceived, the second condition is satisfied.

V purchased a motor car with her own money in the name of her minor daughter, had the insurance policy transferred in the name of her minor daughter by signing her name and she also received compensation for the claims made by her in regard to the two accidents to the car. The claims were true claims and she received the money by signing in the claims forms and also in the receipts as N.

Held :

Certainly V was guilty of deceit for though her name was V she signed in all the relevant papers as N and made the insurance company believe that her name was N but the said deceit did not either secure to her advantage or cause any non-economic loss or injury, nor is there any evidence to prove the same. The fact that V said that the owner of the car who sold it to her suggested that the taking of the sale of the car in the name of N would be useful for income tax purposes is not of any relevance in the present case, for one reason, the said owner did not say so in his evidence and for the other, it was not indicated in the charge or in the evidence. In the charge framed, she was alleged to have defrauded the insurance company and the only evidence given was that if it was disclosed that N was a minor, the insurance company might not have paid the money. But the entire transaction was that of V and it was only put through in the name of her minor daughter for reasons best known to herself. On the evidence as disclosed, neither was she benefited nor the insurance company incurred loss in any sense of the term. Therefore it must be held that the accused was not guilty of the offence under Ss. 467 and 468. Vimla (Dr.) v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1963 SC 1572: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 585: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 434.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K. Subba Rao, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-1962]

Compare this with case under Ss. 420 & 415, 1963 (1) Cri LJ 623: AIR 1963 SC 666. This case was explained and distinguished in AIR 1963 SC 1577: 1963 (2) Cri LJ 439

[10629] — Ss. 463, 467, 468 and 471 — Forgery — Ingredients of — Test to determine — "Intent to commit fraud" — Meaning — Making of false document — Dishonestly or fraudulently putting signature on a document or making false description, when amounts to forgery — Market practice, even if prevailing, if wrong, cannot take the place of statutory or regulatory function and cannot, therefore, be a defence for such act

Per majority (Agrawal and Pasayat, JJ.)

In order to constitute forgery, the first essential is that the accused should have made a false document. The false document must be made with an intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any class of public or to any community. The questions are (i) is the document false, (ii) is it made by the accused, and (iii) is it made with an intent to defraud. If at all the questions are answered in the affirmative, the accused is guilty. (Paras 371 and 373)

The expression "intent to defraud" implies conduct coupled with an intention to deceive or thereby to cause injury. In other words, defraud involves two conceptions, namely, the deceit and injury to the person deceived, that is infringement of some legal right possessed by him but not necessarily deprivation of property. The term "forgery" as used in the statute is used in its ordinary and popular acceptation. (Para 372)

In order to constitute an offence of forgery the documents must be made dishonestly or fraudulently. But dishonest or fraudulent are not tautological. Fraudulent does not imply the deprivation of property or an element of injury. In order to be fraudulent, there must be some advantage on the one side with a corresponding loss on the other. Every forgery postulates a false document either in whole or in part, however small. (Para 374)

The intent to commit forgery involves an intent to cause injury. A person makes a false document who dishonestly or fraudulently signs with an intent or cause to believe that the document was signed by a person whom he knows it was not signed. A false description makes a document of forgery when it is found that the accused by giving such false description intended to make out or wanted it to believe that it was not he that was executing the document but another person. (Paras 375 and 376)

An accused person cannot take shelter behind what they have described as "market practices". Such practices even if existing, cannot take the place of statutory and regulatory functions. There is no public interest involved in such practices and they cannot be a substitute for compliance with the regulatory or statutory prescriptions. An attempt was made to show that there was subsequent disapproval of the market practices; at the point of time when the transactions took place there was no embargo. It is the stand of the defence that the practices were a part of accepted norms. These explanations are not plausible. A practice even if was prevailing, if wrong, is not to be approved. The subsequent clarifications do not in any way put seal of approval on the practices adopted in the past, on the other hand it condemns it. (Para 377)

Section 467 relates to forgery of such documents as valuable securities and of other documents mentioned. Section 468 deals with forgery for the purpose of cheating. The offence is complete as soon as there was forgery with a particular intent. Section 471 deals with using as genuine a forged document. For the purpose of convicting an accused under Section 467 read with Section 471 IPC, it has to be shown that an accused either knew or has reason to believe that the document was forged. (Paras 367 to 369)

When the factual background highlighted is considered in the light of the various provisions, it is clear that the offences under the Indian Penal Code alleged have been established against the accused persons. Accused 1, 3 and 5 were therefore, rightly convicted. (Para 378). Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869: AIR 2003 SC 2748.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah[1], B.N. Agrawal[2] and Arijit Pasayat[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2003]

[10630] — Ss. 463, 471, 475 and 476 — Interpretation of S. 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC, considered — Allegation of commission of forgery in respect of document produced/given in evidence in a proceeding in court — Initiation of proceeding under S. 340 CrPC — Sustainability — On facts, following Iqbal Singh case, (2005) 4 SCC 370, held, High Court rightly placed reliance on Sachida Nand case, (1998) 2 SCC 493 and held that initiation of proceeding under S. 340 CrPC was without jurisdiction and accordingly allowed the writ appeal — Present appeal, therefore, held, was without merit — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 340 and 195(1)(b)(ii)

Challenge in this appeal was to the judgment of Division Bench of the High Court by which the judgment of the Single Judge was set aside and the writ appeal was allowed.

Matter related to tenancy of a building by lease agreement where lease deed enabled tenant, Respondent 1, to make alterations in it. Accordingly, tenant effected some alterations in the building for which he received an order from the Municipality directing him to demolish the structure, citing it to be unauthorised. Tenant approached Government thereagainst which directed him to submit application to local authority seeking regularisation of additional structure made by him.

Appellant's contention in writ was that there was no lease agreement and construction was unauthorised which could not be legalised on other grounds. Tenant then filed counter-affidavit annexing photocopy of lease agreement. Contention of appellant thereafter was that purported lease agreement was a forged document for which she had sought opinion of handwriting expert. Fabrication of lease agreement was denied by tenant.

The Single Judge of High Court relied on the opinion given by the handwriting expert and prima facie came to the conclusion that the lease agreement was fabricated and hence there was a reasonable likelihood to establish the offences punishable under Sections 463, 471, 475 and 476 IPC. The Single Judge directed Registrar of the Court to make a complaint for the purpose in writing and send it to the Magistrate of the First Class having jurisdiction. Against this order the writ appeal was filed which was allowed. Hence the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is to be noted that in view of the conflict of language between two decisions of the Supreme Court, each rendered by a Bench of three learned Judges in Sachida Nand case and Surjit Singh case regarding interpretation of Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC, the matter was placed before a five-Judge Bench in Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah. After referring to the provisions contained in Sections 190, 195(1)(b)(ii) and 340 CrPC it was held that the decision in Sachida Nand case was correctly decided and the view taken is the correct view. (Para 11)

The Division Bench of High Court was, therefore, right in placing reliance on Sachida Nand case and holding that stage for initiation of the proceeding, if any, under Section 340 CrPC had not come, and therefore, initiation of the proceeding under Section 340 CrPC was without jurisdiction. The appeal is, therefore, without merit. (Paras 12, 8 and 13). Rugmini Ammal v. V. Narayana Reddiar, (2007) 12 SCC 611: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 309: AIR 2008 SC 895: (2008) 61 AIC 46 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1405.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed

Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660, affirmed

[10631] — Ss. 463, 471, 475 and 476 — Private complaint — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC that no court shall take cognizance of any offence described in S. 463 IPC, or punishable under S. 471, S. 475 or S. 476 IPC, committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in the court, except on complaint in writing of the court concerned — Private complaint in such matter — Maintainability — Held, said bar not attracted, as offence committed by respondent-accused in collusion with Area Lekhpal was not in relation to court proceedings — It was behind the back of appellant and as soon as he came to know about the illegal designs of accused, he lodged a private complaint under S. 156(3), which was maintainable — Magistrate directed to proceed with criminal complaint — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 195(1) (b)(ii), 156(3) and 482

The appellant purchased land from one M (vendor) and pursuant to the execution of sale deed in his favour, he was handed over possession. Respondent-accused (Respondents 2 to 4 herein) contended that land in question was recorded in their names. On inquiries made by both appellant and vendor in Tahsildar's court, they came to know that accused, in collusion with the Area Lekhpal, got their names mutated on the basis of Area Lekhpal's report. Area Lekhpal had given a totally untrue statement, and by showing an alive person, appellant's vendor as dead had got the names of the accused mutated. Appellant filed an application before SDM to set aside such mutation order, which was allowed and appeal of respondent-accused thereagainst dismissed. Thus, matter relating to mutation proceedings came to an end.

However, the appellant initiated criminal proceedings against respondent-accused by filing application/complaint under Section 156(3) CrPC, alleging the aforesaid facts. The said application/complaint of the appellant was allowed and police registered the FIR and started investigation. Ultimately, after further litigation, police completed the investigation and the investigating officer submitted the charge-sheet for commission of alleged offences under Sections 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B IPC and criminal case was registered against the respondents and cognizance taken against them. Respondent-accused then filed petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing the charge-sheet and taking cognizance thereof, which was allowed.

The High Court held that the application under Section 156(3) CrPC was barred in view of the provisions of Section 195 CrPC. However, appellant complainant was given liberty to move an application before the court concerned for taking action against the accused persons in accordance with the provisions of Section 340 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC contemplates a situation where offences enumerated therein are committed with respect to a document, subsequent to its production or giving in evidence in a proceeding in any court. (Para 23)

The impugned order was passed by the High Court on total non-application of law with regard to provision contained in Section 195 CrPC, which cannot be sustained in law. It proceeded on absolutely wrong facts and incorrect principles of law were applied. It completely lost sight of the fact that the offence committed by the accused in collusion with the Area Lekhpal was not in relation to court proceedings. It was in any case behind the back of the appellant and as soon as he came to know with regard to the illegal designs of the accused he lodged a complaint under Section 156(3) CrPC. (Paras 16 and 22)

The High Court further committed a gross error in resorting to Section 340 CrPC as provisions of the said section can be invoked only when it is established that offence of forgery had already been committed. (Para 24)

The accused had miserably failed for grant of any relief under Section 482 CrPC. The limit of exercising jurisdiction conferred on the High Court under Section 482 CrPC is well defined and by no stretch of imagination, it could be said that petition filed by the accused under Section 482 CrPC had fulfilled the requirement as contemplated in this section. (Para 25)

Hence, the impugned order cannot be sustained. The same is, accordingly, set aside and quashed. As a necessary consequence thereof, the Magistrate is directed to proceed with the criminal complaint filed by the appellant against respondent-accused in accordance with law and on merits. (Para 26). Mahesh Chand Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 15 SCC 519: (2009) 82 AIC 227 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2009]

Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed [10632] — Ss. 463, 471, 475 and 476 — S. 340 CrPC — When invocable — Held, provisions of S. 340 can be invoked by the court only when it is established that offence of forgery had already been committed (in respect of document produced or given in evidence in the proceedings in that court) — CrPC, 1973, S. 340. Mahesh Chand Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 15 SCC 519: (2009) 82 AIC 227 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2009]

Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed

— S. 464 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 167 and 464

See also Ss. 463 and 464

See also Ss. 463, 464, 465 and 468 r/w S. 420

See also Ss. 463, 464, 465, 470, 471 and 415

See also Ss. 463 to 465 and 471

See also Ss. 466, 468, 463, 464, 23 and 24

See also Ss. 467 and 464

See also Ss. 467, 471, 463 and 464

[10633] — S. 464 — "Dishonestly"

The words "dishonestly" and "fraudulently" are used in S. 464. The appellant did not intend to cause wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person when he brought the diploma, whether forged or not, into Court. He was ordered to do so. He may have intended to deceive the Court, even as he intended that he was forensic expert (which perhaps he was not) and that he held a diploma from a recognised institution. He did not act dishonestly. S. Dutt (Dr.) v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 523: (1966) 1 SCR 493: 1966 Cri LJ 459, 461-65.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Wanchoo, M. Hidayatullah and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-1965]

[10634] — S. 464 — Expressions 'dishonestly' and 'fraudulently' — Must be given different meanings

In S. 464 two adverbs, "dishonestly" and "fraudulently" are used alternatively indicating thereby that one excludes the other. That means they are not tautological and must be given different meanings. Vimla (Dr.) v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1963 SC 1572: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 585: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 434.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K. Subba Rao, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-1962]

[10635] — S. 464 — Non-framing of a charge would not vitiate the conviction if no prejudice is caused to accused

On interpretation of Section 464 CrPC it was observed in Kammari case, (1999) 2 SCC 522 that non-framing of a charge would not vitiate the conviction if no prejudice is caused thereby to the accused. Procedural law is the handmaid of justice and the Code of Criminal Procedure is no exception thereto. Its incorporation in the statute-book has been to subserve the ends of justice and non-observance of the technicalities does not and cannot frustrate the concept of justice since technicality alone would not outweigh the course of justice. In the event, however, there being prejudice leading to a failure of justice, it cannot but be treated to be an illegality, which is otherwise incurable in nature. (Paras 27 and 28). Lallan Rai v. State of Bihar, (2003) 1 SCC 268: 2003 SCC (Cri) 301: AIR 2003 SC 333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-2002]

Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281; Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140: 1956 Cri LJ 291; Narinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (2000) 4 SCC 603: 2000 SCC (Cri) 855, relied on

[10636] — Ss. 464, 24, 25, 29 and 29-A — False document — What constitutes — Held, a person is said to have made a false document, if (i) he made or executed a document claiming to be someone else or authorised by someone else; or (ii) he altered or tampered with a document; or (iii) he obtained a document by practising deception, or from a person not in control of his senses — Further held, in the first category of false documents, it is not sufficient that the document has been made/executed dishonestly or fraudulently — There is the further requirement that the document should have been made with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document was made/executed by, or by the authority of a person, by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made or executed (Paras 14 to 17)

Accused 1 had executed a sale deed in favour of Accused 2, claiming that the property being sold belonged to Accused 1. Second respondent filed a criminal complaint that the title to the property sold, belonged to the second respondent and therefore Accused 1 had committed offences under Sections 467 and 471 IPC. Accused 1' plea was that the property was mutated in his name, he was having its possession and was also paying land revenue for it.

The issue before the Supreme Court was whether Accused 1 had committed an act of forgery even if the facts alleged by the second respondent were accepted as true. Trial court and High Court dismissed Accused 1' plea for quashing of criminal complaint. Reversing this decision and partly allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court, held as above. Mohd. Ibrahim v. State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2009]

[10637] — Ss. 464, 423, 420 r/w S. 34 — Quashing of FIR and investigation — Propriety — Factors to be considered — Private complaint made to Magistrate alleging that general power of attorney issued in favour of first respondent was misused by him, hence appellant complainant had cancelled the same — Despite that Respondent 1 had executed a registered sale deed in favour of Respondent 2 — Magistrate handing over the complaint for investigation, on basis of which FIR lodged — However, said FIR quashed by High Court holding that it was a case of civil profile and none of the ingredients that constitute the offences punishable under Ss. 464, 423 and 420 r/w S. 34 IPC were discernible from the said allegations — Held, it is settled law that an FIR and the consequent investigation cannot be quashed unless there is no offence spelt out from the same — FIR is to be taken on its face value for adjudging the same — No question of considering the merits of the allegations contained in FIR at that stage or testing the veracity of allegations would arise — In the instant case, investigation was in progress and police had also not reported back to the Magistrate the result of their investigation — In such circumstances, FIR could have been quashed only and only if there appeared to be no offence spelt out therein — High Court at the stage of investigation could not have examined the nature of transaction or whether any offence was actually committed by the accused persons or not — Only enquiry that could have been undertaken was to see as to whether the complaint or FIR did contain allegations of any offence — High Court erred in quashing the FIR — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482, 154, 156(3) and 157 (Paras 3, 4, 7 and 8). T. Vengama Naidu v. T. Dora Swamy Naidu, (2007) 12 SCC 93: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 231: (2007) 52 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Balasubramanyan and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2007]

[10638] — Ss. 464, 467 and 468 — Presenting forged will before Patwari and mutation proceedings commenced on the strength of such will — Requirement of S. 195(1)(c), Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 not attracted

The allegation of the complainant was that the appellants forged a will in the name of K and thereafter produced it either before the Patwari or the Tehsildar in the mutation proceedings commenced by them on the strength of the will. The forgery therefore was alleged to have been committed by the appellants not after they became parties to the mutation proceedings but prior to the commencement of those proceedings. Section 195(1)(c) can therefore have no application at least in regard to the offences under Ss. 464, 467 and 468, Penal Code. Mohan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1974) 3 SCC 628: 1974 SCC (Cri) 118: AIR 1974 SC 299: 1974 Cri LJ 350.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1973]

[10639] — S. 464 (making a false document), Secondly and S. 471 (using as genuine a false document) — Applicability — Held, to attract S. 464 Secondly, there has to be alteration of document dishonestly and fraudulently, for some gain or with such objective on the part of accused — Merely changing a document does not make it a false document — Dates "6-5-2002" and "7-5-2002" alleged to have been changed to "16-5-2002" and "17-5-2002" by interpolating "1" in certified copy of revenue records — Held on facts, interpolation did not save limitation in civil suits alleged to have been filed by appellant — She did not gain anything out of alleged interpolation — The document therefore did not become false under S. 464, Secondly — Consequently, offence under S. 471 was also not made out (Paras 33 and 34). Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2009]

— S. 465 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 30, 467, 465 and 471

See also Ss. 120-A and 465

See also Ss. 120-B, 302 and 465, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 420, 465, 468, 471, 477-A, 101 and 34

See also Ss. 120-B and 465

See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 466 and 500

See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 467, 468, 471 and 420

See also S. 120-B r/w 326, 342, 417, 465, 473, 506 and 307

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 467, 471, 420, 406, 409, 465, 162, 163, 167, 201 and 109

See also Ss. 177, 181, 193, 406, 465 and 474 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 193, 196, 465 and 471

See also Ss. 205, 419, 465, 467 and 471

See also Ss. 323, 382, 420, 465, 468, 471, 120-B, 506 and 34

See also Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34

See also Ss. 406, 420, 465, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 465, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472 and 474 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 420, 421, 466, 468, 471, 465 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 463, 465, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 465, 466, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 486, 465 and 467

See also Ss. 463, 464, 465 and 468 r/w S. 420

See also Ss. 463, 464, 465, 470, 471 and 415

See also Ss. 463 to 465 and 471

See also Ss. 463 and 465

See also Ss. 463, 465 and 120-B

See also Ss. 463, 465 and 466

See also Ss. 467, 465, 471 and 120-A

See also Ss. 468, 420, 120-B, 417 and 465

See also Ss. 468, 463 and 465

See also Ss. 468, 465 and 471

See also Ss. 471 and 465

[10640] — S. 465 — Whether S. 465 pro tanto repealed by S. 146(p) of the Maharashtra Cooperative Societies Act, 1960 — If prosecution bad for want of sanction

In order to attract Ss. 463 and 464, IPC, there must be making of a false document with the intention mentioned in the section, whereas S. 146 of the Maharashtra Act does not make any such intention an ingredient of the offences. It is true that certain acts may fall within both the sections but that is no ground to hold that S. 465, IPC, is pro tanto repealed by S. 146(p) of the Maharashtra Act. In considering such problem the court must consider the true meaning and effect of the two Acts and unless there is repugnancy or inconsistency between the two or that the two cannot stand together, they must be treated cumulative.

It is clear from a perusal of S. 146(p) of the Maharashtra Act and Ss. 463 and 464, IPC, that they are two distinct offences which are capable of being committed with different intentions by different sets of persons and it could not be contemplated that the Legislature of the State of Maharashtra intended to repeal pro tanto the provisions of S. 465, IPC, by enactment of S. 146 of the Maharashtra Cooperative Societies Act, 1960. No sanction is necessary with reference to an offence under S. 146(p) under any provision of the Criminal Procedure Code. Rama Rao v. Narayan, (1969) 1 SCC 167: AIR 1969 SC 724: 1969 Cri LJ 1064.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.C. Shah and A.N. Grover, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1968]

[10641] — Ss. 465, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Warrantedness — Pendency of civil procedings — Effect — When trial court found that the complainant had made out a prima facie case against the accused persons, of forgery of a document (a deed of dissolution of partnership firm), held, High Court was not justified in quashing the criminal proceedings merely on the ground that the same document was under scrutiny by it in a civil proceeding initiated by the same complainant — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The appellant filed a complaint before the Magistrate alleging that the respondent-accused persons had brought into existence a deed of dissolution of a partnership firm by forging signatures of the partners, including the signature of the appellant for their personal gain and to the detriment of the partners of the firm. The Magistrate recorded the statement of the witnesses for the complainant, perused the record including opinion of a handwriting expert and his deposition and found that the appellant had made out a prima facie case under Sections 465, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B IPC against all the accused persons and therefore, issued summons for their presence. Instead of appearing before the trial Magistrate and contesting the case, the respondents approached the High Court by filing a petition under Section 482 CrPC praying for quashing of the proceedings initiated and process issued against them. The High Court quashed the proceedings observing:

"Consideration is and should be whether any criminal proceeding instituted before a court subordinate to this Court should be allowed to continue when the very foundation of the criminal case, namely, forgery of document is under scrutiny by this Court in a civil proceeding instituted by same person i.e. the complainant in the criminal case. In my considered view it would not be proper to allow the criminal proceeding to continue when the validity of the document (deed of dissolution) is being tested in a civil proceeding before this Court."

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the impugned order passed by the High Court and restoring the order of the Magistrate with the direction to proceed with the trial of the case in accordance with the provisions of law and decide the same on merits,

Held :

The High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings initiated by the appellant against the respondents. Criminal prosecution cannot be thwarted at the initial stage merely because civil proceedings are also pending. There is no substance in the argument that as the civil suit was pending in the High Court, the Magistrate was not justified to proceed with the criminal case either in law or on the basis of propriety. Criminal cases have to be proceeded with in accordance with the procedure as prescribed under the Code of Criminal Procedure and the pendency of a civil action in a different court even though higher in status and authority, cannot be made a basis for quashing of the proceedings. The nature and scope of civil and criminal proceedings and the standard of proof required in both matters is different and distinct. Whereas in civil proceedings the matter can be decided on the basis of probabilities, the criminal case has to be decided by adopting the standard of proof of "beyond reasonable doubt". The revisional or inherent powers of quashing the proceedings at the initial stage should be exercised sparingly and only where the allegations made in the complaint or the FIR, even if taken at their face value and accepted in entirety, do not prima facie disclose the commission of an offence. Disputed and controversial facts cannot be made the basis for the exercise of the jurisdiction. (Paras 17, 9, 15 and 7). Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200: AIR 2001 SC 3846.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Hazari Lal Gupta v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1972) 1 SCC 452: 1972 SCC (Cri) 208; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Lalmuni Devi v. State of Bihar, (2001) 2 SCC 17: 2001 SCC (Cri) 275; M. Krishnan v. Vijay Singh, (2001) 8 SCC 645: 2002 SCC (Cri) 19; M.S. Sheriff v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 397: 1954 Cri LJ 1019, relied on

Manju Gupta v. Lt. Col. M.S. Paintal, (1982) 2 SCC 412: 1982 SCC (Cri) 459; Sardool Singh v. Nasib Kaur, 1987 Supp SCC 146: 1987 SCC (Cri) 672; Karamchand Ganga Pershad v. Union of India, (1970) 3 SCC 694, distinguished

Shiv Kishan Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2001) 1 Cal LJ 480 (Cal HC), reversed

See also K.G. Premshanker v. Inspector of Police, (2002) 8 SCC 87 in this regard

[10642] — Ss. 465, 468, 471 and 420 r/w S. 120-B — On facts held, High Court erred in quashing the criminal proceedings — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

On receipt of a complaint, a charge-sheet was submitted by the police against the respondents alleging commission of offences punishable under Sections 465, 468, 471 and 420 r/w Section 120-B IPC. It was alleged that a sub-lease to act as Excise Contractor of Koratagere was obtained by Respondent 1 by submitting fake bank guarantees, confirmation and extension letters and by impersonation with fraudulent intention. The accused-Respondents 1 and 2 filed application before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. They inter alia contended that the allegations made have not been borne out by the materials/evidence collected during investigation and continuance of proceedings against them would be against the ends of justice. A Single Judge of the High Court, on analysis of the background facts held that involvement of the excise officials could not be ruled out and when they had been indicated to be witnesses, likelihood of prejudice could not be ruled out. It was also noted that there was no "definite evidence" to show that Accused 1 and 2 were directly involved. Finally, it was observed that there was no material to hold that the accused persons had committed theft of "letter heads" from the bank and/or they had committed forgery for the purpose of cheating or have used genuine forged documents or had cheated the Government. Finally, it was observed that there was no evidence to infer common intention to commit such offences. Hence he quashed the criminal proceedings. Allowing the appeal by the State,

Held:

The order of the Single Judge of the High Court cannot be maintained and therefore, the same is set aside. (Para 10). State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539: AIR 2002 SC 671: 2002 Cri LJ 998: (2002) 2 CHN (Supp) 21.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, B.N. Agrawal and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2002]

[10643] — Ss. 465/34 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Propriety of quashing complaint against some of the accused when complaint made specific allegations against all — Complaint filed by appellant alleging that Chairman & MD (A-1), Principal Manager (Finance) and Company Secretary (A-2) Joint Secretary and Manager (Finance) (A-3) of a company together committed offence under Ss. 465 and 466 r/w S. 34 IPC by filing a forged certificate in court in a pending proceeding between them and the appellant — Magistrate coming to the conclusion that prima facie the offence as alleged was disclosed against all the three accused and accordingly issuing summons — Writ petition filed before High Court for quashing the proceedings — High Court taking the view that it was incumbent on the part of the complainant to plead the role of each accused in the making of the document and accordingly holding that A-2 was involved in the forgery but the allegations contained in the complaint were not sufficient to implicate A-1 and A-3 and as such quashing the proceedings initiated against them — Held, High Court erred in quashing the proceedings initiated against A-1 and A-3 when in the complaint it was specifically alleged that all the three accused had together forged the document which was presented in Court — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Constitution of India, Art. 226. Tarun K. Shah v. C.R. Alimchandani, (2001) 9 SCC 728.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Kirpal and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-2000]

C.R. Alimchandani v. J.K. Shah, 1999 Cri LJ 2416 (Bom), reversed

[10644] — Ss. 465/471 or Ss. 139/196 — Credentials of an expert examined in a court challenged — Expert filing his diplomas and certificates for examination by the Court under its orders — Allegation that the documents filed were forged — Court refusing to file a complaint under S. 195 CrPC — Government expert filing a complaint against the expert under Ss. 465/471 IPC — Held, facts disclosed an offence under Ss. 139/196 IPC and not under Ss. 465/471 IPC — Expert could not be prosecuted in the absence of a complaint by Court under S. 195 CrPC — CrPC, 1898 — S. 195. S. Dutt (Dr.) v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 523: (1966) 1 SCR 493: 1966 Cri LJ 459, 61, 64.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Wanchoo, M. Hidayatullah and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-1965]

— S. 466 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 52, 420, 406, 466, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 384, 388, 342, 341, 193, 201, 218, 466 amd 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 466 and 500

See also Ss. 120-B, 466 and 467

See also Ss. 420, 421, 466, 468, 471, 465 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 465, 466, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 463, 465 and 466

See also Ss. 463 and 466

See also Ss. 471, 466 and 468 and 120-B

[10645] — S. 466 — Held, offence under S. 466 is covered by the expression "offences described in S. 463" — CrPC, 1898 — S. 195(1)(c)

Section 466 is an aggravated form of forgery in that the forgery should relate to a document specified in the section. One of the documents specified is a document purporting to be a record or proceeding of or in a court of justice. Section 466, is therefore an offence as described in S. 463 which is committed in relation to a record or proceeding of or in a court of justice. In S. 195(1)(c) the words used are "of any offence described in S. 463 or punishable under S. 471, S. 475 or S. 476 of the same Code". Thus, S. 466, Indian Penal Code is covered by cl. (b) or (c) of S. 195(1). S.L. Goswami (Dr.) v. High Court of M.P., (1979) 1 SCC 373: 1979 SCC (Cri) 311: AIR 1979 SC 437: 1979 Cri LJ 193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.S. Kailasam, D.A. Desai and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-1978]

[10646] — S. 466 — Whether on facts and in the circumstances of the case, a prima facie offence constituted under — Pasting an antedated order over a previous order in the file by Chief Minister — Whether prima facie forgery established — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(1)(d)

Respondent 3 started a cooperative Bank in the State of Bihar and became its chairman. The audit report revealed various irregularities in the affairs of the Bank whereupon the Cooperative Audit Department as well as the Law Department recommended legal action against the directors of the Bank. Meanwhile, respondent 2, who was a colleague of respondent 3, became the Chief Minister of Bihar. He called for the concerned file and on May 16, 1975 ordered for taking strict steps for realisation of the loans, failing which for starting surcharge proceedings and to restore normal conditions in the Bank after convening annual general meeting and holding election. However, subsequently he made a fresh order bearing a back date viz. May 14, 1975 for restoring normal condition in in the Bank after holding annual general meeting. This order was pasted over the earlier order in the file, such practice being prevalent in the Chief Minister's Secretariat.

In 1977 the Congress (I) Party was voted out and the Janata Party came into power in Bihar. Thereafter an enquiry into the affairs of the Bank was held and a report submitted recommending institution of criminal cases against respondent 2 and others. Accordingly, a Senior Advocate (Shri A.K. Datta) was appointed as a Special Public Prosecutor and after obtaining the requisite sanction from the Governor a charge-sheet was filed in 1979 by the State of Bihar against the respondents for offences under Ss. 420/466/471/109/120-B, IPC and Ss. 5(1)(a), 5(1)(b) & 5(1)(d) read with S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. It was inter alia alleged that respondent 2 in the capacity of a Minister or the Chief Minister at the material time by corrupt or illegal means or by otherwise abusing his position as a public servant, in conspiracy with the other accused and with the view to protect respondent 3 in particular, sought to subvert criminal prosecution and surcharge proceedings against himself and conferred on himself and them pecuniary advantage to the detriment of the Bank, its members, depositors and creditors and thereby committed the aforesaid offences

Held :

Per Baharul Islam, J.

By pasting an antedated order over the previous order, respondent 2 cannot be said to have shielded respondent 3 and others from realising the dues from the accused persons including respondent 3 or from initiating surcharge proceedings against them. If respondent 2 found that his first order regarding surcharge was unwarranted by law (by virtue of S. 40 of the Bihar Cooperative Societies Act, 1935 which gives power only to the Registrar to initiate surcharge proceedings), his cancellation of the first order was proper. Moreover, bona fide scoring out the order retaining the last part, would constitute no offence by respondent 2. Pasting an order by a piece of paper containing another order prima facie appears suspicious, but pasting is the common practice in the Chief Minister's Secretariat. Antedating simpliciter is no offence. If two interpretations are possible, one indicating criminal intention and the other innocent, the interpretation beneficial to the accused must be accepted.

One of the co-accused made two consecutive confessional statements. In the first statement he did not implicate respondent 2 but in his second statement made after his re-arrest he implicated respondent 2. When the second statement was made he was not a co-accused in the case involving respondent 2 and others as at that time that case had not been registered. The second confessional statement thus inspires no confidence; it was the statement of an accomplice turned approver, and is worthless.

From the facts and circumstances of the case it also appears that the criminal case against respondent 2 was the result of political vendetta.

In the circumstances of the case, therefore, the suggestion that there was a prima facie case for trial by the Special Judge and the case should be remanded to him for trial cannot be accepted.

Moreover, the above suggestion did not arise out of the points formulated by the appellant's counsel at the start of his argument, nor did it arise out of the appellant's petition opposing withdrawal. This question of fact has not been sought to be brought to the notice of the Supreme Court during the course of argument by counsel of the appellant in this appeal. A question of fact that needs investigation cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time in an appeal by special leave under Art. 136.

Per Misra, J. (concurring)

On the material on record it cannot be said that a prima facie case under S. 5(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and of forgery under S. 466, IPC are made out.

Per Tulzapurkar, J. (dissenting)

It is not necessary that the fraudulent intent should materialise; it is enough if act of antedating is done with the fraudulent intent. In the present case the undisputed documentary evidence comprising the Audit Reports, the relevant notings in the concerned file and the two orders of respondent 2 clearly make out a prima facie case of the commission of two common law offences of criminal misconduct [S. 5(1)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act] and forgery (S. 466, IPC) by respondent 2 without needing any further material to establish the same. The ingredients of the former can be said to be prima facie satisfied in that by passing the two orders respondent 2 by corrupt or illegal means or by otherwise abusing his position as the Chief Minister subverted the criminal prosecution and surcharge proceedings against respondent 3 and others and had thereby at any rate obtained for them pecuniary advantage to the detriment of the Bank, its members, depositors and creditors. This is apart from the aspect as to whether while doing so he obtained pecuniary advantage for himself or not, for which further material by way of confessional statement of the approvers would be required to be considered or appreciated but ignoring such further material the ingredients of S. 5(1)(d) get satisfied prima facie as indicated above. As regards the latter though respondent 2 had the authority and power to pass the second order in substitution of the first, by antedating the second order with fraudulent intent the ingredients of forgery again is prima facie satisfied. The antedating in the circumstances would be with oblique intent to nullify any possible action that could have or might have been taken pursuant to the first order, that being the most natural consequence flowing from it which he must in law be presumed to have intended.

The impugned withdrawal was neither justified on merits nor in law and was illegal. Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1983) 1 SCC 438: 1983 SCC (Cri) 224: AIR 1983 SC 194: 1983 Cri LJ 348.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar[1], Baharul Islam[2] and R.B. Misra[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1982]

[10647] — Ss. 466, 419/109 and 471/109 — Person preparing forged passport — Since his aim was to enable somebody to make use of them as genuine passport the offence under S. 471 r/w S. 109 was also committed — That he was acquitted under S. 419 r/w S. 109 would not disturb the conviction under S. 471 r/w S. 109

But since on facts the direct and circumstantial evidence was insufficient to establish a charge under S. 466, the conviction under Ss. 466 and 471 read with S. 109 is set aside.

Whosoever made the endorsements extending the passports to countries to which the passport-holders were not entitled to travel, could not have made the endorsements innocently. When the endorsements were made, the passports must have borne either the photograph of the genuine passport-holder or the impersonator. In either case, the endorsements had been made with a view to help the person having his photograph on the passport to travel to countries to which he was not entitled to travel. The endorsements were obviously made dishonestly and fraudulently and, therefore, the offence under S. 741 read with S. 109, IPC must be deemed to have been committed. Mahendra Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1972) 4 SCC 715: AIR 1971 SC 2593: 1972 Cri LJ 34.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and D.G. Palekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1971]

[10648] — Ss. 466, 468, 463, 464, 23 and 24 — "Forged document" — Fabrication of forged bail order by stenographer of the Judge —

Forged bail order proved to be in the handwriting of the accused — Merely because signature in such bail order not put by the accused it cannot be said that the same was not a "document" and thereby not attracting S. 464 — Expression "gaining wrongfully" and "losing wrongfully" not confined only to acquisition or actual deprivation of property — Hence, preparation of forged bail order attracts S. 466 — Accused held liable to be convicted under Ss. 466 and 468 — However, in view of the fact that 27 years had elapsed and the trial Judge himself had granted benefit of probation to the accused and there being no bad antecedents, order of the trial Judge granting benefit of S. 4 of U.P. First Offenders Probation Act affirmed

The High Court committed gross error in recording the conclusion that the bail order in question cannot be said to be a "document" since the accused did not put the signature under the bail order. Under Section 464, a person is said to make a false document who dishonestly or fraudulently makes, signs, seals or executes a document or part of a document. The reasoning of the High Court, therefore, that the bail order without the signature cannot be said to be a document thereby not attracting the provisions of Section 464 is wholly unsustainable.

It would be seen from Section 466 IPC that whoever forges a document, purporting to be a record or proceeding of or in a court of justice commits the offence. The bail order in question undoubtedly purports to be a proceeding in a court of justice and the question, therefore, is whether the accused can be said to have forged the said document. "Forgery" has been defined in Section 463 IPC and the expression "making a false document" is defined in Section 464 IPC. In view of the conclusion of the courts below that the accused did write the bail order in his own handwriting, even though the learned Judge did not pass any bail order, the conclusion is irresistible that the accused made a false document, as a result of which a person not entitled to be released on bail could make himself free from custody. The question, therefore, arises whether under such circumstances it can be held that the accused made a false document either dishonestly or fraudulently. The expression "wrongful" in Section 23 IPC means prejudicially affecting a party in some legal right. The words "gaining wrongfully" or "losing wrongfully" need not be confined only to the acquisition or to the actual deprivation of property. In this view of the matter if by virtue of preparing a false document purporting it to be a document of a court of justice and by virtue of such document a person who is not entitled to be released on bail could be released then, undoubtedly damage or injury has been caused to the public at large and, therefore, there is no reason why under such circumstances the accused who is the author of such forged document cannot be said to have committed offence under Section 466 IPC. Then again under Section 464 whoever dishonestly or fraudulently makes a document or part of a document can be said to have made a false document. A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does that thing with intent to defraud but not otherwise. The expression "defraud" involves two elements, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived. Injury is something other than economic loss and it will include any harm whatever caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or such others. A benefit or advantage to the deceiver will almost always cause loss or detriment to the deceived. Where, therefore, a document is prepared with the intention to deceive and by means of deceit, an advantage is obtained then there is a fraud and judged from this standpoint, the preparation of a forged bail order by the utilisation of which the person concerned obtained an advantage of being released deceiving the courts and the society at large cannot but be said to have made the document fraudulently, thereby attracting Section 466 IPC. State of U.P. v. Ranjit Singh, (1999) 2 SCC 617: 1999 SCC (Cri) 293: AIR 1999 SC 1201: 1999 All LJ 970: 1999 Cri LJ 1830.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M.B. Shah and R.C. Lahoti, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1999]

Mahesh Chandra Prasad v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Pat 393: ILR 22 Pat 292, approved

[10649] — Ss. 466, 468, 471, 477-A and 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(1)(d) — Conspiracy to commit embezzlement and misappropriation of govt. fund by govt. officers — Disbursement of wages — Disbursing officers allegedly omitting to mention full addresses of the labourers on payment vouchers with intent to make it impossible to trace them — Report of the Superintending Engineer who made spot enquiries showing that much less work had been done than the details of work mentioned in the record — Held on facts, chain of circumstantial evidence not complete — Simply on the basis of the reports of the Superintending Engineer the case of embezzlement by falsifying the records not made out — Conviction set aside

Simply on the basis of the reports of the Superintending Engineer that less work than what was stated in the records was done, the case of embezzlement by deliberately falsifying the records is not established. Until and unless by cogent and unimpeachable evidence about the factum of non-payment to labourers of the amount drawn in their names can be established, the case of embezzlement by the government officers and misappropriation of government fund cannot be sustained. The Superintending Engineer may be a responsible officer but it would not be safe to simply rely on his assessment of the work done and for basing the conviction, other convincing corroborative evidences about the quantum of work done is necessary. In the facts of the case, it will not be just and proper to accept the said report and deposition of the Superintending Engineer to be conclusive about the quantum of work. (Para 13)

Unless and until the factum of non-payment to the workers is established, overpayment to the workers on account of less work done cannot be held to be sufficient evidence to convict the accused for the offences alleged against them. Even if it is assumed that the local officers who were entrusted with the task of payment to the labourers were careless and did not actually ascertain the quantum of work executed by the labourers but made payments to the labourers on the basis of work as indicated in the bills, such local officers may be held guilty of dereliction of duty but they cannot be held to be guilty for the offences alleged against them. In the instant case, the chain of circumstantial evidence is far from being complete and the conviction, has been based more on surmise and conjecture than on the basis of convincing and unimpeachable evidences. Therefore, the conviction of the appellants is liable to be set aside. (Para 13). Inderjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 289: 1995 SCC (Cri) 837.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-7-1995]

[10650] — Ss. 466, 468, 471 r/w S. 120-B and Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(1)(d) — Sentence — Accused L an employee of factory acting under the directions of his superiors and accused T also a small officer in hierarchy — Offences committed during the year 1958-59 — Both the accused very much aged now — Sentence of accused L reduced from one year's RI to six months' RI and sentence of accused T reduced from two years' RI to one year's RI. Mahadev Bapuji Mahajan v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 748: AIR 1994 SC 1549: 1994 Cri LJ 1389.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1993]

[10651] — Ss. 466 and 471 — Modification of conditions of bail — Effect, if any, on the liability of the surety — Alteration of conditions other than that of ensuring the attendance of the accused in the court whenever required, held, does not absolve the surety from his liability in terms of the bond — If the surety is not agreeable to the modified conditions, he must apply to the court under S. 444(1) CrPC to discharge him — Hence, in case of forfeiture of the bond due to default of the accused in appearing before the court, the surety, unless already discharged by the court, held, can be proceeded against by the court under S. 446 CrPC —Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 — Passport Act, 1967 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 441, 446 and 444(1)

The appellants stood sureties for bailing out a foreign national who was under indictment for the offences mentioned in Sections 466 and 471 of the IPC besides a few other offences under the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 and the Passport Act, 1967. The conditions of bail were, inter alia, as follows:

"(i) The accused should furnish a personal bond of Rs 25,000 and to furnish two local sureties for the same amount.

* * *

(iv) The accused should not leave Bangalore city without the prior permission from the Bangalore City Police Commissioner, till the trial is completed."

After the release, at the instance of the accused, the Magistrate relaxed condition (iv) of the bond and permitted the accused to reside in Mysore. Thereafter, the accused slipped out of India. Consequently, the Magistrate forfeited the bail bonds and required the sureties to pay the amount of bail bonds. The sureties' appeal was dismissed by the Sessions Court and their second appeal was dismissed on merits by the High Court. The Supreme Court found the second appeal to be not maintainable but since the High Court had dismissed the same on merits, the Supreme Court treated the High Court's order as a revisional one and proceeded to hear the appeal on merits. The appellant sureties contended that with the relaxation of condition (iv) of the bond without notice to them, they stood absolved of their liability under the bond. Rejecting this contention,

Held :

The contention of the appellants is not sustainable. The most essential element of the bail order is for ensuring the attendance of the accused in the court whenever required. In fact, that is the hub of the order and the other conditions are only subsidiary thereto. So long as that core postulate remains unchanged a surety cannot take advantage of any subsequent modification effected in respect of any other conditions. If a surety is not agreeable to abide by the modified conditions he must apply to the court under Section 444(1) CrPC to discharge him. Until the surety is discharged he is bound by the bond and any modification or even deletion of a condition of the order cannot absolve him from his liability in respect of the unaltered conditions. If there is forfeiture of the bond executed by the surety due to the default of the accused in making appearance before the court it is open to the court concerned to resort to the steps contemplated in Section 446 CrPC as against the sureties, besides the accused himself. (Para 12). Mohd. Kunju v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 8 SCC 660: AIR 2000 SC 6.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1999]

State of Bihar v. M. Homi, AIR 1955 SC 478: (1955) 2 SCR 78, distinguished [10652] — Ss. 466 and 471 — Remission in penalty — In the peculiar circumstances of the case, granted — Foreign national under indictment under Ss. 466 and 471 IPC and a few other offences under Registration of Foreigners Act and Passport Act released on bail and thereafter absconding abroad secretly — Sureties in terms of the bond were liable to pay Rs 25,000 each — In such circumstances, since the offences, though not trivial, were not very serious either, the court had not required the accused to surrender his passport and there was no connivance on the part of the sureties, Supreme Court granting remission to them and directing each surety to pay instead Rs 5000 as penalty — Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 — Passport Act, 1967 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 446(3) (Paras 15 and 16). Mohd. Kunju v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 8 SCC 660: AIR 2000 SC 6.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1999]

Madhu Limaye v. Metropolitan Magistrate, 1984 Supp SCC 699: 1985 SCC (Cri) 148, followed

— Ss. 466/471 See also Ss. 420, 486, 467 and 466/471

— S. 467 See also S. 1 and S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467 and 471

See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 30, 467, 465 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 109 and 408, 409, 467 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 302 and 465, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 467 and 471 r/w S. 120

See also Ss. 120-B, 419, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 467, 468, 471 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 466 and 467

See also Ss. 120-B, 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204

See also Ss. 120-B, 467 and 468 r/w S. 34

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 218, 379, 467, 468, 471 and 419

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 218

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 409, 467 and 471

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467 and 471

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 467, 471, 420, 406, 409, 465, 162, 163, 167, 201 and 109

See also Ss. 182, 211, 193, 467, 471 and 385

See also Ss. 205, 419, 465, 467 and 471

See also Ss. 405, 406, 408, 409, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 409, 420, 467, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 465, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 467 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406 and 467

See also Ss. 406, 467 r/w Ss. 34 and 120-B

See also Ss. 407, 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 408, 467, 471 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468, 471/465 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 409 and 467

See also Ss. 409, 467 and 471

See also Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 411

See also Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 415, 463 and 467

See also Ss. 419, 420, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 419, 467, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 465, 466, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420 and 467

See also Ss. 420, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 469

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 467, 471, 323, 506-B and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474

See also Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511

See also Ss. 420, 486, 465 and 467

See also Ss. 420, 486, 467 and 466/471

See also Ss. 463 and 467

See also Ss. 463, 467, 461 and 419 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 463, 467, 468, 24 and 25

See also Ss. 463, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 464, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 465, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

[10653] — S. 467 — Charge under — Finding of High Court based on uncorroborated evidence of accomplice — Conviction set aside. R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 1573: (1963) 1 SCR 121: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 510: ILR (1962) 2 All 904.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and K.N. Wanchoo, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-1962]

[10654] — S. 467 — Charge vague having failed to state the circumstances under which the offence committed — Accused acquitted. Hasan Ali v. State of M.P., (1983) 2 SCC 66: 1983 SCC (Cri) 340: AIR 1983 SC 352(2): 1983 Cri LJ 691(2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-1983]

[10655] — S. 467 — Conviction for forging, on facts held, proper — Offence committed out of sheer economic necessity — Sentence of six months justified. Krishan Lal v. State of Delhi, (1976) 1 SCC 655: 1976 SCC (Cri) 146: AIR 1976 SC 1139: 1976 Cri LJ 854.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.H. Beg, P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-1975]

[10656] — S. 467 — False document — Genuine document becoming false — Accused taking delivery of goods on strength of indemnity bond after filing a declaration that railway receipts were lost — Subsequently the accused obtained certain amount from a bank on the strength of the railway receipts — Held, railway receipts became false and fabricated documents

Of course, the railway receipts were genuine documents at the time they were made when the goods were handed over to the railway, but once the consignee, or his assignee, took delivery of those goods on the strength of an indemnity bond issued because of a declaration that the receipts were lost, the receipts lost their efficacy; therefore, when they were put forward as still good for the purpose for which they were issued and an endorsement was added to them making them over to the bank, they became, from that moment, false and fabricated documents. State of Bihar v. Shyam Lal Tebriwal, Cri. A. No. 152 of 1955.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, A.K. Sarkar and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-1958]

[10657] — Ss. 467 and 114 — Conviction of one accused under S. 467 r/w S. 114 and of the other under S. 467 confirmed — No interference with the sentence also called for having regard to sufficient reasons given for taking a lenient view — Constitution of India — Article 136. State of Karnataka v. Hemareddy, (1981) 2 SCC 185: 1981 SCC (Cri) 395: AIR 1981 SC 1417: (1981) 2 SCR 695: 1981 Cri LJ 1019.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1981]

[10658] — Ss. 467, 302, 380 and 420 — Identification of accused — Proof — Charges of murder by poisoning in a hotel and theft of passport and travellers' cheques of the deceased, cheating and forgery — Prosecution case based on evidence of hotel employees and handwriting expert — Hotel employees identifying the accused-foreigner before court after a lapse of more than 5 years though they had only a brief occasion to see the accused when he had come to stay in the hotel and that too in the usual course of business — Evidence of the hotel employees not disclosing any special reason for them to retain the image of the foreigner for such long period — Accused shown to two of the hotel employees (Manager and waiter) while he was in court lock-up — Evidence of handwriting expert produced to corroborate testimony of the PWs regarding identification of accused — Handwriting expert basing his conclusion about identity of the accused who had written the questioned documents by comparing the same with the sample writing (which, in his opinion, appeared to be disguised) merely on the ground that there was some similarity in some of the letters and figures occurring in the sample handwritings here and there and similar letters and figures appearing in the questioned documents — On these findings High Court taking the view that it would be unsafe to act upon such opinion of expert unless corroborated by reliable evidence — However, testimony of PWs regarding identity of the accused found to be unreliable — In absence of corroboration prosecution held to have failed to prove beyond reasonable doubts identity of the accused — Held on facts, findings of High Court cannot be said to be patently wrong or perverse so as to entitle the Supreme Court to disturb the same — That being so further it is not necessary to go into finding of High Court that prosecution also failed to prove that the deceased was poisoned to death — Constitution of India, Art. 136 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 9 and 45. State of U.P. v. Charles Gurmukh Sobhraj, (1996) 9 SCC 472: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1065: AIR 1996 SC 3473.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1996]

[10659] — Ss. 467 and 406 — Summonses to accused only for trial under S. 406 — Fact that in complaint S. 467 which is exclusively triable by Court of Session is mentioned is of no consequence. Chhadamilal Jain v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 SC 41: (1960) 1 SCR 736: 1960 Cri LJ 145.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, J.L. Kapur, A.K. Sarkar and K.N. Wanchoo, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1959]

[10660] — Ss. 467 and 409 — Sentence — Punishment for offences under — May be reduced by the Supreme Court in an appropriate case. Mangleshwari Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1954 SC 715: 1954 Cri LJ 1797.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, Vivian Bose and N.H. Bhagwati, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1954]

[10661] — Ss. 467 and 417 r/w S. 109 — Appellant a Lambardar inducing sub-registrar to wrongly register document by falsely and intentionally identifying another person as the person named in the document as the one executing the document — Plea of bona fide mistake rejected — Conviction upheld — Interference not justified — Registration Act, 1908, Ss. 34 and 35. Molar v. State of Haryana, (1973) 2 SCC 430: 1973 SCC (Cri) 826: AIR 1973 SC 1413: 1973 Cri LJ 1124.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.K. Mathew and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1973]

[10662] — Ss. 467 and 464 — Payment of forged cheque in due course — Bank if complicit — Cheque presented in bank for payment — Drawer having sufficient funds in the bank to cover the payment — On visual examination no infirmity found in the cheque — But no further scrutiny made by using modern devices such as ultraviolet ray lamp, same being not available in the branch though the branch was located at the outskirts of a metropolitan city where cases of forgery were higher — Payment made by the bank not shown to have been made otherwise than in good faith — Forgery detected later on — Held, bank not liable on ground of negligence merely because of its failure to scrutinise the cheque in ultraviolet ray lamp — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — Ss. 10, 31 & 89. Bank of Maharashtra v. Automotive Engineering Co., (1993) 2 SCC 97: 1993 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1992]

[10663] — Ss. 467, 465, 471 and 120-A — Appellant, a police officer, along with others, charged with bringing into existence a forged sale document ostensibly between an absentee landlord and his caretaker and then on the basis of that document getting a sale deed from the caretaker in favour of one of his co-accused and then getting his co-accused to sell a portion of the said land in his favour — Co-accused turning approver and deposing against the appellant — Both the trial court and the High Court accepting the testimony of the approver and convicting the appellant — On facts held, that there was no reason to disbelieve the evidence of the approver, more so when intrinsically his evidence was trustworthy — In this view of the matter his conviction upheld — High Court had imposed on the appellant, the sentence of imprisonment till the rising of the court — Inevitably that sentence cannot further be lowered. Prahlad Singh v. State, 1997 SCC (Cri) 405.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-1995]

[10664] — Ss. 467, 468, 420 and 120-B — Criminal proceedings when to be dropped or quashed — Appellants, senior officers of Bank charged under Ss. 467, 468, 420 and 120-B IPC — Appellants applying under S. 239 CrPC to trial Magistrate for being discharged on the ground that no case was made out against them — Rejection of appellant's petitions under Ss. 239 and 482 CrPC, by trial Magistrate and High Court respectively — Held, questions regarding the sufficiency or reliability of the evidence to proceed further are not required to be considered by the trial court under S. 239 and High Court under S. 482 — However, if upon the admitted facts and documents relied upon by the complainant or prosecution, without sifting of evidence, no case is made out, the criminal proceedings instituted against the accused are required to be dropped or quashed — Setting aside impugned orders appellants discharged in terms of S. 239 CrPC — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 239 and 482

The inherent powers of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure can be exercised to quash proceedings, in appropriate cases either to prevent the abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Ordinarily the criminal proceedings which are instituted against the accused must be tried and taken to logical conclusions under the Code of Criminal Procedure and the High Court should be reluctant to interfere with the proceedings at an interlocutory stage. However, there may be cases where the inherent jurisdiction to quash proceedings can and should be exercised. Where there is a legal bar against the institution or continuance of the criminal proceedings in respect of the alleged offence, the High Court should not be reluctant to exercise the inherent jurisdiction. Similarly where the allegations in the FIR or the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value do not constitute the offence alleged, or without appreciating the evidence but only merely by looking at the complaint or the FIR or the accompanying documents, the offence alleged is not disclosed, the person proceeded against in such a frivolous criminal litigation has to be saved. (Para 3)

The trial court under Section 239 and the High Court under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not called upon to embark upon an inquiry as to whether evidence in question is reliable or not or evidence relied upon is sufficient to proceed further or not. However, if upon the admitted facts and the documents relied upon by the complainant or the prosecution and without weighing or sifting of evidence, no case is made out, the criminal proceedings instituted against the accused are required to be dropped or quashed. (Para 4)

On facts on a perusal of FIR, the final report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and all other documents accompanying it, no case is made out against any of the appellants and the pendency of the proceedings against them before the Magistrate is an abuse of the process of court. The appeal is allowed and the order of the High Court dated 8-4-1997 and Magistrate dated 6-7-1996 are quashed and the appellants discharged in terms of Section 239 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. (Para 6). K. Ramakrishna v. State of Bihar, (2000) 8 SCC 547: 2001 SCC (Cri) 27: AIR 2000 SC 3330.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2000]

Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, relied upon

[10665] — Ss. 467, 468 and 469 — Forgery of valuable security, will, etc. — Held, only because the appellants are said to have transferred a portion of the property without having complete ownership over it by itself does not satisfy the ingredients of Ss. 467, 468 and 469 IPC (Para 16)

The appellants were members of a Managing Committee of a school. Allegedly, the land in question was said to have been transferred to one K by the Tahsildar in the year 1977-1978. He filed a suit being Civil Suit No. 309 against his daughter-in-law wherein a decree acknowledging a transfer in favour of the latter was passed. The appellants are said to have made a representation before the authority concerned in relation to the functioning of the School after passing of the aforementioned decree came to their knowledge. It is stated that a report dated 14-1-1983 was submitted by the then Tahsildar (Sales), Ludhiana showing the School to be an existing one whereafter the name of the appellants had been recorded in the record-of-rights.

The appellants filed a suit in the year 1990 praying for a decree for possession which was decreed. An order of mutation was thereafter passed in their favour which, however, was cancelled. The appellants sold a part of the land to M/s Everest Girls School. Allegedly sale proceeds therefrom had been spent on construction of sixteen rooms in the existing school. The vendees of the said premises i.e. M/s Everest Girls School were threatened with dispossession by the supporters of Respondents 3 and 5. The appellants filed a civil suit in the Court of Civil Judge wherein an order of status quo was passed restraining respondent-defendants from interfering with possession and construction being raised by the appellant-plaintiffs.

An FIR was lodged by the respondents for the alleged commission of the offences punishable under Sections 420/465/467/468/471 and 120-B of the Penal Code. The application filed by the appellants for quashing the said FIR was dismissed by impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Ramesh Dutt v. State of Punjab, (2009) 15 SCC 429: (2009) 81 AIC 183 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2009]

Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461, relied on [10666] — Ss. 467, 468 and 471 — Criminal appeal — New plea — Offences under Ss. 467, 468 and 471 IPC — Contention regarding absence of essential ingredients of — Raised before the Supreme Court for the first time — Hence, not entertained (Para 23). State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539: AIR 2004 SC 730.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-2003]

[10667] — Ss. 467, 468 and 471 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot advert to case diary, or rely upon letter addressed by parties to officer-in-charge of police station and quash the prosecution on ground that parties had settled their dispute — Offences under Ss. 467, 468 and 471 IPC are not compoundable — Respondent ready to transfer the amount in question to bank — Hence, it would not be expedient to allow the prosecution to continue — Direction made to the bank not to disburse the said amount except under orders of court of competent jurisdiction — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 320. Karpoori Thakur v. Baikunth Nath Dey, 1990 Supp SCC 136: 1990 SCC (Cri) 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1988]

[10668] — Ss. 467, 468, 471, 420, 409 and 218 — Bail — Interim bail pending disposal of bail application — Grant of — Principles to be followed — Absence of provision for anticipatory bail — Effect — In State of U.P. where State Amendment had omitted S. 438, held, judgment of Allahabad High Court in Amarawati case, 2005 Cri LJ 755 (All), to be followed by all courts in letter and spirit — Copy of instant judgment directed to be sent to Registrar General of Allahabad High Court for onward circulation to Judges of High Court and all District Judges in the State — In present case, considering that charge-sheet had been filed and cognizance had been taken, High Court's refusal to quash FIR filed against appellant for committing offences under Ss. 467, 468, 471, 420, 409 and 218 IPC, not interfered with — Directions, however, issued to trial court to grant interim bail to appellant pending final disposal of his bail application if so applied for and deemed fit — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 436, 437, 438, 439 and 482 (Paras 7 to 10). Lal Kamlendra Pratap Singh v. State of U.P., (2009) 4 SCC 437: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 330.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2009]

Amarawati v. State of U.P., 2005 Cri LJ 755 (All), approved and directed to be followed in letter and spirit

[10669] — Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34 — Commission of forgery in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC that no court shall take cognizance of any such offence except on the complaint in writing of the court concerned — Scope and applicability — Forgery committed before the document was filed in court — Held, provisions of S. 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC not applicable in such a case — Hence, High Court was not justified in quashing the prosecution launched under Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34 IPC on the ground that the complaint was barred under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC — Iqbal Singh Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370, followed — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii) and 482 (Paras 3 and 4). K. Vengadachalam v. K.C. Palanisamy, (2005) 7 SCC 352: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1673.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2005]

Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed

[10670] — Ss. 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204 r/w S. 120-B — Conviction under — Legality — Bank employee removing from the Bank a blank draft form, another person forging the Bank Agent's signature on the form and a third person opening an account in the name of a fictitious person and encashing the bank draft — Conviction of all the three persons under the said provisions upheld. Aniceto Lobo v. State (Goa, Daman and Diu), 1993 Supp (3) SCC 311: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1002: AIR 1994 SC 1613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-1993]

[10671] — Ss. 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204 r/w S. 120-B — Sentence under — Bank employee and co-conspirators forging a bank draft for Rs 11,500 and getting it encashed — Occurrence being 24-year-old and the bank employee having lost his job, sentence of each accused on each count reduced from two years' RI to six months' RI — However, sentence of fine of Rs 1000 in each case and in default further RI for three months, upheld. Aniceto Lobo v. State (Goa, Daman and Diu), 1993 Supp (3) SCC 311: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1002: AIR 1994 SC 1613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-1993]

[10672] — Ss. 467 and 471 — Appeal against acquittal by trial Court of charge of forgery of thumb impression in a will — No direct evidence available — Circumstantial evidence conflicting and the circumstances clearly explainable and not very relevant — Trial Court therefore, finding it unsafe to convict the accused — High Court, held, not justified in reversing the acquittal order without giving any cogent reasons for disbelieving the trial Court's findings — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 378 & 386. Arjan Singh v. Hazara Singh, (1980) 1 SCC 613: 1980 SCC (Cri) 309: AIR 1979 SC 1236: 1979 Cri LJ 1029.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1979]

[10673] — Ss. 467 and 471 — Appellant tried for giving forged cheque — Handwriting expert deposing that body of cheque was in appellant's handwriting but was not certain about the signature — Held, it cannot be said that the appellant forged the cheque. Mohanlal Anand v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1975) 4 SCC 252: 1975 SCC (Cri) 510: AIR 1975 SC 1842: 1975 Cri LJ 1645.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1975]

[10674] — Ss. 467 and 471 — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC, on taking cognizance of certain offences — Applicability — Whether applicable to a private complaint for an offence under Ss. 467 and 471 IPC committed in respect of a document forged prior to filing thereof in the court — In view of conflicting views expressed by Supreme Court in earlier decisions some of which were delivered by three-Judge Benches, matter referred by two-Judge Bench to a larger Bench — CrPC, 1973 — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) (Para 4). Balasubramaniam v. State, (2002) 7 SCC 649: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1812.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-2001]

[10675] — Ss. 467 and 471 — Charge of forgery of thumb-impression in a will — Even if circumstances throw some suspicion which may weigh with the civil court in deciding upon the validity or genuineness of the will, that would not take the place of proof in order to convict the accused of a criminal charge. Arjan Singh v. Hazara Singh, (1980) 1 SCC 613: 1980 SCC (Cri) 309: AIR 1979 SC 1236: 1979 Cri LJ 1029.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1979]

[10676] — Ss. 467 and 471 — Forgery in lottery ticket — Prosecution to establish that the ticket was a forged document, that the accused participated in any manner in the act of forgery and that he had requisite mens rea when he presented it before the concerned officer to claim prize — It is, however, immaterial for S. 471 if at any subsequent point of time he comes to know of its forged character — In absence of conclusive proof in respect of these ingredients, conviction under, held, cannot be sustained. Chatt Ram v. State of Haryana, (1980) 1 SCC 460: 1980 SCC (Cri) 243: AIR 1979 SC 1890: 1979 Cri LJ 1411: (1980) 17 ACC 17.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-1979]

[10677] — Ss. 467 and 471 — Inference as to fraudulent motive or dishonest intention in case of forgery or use of forged document as genuine — Burden on accused to prove innocence. Ram Narain v. State of Punjab, AIR 1955 SC 322: 1955 Cri LJ 871.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1955]

[10678] — Ss. 467 and 471 — Sentence — Forgery and embezzlement — Accused sentenced to 4½ years' R.I. under S. 467 r/w S. 471, and acquitted for offence of embezzlement — In appeal High Court maintained the sentence and imposed an additional fine equal to the amount for which he was charged for embezzlement — Held, High Court was not justified in imposing fine

The sentence of 4½ years' rigorous imprisonment which was imposed upon the appellant was a deterrent sentence deliberately so imposed upon him by the trial court. There was no justification whatsoever for imposing an additional sentence of fine of Rs 11,579-8-0 or in default further rigorous imprisonment for a period of a year and a half. The embezzlement charge which was levelled against the appellant in regard to this sum of Rs 11,579-8-0 having ultimately failed the High Court should not have imposed this additional fine on the appellant. Ram Narain v. State of Punjab, AIR 1955 SC 322: 1955 Cri LJ 871.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1955]

[10679] — Ss. 467, 471 and 120-B — Detaching of used stamps from old files and reusing them in other cases — Aiding or abetment of — Held, does not involve any process of forgery or use of forged, document. State of U.P. v. Suresh Chandra Shrivastava, (1984) 3 SCC 92: 1984 SCC (Cri) 415: AIR 1984 SC 1108: 1984 Cri LJ 926.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A. Varadarajan and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1984]

[10680] — Ss. 467, 471, 463 and 464 — Forgery of a document purporting to be a valuable security (S. 467) — Using of forged document as genuine (S. 471) — Ingredients of the said

offences — Held, basic ingredient of both the offences is that there should be "forgery" as defined in S. 463 and forgery in turn depends upon creation of a "false document" as defined in S. 464 — If there is no "false document" as defined in S. 464, offences under Ss. 467 and 471 are not made out — Further held, mere execution of a sale deed by claiming that property being sold was executant's property, did not amount to commission of offences under Ss. 467 and 471 even if title to property did not vest in the executant — This was for the reason that no "false document" as defined in S. 464, was created (Paras 16 and 17)

Accused 1 had executed a sale deed in favour of Accused 2, claiming that the property being sold belonged to Accused 1. Second respondent filed a criminal complaint that the title to the property sold, belonged to the second respondent and therefore Accused 1 had committed offences under Sections 467 and 471 IPC. Accused 1' plea was that the property was mutated in his name, he was having its possession and was also paying land revenue for it.

The issue before the Supreme Court was whether Accused 1 had committed an act of forgery even if the facts alleged by the second respondent were accepted as true. Trial court and High Court dismissed Accused 1' plea for quashing of criminal complaint. Reversing this decision and partly allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court, held as above. Mohd. Ibrahim v. State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2009]

[10681] — Ss. 467, 471 and 477-A — Expert to be relied upon only if Court fully satisfied that he is reliable and truthful — Hence unsafe to base conviction on opinion of an expert disbelieved on most material points — Conviction on the opinion of a handwriting expert, on facts, for offences under Ss. 467, 471 and 477-A, IPC and S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act was improper — Also possibility of any other associate being involved not excluded by the prosecution — Handwriting expert — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 45

In order to rely on the evidence of an expert the Court must be fully satisfied that he is a truthful witness and also a reliable witness fully adept in the art of identification of handwriting in order to opine whether the alleged handwriting has been made by a particular person or not. As the evidence of the expert has been disbelieved by the High Court on the most material points, it is wholly unsafe to base the conviction of the appellant merely on the testimony of such an expert. Kanchansingh Dholaksingh Thakur v. State of Gujarat, (1979) 4 SCC 599: 1980 SCC (Cri) 143: AIR 1979 SC 1011: 1979 Cri LJ 889: 1979 MLJ (Cri) 589.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1979]

[10682] — Ss. 467 and 477-A — Distinction — Charge under S. 467 for making false or imaginary entries in transport permits with intent to defraud Government of its revenues — Permits not amounting to falsification of accounts — Nevertheless there was contravention of latter part of S. 477-A

The charge framed under S. 467 of the Indian Penal Code mentioned about making entries of false or imaginary sale notes and other false entries in the transport permits with intent to defraud Government of its revenues and even if there be some doubt as to whether the permits amounted to falsification of accounts there was a case to be tried on the question whether the entries made therein were false and thereby the latter part of S. 477-A IPC was contravened. G.D. Sharma v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 SC 400: 1960 Cri LJ 541, 543.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, J.L. Kapur, A.K. Sarkar and K.N. Wanchoo, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-9-1959]

[10683] — Ss. 467 and 477-A — Sentence — Reduced to the period already undergone in view of long lapse of time (23 years). Balaram Swain v. State of Orissa, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 510: 1991 SCC (Cri) 707: AIR 1991 SC 279: (1991) 28 ACC 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1990]

— S. 467 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 406, 467 r/w Ss. 34 and 120-B

— S. 467 r/w S. 109 See also Ss. 409, 467 r/w S. 109

[10684] — S. 467 r/w S. 109 — Accused getting signatures of account holder forged on withdrawal forms and drawing money from that account by presenting them in bank — Held, liable to be convicted under S. 467 r/w S. 109 even in absence of evidence showing as to who forged the signatures — Sentence of 9 months' RI confirmed. Bank of India v. Yeturi Maredi Shanker Rao, (1987) 1 SCC 577: 1987 SCC (Cri) 228: AIR 1987 SC 821: 1987 Cri LJ 722.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1987]

— S. 467 r/w S. 120-B See also Ss. 406, 467 r/w Ss. 34 and 120-B

— S. 467 r/w S. 471 See also Ss. 120-B r/w Ss. 420 and 477-A and Ss. 467 r/w 471

— Ss. 467/471 See also Ss. 34, 467/471 and 204

— S. 468 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 52, 420, 406, 466, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-A, 120-B, 420, 468, 471 and 4

See also Ss. 120-B, 107, 109, 420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 302 and 465, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 420, 465, 468, 471, 477-A, 101 and 34

See also Ss. 120-B, 419, 420, 467, 468, 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 120-B, 420 and 468

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 471 and 506

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 477-A r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 477-A r/w S. 34 and S. 5(2) r/w S. 5(1)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947

See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 467, 468, 471 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204

See also Ss. 120-B, 468 and 477-A

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 218, 379, 467, 468, 471 and 419

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also S. 120-B r/w 420 and 468

See also Ss. 120-B/420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 193, 209, 406, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 200, 406, 420, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 302, 302/149, 302/120-B, 307/120-B, 307/149, 120-B, 143, 147, 148, 149, 392, 392/120-B, 392/149, 397/120-B, 397/149, 379, 379/149, 379/120-B, 468, 468/120-B, 468/149, 471, 471/120-B and 471/149

See also Ss. 323, 382, 420, 465, 468, 471, 120-B, 506 and 34

See also Ss. 379, 468, 471, 420 and 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 405, 406, 408, 409, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 405, 420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34

See also Ss. 406, 420, 465, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 465, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 406, 420, 468, 471, 504, 506, 382 and 120-B

See also Ss. 408, 468 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468, 471/465 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 463, 468, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 409 and 468

See also Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472, 474 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 419, 420, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 419, 420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 419 & 420 r/w Ss. 109, 120-B & 468 and S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2), PC Act, 1988

See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 406, 409, 407, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 421, 466, 468, 471, 465 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 463, 465, 468, 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 463, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 465, 466, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 467 and 468

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 469

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 468 and 127

See also Ss. 420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511

See also Ss. 420, 477-A, 468, 109 and 409

See also Ss. 420/511, 420/120-B, 468 and 477-A

See also Ss. 463, 467, 468, 24 and 25
See also Ss. 463, 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 464, 467 and 468
See also Ss. 465, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 465, 468, 471, 209, 406
See also Ss. 465, 468, 471 and 420 r/w S. 120-B
See also Ss. 466, 468, 463, 464, 23 and 24
See also Ss. 466, 468, 471, 477-A and 120-B
See also Ss. 466, 468, 471 r/w 120-B and Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947
See also Ss. 467, 468, 420 and 120-B
See also Ss. 467, 468 and 469
See also Ss. 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 420, 409 and 218
See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204 r/w S. 120-B
See also Ss. 471, 466 and 468 and 120-B

[10685] — Ss. 468 and 120-B — Sentence — Delay — Criminal conspiracy by government servants to obtain illegal gratification by preparing bogus medical bills — Laying of trap and recovery of tainted money established — No plausible explanation put forward by the appellant except the general denial — Conviction upheld — However, in view of long lapse of time (about 20 years) sentence of one year's R.I. reduced to six months' R.I. Narain Lal Nirala v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 SCC (Cri) 1404: AIR 1994 SC 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-1993]

[10686] — Ss. 468, 411 and 420 — Handwriting expert — Opinion of, cannot be sole basis of conviction — Corroboration is necessary — Conviction under, Ss. 468, 411 and 420, held, not proper — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 45

Expert opinion must always be received with great caution and perhaps none so with more caution than the opinion of a handwriting expert. There is profusion of precedential authority which holds that it is unsafe to base a conviction solely on expert opinion without substantial corroboration. This rule has been universally acted upon and it has almost become a rule of law. This type of evidence, being opinion evidence, is by its very nature, weak and infirm and cannot of itself form the basis for a conviction. Magan Bihari Lal v. State of Punjab, (1977) 2 SCC 210: 1977 SCC (Cri) 313: AIR 1977 SC 1091: 1977 Cri LJ 711: (1977) 2 SCR 1007.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1977]

[10687] — Ss. 468, 420 and 120-B — Limitation — Computation of — Where the accused was charged with major offences but was convicted only for minor offences, the period of limitation, held, has to be determined with reference to the offences the accused was charged with and not with reference to the charges he was convicted under — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 468(3) (as added in 1978), (1) & (2)

The two respondents herein were challaned for offences under Sections 468, 420, 120-B IPC and Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, allegedly committed in the year 1983. The charge-sheet was submitted in November 1987 and cognizance was taken in December 1987. The Special Judge acquitted them of the charges under Sections 468 and 420 IPC and Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act but convicted them under Sections 417 and 465 read with Section 109 IPC. The H.P. High Court held that the cognizance of the offences under Sections 417 and 465 IPC taken by the Special Judge on 31-12-1987 was barred by limitation. The High Court further held that Section 473 although empowered court to condone the delay for cogent reasons, the Special Judge had not exercised that power as no such reasons had been recorded. The High Court added that therefore Section 473 could not be pressed into service. Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

The language of Section 473(3) (as added in 1978) makes it imperative that the limitation provided for taking cognizance in Section 468 is in respect of the offence charged and not in respect of offence finally proved. Therefore, when the respondents were charged under Section 468 read with Section 120-B, for which the imposable punishment is seven years and Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, which is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years and for such offences no period of limitation having been provided for in Section 468, the cognizance taken by the learned Special Judge cannot be said to be barred by limitation. (Para 5). State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 2000 SC 297: 2000 Cri LJ 485.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M. Srinivasan and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1999]

State of Punjab v. Sarwan Singh, (1981) 3 SCC 34: 1981 SCC (Cri) 625, explained and distinguished

Tara Dutt v. State of H.P., (1998) 3 Crimes 523 (HP), reversed

[10688] — Ss. 468, 420, 120-B, 417 and 465 — Provision in S. 473 CrPC for taking cognizance after expiry of limitation period — Applicability — Where the accused was charged with offences under Ss. 468, 420 and 120-B IPC but was convicted under Ss. 417 and 465 IPC, held, S. 473 was not attracted — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 473 and 468. State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 2000 SC 297: 2000 Cri LJ 485.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M. Srinivasan and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1999]

Tara Dutt v. State of H.P., (1998) 3 Crimes 523 (HP), reversed

[10689] — Ss. 468 (forgery for purpose of cheating) and 463 — S. 468, held, is an aggravated form of forgery under S. 463 (Para 31). Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2009]

[10690] — Ss. 468, 463 and 465 — Forgery — A-7 alleged to have submitted false verification report in respect of residence of A-3, required for a passport — Held, in absence of any evidence to show that A-7 prepared false document with intent to cause damage or injury, to the public or to any person, or to support any claim or title, or to cause any person to part with property, or to enter into any express or implied contract, or with intent to commit fraud, ingredients of S. 463 are not satisfied — Hence, conviction of A-7 under S. 465 unsustainable — Passports Act, 1967, Ss. 12 and 3

A-3 was alleged to have obtained a fake passport by submitting false documents with the help of A-4 to A-9, which was used by her to travel to Lisbon, Portugal. She had to face the prosecution and suffer conviction and sentence in Portugal.

The trial court found her guilty of the offences punishable under Sections 120-B, 419 and 420 IPC, A-5 was found guilty of the offences under Section 120-B, Section 419 read with Section 109, Section 420 read with Section 109, Section 468 IPC and Section 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, A-7 guilty of the offence under Section 468 IPC, while A-8 was held guilty of the offences under Sections 120-B, 420, Section 419 read with Section 109 IPC, Section 420 read with Section 109 IPC and under Section 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. In appeal filed thereagainst, the High Court while confirming conviction of A-3, reduced the sentence of RI on all counts while maintaining the fine imposed. The conviction of A-5 and A-8 was also upheld but sentence imposed was reduced. As far as A-7 is concerned his conviction was altered from Section 468 IPC to Section 465 IPC and sentence of RI for 6 months and fine of Rs 500 with default stipulation was imposed. Hence, instant appeals by the appellant-accused. Monica Bedi v. State of A.P., (2011) 1 SCC 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2010]

[10691] — Ss. 468, 465 and 471 — Forgery of surety bonds — Advocate's clerk forging endorsements regarding identification and attestation of sureties as well as signature of another advocate on surety bonds and obtaining release of the accused on that basis — Trial court convicting him under Ss. 465 and 471 and sentencing him for 1 years' imprisonment — High Court maintaining the conviction and sentence though taking the view that the offence in fact covered by S. 468 instead of S. 465 — Held, High court justified in maintaining the conviction — Offence being serious one release on probation of good conduct under S. 360 Criminal Procedure Code on ground of young age and no previous conviction not warranted — But having regard to circumstances of the case, sentence reduced to nine months' imprisonment already undergone — CrPC, 1973, S. 360. Sharvan Kumar v. State of U.P., (1985) 3 SCC 658: 1985 SCC (Cri) 437: AIR 1985 SC 1663.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1985]

[10692] — Ss. 468 and 471 — Limitation for taking cognizance of an offence — Effect, if any, of statutory departmental rule creating a bar against institution of judicial proceedings against a retired government employee after a specified time — Respondent resisting trial against him for misappropriation, bribery, etc. on the ground that he was protected by a departmental rule which provided that: "No judicial proceedings, if not instituted while the government servant was in service, whether before his retirement or during his re-employment shall be instituted in respect of a cause of action which arose or in respect of an event which took place more than four years before such institution." — Held, the departmental rule was in the context of right of the Government to withhold or withdraw pension — It did not affect criminal trial under CrPC or the Prevention of Corruption Act — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(1)(c)(d) r/w S. 5(2) — Maharashtra Civil Services (Pension) Rules, 1982, Rr. 27 and 26 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 468(2), 470(3) and 4. State of Maharashtra v. Keshav Ramchandra Pangare, (1999) 9 SCC 479: 2000 SCC (L&S) 175: 2000 SCC (Cri) 247: AIR 1999 SC 3846.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-1999]

State of Punjab v. Kailash Nath, (1989) 1 SCC 321: 1989 SCC (Cri) 128; Prabhakar Govind Sawant v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Mah LJ 1051, relied on

Keshav Ramchandra Pangare v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Lab IC 371 (Bom), reversed

[Ed.: Date of commission of the offences by respondent are not indicated in the judgment but it appears that it was more than four years before institution of criminal proceedings against him. That is why, the respondent pressed into service Rule 27 of the Maharashtra Civil Services (Pension) Rules, 1982.]

[10693] — Ss. 468, 471 and 420 — Quashing of FIR — Complaint regarding offences under W.B. Sales Tax Act as well as under IPC — FIR registered in accordance with CrPC — Quashed by High Court on ground that investigation on the basis of complaint had to be conducted under the Sales Tax Act — Applicability of S. 4(2) CrPC — Quashing of FIR whether justified — Abuse of process of court — All offences under IPC as well as under any other law have to be investigated, inquired into, tried or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the provisions of CrPC — But in case of offence under the other law, the investigation, inquiry etc. shall be subject to any specific or contrary provisions contained in the enactment under which the offence is investigated, inquired into, tried or otherwise dealt with — S. 7 of the State Sales Tax Act does not enjoin that the investigation has to be conducted only by the Bureau of Investigation constituted thereunder in respect of alleged tax evasion or connected malpractices — Offence under S. 88(6) of the State Sales Tax Act is supplemental to any other penalty provided by law for the time being in force — Where during the course of a discreet investigation Bureau of Investigation finding that apart from offences under S. 88(1), (6), (7) of the State Sales Tax Act those under IPC were also involved against the respondent, held, Bureau was justified in passing over the investigation to regular police — When pursuant thereto police registered FIR, High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR on the ground that under the Act only the Bureau could conduct the investigation and police had no such power — W.B. Sales Tax Act, 1994, Ss. 88(1), (6) & (7) and 7 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 4 & 482

When the Bureau of Investigation formed by the Government of West Bengal under the Sales Tax Act, got secret information about the fraud played by the respondent they conducted some discreet investigation and then it was revealed to them that the respondent had committed forgery and impersonation to defraud the Government of a huge sales tax amount. A complaint was presented by the Assistant Commissioner of Commercial Taxes to the Deputy Superintendent of Police who was then attached to the Bureau of Investigation. The said Deputy Superintendent, in turn, forwarded the complaint to the officer in charge of the police station, with a request to "start a case under Sections 403, 409, 465, 468, 471, 419, 420 read with Section 120-B of the Indian Penal Code and Sections 88(1)(b), (6) and (7) of the Sales Tax Act, 1994 treating the complaint as FIR". Pursuant thereto the Station House Officer of the police station registered the FIR. The respondent, getting scent of the same moved the City Civil Court, Calcutta for anticipatory bail but that was rejected. He then moved the High Court invoking its revisional and inherent jurisdiction for quashing the FIR and on such motion being made further investigation was stayed by the High Court. Finally the FIR was quashed. The High Court expressed the opinion that under the Sales Tax Act only a Bureau of Investigation constituted by the State Government can conduct the investigation or hold inquiry into any case of alleged or suspected evasion of tax as well as malpractices connected therewith, and hence no police officer can investigate into the offences under the Indian Penal Code or any other Act read with offences committed under Section 88 of the Sales Tax Act. Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

So far as the offences under the Indian Penal Code are concerned sub-section (1) of Section 4 CrPC mandates that they can be investigated into and tried according to the provisions of the Code. As regards sub-section (2) of Section 4 which concern offences "under any other law", it is again the rule that such offences shall also be investigated and tried according to the provisions of the Code itself, but with a rider that such investigation or trial shall be subject to the regulation regarding "the manner or place of" such investigation or trial prescribed in any enactment for the time being in force. (Para 11)

The offence under sub-section (6) of Section 88 of the W.B. Sales Tax Act is specifically created as supplemental to any other penalty provided by any law for the time being in force. This means, offences falling under the Indian Penal Code and committed by a person while committing the offence contemplated in sub-section (6) cannot get displaced for the sole reason that the accused has committed the offence falling under sub-section (6) of Section 88. Section 7 of the Act makes it clear that creation of a Bureau of Investigation is for the purpose of discharging the function envisaged in sub-section (3) which, of course, includes investigation also. But there is nothing in Section 7 that such investigation can be carried on "only" by the Bureau and not any other investigating agency. It is open to the Bureau to get the assistance of any other legally-constituted investigating agency for effectively inquiring into all the ramifications of the offence. As in this case if offences falling under the Indian Penal Code or any other enactment are also detected during the course of investigation conducted by the Bureau there is no inhibition to pass over the investigation to the regular police. (Paras 16 and 17)

That apart, how could the FIR be quashed if the investigating agency should have been different? By lodging FIR alone no investigation is conducted by the police. It is the first step towards starting investigation by the police. If the High Court was of the opinion that investigation had to be conducted by the Bureau then also there was no need to quash the FIR. As offences under the Indian Penal Code are also involved, efficacious investigation can be conducted by entrusting it to the police investigating agency. The inherent powers of the High Court as recognised in Section 482 of the Code are reserved to be used "to give effect to any orders under the Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice". The High Court overlooked the reality that by quashing the FIR it did not achieve any one of the above factors. On the contrary, the result of quashing the FIR had rendered the allegations of offences made against a person to remain consigned in stupor perennially. Hence, instead of achieving the ends of criminal justice, the impugned order would achieve the reverse of it. (Para 19). State of W.B. v. Narayan K. Patodia, (2000) 4 SCC 447: 2000 SCC (Cri) 812: AIR 2000 SC 1405: 2000 Cri LJ 1811: (2000) 120 STC 370.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2000]

Mirza Iqbal Hussain v. State of U.P., (1982) 3 SCC 516: 1983 SCC (Cri) 111; A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277; Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504, relied on

[10694] — Ss. 468, 471, 470 and 120-B — Applicability of S. 195 CrPC — Question whether it applies to documents forged/fabricated prior to their being produced in court — Held, that question arises only after the court takes cognizance — At the stage of investigation S. 195 has no application — Hence, on facts, the Supreme Court was not concerned with the said question — CrPC, 1973 — S. 195

It is to be seen that the High Court does not quash the complaint on the ground that Section 195 applied and that the procedure under Chapter XXVI had not been followed. Thus such a ground could not be used to sustain the impugned judgment. (Para 8). M. Narayandas v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 11 SCC 251: 2004 SCC (Cri) 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

[10695] — Ss. 468 and 477-A — Prohibition of a subsequent trial for the same offence — One trial for several offences under Ss. 409, 468 and 477-A, IPC and S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Accused having been acquitted for offences under Ss. 468 and 477-A, IPC, convicted for the offence under S. 409, IPC and no formal order for conviction or acquittal passed under S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 for lack of jurisdiction — Contention being that since on the same facts the trial Judge found that the accused could not be found guilty under S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, it was tantamount to any acquittal for that offence and therefore conviction under S. 4 of IPC was bdrred by S. 403(c), CrPC — CrPC, 1898 — S. 403(1)

S. 403(1) has no application to the facts of the case, where there was only one trial for several offences, of some of which the accused person was acquitted while being convicted of one. State of M.P. v. Veereshwar Rao Agnihotri, AIR 1957 SC 592: 1957 SCR 868: 1957 Cri LJ 892.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and Syed Jafer Imam, S.K. Das, P. Govinda Menon and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1957]

— S. 468 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 120-B, 467, 468 r/w 34

— S. 468 r/w S. 420 See also Ss. 463, 464, 465 and 468 r/w S. 420

— Ss. 468/120-B See also Ss. 302, 302/149, 302/120-B, 307/120-B, 307/149, 120-B, 143, 147, 148, 149, 392, 392/120-B, 392/149, 397/120-B, 397/149, 379, 379/149, 379/120-B, 468, 468/120-B, 468/149, 471, 471/120-B and 471/149

— Ss. 468/149 See also Ss. 302, 302/149, 302/120-B, 307/120-B, 307/149, 120-B, 143, 147, 148, 149, 392, 392/120-B, 392/149, 397/120-B, 397/149, 379, 379/149, 379/120-B, 468, 468/120-B, 468/149, 471, 471/120-B and 471/149

— S. 469 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 81, 87, 88, 89, 91, 92, 93, 100, 104, 106, 415, 469 and 499

See also Ss. 120-B, 195, 469 and 471
See also Ss. 342, 389, 469, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472, 474 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 469
See also Ss. 467, 468 and 469
— S. 470 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496
See also Ss. 463, 464, 465, 470, 471 and 415
See also Ss. 468, 471, 470 and 120-B
— S. 471 See also Ss. 1 and S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467 and 471
See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496
See also Ss. 30, 467, 465 and 471
See also Ss. 52, 420, 406, 466, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 120-A, 120-B, 420, 468, 471 and 4
See also Ss. 120-B, 107, 109, 420, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 109 and 408, 409, 467 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 120-A, 409 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 195, 469 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 420, 465, 468, 471, 477-A, 101 and 34
See also Ss. 120-B, 419, 420, 467, 468, 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 471 and 506
See also Ss. 120-B, 420 and 471
See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 467, 468, 471 and 420
See also Ss. 120-B, 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204
See also Ss. 120-B and 471
See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 218, 379, 467, 468, 471 and 419
See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 218
See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 409, 467 and 471
See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471
See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420, 467 and 471
See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 467, 471, 420, 406, 409, 465, 162, 163, 167, 201 and 109
See also Ss. 120-B/420, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 182, 211, 193, 467, 471 and 385
See also Ss. 193, 196, 465 and 471
See also Ss. 193, 209, 406, 468, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 200, 406, 420, 468, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 205, 419, 465, 467 and 471
See also Ss. 302, 302/149, 302/120-B, 307/120-B, 307/149, 120-B, 143, 147, 148, 149, 392, 392/120-B, 392/149, 397/120-B, 397/149, 379, 379/149, 379/120-B, 468, 468/120-B, 468/149, 471, 471/120-B and 471/149
See also Ss. 323, 382, 420, 465, 468, 471, 120-B, 506 and 34
See also Ss. 342, 389, 469, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 379, 468, 471, 420 and 506 Pt. II
See also Ss. 405, 406, 408, 409, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 405, 420, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 406, 409, 420, 439, 471, 473 and 120-B
See also Ss. 406, 409, 420, 467, 471 and 120-B
See also Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468. 471, 120-B, 124 and 34
See also Ss. 406, 420, 468, 471, 504, 506. 382 and 120-B
See also Ss. 408, 467, 471 and 477-A
See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 409, 467 and 471
See also Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 411
See also Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 477-A
See also Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 120-B
See also Ss. 418, 471 and 477-A
See also Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472 and 474 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 419, 420, 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420, 406. 409. 120-B. 467. 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420, 406. 409. 407. 120-B. 467. 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420, 421, 466. 468. 471. 465 and 120-B
See also Ss. 420, 463, 465. 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B
See also Ss. 420. 465. 466. 467. 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420. 467. 468 and 471
See also Ss. 420. 467. 468. 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 467, 471, 323, 506-B and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474

See also Ss. 420, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 420 and 471

See also Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511

See also Ss. 463, 464, 465, 470, 471 and 415

See also Ss. 463 to 465 and 471

See also Ss. 463, 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 463, 471, 475 and 476

See also Ss. 464 Secondly and S. 471

See also Ss. 465, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 465, 468, 471, 209 and 406

See also Ss. 465, 468, 471 and 420 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 466, 468, 471, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 466 and 471

See also Ss. 467, 465, 471 and 120-A

See also Ss. 467, 468 and 471

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 420, 409 and 218

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 467 and 471

See also Ss. 467, 471 and 120-B

See also Ss. 467, 471, 463 and 464

See also Ss. 467, 471 and 477-A

See also Ss. 468, 465 and 471

See also Ss. 468 and 471

See also Ss. 468, 471, 409, 420 and 120-B

See also Ss. 468, 471 and 420

See also Ss. 468, 471, 470 and 120-B

See also Ss. 475 and 471

[10696] — S. 471 — Scope — Using attested copy of forged document — Accused is nevertheless guilty under the section

What S. 471 requires is the use as genuine of any document which is known or believed to be a forged document; it does not lay down that such use can only occur when the original itself is produced, for the section does not require the production of the original. Section 471, does not require the production of the original forged document. Where it is possible to produce an attested copy of the forged document and that attested copy will serve the purpose of the original forged document there would be use of the original forged document as genuine, though through the attested copy. Where an attested copy of a forged document was produced by the accused before a court there was use of the document, which was known or believed to be a forged document within the meaning of S. 471. Budhu Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (1963) 3 SCR 376: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 698, 701.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1962]

[10697] — S. 471 — Scope and applicability of S. 195(1)(c) CrPC — Forged document produced before the Sales Tax Officer — Sales Tax Officer is not a Court under S. 195(1)(c) — No complaint under the section is necessary for prosecution under S. 471 IPC

No doubt the Sales Tax Officers have certain powers which are similar to the powers exercised by court but still they are not courts as understood in S. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code. A Sales Tax Officer is not a Court within the meaning of S. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code and therefore it was not necessary for a Sales Tax Officer to make a complaint and the proceedings without such a complaint are not without jurisdiction. Jagannath Prasad v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 416: (1963) 2 SCR 850: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 330, 333: (1963) 14 STC 536.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.L. Kapur, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1962]

[10698] — S. 471 — Accused presenting withdrawal forms in bank knowing them to be containing forged signatures of the original account holder and drawing money from that account — Held, liable to be convicted under S. 471 — Sentence of 9 months' RI confirmed. Bank of India v. Yeturi Maredi Shanker Rao, (1987) 1 SCC 577: 1987 SCC (Cri) 228: AIR 1987 SC 821: 1987 Cri LJ 722.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1987]

[10699] — S. 471 — Charges of criminal breach of trust and forgery having failed, held, on facts the conviction under S. 471 also could not be sustained — Falsity of explanation of accused as to possession of the forged cheque held cannot be used adversely against him — Prosecution failed to show that either the accused knew or had reason to believe that the cheque was a forged document. Abdul Karim Madan Sahab v. State of Mysore, (1979) 4 SCC 595: 1980 SCC (Cri) 140: AIR 1979 SC 1506: 1979 Cri LJ 1123.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-1979]

[10700] — S. 471 — Effect of S. 476, CrPC — Expression of opinion by Court

The offence covered by S. 471, IPC, from its very nature must be committed in the proceeding itself by a party thereto. With respect to such an offence expression of opinion by the court as to the expediency of prosecution would serve a useful purpose. Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376: 1971 SCC (Cri) 548: AIR 1971 SC 1935: 1971 Cri LJ 1437.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and P. Jaganmohan Reddy and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1971]

[10701] — S. 471 — Offence committed by a party to any proceeding in a court — Accused filing a copy of a forged document in a court — Prosecution under S. 471 IPC — S. 195(1)(c) CrPC does not apply — Complaint by the Court is not necessary — CrPC, 1898 — S. 195(1)(c)

From a plain grammatical construction of S. 195(1)(c) it is clear that a complaint by the Court is required where the offence is of forging or of using as genuine any document which is known or believed to be a forged document when such document is produced or given in evidence in court. It is clear therefore that it is only when the forged document is produced in court that a complaint by the Court is required. Where, however, what is produced before the Court is not the forged document itself, but its copy, S. 195(1)(c) will not apply on its terms. Budhu Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (1963) 3 SCR 376: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 698.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1962]

Sanmukhsingh v. King, AIR 1950 PC 31: 77 IA 7: 51 Cri LJ 651 and AIR 1925 Oudh 413: 26 Cri LJ 929, approved

[10702] — S. 471 — Sanction for prosecution — Applicable rules — Government of India (Allocation of Business) Rules, 1961, made under (as amended by Notification No. SG 2494, dated August 3, 1965 by introducing Entry 32-A under heading "Ministry of Home Affairs") — Held, Rules made in supersession of all previous rules and orders — Office memorandum dated October 6, 1948, not shown to have remained in operation after coming into force of the Rules — Hence, sanction for prosecution of an employee of Geological Survey of India in connection with a criminal case under S. 5(1)(c) r/w S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 (2 of 1947) and S. 471, IPC registered against him and investigated by Special Police Establishment, Jaipur should be granted either by Ministry of Education or by Department of Personnel (Karmik Vibhag) and not by Ministry of Home Affairs, Government of India — Constitution of India — Art. 77(3). State of Rajasthan v. Dr. A.K. Datta, (1980) 4 SCC 459: 1980 SCC (Cri) 990: AIR 1981 SC 20: 1980 Cri LJ 1278.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1980]

[10703] — S. 471 — Sentence where no loss suffered — Accused on detection withdrawing forged bank guarantee bond and paying the amount — Held, proper sentence would be to reduce 1 year's RI to that already undergone and fine be raised from Rs 1000 to Rs 5000. Manilal Girdharilal Shah v. State of Gujarat, (1979) 4 SCC 716: 1980 SCC (Cri) 156: AIR 1979 SC 1343: 1979 Cri LJ 1117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1979]

[10704] — S. 471 — Using forged documents — Accused producing forged documents before Sales Tax Officer to get exclusion from turnover — Forged documents were filed because he had to produce best evidence, held, not a valid defence

When a fact has to be proved before a court or a tribunal and the court or the tribunal calls upon the person who is relying upon a fact to prove it by best evidence it cannot be a defence as to the offence of forgery if that best evidence which, in this case, was the invoices turn out to be forged documents. A person who produced those documents cannot be heard to say that he was required to prove his case by the best evidence and because he was so required he produced forged documents. Jagannath Prasad v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 416: (1963) 2 SCR 850: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 330, 333: (1963) 14 STC 536.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.L. Kapur, K.C. Das Gupta and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1962]

[10705] — S. 471 — Whether document forged or copy of forged document not material

Whether the original sale deed was first forged and then copy made of the forged document or the copy was a false document, makes little difference. The appellants in this case knew that the document they used did not represent the original sale deed. In other words it was either forged or a forged copy was prepared. In either event they were using as genuine a forged document knowing it to be forged. The conviction under S. 471. IPC, must therefore, be upheld. Rama Shankar Lal v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 905: 1972 SCC (Cri) 153.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1970]

[10706] — Ss. 471 and 26 — Expression "knows or has reason to believe" occurring in S. 471 — Meaning of "knowledge" and "reason to believe", explained — Further held, the said two requirements under S. 471 are to be deduced from various circumstances in the case

Under IPC, guilt in respect of almost all the offences is fastened either on the ground of "intention" or "knowledge" or "reason to believe". Here (in a case relating to Section 471 IPC), the Court is concerned with the expressions "knowledge" and "reason to believe". "Knowledge" is an awareness on the part of the person concerned indicating his state of mind. "Reason to believe" is another facet of the state of mind. "Reason to believe" is not the same thing as "suspicion" or "doubt" and mere seeing also cannot be equated to believing. "Reason to believe" is a higher level of state of mind. Likewise "knowledge" will be slightly on a higher plane than "reason to believe". A person can be supposed to know where there is a direct appeal to his senses and a person is presumed to have a reason to believe if he has sufficient cause to believe the same. (Para 9)

In substance, what it means is that a person must have reason to believe if the circumstances are such that a reasonable man would, by probable reasoning, conclude or infer regarding the nature of the thing concerned. Such circumstances need not necessarily be capable of absolute conviction or inference; but it is sufficient if the circumstances are such as creating a cause to believe by chain of probable reasoning leading to the conclusion or inference about the nature of the thing. These two requirements i.e. "knowledge" and "reason to believe" have to be deduced from various circumstances in the case. (Para 10). A.S. Krishnan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 11 SCC 576: AIR 2004 SC 3229: 2004 Cri LJ 2833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-2004]

Joti Parshad v. State of Haryana, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 497: 1993 SCC (Cri) 691, relied on [10707] — Ss. 471 and 420 — Forgery of document and user thereof as genuine — Appellant, his wife and his brother tried for offences under Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471 — CJM acquitting all the accused — But High Court while maintaining acquittal of appellant's wife and brother convicting appellant under Ss. 471 and 420 — Held, having acquitted the other two accused, appellant could not be convicted under Ss. 471 and 420 singularly and substantively on the basis of weak evidence and vacillating views when originally he was charged for such offences with the aid of S. 120-B — When the High Court was not sure as to who and which of the accused had committed the forgery, it erred in attributing necessary mens rea for the user of forged document as genuine to the appellant alone. V. Sujatha v. State of Kerala, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 436: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1786.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1994]

[10708] — Ss. 471 and 420 — Forgery of document and user thereof as genuine — Case based on photostat copy of the document though original document was available with Customs Department but not produced at the trial — Held, case not sustainable. V. Sujatha v. State of Kerala, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 436: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1786.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1994]

[10709] — Ss. 471 and 420 — Sentence — Extenuating circumstance — Old case — Line helper in Electricity Board submitting false LTC Bill — Sentenced to 6 months' RI — Case of 1983 — Appellant having already undergone 3 months' RI, sentence reduced accordingly. Manjur Faiju Inamdar v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 SCC (Cri) 1019: AIR 1993 SC 2322: (1993) 2 GLH 203: 1993 Cri LJ 2832: (1993) 2 Crimes 982.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-1993]

[10710] — Ss. 471, 420 and 198 — Conviction and sentence under — Appellant using a duplicate certificate of marks-sheet with changes as true certificate, knowing it to be false in material particular and thereby getting admission to polytechnic course — Held, conviction justified — However, looking to the nature of the offence and the fact that the appellant's past and present records have been good and the fact that he has already lost his career and is now married, his sentence reduced to that already undergone. Tulsibhai Jivabhai Changani v. State of Gujarat, (2001) 1 SCC 719: 2001 SCC (Cri) 267: 2001 Cri LJ 741.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2000]

[10711] — Ss. 471 and 420 r/w S. 34 — Sentence under — Leniency — When not warranted — A-1 (a student) using forged marksheet to obtain admission in a medical college — His father, who was a doctor, involved in whole operation — High Court already reduced custodial sentence to three months each for the said offences — Held, such crimes deserve deterrent punishment — Undue sympathy would result in miscarriage of justice — Hence, plea relating to sentence or extending the benefits of the Probation of Offenders Act, held, had no substance — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958, S. 4

The trial court convicted the appellants (A-1 and his father A-2) and awarded sentence of imprisonment for one year and two years in respect of the offences under Sections 471 and 420 IPC respectively. The High Court upheld the conviction, but reduced the custodial sentence to three months in respect of both the offences separately. Before the Supreme Court, the accused contended that the incident took place more than quarter of a century back when A-1 was a student and aged about 17 years, and this was a fit case for extending the benefit under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1958.

Held:

The High Court has already taken a liberal view so far as A-2 (father of A-1) is concerned. In a case when students use forged marksheets to obtain admission thereby depriving eligible candidates to get seats and that too to a medical course and a doctor is involved in the whole operation, uncalled-for leniency or undue sympathy will be misplaced and actually result in miscarriage of justice. Such types of crimes deserve as a matter of fact, deterrent punishment in the larger interests of society. If at all, the case calls for severe punishment. There is no substance in the plea relating to sentence or extending the benefits of the Probation Act. (Para 13). A.S. Krishnan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 11 SCC 576: AIR 2004 SC 3229: 2004 Cri LJ 2833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-2004]

[10712] — Ss. 471 and 420 r/w S. 34 — Using as genuine a forged document — Proof — Held, prosecution to establish that accused knew or had reason to believe that the document was a forged one — Use of forged marksheet by A-1 for getting his admission in a medical college — A-1 and his father A-2 (a doctor) alleged to have entered into a conspiracy along with A-4 (Assistant Registrar, Examination Wing) and A-3 (associate of A-2) for forging pre-degree marksheet of A-1 — Marksheet received by A-1 after secnd-year examination showing marks in three optional subjects as 387 out of 450, but the one forwarded to medical college indicating the same as 420 out of 450 — No change in first-year marks even after revaluation — Total maximum marks in optional subjects in second year, 180 — But, on the basis of forged marksheet, marks obtained coming to 190 — Held, this impossible difference would have attracted notice of A-1 and A-2 — Even if cent per cent marks of 180 obtained, total in optional subjects (first year + second year) would be 410 and not 420 — Further, the forged marksheet purported to have been prepared after revaluation indicating the date on which results for first year were published — Held, both A-1 and A-2 knew and had reason to believe that the marksheet was a forged one — Their conviction upheld

According to the prosecution, A-1 (Appellant 1), who was the son of a doctor i.e. A-2 (Appellant 2), got admission in a medical college on the basis of a forged marksheet relating to pre-degree examinations conducted by the Kerala University. The said appellants faced trial with two others i.e. A-3 (an associate of A-2) and A-4 (Assistant Registrar, Examination Wing, Kerala University). The mark list received by A-1 after the second-year (final-year) examination indicated the marks obtained in optional subjects viz. Physics, Chemistry and Biology as 127/150, 131/150 and 129/150 respectively. Thus, A-1 obtained 387 marks out of 450 in the optional subjects. As A-1 and A-2 were aware that the marks secured by A-1 were insufficient to get an admission in any medical college for the first-year MBBS course in Kerala on merit, they entered into a criminal conspiracy along with A-3 and A-4 for forging a mark list showing higher marks. A-4 prepared a forged marksheet (Ext. D-4) showing marks obtained in Physics, Chemistry and Biology as 142/150, 140/150 and 138/150 respectively. A-1 and A-2 thereafter prepared an application form for admission to a medical college during the year 1980-81 with their signatures by incorporating the marks found in Ext. D-4, the forged mark list, fully knowing the forged nature of Ext. D-4 and forwarded such application together with the attested true copy, Ext. P-27 of Ext. D-4 to the medical college, Thiruvananthapuram with the fraudulent intention to make the authorities concerned to believe that the marks shown in the application were the real marks obtained by A-1 and thereby cheated the Selection Committee and obtained admission for the first-year MBBS course on merit basis. The appellants with the intention of causing disappearance of the evidence of commission of the crime destroyed the true genuine mark list. The trial court held the appellants A-1 and A-2 guilty of offences punishable under Sections 471, 420, 120-B and 201 read with Section 34 IPC. A-3 and A-4 were acquitted. By the impugned judgment the High Court found that the conviction was in order so far as the offences relatable to Sections 471, 420 read with Section 34 were concerned, but set aside the conviction in respect of offences punishable under Sections 120-B and 201 IPC. A-1 and A-2 challenged the said judgment of the High Court by filing the instant appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, the accused submitted that after the acquittal of A-3 and A-4 who were primarily alleged to be responsible for the forgery, conviction could not be maintained so far as the appellants were concerned. When the documents were handed over by A-4, there was no scope for either A-2 or A-1 entertaining any doubt, because the source from which the document came was that of Assistant Registrar who was authorised to issue the certificate. The document could not be said to be a forged one and when charges of forgery were not established, there was no question of a forged document being there. Unless the part allegedly played by A-4 was established, there could not be a forged document. It was contended that even if the document was forged, A-1 could not be said to have knowledge or to have used it fraudulently or dishonestly. There must be a reason to believe that it was a forged one. It was further argued that no knowledge could be attributed to A-1 when the forgery or alleged conspiracy was not established. Unless there was conspiracy or common intention, Section 34 would have no application.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It was clearly conceded before the High Court that D-4 was a forged document. What was urged before the High Court was that even if it is forged, the appellants had not used it deliberately or intentionally as a forged document. A comparison of the marksheet filed by A-1 with the marks register shows great variance. (Para 6)

There are three optional subjects viz. Physics, Chemistry and Biology. Each optional subject consists of Paper I, Paper II and practical. The examination for Paper I is conducted in the first year. Paper-II is written in the second year of the course. There is no provision for seeking revaluation for practical examination and it is only restricted to theory papers. Unless one knows the marks secured in a particular examination, the question of seeking revaluation does not arise. Though a claim was made that the result of revaluation was not known so far as first year is concerned, the evidence on record clearly proves to the contrary. In the communication relating to results of revaluation it had been clearly indicated that there was no change in the marks. Obviously, the marks shown in excess of the actual in Ext. D-4 can be related to Paper II. The excess marks are 33 i.e. 15, 9 and 9 in Physics, Chemistry and Biology respectively. As per Ext. D-4 (forged marksheet), the marks indicated are 142, 140 and 138 for the aforesaid three subjects. The High Court has taken pains to analyse that for the second year in respect of Paper II the maximum marks are 60 in the aforesaid three subjects. If by way of illustration, Physics marks are taken, originally before revaluation the marks secured by A-1 was 55 and if excess 15 marks are added to it, as the allegedly forged document shows the total comes to 70 marks. If the total marks for a paper are 60, there cannot be even a shadow of doubt that A-1 could not have secured 70 marks. Similar is the case of Biology, where the marks would be 61 against a total maximum marks of 60. Of course in Chemistry 59 marks are shown as against maximum 60 marks. If a student gets cent per cent marks in Paper II in each subject the total would come to 180, whereas on the basis of D-4 it comes to 190. This impossible difference would have attracted notice of A-1 and A-2. The High Court also concluded that in the first year for Paper I the total marks secured by A-1 was 92 and practical marks were 138. Even if it is conceded that A-1 secured cent per cent marks in Paper II the total marks would have come to 92 + 138 + 180 which would make a total of 410, and not 420 as Ext. D-4 shows. (Para 6)

That apart, if the results in respect of the first-year degree course were published on 30-6-1980, Ext. D-4 which is purported to have been drawn up after revaluation could not have indicated a date seal of 30-6-1980. (Para 7)

Thus, The factual position leaves no manner of doubt that the accused-appellants had not only the knowledge, but also had reason to believe that the document was a forged one before they used it. (Paras 6, 7 and 11). A.S. Krishnan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 11 SCC 576: AIR 2004 SC 3229: 2004 Cri LJ 2833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-2004]

A.S. Krishnan v. State of Kerala, 1998 Cri LJ 207 (Ker), affirmed

[10713] — Ss. 471, 463 and 193 — Offence falling under S. 471 — Not covered by S. 471-A(1) CrPC 1898 — S. 479-A(1) CrPC may be resorted to only in case which falls within first para of S. 193 IPC

Section 479-A(1) has a limited operation: it applies only to the prosecution of a witness appearing before the Court, who has intentionally given false evidence in any stage of the judicial proceeding or has intentionally fabricated false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of the judicial proceeding. The sub-section may be resorted to only in a case which falls within the first paragraph of S. 193 of the Indian Penal Code and allied Ss. 194 and 195 — when it is committed by a witness appearing before the Court. An offence punishable under S. 471 Indian Penal Code being one of fraudulently or dishonestly using as genuine any document which the accused knows or has reason to believe to be a forged document, does not fall within the category contemplated by S. 479(1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and therefore the authority of the Court to act under S. 476 of the Code is not impaired by sub-section (6) of S. 479-A.

It is true that some of the ingredients of the act of fabricating false evidence which is penalised under S. 193 Indian Penal Code and of making a false document and thereby committing forgery within the meaning of Ss. 463 and 464 Indian Penal Code are common. A person by making a false entry in any book or record or by making any document containing a false statement may, if the prescribed conditions of S. 463 are fulfilled, commit an offence of forgery. But the important ingredient which constitutes fabrication of false evidence within the meaning of S. 192 Indian Penal Code beside causing a circumstance to exist or making a false document — to use a compendious expression — is the intention that the circumstance so caused to exist or the false document made may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding, or before a public servant or before an arbitrator, and lead to the forming of an erroneous opinion touching any point material to the result of the proceeding. The offences of forgery and of fabricating false evidence for the purpose of using it in a judicial proceeding are therefore distinct, and within the description of fabricating false evidence for the purpose specified in S. 479-A, Criminal Procedure Code, the offence of forgery is not included. In any event the offence penalised under S. 471, Indian Penal Code can never be covered by sub-section (1) of S. 479-A. Therefore for taking proceeding against a person who is found to have used a false document dishonestly or fraudulently in any judicial proceeding resort may only be had to S. 476, CrPC. Babu Lal v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 725: (1964) 4 SCR 957: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 555, 557.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, K. Subba Rao, K.N. Wanchoo, J.C. Shah and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1963]

See also 1964 (1) Cri LJ 489: (1964) 3 SCR 980 and AIR 1963 SC 816: 1963 (1) Cri LJ 803

[10714] — Ss. 471 and 465 — Using as genuine a forged document — Applicability of S. 471 — Essential ingredients — Held, S. 471 is intended to apply to persons other than forger himself, but the forger is not excluded from the operation of the section — Not essential that the person charged for forgery of the document must of necessity be convicted before the person using the forged document can be convicted — Acquittal of person allegedly responsible for the forgery, therefore, inconsequential for conviction under S. 471

The essential ingredients of Section 471 are: (i) fraudulent or dishonest use of document as genuine, and (ii) knowledge or reasonable belief on the part of person using the document that it is a forged one. The act need not be both dishonest and fraudulent. The use of document as contemplated by Section 471 must be a voluntary one. (Para 8)

Section 471 is intended to apply to persons other than the forger himself, but the forger himself is not excluded from the operation of the section. To attract Section 471 it is not necessary that the person held guilty under the provision must have forged the document himself or that the person independently charged for forgery of the document must of necessity be convicted before the person using the forged document, knowing it to be a forged one can be convicted, as long as the fact that the document used stood established or proved to be a forged one. The act or acts which constitute the commission of the offence of forgery are quite different from the act of making use of a forged document. (Para 8). A.S. Krishnan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 11 SCC 576: AIR 2004 SC 3229: 2004 Cri LJ 2833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-2004]

[10715] — Ss. 471, 466, 468 and 120-B — Using as genuine a forged document (marksheet in this case) — Conspiracy — Acquittal of some of the co-accused from the charge of — Held, cannot affect the accusations under S. 471 against the main accused (Para 12). A.S. Krishnan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 11 SCC 576: AIR 2004 SC 3229: 2004 Cri LJ 2833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-2004]

Madan Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1590: 1967 Cri LJ 1401, followed

[10716] — Ss. 471 and 474 — Appellant's truck in the custody of the driver checked and a forged permit seized from the driver — Appellant also present at the time of seizure — Conviction under Ss. 471 and 474 valid

When the truck was checked the driver and the appellant who was the owner of the truck were in two separate trucks, the truck of the appellant following the truck of the driver. At the time of checking the appellant also arrived and the forged permit was seized from the driver in the presence of the owner. It was contended that since the permit was seized from the driver the appellant was not liable.

Held :

It is unlikely that the driver would be interested to alter the figures though he might have also known that the document was forged. As both the driver and the appellant were present when the Inspector seized the forged permit the responsibility cannot be shaken off by the appellant on the pretext that the driver handed over the permit and therefore he had nothing to do with it. The truck was being plied by him between Indore and Nasik and it was he who was required under the Motor Vehicles Act to see that the truck was not used without a valid permit. The appellant must be held to have used the forged permit and also to have had it in his possession from Indore to Nasik with the intention to use it. The conviction in these circumstances must be held to be correct on both the counts and the trial to be within jurisdiction. Gajjan Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1965 SC 1921: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 822, 823.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar, M. Hidayatullah and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1965]

— S. 471 r/w S. 120 See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 467 and 471 r/w S. 120

— S. 471 r/w S. 120-B See also Ss. 420, 463, 465, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120

See also Ss. 420, 463, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 420, 468 and 471 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 466, 468, 471 r/w S. 120-B

— Ss. 471/34 See also Ss. 420/34 and 471/34

— Ss. 471/109 See also Ss. 466 and 471/109

— Ss. 471/120-B See also Ss. 302, 302/149, 302/120-B, 307/120-B, 307/149, 120-B, 143, 147, 148, 149, 392, 392/120-B, 392/149, 397/120-B, 397/149, 379, 379/149, 379/120-B, 468, 468/120-B, 468/149, 471, 471/120-B and 471/149

— Ss. 471/149 See also Ss. 302, 302/149, 302/120-B, 307/120-B, 307/149, 120-B, 143, 147, 148, 149, 392, 392/120-B, 392/149, 397/120-B, 397/149, 379, 379/149, 379/120-B, 468, 468/120-B, 468/149, 471, 471/120-B and 471/149

— Ss. 471/465 See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468, 471/465 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 417 and 471/465

— S. 472 See also Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472 and 474 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34

— S. 473 See also Ss. 120-B r/w 326, 342, 417, 465, 473, 506 and 307

See also Ss. 406, 409, 420, 439, 471, 473 and 120-B

— S. 474 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474

See also Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511

See also Ss. 471 and 474

— S. 474 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 177, 181, 193, 406, 465 and 474 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472 and 474 r/w S. 34

— S. 475 See also Ss. 167 and 475

See also Ss. 463, 471, 475 and 476

[10717] — Ss. 475 and 471 — CrPC, 1898, S. 195(1)(c) — Bar to take cognizance for an offence under S. 475

Transfer applications for transfer of certain cases pending before the appellant were filed and allegations had been made against him. But this alone will not make the appellant a party to those proceedings. He was functioning as a Magistrate and he had no personal interest in the outcome of the transfer applications. No doubt when allegations of prejudice have been made against the appellant, it was his duty as a subordinate court and as an officer against whom allegations have been made to offer explanation in his report sent to by his superior or appellate authority. Therefore, cl. (c) of S. 195 again does not bar the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence under S. 471 of the Penal Code.

Although S. 471 of the Penal Code is included in cl. (c) of S. 195(1), but for cl. (c) to operate as a bar to take cognizance for an offence under S. 475, it is essential that the offence must be alleged to have been committed 'by a party to any proceedings in any court'. Govind Mehta v. State of Bihar, (1971) 3 SCC 329: 1971 SCC (Cri) 608: AIR 1971 SC 1708: 1971 Cri LJ 1266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1971]

— S. 476 See also Ss. 463, 475 and 476

— S. 477 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34

— S. 477 r/w S. 120-B See also S. 120-B, S. 420 r/w S. 120-B, S. 477 r/w S. 120-B and S. 5(1)(d) r/w S. 5(2), PC Act, 1947 r/w S. 120-B IPC

— S. 477-A See also Ss. 120-A, 120-B, 403 and 477-A

See also Ss. 120-B, 409, 420, 465, 468, 471, 477-A, 101 and 34

See also Ss. 120-B, 409 and 477-A

See also Ss. 120-B, 468 and 477-A

See also Ss. 120-B, 477-A and 409

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 218

See also S. 120-B r/w S. 420 and S. 477-A

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 420 and 477-A and Ss. 467 r/w 471

See also Ss. 161 and 477-A

See also Ss. 201 and 477-A

See also Ss. 406, 477-A and 420 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 407, 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 408, 467, 471 and 477-A

See also Ss. 408, 468 and 477-A

See also Ss. 408 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 477-A r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 463, 468, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 467, 471 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 467, 471, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 409, 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409 and 477-A

See also Ss. 409, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 418, 471 and 477-A

See also Ss. 420 and 477-A

See also Ss. 420, 477-A, 468, 109 and 409

See also Ss. 420/511, 420/120-B, 468 and 477-A

See also Ss. 436 and 477-A

See also Ss. 466, 468, 471, 477-A and 120-B

See also Ss. 467, 471 and 477-A

See also Ss. 467 and 477-A

See also Ss. 468 and 477-A

[10718] — S. 477-A — Applicability of S. 195(1)(c) CrPC, 1898 — Offence to be committed by party to a proceeding after he becomes such party — Material document neither produced nor given in evidence in the proceeding — S. 195(1)(c) CrPC inapplicable — On facts, trial under Ss. 418, 471 and 477-A, IPC could be proceeded with before the High Court under its original criminal jurisdiction — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 397 and 398 — CrPC, 1898 — S. 195(1)(c). Legal Remembrancer of Govt. of W.B. v. Haridas Mundra, (1976) 1 SCC 555: 1976 SCC (Cri) 67: AIR 1976 SC 2225: (1976) 2 SCR 933: 1976 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, P.K. Goswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1975]

[10719] — S. 477-A — Concealment of an already committed fraud is a fraud

If the intention with which a false document is made is to conceal a fraudulent or dishonest act which had been previously committed, the intention could not be other than an intention to commit fraud. The concealment of an already committed fraud is a fraud.

Where, therefore, there is an intention to obtain an advantage by deceit there is fraud and if a document is fabricated with such intent, it is forgery. A man who deliberately makes a false document in order to conceal a fraud already committed by him is undoubtedly acting with intent to commit fraud, as by making the false document he intends the party concerned to believe that no fraud had been committed. It requires no argument to demonstrate that steps taken and devices adopted with a view to prevent persons already defrauded from ascertaining that fraud had been perpetrated on them, and thus to enable the person who practised the fraud to retain the illicit gain which he secured by the fraud, amount to the commission of a fraud. An act that is calculated to conceal fraud already committed and to make the party defrauded believe that no fraud had been committed is a fraudulent act and the person responsible for the act acts fraudulently within the meaning of S. 25 of the Code. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1877: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

Emp. v. Ragho Ram, 55 All 783, 788: AIR 1933 All 525: 34 Cri LJ 1056, approved

[10720] — S. 477-A — Falsification of book papers etc. to commit breach of trust — Not necessarily be connected with commission of breach of trust as long as falsification is to cover up a criminal breach of trust. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1878: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

[10721] — S. 477-A — FIR — Evidentiary value — FIR by itself, held, not a substantive piece of evidence — Can be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof in the manner provided under the Evidence Act — Hence, conviction for misappropriation of property on the basis of allegations contained in the FIR which were not substantiated by oral evidence, held, not sustainable — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 154 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 155(3) and 145. Madhusudan Singh v. State of Bihar, (1996) 11 SCC 248: 1997 SCC (Cri) 187: AIR 1995 SC 1437.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1995]

[10722] — S. 477-A — Ingredients of — On facts appellant made the entries without intent to defraud

In order to bring home an offence under S. 477-A, IPC, the prosecution has to establish (i) that at the relevant time, the accused was a clerk, officer or servant; and (ii) that acting in that capacity he destroyed, altered, mutilated or falsified any book, paper, writing, valuable security or account which belonged to or is in the possession of his employer or has been received by him for and on behalf of his employer etc. (iii) that he did so wilfully and with intent to defraud. "Wilfully" as used in S. 477-A means "intentionally" or "deliberately". "Intent to defraud" contains two elements viz., deceit and injury. A person is said to deceive another when by practising "suggestio falsi" or "suppressio veri" or both he intentionally induces another to believe a thing to be true, which he knows to be false or does not believe to be true. 'Injury' has been defined in S. 44 of the Code as denoting "any harm whatever illegally caused to any person, in body, mind, reputation or property". S. Harnam Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1976) 2 SCC 819: 1976 SCC (Cri) 324: AIR 1976 SC 2140: 1976 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1976]

[10723] — S. 477-A — 'Servant' — Includes agent who receives payment for doing work as agent — Fact that accused was a full time servant of another company 'U' does not mean that he could not be a servant of any other company, or other employer. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821, 1852: (1963) 1 SCR 253: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 805: (1962) 32 Comp Cas 699.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1962]

[10724] — S. 477-A — Where the prosecution could not show in what way the accounts were falsified or altered conviction under, could not be sustained. Bishan Chand Madan v. State of Punjab, Cri. A. No. 150 & 151 of 1967.

[Date of decision: 28-8-1969]

[10725] — Ss. 477-A and 109 — Minor contradictions or inconsistencies immaterial — Where facts on which allegation rests not so integrally related that if a part of the case is not proved the rest will fail, the conviction can be sustained — Prosecution attempting to prove that contractor made no supplies at all to the Government and instead prepared false documents of supplies in concert and with the help of Government officials — Court finding that a substantial part of the contracted supply not made — Held, finding sufficient to warrant conviction — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1) and (2). Phanindra Prasad Shukla v. State of M.P., (1981) 3 SCC 661: 1981 SCC (Cri) 786: AIR 1981 SC 721: 1981 Cri LJ 420.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1980]

[10726] — Ss. 477-A and 408 — The appellant was rightly convicted. Sushil Kumar Gupta v. Joy Shanker Bhattacharyya, (1970) 1 SCC 504: 1970 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1971 SC 1543.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-1970]

[10727] — Ss. 477-A and 409 — Charge of offence under — Original receipt, which was allegedly falsified by the accused, missing — Held, in the absence of a very important document which alone could establish the guilt, the accused could not be held to have committed criminal breach of trust and falsified the accounts — Hence, benefit of doubt must go to the accused. Rasul Mohd. Hanif Gulandaj v. State of Maharashtra, (1972) 4 SCC 650: AIR 1972 SC 521: 1972 Cri LJ 313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and D.G. Palekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1971]

— S. 477-A r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 477-A r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 477-A r/w S. 34 and S. 5(2) r/w S. 5(1)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34

— S. 477-A r/w S. 120-B See also Ss. 409, 420, 467, 468, 471/465 and 477-A r/w S. 120-B

— Ss. 477-A/34 See also Ss. 120-B, 420/34, 477-A/34

[10728] — Ss. 477-A/34 and 420/34 — Facts required to be established for both offences basically the same — Acquittal for offence under Ss. 477-A/34 having become final, held, the reversal of acquittal for offence under Ss. 420/34 cannot stand

An earlier finding which has attained finality is binding in the subsequent proceedings in the case. The question here is not whether the ingredients of the two offences are the same or substantially the same. That question would be relevant if the plea was one autre-fois acquit or autrefois convict. The question is not even of 'issue estoppel' properly so called as there were no separate trials. The question really is about the binding force and the conclusive nature, at later stage of a case, of a finding of fact finally determined at an earlier stage of the case, which would depend on the question as to what the allegations were, what facts were required to be proved and what findings were arrived at.

The charges in the present case show that the essential allegation which was required to be proved in respect of the two charges was whether the gate passes were made "dishonestly" so far as the charge under S. 420 was concerned and 'with intent to defraud' so far as the charge under S. 477-A was concerned. A finding that the gate passes were made inadvertently and negligently was destructive of both the charges. If for the purpose of the offence under S. 477-A, the court found that the entries made by the accused in the gate passes were made inadvertently and negligently but not wilfully or with a view to defraud and that finding became final, it would not be open to the court, later to find, on the charge under S. 420, that the entries on the gate passes were made not inadvertently but dishonestly. The finding of fact to that effect which led to the acquittal of the accused on the charge under S. 477-A must, that acquittal having become final, operate for the benefit of the accused and lead to their acquittal on the charge under S. 420 also. Amritlal Ratilal Mehta v. State of Gujarat, (1980) 1 SCC 121: 1980 SCC (Cri) 81: AIR 1980 SC 301: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-1979]

[10729] — Ss. 479, 482 and 486 — Distinction between trade mark and property mark

The distinction between a trade mark and a property mark is that whereas the former denotes the manufacture or quality of the goods to which it is attached, the latter denotes the ownership in them. In other words, a trade mark concerns the goods themselves while a property mark concerns the proprietor. A property mark attached to the moveable property of a person remains even if part of such property goes out of his hands and ceases to be his. Sumat Prasad Jain v. Sheojanam Prasad, (1973) 1 SCC 56: 1973 SCC (Cri) 186: AIR 1972 SC 2488: (1973) 1 SCR 1050: 1972 Cri LJ 1707.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, Acting C.J. and D.G. Palekar and S.N. Dwivedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1972]

Re Powell's Trade Mark, (1893) 10 RPC 200; Emperor v. Dahyabhai Chakasha, (1904) 6 Bom LR 513: 1 Cri LJ 581, approved

— S. 482 See also Ss. 479, 482 and 486

[10730] — Ss. 482 and 485 — Bringing guilt home under

To succeed on the charges under Ss. 482 and 485 the complainant had to establish that the appellant marked the goods manufactured and sold by him, or the packets and receptacles containing such goods or used packets or receptacles bearing that mark, and that he did so in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the goods so marked or the goods contained in the packets and receptacles so marked belonged to the complainant. Sumat Prasad Jain v. Sheojanam Prasad, (1973) 1 SCC 56: 1973 SCC (Cri) 186: AIR 1972 SC 2488: (1973) 1 SCR 1050: 1972 Cri LJ 1707.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, Acting C.J. and D.G. Palekar and S.N. Dwivedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1972]

— S. 485 See also Ss. 482 and 485

— S. 486 See also Ss. 420, 486, 465 and 467

See also Ss. 420, 486, 467, 466/471

See also Ss. 479, 482 and 486

[10731] — S. 486 — Fastening of guilt under

For the purpose of S. 486, complainant had to establish that the appellant had sold, or exposed for sale, or had in his possession for sale, goods having a mark calculated to cause it be believed that the goods were the goods manufactured by and belonging to the complainant. Sumat Prasad Jain v. Sheojanam Prasad, (1973) 1 SCC 56: 1973 SCC (Cri) 186: AIR 1972 SC 2488: (1973) 1 SCR 1050: 1972 Cri LJ 1707.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, Actg. C.J. and D.G. Palekar and S.N. Dwivedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1972]

[10732] — S. 486 — On facts the resemblance between the soap wrappers was such as to deceive a person — Difference in detail immaterial — Intention to deceive or knowledge of likelihood of deception to be presumed. State of U.P. v. Hafiz Mohd. Ismail, AIR 1960 SC 669: (1960) 2 SCR 911: 1960 ALJ 438: 1960 Cri LJ 1017.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1960]

— S. 489-A See also Ss. 304-B and 489-A

[10733] — S. 489-A — Scope — Held, not only complete act of counterfeiting covered but also any part of process of counterfeiting (Para 47). K. Hashim v. State of T.N., (2005) 1 SCC 237: 2005 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 2005 SC 128: 2005 Cri LJ 143.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2004]

[10734] — S. 489-A — Counterfeiting currency-notes or banknotes — Conviction for and, sentence of rigorous imprisonment for life — Challenge to, before Supreme Court — Accused already undergoing sentence for a period of seven years — Maintaining the conviction, Supreme Court altering the sentence to imprisonment for a period of ten years (Para 6). Uma Shankar Singh v. State of Jharkhand, (2004) 13 SCC 373.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-2004]

[10735] — Ss. 489-A to 489-D — Proper authority for remitting sentence — Offences against laws relating to matters to which the executive power of the Central or the State Government extends — Relationship to legislative competence in this regard

Currency notes and bank notes, to which the offences under Ss. 489-A to 489-D relate, are matters which are exclusively within the legislative competence of the Union Legislature. It follows therefrom that the offences for which the petitioner has been convicted, are offences, relating to a matter to which the executive power of the Union extends, and the 'appropriate Government' competent to remit the sentence of the petitioner, would be the Central Government and not the State Government.

A plain reading of Entry 1 of List III of the Constitution would show that the ambit of 'Criminal law' was first enlarged by including in it the Penal Code, and, thereafter, from such enlarged ambit all offences against laws with respect to any of the matters specified in List I or List II were specifically excluded. The excluding clause in Entry 1, List III read with Entries 36 and 93 of the Union List, shows beyond all manner of doubt that in respect of offences falling under Ss. 489-A to 489-D, only the Central Government is competent to suspend or remit the sentence of a convict. G.V. Ramanaiah v. Supdt. of Central Jail, (1974) 3 SCC 531: 1974 SCC (Cri) 6: AIR 1974 SC 31: 1974 Cri LJ 150: (1974) MLJ (Cri) 263: (1974) 1 SCR 852: 1973 CrLR (SC) 754.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1973]

[10736] — Ss. 489-A to 489-E — Object

Sections 489-A to 489-E deal with various economic offences in respect of forged or counterfeit currency notes or banknotes. The object of the legislature in enacting these provisions is not only to protect the economy of the country but also to provide adequate protection to currency notes and banknotes. The currency notes are, in spite of growing accustomedness to the credit card system, still the backbone of the commercial transactions by the multitudes in our country. But these provisions are not meant to punish unwary possessors or users. (Para 7). Umashanker v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2001) 9 SCC 642: AIR 2001 SC 3074.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2001]

[10737] — Ss. 489-A to 489-E — Object of — Held, is not only to protect the economy of the country but also to provide adequate protection to currency notes and banknotes (Para 46). K. Hashim v. State of T.N., (2005) 1 SCC 237: 2005 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 2005 SC 128: 2005 Cri LJ 143.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2004]

[10738] — Ss. 489-A to 489-E and S. 28 — Counterfeiting of currency notes not only of India but of foreign countries as well constitutes offence under

The expression 'currency note' in S. 489-A, IPC is wide enough to embrace currency notes issued by India as also those issued by any other country in the world. The expression 'any currency note' refers to 'all' currency notes and, cannot mean only 'Indian currency note' in absence of such a restrictive expression in S. 489-A. The manifest purpose of the provision is to protect people from being deceived or cheated by ensuring that a person accepting a currency note is given a genuine currency which can be exchanged for goods or services and not a worthless piece of paper which will bring him nothing in return, it being a counterfeit or a forged currency note. The legislature cannot have intended to exclude from the protection counterfeiting of currency notes issued by foreign States. The word 'counterfeit' has not only been defined in S. 28, IPC in very wide terms but a rule of evidence has also been prescribed in explanation thereto so as to draw an adverse presumption against the maker of the counterfeit article. Further the expression 'bank note' employed in Ss. 489-A to 489-E, IPC would cover a dollar bill or dollar note issued by a foreign sovereign Government as well. It would, therefore, in any case, be an offence to counterfeit a dollar bill or to be in possession of a counterfeit dollar bill. Though the explanation to S. 489-A in terms refers to a bank note issued 'under the authority of any State or sovereign power', there was neither any occasion, nor any reason, nor any need for addition of a similar explanation to the section in the context of the expression 'currency note'. The definition of currency notes contained in S. 2 of the Indian Paper Currency Act, 1822 is only for the purposes of that particular Act and it cannot be imported into Ss. 489-A to 489-E, IPC. Therefore, Ss. 489-A to 489-E, IPC cannot be said to be inapplicable to currency notes other than Indian currency notes. The High Court accordingly erred in holding that counterfeiting of or possessing of counterfeit dollar bills or dollar notes was not an offence under the Indian law. State of Kerala v. Mathai Verghese, (1986) 4 SCC 746: 1987 SCC (Cri) 3: AIR 1987 SC 33: 1987 Cri LJ 308.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1986]

— S. 489-B See also Ss. 489-A to 489-D

See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E

See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E and S. 28

[10739] — S. 489-B — Object of — Held, is to stop the circulation of forged notes. K. Hashim v. State of T.N., (2005) 1 SCC 237: 2005 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 2005 SC 128: 2005 Cri LJ 143.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2004]

State of Kerala v. Mathai Verghese, (1986) 4 SCC 746: 1987 SCC (Cri) 3, relied on [10740] — Ss. 489-B and 420 — Charge against appellant that he purchased paddy from a peasant on payment of forged currency notes — Appellant offering no explanation as to wherefrom he got the forged notes — Held, silence on the part of the appellant was a telling circumstance which would weigh against him in the consideration of the prosecution evidence — In the circumstances, the conviction and sentence recorded by the lower courts deserved no alteration — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 106 and 114(h). Ponnusamy v. State, 1997 SCC (Cri) 217: 1995 Cri LJ 2658.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1995]

[10741] — Ss. 489-B and 489-C — Accused alleging that counterfeit currency notes were received by him as against his selling off certain goods — Held where it is not shown that the appellant had knowledge or reason to believe that the notes were counterfeit, the conviction was not proper — Further held that presumption of knowledge from mere possession can only be drawn if the notes were apparently counterfeit — Notes not shown to be of such a nature. M. Mammutti v. State of Karnataka, (1979) 4 SCC 723: 1980 SCC (Cri) 170: AIR 1979 SC 1705: 1979 Cri LJ 1383.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1979]

[10742] — Ss. 489-B and 489-C — Mens rea (Knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit) essential to constitute the offence under — Mens rea on the part of the accused must be proved by prosecution — Merely on the basis of evidence that the currency note given to PW by accused, then a student aged 18 years, was fake drawing a presumption that he had the requisite mens rea is not warranted under S. 4 of Evidence Act — Also, no question under S. 313 CrPC was put to the accused about the currency note being fake or counterfeit — Unwary possessors or users not to be prosecuted — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 4 (Para 8). Umashanker v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2001) 9 SCC 642: AIR 2001 SC 3074.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2001]

— S. 489-C See also Ss. 489-A to 489-D

See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E

See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E and S. 28

See also Ss. 489-B and 489-C

[10743] — S. 489-C — Ingredients of — Expression "currency notes" — Scope — Held, covers currency notes of any country (Para 49). K. Hashim v. State of T.N., (2005) 1 SCC 237: 2005 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 2005 SC 128: 2005 Cri LJ 143.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2004]

State of Kerala v. Mathai Verghese, (1986) 4 SCC 746: 1987 SCC (Cri) 3, relied on

— S. 489-D See also Ss. 489-A to 489-D

See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E

See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E and S. 28

[10744] — S. 489-D — Ingredients of — Scope — Held, covers the case where a person is found in possession of machinery, instruments or materials required for counterfeiting currency, even though the machinery, instruments or materials so found are not all the materials required for the purpose of counterfeiting (Paras 49 and 50). K. Hashim v. State of T.N., (2005) 1 SCC 237: 2005 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 2005 SC 128: 2005 Cri LJ 143.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2004]

State of Kerala v. Mathai Verghese, (1986) 4 SCC 746: 1987 SCC (Cri) 3, relied on

— S. 489-E See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E

See also Ss. 489-A to 489-E and S. 28

— S. 491 See also Ss. 120-B, 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204 r/w S. 120-B

— S. 493 See also Ss. 417, 493 and 496

[10745] — S. 493 — Cohabitation by deceitful inducement of belief of lawful marriage — Ingredients — Per Katju, J., marriage of victim woman with accused by performing customary rites and ceremonies [S. 7(1) of Hindu Marriage Act] must have taken place — Accused must by deceit induce a belief in victim that her marriage with accused was lawful — A mere assurance given by accused that he would marry victim would indicate that there was no pre-existing marriage and therefore, it would not amount to inducing belief that she was lawfully married to accused — Per G.S. Misra, J. (disagreeing), S. 493 does not presuppose marriage between victim and accused by following ritual and customary ceremonies — Essence of the offence is practice of deception by accused, thereby inducing in victim belief that she is lawfully married to accused and her consequent cohabitation and physical relationship with accused — Material before victim from which it can reasonably be inferred by ordinary prudence that she is lawfully married to accused, even though no such marriage in fact took place, would be sufficient to establish deceitful inducement of belief of lawful marriage as required by S. 493 — In view of difference of opinion at the Bench, matter referred to another Bench — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 7(1) — Special Marriage Act, 1954, S. 4

The complainant developed intimate relationship with the appellant-accused so much so that they lived together and had two children. Although the appellant had given assurance to the complainant that he would marry her, it was alleged that the appellant turned the complainant out of his house, after nine years of cohabitation. The appellant during continuance of relationship, had also filled up an application for information to the Special Marriage Officer, under Section 5 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954 regarding their marriage. The appellant further executed an agreement for marriage certificate on stamp paper of Rs 1.50 and admitted therein that he is living a normal family life as a married couple with the complainant. In the relevant voters' list also the complainant was shown as wife of the appellant. All these documents had been in existence to the knowledge of the appellant-accused, wherein he accepted her as his wife in writing in the presence of the witnesses. These witnesses appeared in the court and supported the relationship of the appellant-accused with the complainant being husband and wife who lived together at different places of posting in the course of service of the appellant as BDO.

The trial court convicted the accused under Section 493 IPC and the High Court upheld the conviction. The present appeal has been filed against the judgment and order of the High Court.

Due to disagreement at the Bench, referring the matter to another Bench, the Supreme Court observed as above.

Held :

Per Katju, J.

There is no finding by the courts below that by deceit the appellant caused the complainant to believe that she is lawfully married to him. Rather the allegation of the complainant is that the appellant assured her that he would marry her and even entered into an agreement to that effect, though that agreement has been disputed. When the complainant's own case is that the accused had assured her that he will marry her it is obvious that she was not under any belief that she was already married to him. (Para 7)

A Hindu marriage can be solemnised in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of either the boy's caste or the girl's caste (if it is an inter-caste Hindu marriage). There is no allegation that the appellant entered into a marriage with the complainant in accordance with Section 7(1) of the Hindu Marriage Act, rather the allegation is that he promised to marry her in future. There is also no allegation that the appellant deceived the complainant into believing that they were lawfully married e.g. by getting a ceremony performed other than that referred to under Section 7(1) or by a purported civil marriage not in accordance with the Special Marriage Act. Hence the ingredients of Section 493 IPC are not satisfied. (Para 9)

It is true that the appellant has not behaved like a gentleman. However, there is a difference between law and morality. Often an act may be regarded as immoral by society, but it may not be illegal. To be illegal the act must clearly attract some specific provision of the Penal Code, or some other statute. Merely saying that the person has done something improper will not necessarily make the act illegal. (Paras 3 and 10)

A criminal statute has to be construed strictly. Unless all its ingredients are satisfied the person cannot be punished, otherwise there will be violation of Articles 20(1) and 21 of the Constitution. In the present case since the ingredients of Section 493 are not satisfied the appellant is entitled to acquittal. (Para 13)

Per G.S. Misra, J. (disagreeing)

There was strong documentary evidence in support of the prosecution case that the appellant-accused deceitfully induced a belief of lawful marriage in the mind of the complainant victim lady that they were lawfully married so that she continued to live with the appellant as wife treating him to be her husband for more than nine years but the appellant later refused to accept her as his wife and drove her out. The appellant thus had deceitfully induced the complainant to believe that she was lawfully married to him as he had executed an agreement for issuing marriage certificate and also filled up an application form to submit before the Special Marriage Officer to give assurance to her. Besides this, in several official documents which are the voter lists of the constituency concerned consecutively for several years, she had been shown to be the wife of the appellant-accused. (Paras 20 and 25)

Further, although no ceremony of marriage took place between them, but as per the social custom prevailing in the district of Lohardaga in State of Jharkhand among the members of the Oraon community, if a young man lives with a young girl in his house for a long period, she is deemed to be his wife which is recognised as marriage. Hence, even though the appellant and the complainant victim lady had not been married by performing any ritual, the evidence on record clearly indicate that there was overwhelming material — documentary evidence as well as customary practice to induce a belief in the victim lady who could infer that she was lawfully married to the appellant-accused with whom she cohabited and also had physical relationship out of which the two children had been born. (Para 21)

There are three ingredients necessary to be established for bringing home the offence under Section 493 IPC are:

(i) the accused practiced deception;

(ii) such deceit was to induce a woman (complainant) to believe that she was lawfully married to him; and

(iii) there was cohabitation or sexual intercourse as a result of the deception. (Para 22)

The aforesaid three ingredients of the offence under Section 493 IPC in the light of the evidence recorded hereinbefore, are clearly fulfilled in the present case. (Para 23)

The essence of an offence under this section consists in the practice of deception by a man on a woman, in consequence of which she is led to believe that she is lawfully married to him while in fact she is not lawfully married to him. Thus, what is required is that, by deceitful means, the accused must induce a belief of a lawful marriage and then make the woman cohabit with him. But Section 493 although emphasises that the victim woman should be induced the belief that she is lawfully married to the accused, this section also lays emphasis on deceit caused by the man who is not lawfully married to the victim and mere inducement of belief of a lawful marriage is sufficient to establish the guilt under Section 493 IPC. (Para 24)

Insofar as the ingredients of a valid marriage under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 are concerned, it should be kept in mind that the Court is not dealing with a case herein where the victim lady is claiming a civil remedy viz. the right of inheritance, merely on the basis of her cohabitation with the appellant-accused asserting it as a lawful marriage. The present case is concerned with as to whether the ingredients of criminal offence under Section 493 IPC can be held to have been made out so as to hold the appellant-accused guilty of an offence under Section 493 IPC. (Para 25)

Section 493 IPC does not presuppose a marriage between the accused and the victim necessarily by following a ritual or marriage by customary ceremony. What has been clearly laid down and emphasised is that there should be an inducement of belief in the woman that she is lawfully married to the appellant-accused and the inducement of belief of a lawful marriage cannot be interpreted so as to mean or infer that the marriage necessarily had to be in accordance with any custom or ritual or under the Special Marriage Act. If the evidence on record indicates inducement of a belief in any manner in the woman which cannot possibly be enlisted but from which it can reasonably be inferred by ordinary prudence that she is a lawfully married wife of the man accused of an offence under Section 493 IPC, the same will have to be treated as sufficient material to bring home the guilt under Section 493 IPC. Interpretation of the section in any other manner including an assertion that the marriage should have been performed by customary rituals or in a similar manner only in order to establish that a belief of marriage had been induced, is bound to frustrate the very object and purpose of the provision for which it has been incorporated in the Penal Code which is clearly to prevent the deceitful act of a man inducing the belief of a lawful marriage for the purpose of cohabitation merely to satisfy his lust for sexual pleasure. (Para 26). Ram Chandra Bhagat v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 13 SCC 780.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and Gyan Sudha Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2010]

[10746] — Ss. 493 and 376 — Revision by High Court — Reasoned order/Speaking order — Necessity — High Court allowing revision petition and discharging accused of alleged commission of offences under Ss. 493 and 376 IPC, by a practically unreasoned order — Order merely stating that FIR did not disclose commission of offence — No basis for the decision or discussion found — Impugned order set aside and matter remitted to High Court — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 401 and 227 (Paras 6 to 8)

Accused alleged to have entered the house of informant and raped her, consequent to which she became pregnant. She pressurised the accused for marriage, but when he and his family members refused, FIR was lodged and charge-sheet submitted under Ss. 493 and 376 IPC. Accused filed an application for discharge under S. 227 CrPC primarily on ground that age of informant was not as shown, and therefore no offence under either S. 376 or S. 493 IPC was made out. Trial court declined the prayer for discharge. The High Court by impugned judgment allowed revision petition filed thereagainst by a practically unreasoned order. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Tutul Kumari Sen v. State of Jharkhand, (2009) 13 SCC 495: AIR 2009 SC 2547: (2009) 3 CTC 408 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2009]

Cyril Lasrado v. Juliana Maria Lasrado, (2004) 7 SCC 431; State of Rajasthan v. Sohan Lal, (2004) 5 SCC 573: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 53, applied

[10747] — Ss. 493 and 496 — Death complainant after cognizance of offence taken — Does not affect the case — Prosecution of case by mother of complainant upheld. Ashwin Nanubhai Vyas v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1967 SC 983: (1967) 1 SCR 807: 1967 Cri LJ 943, 945: 69 Bom LR 308.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, S.M. Sikri and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1966]

— S. 494 See also Ss. 365/411, 494 and 506
See also Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A
See also Ss. 498-A and 494

[10748] — S. 494 — Acquittal in prosecution for bigamy — Held, not a bar to departmental enquiry for contracting a second marriage without permission of the Government — Karnataka Civil Service Rules, R. 28. State of Karnataka v. T. Venkataramanappa, (1996) 6 SCC 455: 1996 SCC (L&S) 1462.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-1996]

[10749] — S. 494 — Admission regarding second marriage — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 17

The admission of accused cannot in law be treated as evidence of the second marriage having taken place, in an adultery or bigamy case; and that in such cases it must be proved by the prosecution that the second marriage as a fact has taken place after the performance of the essential ceremonies. Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh, (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362: AIR 1971 SC 1153: 1971 Cri LJ 939.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1971]

[10750] — S. 494 — Applicability — Bar under S. 468 CrPC not applicable to offence under S. 494. Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1993]

[10751] — S. 494 — Applicability — Due performance of ceremonies of both marriages, as required by the personal law governing the parties — Requirement of, reiterated

In order to attract the provisions of Section 494 IPC both the marriages of the accused must be valid in the sense that the necessary ceremonies required by the personal law governing the parties must have been duly performed. (Para 23). A. Subash Babu v. State of A.P., (2011) 7 SCC 616.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2011]

Gopal Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1979) 2 SCC 170: 1979 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on [10752] — S. 494 — Bar of limitation for taking cognizance of offence — When not applicable — Held, there does not exist any period of limitation in respect of an offence under S. 494 IPC, as maximum period of punishment which can be imposed therefor is seven years — CrPC, 1973 — S. 468 (Para 13). M. Saravana Porselvi v. A.R. Chandrashekar, (2008) 11 SCC 520: AIR 2008 SC 2462: (2008) 68 AIC 192 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[10753] — S. 494 — Bar under — When operates — A-1 and A-2 tried and convicted for offence of bigamy on complaint made by wife of A-2 — Second trial at the instance of husband of A-1 is barred — CrPC, 1973 — S. 300

Sub-section (1) of S. 300 bars a fresh trial if a person had been tried and convicted or acquitted by a court of competent jurisdiction for the same offence. The offence of bigamy is committed when a husband or wife in the lifetime of his spouse marries. When a person is tried and convicted for such an offence on the complaint of a person, authorised by law to do so, he or she cannot be prosecuted and tried a second time for the same offence on another complaint filed by another person. The bar under S. 300 is for trial and conviction of the same offence. Since offence remains the same the appellants cannot be tried and convicted for it once again. Vijayalakshmi v. Vasudevan, (1994) 4 SCC 656: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1317.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.M. Sahai and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1994]

[10754] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Appellant after obtaining an ex parte decree of divorce against his first wife undergoing a second marriage — Thereafter, respondent first wife securing an order setting aside the ex parte decree of divorce and filing a complaint against appellant alleging commission of offence under S. 494 — Held, appellant cannot be convicted under S. 494 on the premise that he had married again since on the date of his second marriage, the ex parte divorce decree remained in force — Criminal proceedings against husband quashed. Krishna Gopal Divedi v. Prabha Divedi, (2002) 10 SCC 216: AIR 2002 SC 389: (2002) 2 KLT 14.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2001]

[10755] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Absence of proof of saptapadi — Held, factum of second marriage not made out — However, since accused husband found living with the alleged second wife as husband and wife, the Supreme Court directed him (husband) to pay Rs 25,000 to his first wife (appellant) as compensation — Constitution of India, Art. 142. Laxmi Devi v. Satya Narayan, (1994) 5 SCC 545: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1566.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-1994]

Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Administration, AIR 1966 SC 614: (1966) 1 SCR 539: 1966 Cri LJ 472; Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh, (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362, followed

[10756] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Charge of, held, not effected by the validness of the second marriage under S. 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Sentence reduced

The essential ingredients of the offence under S. 494, Indian Penal Code are:

(i) that the accused spouse must have contracted the first marriage,

(ii) that while the first marriage was subsisting the spouse concerned must have contracted a second marriage, and

(iii) that both the marriages must be valid in the sense that the necessary ceremonies required by the personal law governing the parties had been duly performed.

The combined effect of S. 17 of Hindu Marriage Act and S. 494 is that when a person contracts a second marriage after the coming into force of the said Act, while the first marriage is subsisting, he commits the offence of bigamy.

Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act requires that the marriage must be properly solemnised in the sense that the necessary ceremonies required by law or by custom must be duly performed. Once these ceremonies are proved to have been performed the marriage becomes properly solemnized and if contracted while the first marriage is still subsisting the provisions of S. 494 will apply automatically. The voidness of the marriage under S. 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act is in fact one of the essential ingredients of S. 494 because the second marriage will become void only because of the provisions of S. 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act. Hence one cannot say that the second marriage being void, S. 494 will have no application. Gopal Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1979) 2 SCC 170: 1979 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 1979 SC 713: 1979 Cri LJ 652: 1979 MLJ (Cri) 480: (1979) 16 ACC 115.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-1979]

[10757] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Conviction upheld and two years' RI and Rs 500 fine awarded — But looking to the facts and circumstances, especially the fact of irretrievable breakdown of the first marriage, court persuading the complainant to compound the offence and accept Rs 40,000 as compensation — CrPC, 1973, S. 320. Narotam Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 4 SCC 505: 1980 SCC (Cri) 113: AIR 1978 SC 1542: 1978 Cri LJ 1612.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1978]

[10758] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Husband already married under Hindu Law, by embracing Islam, solemnising a second marriage under Muslim Law — Held, that would not result in dissolution of the first marriage under Hindu Law — Unless and until the first marriage is dissolved by a decree under Hindu Marriage Act, the second marriage during subsistence of the first one would be in violation of the Hindu Marriage Act which strictly professes monogamy — Marriage in violation of any law would be 'void' within the meaning of the word used in S. 494 — Word 'void' in S. 494 is wider in amplitude than that used in S. 11 of the Hindu

Marriage Act — Such second marriage would therefore amount to bigamy punishable under S. 494 — Second marriage would also be in violation of principles of natural justice — Moreover, matrimonial dispute between the apostate and his first wife cannot be decided on the basis of Muslim Personal Law but on the basis of justice, equity and good conscience — On these bases also the second marriage would be void — This interpretation would advance interest of justice being in harmony with two systems of law viz. Hindu Law and Muslim Law — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, Ss. 5(i), 11, 13 and 15

Per curiam

The second marriage of a Hindu husband after conversion to Islam, without having his first marriage dissolved under law, would be invalid. The second marriage would be void in terms of the provisions of Section 494 IPC and the apostate husband would be guilty of the offence under Section 494 IPC. (Para 39)

The necessary ingredients of Section 494 are: (1) having a husband or wife living; (2) marries in any case; (3) which such marriage is void; (4) by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband or wife. All the four ingredients of Section 494 IPC are satisfied in the case of a Hindu husband who marries for the second time after conversion to Islam. He has a wife living, he marries again. The said second marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of the first wife. (Paras 17 and 26)

The Hindu Marriage Act strictly enforces monogamy. A marriage performed under this Act cannot be dissolved except on the grounds available under Section 13 of the Act. In that situation, parties who have solemnised the marriage under this Act remain married even when the husband embraces Islam in pursuit of another wife. Till the time a Hindu marriage is dissolved under the Hindu Marriage Act none of the spouses can contract a second marriage. Conversion to Islam and marrying again would not, by itself, dissolve the Hindu marriage under the Hindu Marriage Act. A second marriage by an apostate under the shelter of conversion to Islam would nevertheless be a marriage in violation of the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act by which he would be continuing to be governed so far as his first marriage under that Act is concerned despite his conversion to Islam. The second marriage of an apostate would, therefore, be illegal marriage qua his wife who married him under the Hindu Marriage Act and continues to be a Hindu. Though the marriage solemnised by a Hindu husband after embracing Islam may not strictly be a void marriage under the Hindu Marriage Act because he is no longer a Hindu, but between the apostate and his Hindu wife the second marriage is in violation of the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act and as such would be non est. (Paras 17, 21 and 18)

The expression 'void' defined under Section 11 of the Hindu Marriage Act has a limited meaning within the scope of the definition under that section. On the other hand the same expression has a different purpose under Section 494 IPC and has been used in the wider sense. A marriage which is in violation of any provisions of law would be void in terms of the expression used under Section 494 IPC. The real reason for the voidness of the second marriage is the subsistence of the first marriage which is not dissolved even by the conversion of the husband. The second marriage by a convert, therefore, being in violation of the Hindu Marriage Act, would be void in terms of Section 494 IPC. Any act which is in violation of mandatory provisions of law is per se void. (Paras 19, 20, 22 and 21)

The conduct of a spouse who converts to Islam has to be judged on the basis of the rule of justice and right or equity and good conscience. A matrimonial dispute between a convert to Islam and his or her non-Muslim spouse is not a dispute "where the parties are Muslims" and, therefore, the rule of decision in such a case was or is not required to be the "Muslim Personal Law". In such cases the court shall act and the Judge shall decide according to justice, equity and good conscience. The second marriage of a Hindu husband after embracing Islam being violative of justice, equity and good conscience would be void on that ground also and attract the provisions of Section 494 IPC. (Para 23)

Further, assuming that a Hindu husband has a right to embrace Islam as his religion, he has no right under the Hindu Marriage Act to marry again without getting his earlier marriage under that Act dissolved. The second marriage after conversion to Islam would, thus, be in violation of the rules of natural justice and as such would be void. (Para 24)

The above interpretation of Section 494 would advance the interest of justice. It is necessary that there should be harmony between the two systems of law just as there should be harmony between the two communities. The result of the interpretation, would be that the Hindu law on the one hand and the Muslim law on the other hand would operate within their respective ambits without trespassing on the personal laws of each other. Since it is not the object of Islam nor is the intention of the enlightened Muslim community that Hindu husbands should be encouraged to become Muslims merely for the purpose of evading their own personal laws by marrying again, the courts can be persuaded to adopt a construction of the laws resulting in denying the Hindu husband converted to Islam the right to marry again without having his existing marriage dissolved in accordance with law. (Para 25). Sarla Mudgal v. Union of India, (1995) 3 SCC 635: 1995 SCC (Cri) 569: AIR 1995 SC 1531: (1995) 2 KLT 45: (1995) 2 An LT (Cri) 50: 1995 Cri LJ 2926.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and R.M. Sahai[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-1995]

Ram Kumari, In re, ILR (1891) 18 Cal 264; Budansa v. Fatima, (1914) 22 IC 697: 26 MLJ 260: 1914 MWN 278; Budansa v. Fatima, (1914) 22 IC 697: 26 MLJ 260: 1914 MWN 278; Gul Mohd. v. Emperor, AIR 1947 Nag 121: 48 Cri LJ 43: 228 IC 1; Nandi v. Crown, LR 1920 Lah 440; Emperor v. Ruri, AIR 1919 Lah 389: 48 IC 493: 20 Cri LJ 3; Sayeda Khatoon v. M. Obadiah, 9 CWN 745; Andal Vaidyanathan v. Abdul Allam Vaidya, AIR 1946 Mad 446: (1946) 1 MLJ 402: 227 IC 417; Robasa Khanum v. Khodadad Bomanji Irani, (1946) 48 Bom LR 864; Waghela Rajsanji v. Shekh Masludin, (1887) LR 14 IA 89; Muhammad Raza v. Abbas Bandi Bibi, (1932) LR 59 IA 236, approved

[10759] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Ingredients — First marriage must be subsisting at the time of second marriage — Appellant had already obtained divorce decree against his first wife when he was alleged to have married second time — Held, S. 494 not attracted

Section 494 IPC, inter alia, requires the following ingredients to be satisfied, namely, (i) the accused must have contracted first marriage; (ii) he must have married again; (iii) the first marriage must be subsisting; and (iv) the spouse must be living. (Para 10)

In the present case, from the affidavit of the first wife, it is apparent that her husband has obtained a divorce judgment. There is nothing in the affidavit that divorce judgment has been stayed or set aside. It was only after passing of the divorce judgment the appellant is said to have married second time. Thus his first marriage was not subsisting at the time of his second marriage. Therefore, Section 494 is not attracted. (Para 11). Pashaura Singh v. State of Punjab, (2010) 11 SCC 749: AIR 2010 SC 922: (2009) 4 APLJ 122 (SC): 2010 Cri LJ 875: (2010) 2 Guj LR 1817: (2010) 1 ECrN 708 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2009]

[10760] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Manner of proving — Validity of second marriage, held, is required to be proved by the prosecution by satisfactory evidence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 101-103 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 17 (Para 10). S. Nagalingam v. Sivagami, (2001) 7 SCC 487: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1273: AIR 2001 SC 3576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

[10761] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Offence under S. 494 is compoundable with the consent of wife and permission of court (Para 2). Parameswari v. Vennila, (2000) 10 SCC 348.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-1999]

[10762] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Proof — Apprehension that in view of judgment in Sarla Mudgal v. Union of India (1995) 3 SCC 635 men having undergone second marriage under Muslim law after conversion would be liable to be convicted without any further proof, held, to be without substance as complainant must prove all the ingredients of the offence, including proper solemnisation of second marriage — Conviction cannot be based on mere admission made outside court

The two concurring judgments in these matters deal with several writ petitions and review petitions, all revolving around the situation created when a non-Muslim man, married according to religious sites stipulating monogamy, renounces his religion, converts to Islam and solemnises a second marriage, according to Islamic rites, without divorcing his first wife.

Held :

Per curiam :

Counsel appearing for the petitioners have alleged that in view of the judgment in Sarla Mudgal case their clients are liable to be convicted without any further proof. Such an apprehension is without any substance inasmuch as the person seeking conviction of the accused for a commission of offence under Section 494 is under a legal obligation to prove all the ingredients of the offence charged and conviction cannot be based upon mere admission made outside the Court. To attract the provisions of Section 494 IPC the second marriage has to be proved besides proving the previous marriage. Such marriage is further required to be proved to have been performed or celebrated with proper ceremonies. (Para 63). Lily Thomas v. Union of India, (2000) 6 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1056: AIR 2000 SC 1650: 2000 Cri LJ 2433.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad[1] and R.P. Sethi[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2000]

Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Admn., AIR 1966 SC 614: (1966) 1 SCR 539: 1966 Cri LJ 472; Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1564: (1965) 2 SCR 837, relied on

Sarla Mudgal v. Union of India, (1995) 3 SCC 635, affirmed

[Ed.: See also Thapalyal, A.: "Proving Bigamy: Unfair Burden?" (1986) 4 SCC 11(J).]

[10763] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Proof — Concurrent finding of courts below — Interference with — Impermissibility — Principles reiterated — In the instant case three courts below had given concurrent finding regarding factum of marriage and its validity — Supreme Court being fourth court should not interfere with exercise of discretion by courts below as they had exercised discretion in good faith giving due weight to relevant material and without being swayed by any irrelevant material — Hence, interference with finding of fact so far as commission of bigamy is concerned, nor quantum of punishment on that count, warranted (Paras 9 to 11)

Appellant, a government servant was married to complainant on 5-2-1992 as per Hindu rites. However, relationship between husband and wife was not cordial as it was alleged by the wife that she was being tortured mentally and physically by the appellant. The complainant left her matrimonial home in 1993 in spite of the fact that she was seven months' pregnant because she found it impossible to live there, and started residing with her father thereafter. In 1997 she came to know that appellant had married one R. Hence, she filed an FIR against him. Appellant was charged under Section 498-A and Section 494 IPC. The trial court found him guilty and sentenced him to RI for 2 years under Section 498-A, and for 3 years under Section 494. The appeal filed thereagainst was dismissed by the appellate court. The criminal revision filed thereagainst was also dismissed by the High Court by impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Partly allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Manju Ram Kalita v. State of Assam, (2009) 13 SCC 330: (2009) 79 AIC 88 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

Firm Sriniwas Ram Kumar v. Mahabir Prasad, AIR 1951 SC 177, considered and relied on

Tulsi Das Khimji v. Workmen, AIR 1963 SC 1007; Pentakota Satyanarayana v. Pentakota Seetharatnam, (2005) 8 SCC 67; Madhavan Nair v. Bhaskar Pillai, (2005) 10 SCC 553, relied on

[10764] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Second marriage during subsistence of first marriage — No evidence regarding performance of essential ceremonies like homo and saptapadi — Effect

It is clear that if the alleged second marriage is not a valid one according to law applicable to the parties, it will not be void by reason of its taking place during the life of the husband or the wife of the person marrying so as to attract S. 494, IPC. Again in order to hold that the second marriage has been solemnised so as to attract S. 17 of the Act, it is essential that the second marriage should have been celebrated with proper ceremonies and in due form.

The prosecution has to prove that the alleged second marriage had been duly performed in accordance with the essential religious rites applicable to the form of marriage gone through by the parties and that the said marriage must be a valid one according to law applicable to the parties.

The admission of accused cannot in law be treated as evidence of the second marriage having taken place, in an adultery or bigamy case; and that in such cases it must be proved by the prosecution that the second marriage as a fact has taken place after the performance of the essential ceremonies.

Both the learned Sessions Judge and the High Court have categorically found that the Homo and Saptapadi are the essential rites for marriage according to the law governing the parties and that there is no evidence that these two essential ceremonies have been performed when the respondent is stated to have married Sandhya Rani. No reliance can be placed on the admissions stated to be contained in the admission of accused. Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh, (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362: AIR 1971 SC 1153: 1971 Cri LJ 939.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1971]

[10765] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Second marriage must be shown to be void for applicability of S. 494 — Where parties are governed by any custom, it has to be shown that the custom renders the second marriage null, ineffectual and non est — Mere pleading of existence of a custom stressing monogamy is not enough — Whether appellant nevertheless entitled to maintenance, succession and other benefits, held, must be decided by filing separate suits

The appellant filed a complaint in the Court of Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, New Delhi stating therein that her marriage was solemnised with the respondent in Delhi "according to Hindu rites and customs". Alleging that the respondent had solemnised another marriage with Accused 2, the complainant pleaded that the accused husband not having obtained any divorce, his action was in contravention of Section 494 IPC. It was conceded by the appellant that the parties are tribals and are governed by their tribal custom and usage. The complaint was dismissed by the trial court holding "there is no mention of any such custom in the complaint nor is there evidence of such custom. In the absence of pleadings and evidence reference to book alone is not sufficient". The High Court held that in the absence of notification in terms of Section 2(2) of the Hindu Marriage Act no case for prosecution for the offence of bigamy was made out against the respondent because the alleged second arriage cannot be termed to be void either under e Act or any alleged custom having the force of w.

Dismissing the appeal,

eld :

The trial Magistrate and the High Court have ghtly dismissed the complaint of the appellant. Para 14)

The fact of second marriage being void is a sine ua non for the applicability of Section 494 IPC. In is case nowhere in the complaint the appellant has eferred to any alleged custom having the force of w which prohibits the solemnisation of second arriage by the respondent and the consequences ereof. Mere pleading of a custom stressing for onogamy by itself was not sufficient unless it was rther pleaded that second marriage was void by ason of its taking place during the life of such husand or wife. In order to prove the second marriage oid, the appellant was under an obligation to show e existence of a custom which made such marage null, ineffectual, having no force of law or nding effect, incapable of being enforced in law non est. In view of the fact that parties admittedly elong to the Scheduled Tribes within the meaning clause (25) of Article 366 of the Constitution as otified by the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) rder, 1950 as amended by the Scheduled Castes d Scheduled Tribes Order (Amendment) Acts 63 1956, 108 of 1976, 18 of 1987 and 15 of 1990 ssed in terms of Article 342 and in the absence of ecific pleadings, evidence and proof of the leged custom making the second marriage void, offence under Section 494 of the Indian Penal ode can possibly be made out against the responent. (Paras 14 and 15). Surajmani Stella Kujur r.) v. Durga Charan Hansdah, (2001) 3 SCC 13: 01 SCC (Cri) 1305: AIR 2001 SC 938.

nch Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, [Date of decision: 14-2-2001]

Durga Charan v. State of Delhi, 2000 Cri LJ 3530, rmed

766] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Second marriage rformed without the ceremony of "saptapadi" Validity of, for the purposes of constituting ence under S. 494 — Held, "saptapadi" is an ential ceremony for a valid marriage only in es where it is admitted by the parties entering the marriage that it is an essential ritual to be formed for the marriage as per the personal law orm of marriage applicable to them — S. 7-A of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 [as inserted by the Hindu Marriage (Tamil Nadu Amendment) Act, 1967] validates the marriage performed between the parties concerned by garlanding each other or putting a ring upon any finger of the other or tying a thali — So second marriage entered into by the appellant-accused with another woman 'K' (both resident of State of T.N.), under S. 7-A of the Act, without ceremony of saptapadi, was a valid marriage so as to constitute an offence under S. 494 IPC — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, Ss. 7-A, 7 and 17

Appellant-accused entering into a second marriage with another woman 'K', both resident of the State of T.N., during the subsistence of his first marriage with the respondent complainant. The aforesaid marriage was performed in accordance with the provisions of Section 7-A of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 [inserted by the Hindu Marriage (Tamil Nadu Amendment) Act, 1967] which for constituting a valid marriage requires the parties to the marriage only to garland each other or put a ring upon any finger of the other or tie a thali. By the impugned judgment, High Court reversed the acquittal of appellant by trial court and convicted him under Section 494 IPC. The appellant in instant appeal challenged the said judgment of the High Court on the ground that the second marriage entered into by him with 'K' on 18-6-1984 was not a valid marriage under the Hindu law so as to hold him guilty of the offence of bigamy as the said marriage was solemnised without the performance of an important ceremony of "saptapadi", which is an essential Hindu rite to be performed for a valid marriage. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, there is a State amendment by the State of Tamil Nadu, which has inserted Section 7-A. The said section applies to any marriage between two Hindus solemnized in the presence of relatives, friends or other persons. The main thrust of this provision is that the presence of a priest is not necessary for the performance of a valid marriage. Parties can enter into a marriage in the presence of relatives or friends or other persons and each party to the marriage should declare in the language understood by the parties that each takes the other to be his wife or, as the case may be, her husband, and the marriage would be completed by a simple ceremony requiring the parties to the marriage to garland each other or put a ring upon any finger of the other or tie a thali. Any of these ceremonies would be sufficient to complete a valid marriage. Sub-section (2)(a) of Section 7-A specifically says that notwithstanding anything contained in Section 7, all marriages to which this provision applies and solemnized after the commencement of the Hindu Marriage (Tamil Nadu Amendment) Act, 1967, shall be good and valid in law. (Paras 17 and 18)

The appellant-accused and his alleged second wife are residents of the State of Tamil Nadu and their marriage was performed at Thiruthani Temple within the State of Tamil Nadu. The evidence in this case as given by PW 3 clearly shows that there was a valid marriage in accordance with the provisions of Section 7-A of the Hindu Marriage Act. PW 3 deposed that the bridegroom brought the "thirumangalam" and tied it around the neck of the bride and thereafter the bride and the bridegroom exchanged garlands three times and the father of the bride stated that he was giving his daughter to "kanniyathan" on behalf of and in the witness of "agnidevi" and the father of the bridegroom received and accepted the "kanniyathan". PW 3 also deposed that he performed the marriage in accordance with the customs applicable to the parties. (Paras 17 and 19)

Under such circumstances, the provisions of Section 7-A, namely, the State amendment inserted in the statute are applicable and there was a valid marriage between the appellant and the second accused. Moreover, "Saptapadi" is an essential ceremony for a valid marriage only in cases where it is admitted by the parties that as per the form of marriage applicable to them that is an essential ceremony. The appellant-accused in the instant case, however, had no such case that "saptapadi" was an essential ceremony for a valid marriage as per the personal law applicable, whereas the provisions contained in Section 7-A are applicable to the parties. In any view of the matter, there was a valid marriage on 18-6-1984 between the appellant and the second accused. Therefore, the appellant had committed the offence of bigamy as it was done during the subsistence of his earlier marriage held on 6-9-1970 and the High Court correctly remanded the matter to the trial court for awarding appropriate sentence. (Paras 20 and 21). S. Nagalingam v. Sivagami, (2001) 7 SCC 487: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1273: AIR 2001 SC 3576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Admn., AIR 1966 SC 614: 1966 Cri LJ 472; Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh, (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362; Santi Deb Berma v. Kanchan Prava Devi, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 616: 1992 SCC (Cri) 65, followed

Lingari Obulamma v. L. Venkata Reddy, (1979) 3 SCC 80: 1979 SCC (Cri) 654; Laxmi Devi v. Satya Narayan, (1994) 5 SCC 545: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1566, considered and distinguished on facts

[10767] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Validity of second marriage — Parties Hindus — Complainant wife not alleging that second marriage solemnised by customary rites and usage which do not include Saptapadi — Proof of Saptapadi — Held, must be based on cogent evidence — That the essential ceremonies of a valid marriage were performed cannot be deduced from letters or oral evidence of the accused and second wife living as husband and wife — Accused acquitted — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, Ss. 7, 5 and 17 (Para 7). Santi Deb Berma v. Kanchan Prava Devi, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 616: AIR 1991 SC 816: 1991 Cri LJ 660.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1990]

[10768] — S. 494 — Bigamy — Validity of the second marriage — Essential ceremonies under Hindu law viz., datta homa or saptapadi not performed — Existence of any custom in derogation of S. 7, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 neither alleged in the complaint nor proved in the evidence — Offence not made out. Lingari Obulamma v. L. Venkata Reddy, (1979) 3 SCC 80: 1979 SCC (Cri) 654: AIR 1979 SC 848: 1979 Cri LJ 849.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-1979]

[10769] — S. 494 — Birth of son by second wife proved — Marriage also proved — No interference — Sentence however reduced. Anandrao Tulsiram Bhawar v. State of Maharashtra, (1972) 1 SCC 800: 1972 SCC (Cri) 519: AIR 1972 SC 1232: 1972 Cri LJ 766.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.N. Grover, A.N. Ray and D.G. Palekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-1972]

[10770] — S. 494 — Cognizance of offence of bigamy under is taken only on complaint of person aggrieved as specified in S. 198 CrPC — Therefore, held, person having right to make complaint would have to be identified on basis of the personal law applicable to the complainant and respondent accused — CrPC, 1973 — S. 198

S and the respondent underwent a Hindu marriage in 1984. In May 1992 the respondent informed S that he had converted to Islam and that he intended to remarry; he advised S to agree to a divorce by mutual consent. S contended that her husband's conversion was entirely fraudulent, carried out with the sole aim of solemnising a second marriage; she contended that he had no real faith in Islam, that the conversion was not even remotely connected to a spiritual quest and that it was not an exercise of the freedom of religion guaranteed under the Constitution. She pointed out that there was no change in his way of living at all since the conversion. He had not even changed his name. She submitted documents including the birth certificate of his child from the second marriage, copies of relevant entries of the electoral list and an application for a visa to enter Bangladesh, all showing the respondent's name as "G.C. Ghosh" and "Hindu" as his religion. The second wife was entered as "Vanita Ghosh" in all the documents and also described as "Hindu".

In view of the pleadings in S's petition, the Court formulated the following question: "In order to avoid the clutches of S. 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, if a person renounces his 'Hindu' religion and converts to another religion and marries a second time, what would be the effect on his criminal liability?"

Held :

Per curiam:

Since taking of cognizance of the offence under Section 494 is limited to the complaints made by the persons specified in Section 198 CrPC, it is obvious that the person making the complaint would have to be decided in terms of the personal law applicable to the complainant and the respondent (accused), since mere conversion does not dissolve the marriage automatically and they continue to be "husband and wife".(Para 25). Lily Thomas v. Union of India, (2000) 6 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1056: AIR 2000 SC 1650: 2000 Cri LJ 2433.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad[1] and R.P. Sethi[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2000]

Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, (1965) 2 SCR 837: AIR 1965 SC 1564; Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Admn., AIR 1966 SC 614: (1966) 1 SCR 539: 1966 Cri LJ 472; Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh, (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362; Gopal Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1979) 2 SCC 170, relied upon

[10771] — S. 494 — Contravention of S. 17 of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Applicability of S. 494 — Second marriage must be 'solemnized' — Meaning of the expression 'solemnize' in S. 17 of Hindu Marriage Act — Celebration with proper ceremonies essential — Merely going through certain ceremonies with intention that parties be taken to be married not sufficient

Section 17 provides that any marriage between two Hindus solemnized after the commencement of the Act is void if at the date of such marriage either party had a husband or wife living and that the provisions of Ss. 494 and 495 IPC shall apply accordingly.

The marriage between two Hindus is void in view of S. 17 if two conditions are satisfied; (i) the marriage is solemnized after the commencement of the Act; (ii) at the date of such marriage, either party had a spouse living.

The word "solemnize" means, in connection with a marriage, "to celebrate the marriage with proper ceremonies, and in due form", according to the Shorter Oxford Dictionary. It follows, therefore, that unless the marriage is "celebrated or performed with proper ceremonies and in due form" it cannot be said to be "solemnized". It is, therefore, essential, for the purpose of S. 17 of the Act, that the marriage to which S. 494, IPC applies on account of the provisions of the Act, should have been celebrated with proper ceremonies and in due form. Merely going through certain ceremonies with the intention that the parties be taken to be married, will not make the ceremonies prescribed by law or approved by any established custom. Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1564: (1965) 2 SCR 837: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 544, 545.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Raghubar Dayal, J.R. Mudholkar and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-1965]

Followed in (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362

[10772] — S. 494 — Conversion does not automatically dissolve first marriage — Hence bigamous marriage triable — Held, since bigamous marriage is prohibited under HMA, 1955 and is an offence under S. 17 HMA, any marriage solemnised by the husband during the subsistence of his Hindu marriage would be void under S. 11 HMA, and an offence triable under S. 17 HMA r/w S. 494 IPC, regardless of such husband's conversion to another religion permitting polygamy — Mere conversion does not dissolve the original marriage automatically — Apostate husband and first wife continue to be "husband and wife" — Conversion is only a ground for divorce under S. 13 HMA or judicial separation under S. 10 HMA, 1955 — Stay of criminal cases in subordinate courts against the husband vacated — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 17, 11, 13, 10 and 5(i)

The two concurring judgments in these matters deal with several writ petitions and review petitions, all revolving around the situation created when a non-Muslim man, married according to religious sites stipulating monogamy, renounces his religion, converts to Islam and solemnises a second marriage, according to Islamic rites, without divorcing his first wife.

The pleadings of S, the petitioner in one of the cases revealed the following: S and the respondent underwent a Hindu marriage in 1984. In May 1992 the respondent informed S that he had converted to Islam and that he intended to remarry; he advised S to agree to a divorce by mutual consent. S contended that her husband's conversion was entirely fraudulent, carried out with the sole aim of solemnising a second marriage; she contended that he had no real faith in Islam, that the conversion was not even remotely connected to a spiritual quest and that it was not an exercise of the freedom of religion guaranteed under the Constitution. She pointed out that there was no change in his way of living at all since the conversion. He had not even changed his name. She submitted documents including the birth certificate of his child from the second marriage, copies of relevant entries of the electoral list and an application for a visa to enter Bangladesh, all showing the respondent's name as "G.C. Ghosh" and "Hindu" as his religion. The second wife was entered as "Vanita Ghosh" in all the documents and also described as "Hindu".

In view of the pleadings in S's petition, the Court formulated the following question: "In order to avoid the clutches of S. 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, if a person renounces his 'Hindu' religion and converts to another religion and marries a second time, what would be the effect on his criminal liability?"

The judgments also disposed of petitions seeking review of the decision in Sarla Mudgal, President, Kalyani v. Union of India (1995) 3 SCC 635, in which it had been held that the second marriage of a Hindu husband after converting to Islam, without dissolution of his first marriage under law, would be void in terms of Section 494 IPC and such husband would be guilty of bigamy under that section. The primary contention of the review petitioners was that the decision resulted in deprivation of the fundamental right to freedom of religion.

Dismissing the review petitions, and disposing of all the petitions finally and vacating the stay of connected criminal cases under Section 494 IPC in subordinate courts,

Held :

Per curiam :

It is under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 that it has to be seen whether the husband, who has married a second wife, has committed the offence of bigamy or not. Since under the Hindu Marriage Act, a bigamous marriage is prohibited and has been constituted as an offence under Section 17 of the Act, any marriage solemnised by the husband during the subsistence of that marriage, in spite of his conversion to another religion, would be an offence triable under Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act read with Section 494 IPC. Since taking of cognizance of the offence under Section 494 is limited to the complaints made by the persons specified in Section 198 CrPC, it is obvious that the person making the complaint would have to be decided in terms of the personal law applicable to the complainant and the respondent (accused), since mere conversion does not dissolve the marriage automatically and they continue to be "husband and wife".(Para 25)

If a person marries a second time during the lifetime of his wife, such marriage apart from being void under Sections 11 and 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, would also constitute an offence and that person would be liable to be prosecuted under Section 494 IPC. (Para 29)

Conversion or apostasy does not automatically dissolve a marriage already solemnised under the Hindu Marriage Act. It only provides a ground for divorce under Section 13. Under Section 10 which provides for judicial separation, conversion to another religion is now a ground for a decree for judicial separation after the Act was amended by the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976. The first marriage, therefore, is not affected and it continues to subsist. If the "marital" status is not affected on account of the marriage still subsisting, the husband's second marriage qua the existing marriage would be void and in spite of conversion he would be liable to be prosecuted for the offence of bigamy under Section 494. (Paras 30 and 31)

Mere conversion does not bring to an end the marital ties unless a decree for divorce on that ground is obtained from the court. Till a decree is passed, the marriage subsists. Any other marriage, during the subsistence of the first marriage would constitute an offence under Section 494 read with Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 and the person, in spite of his conversion to some other religion, would be liable to be prosecuted for the offence of bigamy. It also follows that if the first marriage was solemnised under the Hindu Marriage Act, the "husband" or the "wife", by mere conversion to another religion, cannot bring to an end the marital ties already established on account of a valid marriage having been performed between them. So long as that marriage subsists, another marriage cannot be performed, not even under any other personal law, and on such marriage being performed, the person would be liable to be prosecuted for the offence under Section 494 IPC. (Para 35)

Religion is a matter of faith stemming from the depth of the heart and mind. Religion, faith or devotion are not easily interchangeable. If the person feigns to have adopted another religion just for some worldly gain or benefit, it would be religious bigotry. Looked at from this angle, a person who mockingly adopts another religion where plurality of marriage is permitted so as to renounce the previous marriage and desert the wife, he cannot be permitted to take advantage of his exploitation as religion is not a commodity to be exploited. The institution of marriage under every personal law is a sacred institution. Under Hindu law, marriage is a sacrament. Both have to be preserved. (Para 38)

The important words used in Section 494 IPC are "Marries in any case in which such marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband or wife". These words indicate that before an offence under Section 494 can be said to have been constituted, the second marriage should be shown to be void in a case where such a marriage would be void by reason of its taking place in the lifetime of such husband or wife. The words "husband or wife" are also important in the sense that they indicate the personal law applicable to them which would continue to be applicable to them so long as the marriage subsists and they remain "husband and wife". (Para 23)

Counsel appearing for the petitioners have alleged that in view of the judgment in Sarla Mudgal case their clients are liable to be convicted without any further proof. Such an apprehension is without any substance inasmuch as the person seeking conviction of the accused for a commission of offence under Section 494 is under a legal obligation to prove all the ingredients of the offence charged and conviction cannot be based upon mere admission made outside the Court. To attract the provisions of Section 494 IPC the second marriage has to be proved besides proving the previous marriage. Such marriage is further required to be proved to have been performed or celebrated with proper ceremonies. (Para 63)

The grievance that the judgment in Sarla Mudgal v. Union of India (1995) 3 SCC 635 amounts to violation of the freedom of conscience and free profession, practice and propagation of religion is also far-fetched and apparently artificially carved out by such persons who are alleged to have violated the law by attempting to cloak themselves under the protective fundamental right guaranteed under Article 25 of the Constitution. No person, by the judgment impugned, has been denied the freedom of conscience and propagation of religion. The rule of monogamous marriage amongst Hindus was introduced with the enactment of the Hindu Marriage Act. The second marriage solemnised by a Hindu during the subsistence of a first marriage is an offence punishable under the penal law. Freedom guaranteed under Article 25 of the Constitution is such freedom which does not encroach upon a similar freedom of other persons. Under the constitutional scheme every person has a fundamental right not merely to entertain the religious belief of his choice but also to exhibit this belief and ideas in a manner which does not infringe the religious right and personal freedom of others. (Para 62)

What is guaranteed under Article 21 is that no person shall be deprived of his life and personal liberty except according to the procedure established by law. The aggrieved persons are apprehended to be prosecuted for the commission of offence punishable under Section 494 IPC. It is premature, at this stage, to canvass that they would be deprived of their life and liberty without following the procedure established by law. The procedure established by law, as mentioned in Article 21 of the Constitution, means the law prescribed by the legislature. The judgment in Sarla Mudgal case has neither changed the procedure nor created any law for the prosecution of the persons sought to be proceeded against for the alleged commission of the offence under Section 494 IPC. (Para 61)

In the review petitions the notice issued was limited to the question of Article 20(1) of the Constitution. It was contended that the judgment of the Court entailed on a convert to Islam the liability of prosecution for the offence of bigamy under Section 494 IPC which would, otherwise not be an offence under the law applicable to him. Section 494 forms part of a substantive law and is applicable to all unless specifically excluded. As no notice has been issued for review of the main judgment which interpreted Section 494 IPC it cannot be said that any person was likely to be convicted for an offence except for violation of law in force at the time of commission of the act charged as an offence. (Para 57)

The petitioners have not made out any case within the meaning of Article 137 read with Order XL of the Supreme Court Rules and Order 47 Rule 1 CPC for reviewing the judgment in Sarla Mudgal case. The petition is misconceived and bereft of any substance. (Para 58)

The progressive outlook and wider approach of Islamic law cannot be permitted to be squeezed and narrowed by unscrupulous litigants, apparently indulging in sensual lust sought to be quenched by illegal means, who apparently are found to be guilty of the commission of the offence under the law to which they belonged before their alleged conversion. It is nobody's case that any such convertee has been deprived of practising any other religious right for the attainment of spiritual goals. (Para 62)

Prosecution under Section 494 in respect of a second marriage under Mohammedan law can be avoided only if the first marriage was also under the Mohammedan law and not if the first marriage was under any other personal law where there was a prohibition on contracting a second marriage in the lifetime of the spouse. (Para 36)

The offence of bigamy in the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 has been created by reference. By providing in Section 17 that provisions of Sections 494 and 495 would be applicable to such a marriage, the legislature has bodily lifted the provisions of Sections 494 and 495 IPC and placed them in Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act. This is a well-known legislative device. (Para 23)

The contention that the law declared in Sarla Mudgal case cannot be applied to persons who have solemnised marriages in violation of the mandate of law prior to the date of judgment is not acceptable. The Supreme Court had not laid down any new law but only interpreted the existing law which was in force. It is a settled principle that the interpretation of a provision of law relates back to the date of the law itself and cannot be prospective from the date of the judgment because concededly the court does not legislate but only gives an interpretation to an existing law. The argument that the second marriage by a convert male Muslim has been made an offence only by judicial pronouncement is not correct. The judgment has only interpreted the existing law after taking into consideration various aspects argued at length before the Bench which pronounced the judgment. The review petition alleging violation of Article 20(1) of the Constitution is without any substance and is liable to be dismissed on this ground alone. (Para 59)

Status of children born of second bigamous marriage and that of second wife herself, held, are issues not involved in the present case. Lily Thomas v. Union of India, (2000) 6 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1056: AIR 2000 SC 1650: 2000 Cri LJ 2433.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad[1] and R.P. Sethi[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2000]

Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, (1965) 2 SCR 837: AIR 1965 SC 1564; Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Admn., AIR 1966 SC 614: (1966) 1 SCR 539: 1966 Cri LJ 472; Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh, (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362; Gopal Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1979) 2 SCC 170: 1979 SCC (Cri) 401, relied upon

Govt. of Bombay v. Ganga, ILR (1880) 4 Bom 330; Budansa Rowther v. Fatima Bi, AIR 1914 Mad 192; Emperor v. Ruri, AIR 1919 Lah 389: 20 Cri LJ 3; Jamna Devi v. Mul Raj, (1907) 49 PR 1907: 83 PLR 1908; Rakeya Bibi v. Anil Kumar Mukherji, ILR (1948) 2 Cal 119; Sayeda Khatoon v. M. Obadiah, (1944-45) 49 CWN 745; Amar Nath v. Mrs Amar Nath, (1947) 49 PLR 147: AIR 1948 Lah 129 (FB); Gul Mohd. v. Emperor, AIR 1947 Nag 121: 48 Cri LJ 43, approved

Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Admn., AIR 1966 SC 614: (1966) 1 SCR 539: 1966 Cri LJ 472; Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1564: (1965) 2 SCR 837, relied on

[Ed.: See also Thapalyal, A: Proving Bigamy: Unfair Burden?" (1986) 4 SCC 11(J).]

Sarla Mudgal v. Union of India, (1995) 3 SCC 635, affirmed

[10773] — S. 494 — Foreign judgment on matrimonial dispute — Recognition of — Principles laid down — Divorce decree by a foreign (USA) Court — Parties married in India and governed by Hindu Marriage Act — Ground on which decree passed not covered by Act — Besides, husband appellant not a domicile but only technically satisfying the residence requirement of 90 days for assuming the jurisdiction of the foreign court — Wife respondent contesting the petition without submitting to the jurisdiction of the foreign court — Held, decree unenforceable against the respondent — Appellant played a fraud on the foreign court by representing to it incorrect jurisdictional facts — Hence divorce decree not available as defence to the charge of bigamy filed by wife — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, Ss. 19 and 13 — CPC, 1908 — Ss. 13 and 14

Appellant 1 and respondent 1 were married in India at Tirupati in 1975 according to Hindu law but they separated in 1978. The appellant filed an application in 1978 for dissolution of the marriage in the Sub-Court of Tirupati averring that he was a resident of New Orleans, Louisiana, USA and that he was a citizen of India. Meanwhile in 1980 he filed another petition for dissolution of marriage in the Circuit Court of St. Louis County, Missouri, USA. In the petition he besides alleging that he had been a resident of the State of Missouri for 90 days or more immediately preceding the filing of the petition, alleged that respondent 1 had deserted him for one year or more next preceding the filing of the petition by refusal to continue to live with him in the United States and particularly in the State of Missouri. However, from the averments made in the petition before the Sub-court of Tirupati it was clear that both respondent 1 and petitioner 1 had last resided together at New Orleans, Louisiana and never within the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of St. Louis County in the State of Missouri. Respondent 1 filed her reply without prejudice to the contention that she was not submitting to the jurisdiction of the foreign court. The Circuit Court assumed jurisdiction over the matter on the ground that appellant 1 had been a resident of the State of Missouri for 90 days next preceding the commencement of the action in that court. The Circuit Court passed a decree for dissolution of marriage on February 19, 1980 in the absence of respondent 1 on the only ground that the marriage was "irretrievably broken". The petition before the Sub-Court of Tirupati was thereupon dismissed as not pressed on the application of appellant 1. In 1981 appellant 1 married appellant 2 in India. Respondent 1 then filed a criminal complaint against the appellants for the offence of bigamy. The appellants filed an application for their discharge in view of the decree for dissolution of marriage passed by the Missouri Court. The Magistrate discharged the appellants holding that the complainant, i.e., respondent 1 had failed to make out a prima facie case against the appellants. But on revision the High Court set aside the order of the Magistrate holding that a photostat copy of the judgment of the Missouri Court was not admissible in evidence to prove the dissolution of marriage. Hence the appeal.

Held :

The decree dissolving the marriage passed by the foreign court is without jurisdiction according to the Hindu Marriage Act as neither the marriage was celebrated nor the parties last resided together nor the respondent resided within the jurisdiction of that court. Residence does not mean a temporary residence for the purpose of obtaining a divorce but habitual residence or residence which is intended to be permanent for future as well. The decree had been obtained by appellant 1 by stating that he was the resident of the Missouri State when the record shows that he was only a bird of passage there and was ordinarily a resident of the State of Louisiana. He had, if at all, only technically satisfied the requirement of residence of 90 days with the only purpose of obtaining the divorce. He was neither domiciled in that State nor had he an intention to make it his home. He had also no substantial connection with the forum. Appellant 1 had further brought no rules on record under which the St. Louis Court could assume jurisdiction over the matter. On the contrary, he had in his petition made a false averment that respondent 1 had refused to continue to stay with him in the State of Missouri where she had never been. Therefore, the case can be disposed of on the narrow ground that the appellant played a fraud on the foreign court representing to it incorrect jurisdictional facts. However, even presuming that the foreign court by its own rules of jurisdiction had rightly entertained the dispute and granted a valid decree of divorce according to its law, it must be held that since with regard to the jurisdiction of the forum as well as the ground on which it was passed the foreign decree in the present case is not in accordance with the Act under which the parties were married, and the respondent had not submitted to the jurisdiction of the court or consented to its passing, it cannot be recognised by the courts in this country and is, therefore, unenforceable. (Paras 9, 10 and 22)

The relevant provisions of S. 13 of the Code are capable of being interpreted to secure the required certainty in the sphere of this branch of law in conformity with public policy, justice, equity and good conscience, and the rules so evolved will protect the sanctity of the institution of marriage and the unity of family which are the cornerstones of our societal life. Today the need for definitive rules for recognition of foreign judgments in personal and family matters, and particularly in matrimonial disputes has surged to the surface. Though the rules of guidance may prove inadequate or miss some aspects but a beginning has to be made as best as one can, the lacunae and the errors being left to be filled in and corrected by future judgments. (Paras 14 and 13)

On an interpretation of S. 13 CPC the following rule can be deduced for recognising a foreign matrimonial judgment in this country. The jurisdiction assumed by the foreign court as well as the grounds on which the relief is granted must be in accordance with the matrimonial law under which the parties are married. The exceptions to this rule may be as follows: (i) where the matrimonial action is filed in the forum where the respondent is domiciled or habitually and permanently resides and the relief is granted on a ground available in the matrimonial law under which the parties are married; (ii) where the respondent voluntarily and effectively submits to the jurisdiction of the forum as discussed above and contests the claim which is based on a ground available under the matrimonial law under which the parties are married; (iii) where the respondent consents to the grant of the relief although the jurisdiction of the forum is not in accordance with the provisions of the matrimonial law of the parties. (Para 20). Narasimha Rao v. Venkata Lakshmi, (1991) 3 SCC 451: 1991 SCC (Cri) 626.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra, C.J. and P.B. Sawant, J. [Date of decision: 9-7-1991]

Satya v. Teja Singh, (1975) 1 SCC 120: 1975 SCC (Cri) 50, relied on [10774] — S. 494 — Held, the important words in S. 494 are "marries in any case in which such marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband and wife" — They indicate that offence can be said to be constituted only where second marriage is shown to be void for the reason that it has taken place in the lifetime of the original husband or wife — Further held, the words "husband or wife" are important because they indicate that personal law applicable to them would continue to be applicable as long as their marriage subsists. Lily Thomas v. Union of India, (2000) 6 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1056: AIR 2000 SC 1650: 2000 Cri LJ 2433.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad[1] and R.P. Sethi[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2000]

[10775] — S. 494 — Offence under — Compensation to first wife — Rs 7000 directed to be paid out of the amount of fine imposed on the accused. Ananda Dagadu Jadhav v. Rukminibai Anand Jadav, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 68: 1993 SCC (Cri) 868.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, Kuldip Singh and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1992]

[10776] — S. 494 — Quashing of complaint and criminal proceedings — Where clear and specific allegation made in the complaint that accused 1 and 2, having married during subsistence of a valid marriage of accused 1 with the complainant, committed offence under S. 494 IPC and Magistrate having regard to the statement made on oath by the complainant as also evidence of witnesses produced by her and other material, reached his satisfaction regarding existence of a prima facie case against the accused, held, High Court not justified in quashing the complaint and the criminal proceedings on ground of abuse of process of court by relying on some additional material produced by the accused not admitted or accepted by the complainant. Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636: AIR 1992 SC 1379: 1992 Cri LJ 1956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1992]

[10777] — S. 494 — Quashing of proceedings under S. 561-A CrPC — Legality — Bigamy — Alleged offence of — Decree for dissolution of marriage — Appeal against, filed before High Court by wife — Punjab & Haryana High Court vide order dt. 24-11-2000 staying the operation of said decree and restraining the husband from remarrying till further orders — Wife filing complaint before Judicial Magistrate alleging that during subsistence of a valid marriage, her husband contracted second marriage — Wife submitting that second marriage solemnised on 8-3-2001 when the order of stay dt. 24-11-2000 was in operation — J&K High Court, while quashing the proceedings initiated on the said complaint, acted on the basis that second marriage was solemnised on 8-3-2001 — No reference to the order of stay made in the impugned order — As per husband, second marriage was solemnised subsequent to the date of said decree but prior to the date of order of stay — High Court directed to rehear the matter afresh by taking into account the effect of the order of stay and adjudicating upon the question as to when the second marriage actually took place — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Ranbir Penal Code, 1932 (1989 Smvt.), S. 494 — J&K Code of Criminal Procedure, 1989 — S. 561-A (akin to S. 482 CrPC)

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

It is not in dispute that the order dated 24-11-2000 clearly restrained the husband from remarriage and the operation of the decree of divorce was stayed. The High Court, while acting under Section 561-A, Jammu and Kashmir Code of Criminal Procedure, 1989, proceeded on the basis that the marriage between the husband and U (second wife) took place on 8-3-2001 and applying the ratio in Krishna Gopal case, (2002) 10 SCC 216 it held that no offence was made out. The impugned order does not refer to the order of stay and the effect thereof. There is a great deal of factual distinction between Krishna Gopal case and the case at hand. Again it has to be noted that there is a dispute, as presently raised by the respondent husband, that the date of marriage was much before the date on which the order of stay was passed and subsequent to the date on which the decree for dissolution of marriage was passed. (Para 6)

In view of the above controversy, the matter needs to be reheard by the High Court. While considering the matter afresh, the effect of the order of stay dated 24-11-2000 shall be taken note of. Much would depend on the date when the marriage took place. There is no dispute that the respondent husband has married U. The crucial question is when the marriage took place. All these aspects are to be adjudicated by the High Court while dealing with the matter afresh. (Para 7). Kunti Devi v. Som Raj, (2004) 11 SCC 278.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-2004]

Krishna Gopal Divedi v. Prabha Divedi, (2002) 10 SCC 216: 2004 SCC (Cri) 473: AIR 2002 SC 389, distinguished on facts

[10778] — S. 494 — Requirements for a valid marriage under S. 7-A (as inserted by T.N. Act 21 of 1967), Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Presence of a priest, held, is not necessary for solemnising the marriage under the aforesaid section — Parties can enter into a marriage in the presence of relatives or friends or other persons by garlanding each other or putting a ring upon any finger of the other or tying a thali — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 101-103. S. Nagalingam v. Sivagami, (2001) 7 SCC 487: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1273: AIR 2001 SC 3576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

[10779] — S. 494 — Revision — Scope of — High Court in exercise of revisional jurisdiction in a matter relating to S. 125 CrPC giving directions for initiation of departmental proceedings — Unsustainability of — Issues involving appellant's marriage/double marriage pending adjudication in a title suit — High Court adjudicating that an offence under S. 494 IPC was made out — High Court's direction for departmental proceedings in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction while deciding a S. 125 CrPC matter, held, erroneous — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 5(i) — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 397 and 125

The High Court was clearly in error in directing initiation of departmental proceedings while dealing with an application for revision in the matter relating to Section 125 CrPC. The High Court while dealing with the application under Section 125 CrPC has essentially adjudicated that an offence punishable under Section 494 IPC is made out. A title suit was pending where prayer was made for declaration that the respondent was not his wife. Whether there was a second marriage as contended and whether L (respondent) was his wife as claimed by her or C was the wife of the appellant as claimed by him has yet to be decided. (Para 8). Taraknath Kar v. Lipika Kar, (2008) 5 SCC 387: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 618: AIR 2008 SC 2310.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2008]

[10780] — S. 494 — Second marriage — Departmental enquiry for contracting a second marriage without requisite permission from the Government preceded by discharge in criminal trial for bigamy — In such circumstances, although the departmental enquiry could be continued, continued suspension during the departmental enquiry, held, unwarranted — Karnataka Civil Service Rules, R. 28. State of Karnataka v. T. Venkataramanappa, (1996) 6 SCC 455: 1996 SCC (L&S) 1462.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-1996]

[10781] — S. 494 — Second marriage — Proof of — Mere admission by accused not enough — Prosecution must prove that the marriage was performed in a regular way after performing due ceremonies for the marriage

The appellant husband was charged under Section 494 IPC. In response to the charge laid against him he admitted the second marriage. The Magistrate recorded the prosecution evidence and came to the conclusion that there was no legal evidence to prove the factum of marriage. The High Court set aside the order of acquittal mainly on the ground that there was an admission of the husband and ordered a retrial. Allowing the appeal by special leave

Held :

The High Court was in error in upsetting the well-considered order of the trial Magistrate requiring due ceremonies of the alleged second marriage being proved so as to satisfy the tests laid down by the Supreme Court. The admission of the husband could at best be understood to mean that the first appellant had taken a wife, but that admission did not necessarily mean that he had taken the second wife after solemnising a Hindu marriage with her after performing due ceremonies for the marriage. Such plea, which he need not have even entered upon, and which was ignorable by the Court, did not absolve the prosecution to otherwise prove its case, that the marriage in question was performed in a regular way so as to visit him with penal consequences. P. Satyanarayana v. P. Mallaiah, (1996) 6 SCC 122: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-8-1996]

Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, (1965) 2 SCR 837: AIR 1965 SC 1564; Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Admn, (1966) 1 SCR 539: AIR 1966 SC 614; Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh, (1971) 1 SCC 864: 1971 SCC (Cri) 362, followed [10782] — S. 494 — Sentence under — Quantum of — Offence committed about 18 years ago and the accused facing the proceedings for over 17 years — In such circumstances, substantive sentence of 5 years of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone but the fine of Rs 1500 enhanced to Rs 3000. Ananda Dagadu Jadhav v. Rukminibai Anand Jadav, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 68: 1993 SCC (Cri) 868.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, Kuldip Singh and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1992]

[10783] — S. 494 — Where on a complaint filed alleging bigamy, CJM on being prima facie satisfied that offence of bigamy under S. 494 and Ss. 494/109 IPC made out, issued process to respondents, held, High Court under S. 482 CrPC not justified in quashing the proceedings by taking the view that there was no allegation in the complaint about first and second marriages by performance of religious rites. Mohinder Singh v. Gulwant Singh, (1992) 2 SCC 213: 1992 SCC (Cri) 361: AIR 1992 SC 1894.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, M. Fathima Beevi and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1991]

[10784] — S. 494 — Whether subsequent marriage need be a valid marriage — Question not decided. Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1564: (1965) 2 SCR 837: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 544.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Raghubar Dayal, J.R. Mudholkar and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-1965]

[10785] — Ss. 494 and 109 — Abetment of bigamy — By mere presence or otherwise the other accused cannot be held to have facilitated the solemnisation of the second marriage with the knowledge that the earlier marriage was subsisting — So the allegations imputing them with guilty knowledge unsupported by other material would not justify the continuance of the proceedings against them. Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636: AIR 1992 SC 1379: 1992 Cri LJ 1956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1992]

[10786] — Ss. 494 and 109 — Abetting the offence of bigamy — Sentence — Quantum of — Imprisonment till rising of the court and fine of Rs 500 — Upheld. Ananda Dagadu Jadhav v. Rukminibai Anand Jadav, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 68: 1993 SCC (Cri) 868.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, Kuldip Singh and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1992]

[10787] — Ss. 494, 120-B and 109 — Quashing of private complaint — Maliciously instituted proceedings to wreak vengeance on the accused [as per Category 7 in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335] — Applicability — Complaint case instituted by the father of the appellant-accused's earlier wife (frustrated with marriage, living separately and divorced) against appellant, his family members, subsequent wife and subsequent in-laws under Ss. 494, 120-B and 109 IPC r/w Ss. 3/4 of Dowry Act — Case instituted in 1994, allegations of dowry torture in 1992 and dowry demand by husband in 1993 — Appellant-accused's subsequent marriage on 2-3-1993 was after the time-limit for filing appeal against ex parte decree of divorce had expired — No specific allegation against other accused (except appellant-accused) though they were impleaded in the private complaint — In spite of service of notice none appeared on behalf of Respondent 1 (complainant) — Category 7 of Bhajan Lal case for quashing of complaint, on facts, held, applicable — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 15 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 and Ch. XV

M, left her husband P and started living in her parental house. On 1-1-1993, an ex parte decreed for dissolution of marriage was passed against M on the ground of cruelty and harassment. After the time for filing appeal against the ex parte decree dated 1-1-1993 under Section 28(4) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (the Marriage Act) expired on 31-1-1993, and no appeal was preferred, P married S on 2-3-1993. The respondent (M's father), thereafter, on 6-12-1994 filed a private complaint wherein all the appellants (P, his family members and in-laws) were arrayed as accused persons for offences punishable under Sections 494, 120-B and 109 IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (the Dowry Act). By the impugned order, the High Court rejected the Section 482 CrPC petition of the appellants on the ground that the trial court can be directed to conclude the trial expeditiously and at the time of framing charges, the appellants can raise such points as have been raised in the present dispute.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The present case appears to be one where Category 7 of the illustrations given in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 is clearly applicable. The parameters for exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC have been laid down by the Supreme Court in several cases. In the complaint filed, the allegation is that the dowry torture was made sometime in 1992. It has not been explained as to why for more than two years no action was taken. Apart from P (husband of M), his mother, mother's sister, S (subsequently married wife), brother-in-law and S's father were impleaded as parties. No role has been specifically ascribed to anybody except the husband and that too of a dowry demand in February 1993 when the complaint was filed on 6-12-1994 i.e. nearly after 22 months. It is to be noted that in spite of service of notice, none appeared on behalf of Respondent 1. The proceedings pending before the CJM, are, therefore, quashed. (Paras 8 to 13). Priya Vrat Singh v. Shyam Ji Sahai, (2008) 8 SCC 232: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 463: (2008) 5 All LJ 673: 2008 Cri LJ 4367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-2008]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36, followed

Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on [10788] — Ss. 494 and 420 — Sustainability of prosecution under S. 494 IPC — Statement of subsequent wife — Relevance — Complaint against husband for offence of bigamy filed by father of subsequent wife allegedly on her behalf but against her express desire stated in her sworn written statement — She was a major when she married of her own free will and that she was living happily and peacefully thereafter — Initiation of prosecution in such circumstances, held, was improper — Magistrate was not justified in taking cognizance of the said offence — Since husband and his wife staying together happily, further prosecution would only harass the accused — Hence, proceedings quashed — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 198(1) proviso (c) and 482 (Para 4). Manish Das (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2006) 6 SCC 536: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 113.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2006]

[10789] — S. 494 and S. 494 r/w S. 109 — Bigamy — Commission of offence of, by husband — Delay of four years in filing complaint — Conviction of husband under S. 494 IPC and that of father under S. 494 r/w S. 109 IPC — Propriety — Soon after the first marriage there were disputes and differences between husband and wife — Wife staying with her father for the last 14 years — Disputes were pending in civil court — On such facts, held, it would be highly improbable, if not impossible, not to take any step for four years — Even that apart, no explanation given for the said delay — There were only parrot-like depositions of PWs having seen the second marriage — None of them could give any further detail when questioned in cross-examination — No evidence to prove the deposition of wife's father that two sons were born from the second marriage — Under such circumstances, held, conviction of husband and his father not sustainable (Para 7). Purandar Sahoo v. Golapi Sahoo, (2007) 15 SCC 696.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2003]

[10790] — Ss. 494 and 495 — Bigamy — Prosecution for — Expression "aggrieved person" under S. 198 — Scope, meaning, ambit and interpretation — Second spouse, whether an aggrieved person entitled to file complaint for offences under Ss. 494 and 495 IPC — Appellant concealing fact of his having an earlier living wife, and marrying Respondent 2 — Held, a woman with whom a second marriage is contracted by suppressing fact of former marriage is an "aggrieved person" for purposes of S. 198 CrPC and would be entitled to maintain a complaint under Ss. 494 and 495 IPC — S. 494 IPC does not restrict right of filing complaint to first wife only and there is no reason to read S. 494 IPC in a restricted manner — To achieve laudable object of monogamy, meaning of phrase "aggrieved person" has to be expanded — Expression "aggrieved person" denotes an elastic and an elusive concept — Its scope and meaning depends on diverse and variable factors — Further, S. 495 IPC punishes an aggravated form of bigamy and is an extension of S. 494 — Word "concealment" in S. 495 refers to concealment of former marriage from second wife — Therefore, second wife is an "aggrieved person" under S. 495 IPC — As S. 495 is an extension of S. 494 IPC, second wife is also an "aggrieved person" under S. 494 IPC — Considering the miseries inflicted on such second wife arising out of the gross fraud perpetrated upon her, further held, to debar second wife from filing complaint under S. 494 IPC would be the height of perversity — CrPC, 1973, S. 198

The High Court by the impugned judgment partly accepted the petition filed by the appellant husband under Section 482 CrPC insofar as the offence punishable under Section 498-A IPC was concerned, whereas the prayer made by the appellant to quash the proceedings insofar as the offences punishable under Sections 494, 495, 417 and 420 IPC, were concerned, was rejected, giving rise to the instant appeal.

Disposing of the appeal in the terms below,

Held :

The contention that Respondent 2 (complainant second wife) is not an aggrieved person so far as commission of offences punishable under Sections 494 and 495 IPC is concerned, has no substance and cannot be accepted.

(Para 17)

When a court of law declares second marriage to be void on a petition presented by the husband who contracts the second marriage on the ground that he has a spouse living at the time of marriage, it only brings untold hardships and miseries in the life of the woman with whom the second marriage is performed apart from shattering her ambition to live a comfortable life after marriage. When a law, such as Section 11 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 declares that a second marriage by a husband, who has a living wife, with another woman is void, for breach of Section 5(i) of the said Act, it brings/attaches several legal disabilities to the woman with whom the second marriage is performed. Say for example, she would not be entitled to claim maintenance from her husband even if she is inhumanly treated, subjected to mental and physical cruelty of variety of kinds, etc. and is not able to maintain herself. The law of inheritance would prejudicially operate against her. She herself would suffer outrageous, wrong and absurd social stigma of being another woman in the life of the male who contracts second marriage with her. The members of the cruel society including her kith and kin like parents, brothers, sisters, etc. would look down upon her and she would be left in the lurch by one and all. (Paras 19 and 18)

Polygamy was practised in many sections of Hindu society in ancient times. Section 494 IPC is intended to achieve the laudable object of monogamy. This object can be achieved only by expanding the meaning of the phrase "aggrieved person". (Para 21)

For a variety of reasons the first wife may not choose to file a complaint against her husband e.g. when she is assured of re-union by her husband, when the husband assures to snap the tie of second marriage, etc. Non-filing of the complaint under Section 494 IPC by the first wife does not mean that the offence is wiped out and monogamy sought to be achieved by means of Section 494 IPC merely remains in the statute book. (Para 22)

Having regard to the scope, purpose, context and object of enacting Section 494 IPC and also the prevailing practices in the society sought to be curbed by Section 494 IPC, there is no manner of doubt that the complainant second wife should be an "aggrieved person". (Para 22)

In order to attract the provisions of Section 494 IPC both the marriages of the accused must be valid in the sense that the necessary ceremonies required by the personal law governing the parties must have been duly performed. (Para 23)

Though Section 11 of the Hindu Marriage Act provides that any marriage solemnised, if it contravenes the conditions specified in clause (i) of Section 5 of the said Act, shall be null and void, it also provides that such marriage may on a petition presented by either party thereto, be so declared. Though the law specifically does not cast an obligation on either party to seek declaration of nullity of marriage and it may be open to the parties even without recourse to the court to treat the marriage as a nullity, such a course is neither prudent nor intended and a declaration in terms of Section 11 of the Hindu Marriage Act will have to be asked for, for the purpose of precaution and/or record. Therefore, until the declaration contemplated by Section 11 of the Hindu Marriage Act is made by a competent court, the woman with whom second marriage is solemnised continues to be the wife within the meaning of Section 494 IPC and would be entitled to maintain a complaint against her husband. Even otherwise, the second wife suffers several legal wrongs and/or legal injuries when the second marriage is treated as a nullity by the husband arbitrarily, without recourse to the court or where a declaration sought is granted by a competent court. The expression "aggrieved person" denotes an elastic and an elusive concept. It cannot be confined within the bounds of a rigid, exact and comprehensive definition. Its scope and meaning depends on diverse, variable factors such as the content and intent of the statute of which the contravention is alleged, the specific circumstances of the case, the nature and extent of complainant's interest and the nature and the extent of the prejudice or injury suffered by the complainant. Section 494 does not restrict the right of filing complaint to the first wife and there is no reason to read the said section in a restricted manner. Section 494 does not say that the complaint for commission of offence under the said section can be filed only by the wife living and not by the woman with whom the subsequent marriage takes place during the lifetime of the wife living and which marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such wife. (Paras 24 and 25)

A bare reading of the complaint together with the statutory provisions makes it abundantly clear that the appellant having a living wife, married Respondent 2 herein by concealing from her the fact of the former marriage and therefore her complaint against the appellant for commission of offence punishable under Sections 494 and 495 IPC is maintainable and cannot be quashed on this ground. To hold that a woman with whom second marriage is performed is not entitled to maintain a complaint under Section 494 IPC though she suffers legal injuries would be the height of perversity. (Para 26)

The offence mentioned in Section 495 IPC is an aggravated form of bigamy provided in Section 494 IPC. The circumstance of aggravation is the concealment of the fact of the former marriage from the person with whom the second marriage is contracted. Since the offence under Section 495 IPC is in essence bigamy, it follows that all the elements necessary to constitute that offence must be present here also. A married man who by passing himself off as unmarried induces an innocent woman to become, as she thinks his wife, but in reality his mistress, commits one of the grossest forms of frauds known to law and therefore severe punishment is provided therefor in Section 495 IPC. (Para 28)

The reference to Section 494 IPC in Section 495 IPC makes it clear that Section 495 IPC is an extension of Section 494 IPC and part and parcel of it. The "concealment" spoken of in Section 495 IPC would be from the woman with whom the subsequent marriage is performed. Therefore, the wife with whom the subsequent marriage is contracted after concealment of the former marriage, would also be entitled to lodge a complaint for commission of offence punishable under Section 495 IPC. Where the second wife alleges that the accused husband had married her according to Hindu rites despite the fact that he was already married to another lady and the factum of the first marriage was concealed from her, the second wife would be an "aggrieved person" within the meaning of Section 198 CrPC. (Para 29)

If the woman with whom the second marriage is performed by concealment of the former marriage is entitled to file a complaint for commission of offence under Section 495 IPC, there is no reason why she should not be entitled to file a complaint under Section 494 IPC, more particularly when Section 495 IPC is an extension and part and parcel of Section 494 IPC. (Para 30)

Thus, a woman with whom a second marriage is contracted by suppressing the fact of former marriage would be entitled to maintain a complaint against her husband under Sections 494 and 495 IPC. (Para 31). A. Subash Babu v. State of A.P., (2011) 7 SCC 616.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2011]

Gopal Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1979) 2 SCC 170: 1979 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on

[10791] — Ss. 494 and 495 — Relative Scope and inter-relationship between, explained

The offence mentioned in Section 495 IPC is an aggravated form of bigamy provided in Section 494 IPC. The circumstance of aggravation is the concealment of the fact of the former marriage from the person with whom the second marriage is contracted. Since the offence under Section 495 IPC is in essence bigamy, it follows that all the elements necessary to constitute that offence must be present here also. A married man who by passing himself off as unmarried induces an innocent woman to become, as she thinks his wife, but in reality his mistress, commits one of the grossest forms of frauds known to law and therefore severe punishment is provided therefor in Section 495 IPC. (Para 28)

The reference to Section 494 IPC in Section 495 IPC makes it clear that Section 495 IPC is an extension of Section 494 IPC and part and parcel of it. The "concealment" spoken of in Section 495 IPC would be from the woman with whom the subsequent marriage is performed. Therefore, the wife with whom the subsequent marriage is contracted after concealment of the former marriage, would also be entitled to lodge a complaint for commission of offence punishable under Section 495 IPC. Where the second wife alleges that the accused husband had married her according to Hindu rites despite the fact that he was already married to another lady and the factum of the first marriage was concealed from her, the second wife would be an "aggrieved person" within the meaning of Section 198 CrPC. (Para 29)

If the woman with whom the second marriage is performed by concealment of the former marriage is entitled to file a complaint for commission of offence under Section 495 IPC, there is no reason why she should not be entitled to file a complaint under Section 494 IPC, more particularly when Section 495 IPC is an extension and part and parcel of Section 494 IPC. (Para 30)

Thus, a woman with whom a second marriage is contracted by suppressing the fact of former marriage would be entitled to maintain a complaint against her husband under Sections 494 and 495 IPC. (Para 31). A. Subash Babu v. State of A.P., (2011) 7 SCC 616.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2011]

[10792] — Ss. 494 and 495 (as applicable to State of Andhra Pradesh due to 1992 State amendment in CrPC) — State amending a Central statute like CrPC (belonging to Concurrent List) with Presidential assent — Such amendment, reiterated, would prevail over provision(s) concerned of Central statute in State concerned — Thus, Ss. 494 and 495 IPC are cognizable offences so far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned on account of 1992 A.P. Amendment because it received Presidential assent under Art. 254(2) — CrPC, 1973, S. 2(c) and Sch. I (as amended by Andhra Pradesh Act 2 of 1992) — Constitution of India, Arts. 254(2) and Sch. VII List III Entry 2

Sections 494 and 495 IPC are cognizable offences so far as the State of Andhra Pradesh is concerned. What is relevant to be noticed is that the Code of Criminal Procedure (Andhra Pradesh Second Amendment) Act, 1992 was reserved by the Governor of Andhra Pradesh for consideration and assent of the President. The Presidential assent was received on 10-2-1992 after which the Code of Criminal Procedure (Andhra Pradesh Second Amendment) Act, 1992 was published on 15-2-1992 in the Andhra Pradesh Gazette Part IV-B (Extraordinary). (Para 38)

In terms of Entry 2 in List III i.e. the Concurrent List in the Seventh Schedule, Constitution, Parliament and subject to Article 246(1) the legislature of any State also has the power to make laws with respect to CrPC. (Para 34)

Article 254(2) provides for curing of repugnancy which would otherwise invalidate a State law which is inconsistent with a Central law or an existing law. (Para 41)

The effect is merely to supersede the Central Act or to eclipse it by the State Act. In short, the result of obtaining the assent of the President to a State Act which is inconsistent with a previous Union law relating to a concurrent subject would be that the State Act will prevail in that State and overrule the provisions of the Central Act, in that State. (Para 43). A. Subash Babu v. State of A.P., (2011) 7 SCC 616.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2011]

[10793] — Ss. 494 and 498-A — Facts disclosing both cognizable and non-cognizable offences relating to offences concerning marriage — Complaint not filed by aggrieved party — Police not debarred from investigating non-cognizable cases also and including them in the charge-sheet — Complaint to the police in respect of offences under Ss. 498-A and 494 IPC lodged by the Women's Commission and not by the wife herself — Offence under S. 494 IPC being non-cognizable — Held, the High Court was not justified in quashing the charge under S. 494 IPC — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 155(4) and 198

Sub-section (4) of Section 155 creates a legal fiction and provides that although a case may comprise of several offences of which some are cognizable and others are not, it would not be open to the police to investigate the cognizable offences only and omit the non-cognizable offences. Since the whole case (comprising cognizable and non-cognizable offences) is to be treated as cognizable, the police had no option but to investigate the whole of the case and to submit a charge-sheet in respect of all the offences, cognizable or non-cognizable both, provided it is found by the police during investigation that the offences appear, prima facie, to have been committed.

The statutory provision is specific, precise and clear and there is no ambiguity in the language employed in sub-section (4). It is apparent that if the facts reported to the police disclose both cognizable and non-cognizable offences, the police would be acting within the scope of its authority in investigating both the offences as the legal fiction enacted in sub-section (4) provides that even a non-cognizable case shall, in that situation, be treated as cognizable. State of Orissa v. Sharat Chandra Sahu, (1996) 6 SCC 435: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 1997 SC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1996]

[10794] — Ss. 494 and 498-A — Reversal of acquittal by High Court in revision — Propriety — Conviction by trial court based on recall of witness — Acquittal by appellate court, held, rightly reversed by High Court in revision — Complainant did not press charges under Ss. 494 and 498-A and went to live with her husband and his second wife under a settlement with her husband (petitioner) — Complainant however filed a petition before trial court before conclusion of trial stating that accused had breached the settlement — Trial court recalled her for re-examination as a court witness — She supported allegations in the complaint — Trial court based thereon convicted petitioner under Ss. 494 and 498-A — Appellate court held that recalling of complainant as a court witness was invalid and acquitted petitioner — High Court set aside order of appellate court on this score and restored order of conviction passed by trial court — Held, High Court took correct view of matter and its order cannot be said to be in excess of revisional jurisdiction under Ss. 397 and 401 CrPC — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 397, 401, 311 and 320. Lal Kishore Jha v. State of Jharkhand, (2011) 6 SCC 453.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision : 2-5-2011]

Vimal Singh v. Khuman Singh, (1998) 7 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1574; Mahendra Pratap Singh v. Sarju Singh, AIR 1968 SC 707: 1968 Cri LJ 865, distinguished on facts

[10795] — S. 494 r/w S. 17 of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Challenge to validity of judgment of Supreme Court after dismissal of review petition against it whether maintainable — Judgment under Art. 142 [allowing appeal and passing decree of divorce under S. 13-B, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 and declaring all pending proceedings between the parties terminated including those under S. 494 IPC (bigamy) r/w S. 17 Hindu Marriage Act, 1955] challenged in review petition which was dismissed — Petitioner then challenging the said judgment as a nullity in fresh proceedings under Art. 32 — Whether permissible — Question directed to be placed before a Constitution Bench for consideration — Constitution of India, Art. 142 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, Ss. 13-B and 17 — Constitution of India, Arts. 32 and 137. Rupa Ashok Hurra v. Ashok Hurra, (1999) 2 SCC 103: AIR 1999 SC 2870.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.C. Agrawal, S. Saghir Ahmad and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-1998]

— S. 494 r/w S. 109 See also Ss. 494 and S. 494 r/w S. 109

[10796] — S. 494 r/w S. 109 — Consent regarding compounding of offence — Where consent given by complainant wife appeared to be free and genuine, and the compromise seemed on the face of it reasonable and in the interest of wife, and wife was an educated person, held, on facts, it was a fit case deserving permission for compounding of the offence of bigamy — CrPC, 1973 — S. 320. Parameswari v. Vennila, (2000) 10 SCC 348.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-1999]

[10797] — Ss. 494/109 — Second marriage — Proof of — Admission of marriage by accused — Effect

A marriage is not proved unless the essential ceremonies required for its solemnisation are proved to have been performed.

Admission of marriage by the accused is not evidence of it for the purpose of proving marriage in an adultery or bigamy case. Kanwal Ram v. Himachal Pradesh Admn., AIR 1966 SC 614: (1966) 1 SCR 539: 1966 Cri LJ 472, 473.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar, Raghubar Dayal and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1965]

— S. 496 See also Ss. 25 and Ss. 206 to 208, 210, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246 to 253, 255 to 261, 264 to 266, 415 to 424, 463 to 471, 474, 477 and 496

See also Ss. 417, 493 and 496

See also Ss. 493 and 496

[10798] — S. 497 — Constitutionality — Held, not violative of Arts. 14, 15 and 21 — Husband's complaint against wife's paramour with whom the wife was allegedly living in adultery, on facts, quashed, the husband having already obtained a divorce decree

The argument that S. 497 effects discrimination between men and women as it confers upon the husband the right to prosecute the adulterer but it does not confer any right upon the wife to prosecute the woman with whom her husband has committed adultery, cannot be sustained because such argument goes to the policy of the law and not to its constitutionality unless while implementing the policy any provision of the Constitution is infringed. In defining the offence of adultery so as to restrict the class of offenders to men only, no constitutional provision is infringed. S. 497 cannot be struck down on the ground that it is desirable to delete it.

The challenge to S. 497 on ground that it does not confer any right on the wife to prosecute the husband who has committed adultery with another woman is also untenable. Who can prosecute whom for which offence depends, firstly, on the definition of the offence and, secondly, upon the restrictions placed by the law of procedure on the right to prosecute. The section does not envisage the prosecution of the wife by the husband for 'adultery'. It provides expressly that the wife shall not be punishable even as an abettor. No grievance can then be made that the section does not allow the wife to prosecute the husband for adultery. The offence of adultery, as defined in S. 497, is considered by the Legislature as an offence against the sanctity of the matrimonial home, an act which is committed by a man, as it generally is. Therefore, those men who defile that sanctity are brought within the net of the law.

Merely because S. 497 does not take in cases where the husband has sexual relations with an unmarried woman, it would not become unconstitutional. An under-inclusive definition is not necessarily discriminatory. The law, as it is, does not offend either Art. 14 or Art. 15. Law does not confer freedom upon husbands to be licentious by gallivanting with unmarried women. It only makes a specific kind of extra-marital relationship an offence, the relationship between a man and a married woman, the man alone being the offender. An unfaithful husband risks or, perhaps, invites a civil action by the wife for separation. The Legislature is entitled to deal with the evil where it is felt and seen most: A man seducing the wife of another.

Although the reputation of a married woman is adversely affected if a man is alleged to have committed adultery with her, but the argument that in absence of a provision in S. 497 for hearing the woman or impleading her as a necessary party to the prosecution the section would be violative of Art. 21 cannot be accepted. If the wife makes an application in the trial court that she should be heard before a finding is recorded on the question of adultery, the application would receive due consideration from the court. The right of hearing is a concomitant of the principles of natural justice, though not in all situations. That right can be read into the law in appropriate cases.

Though the erring spouses have no remedy against each other within the confines of S. 497 of the Penal Code, that is to say, they cannot prosecute each other for adultery, each one has a remedy against the other under the civil law for divorce on the ground of adultery. 'Adultery' under the civil law has a wider connotation than under the Penal Code.

Since the petitioner's husband has already obtained divorce against her on the ground of desertion, no useful purpose will be served by inquiring into the allegation whether she had adulterous relationship with another man against whom the husband had lodged a complaint under S. 497. Sowmithri Vishnu v. Union of India, 1985 Supp SCC 137: 1985 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1985 SC 1618: 1985 Cri LJ 1302.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and R.S. Pathak and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-1985]

[10799] — S. 497 — Provision disentitling wife to file complaint against her husband for offence of adultery, held not discriminatory

Section 497 of IPC is so designed that a husband cannot prosecute the wife for defiling the sanctity of the matrimonial tie by committing adultery. Thus the law permits neither the husband of the offending wife to prosecute his wife nor does the law permit the wife to prosecute the offending husband for being disloyal to her. Thus both the husband and the wife are disabled from striking each other with the weapon of criminal law.

Section 497 of IPC and S. 198(1) r/w S. 198(2) of the CrPC go hand in hand and constitute a legislative packet to deal with the offence committed by an outsider to the matrimonial unit who invades the peace and privacy of the matrimonial unit and poisons the relationship between the two partners constituting the matrimonial unit. The community punishes the 'outsider' who breaks into the matrimonial home and occasions the violation of sanctity of the matrimonial tie by developing an illicit relationship with one of the spouses subject to the rider that the erring 'man' alone can be punished and not the erring woman. It does not arm the two spouses to hit each other with the weapon of criminal law. That is why neither the husband can prosecute the wife and send her to jail nor can the wife prosecute the husband and send him to jail. There is no discrimination based on sex. While the outsider who violates the sanctity of the matrimonial home is punished a rider has been added that if the outsider is a woman she is not punished. There is thus reverse discrimination in 'favour' of the woman rather than 'against' her. The law does not envisage the punishment of any of the spouses at the instance of each other. Thus there is no discrimination against the woman insofar as she is not permitted to prosecute her husband. A husband is not permitted because the wife is not treated as an offender in the eye of the law. V. Revathi v. Union of India, (1988) 2 SCC 72: 1988 SCC (Cri) 308: AIR 1988 SC 835: (1988) 1 KLT 771: (1988) 2 HLR 39: (1988) 1 Punj LR 649.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-1988]

[10800] — S. 497 — Wife shall not be punishable as an abettor — Provision does not offend Art. 14 of Constitution

Sex is a sound classification and although there can be no discrimination in general on that ground, the Constitution itself provides for special provisions in the case of women and children. The two Articles (14 and 15) read validate the clause in S. 497, Penal Code, according to which the wife is not punishable as an abettor of the offence of adultery. Yusuf Abdul Aziz v. State of Bombay, AIR 1954 SC 321: 1954 SCR 930: (1954) 1 MLJ 618: 56 Bom LR 1176: 1954 Cri LJ 886, 887.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, Vivian Bose and Ghulam Hasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1954]

1952 Cri LJ 23 (Bom), affirmed

[10801] — S. 497 — Wife with whom adultery alleged, held, entitled to be heard at the trial before a finding is recorded affecting her reputation

If the wife makes an application in the trial court that she should be heard before a finding is recorded on the question of adultery, the application would receive due consideration from the court. There is nothing, either in the substantive or the adjectival criminal law, which bars the court from affording a hearing to a party, which is likely to be adversely affected, directly and immediately, by the decision of the court. Sowmithri Vishnu v. Union of India, 1985 Supp SCC 137: 1985 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1985 SC 1618: 1985 Cri LJ 1302.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and R.S. Pathak and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-1985]

— S. 498 See also Ss. 304-B and 498
See also Ss. 304-B(1) and 498

[10802] — S. 498 — Scope, object and essential ingredients of

The provisions of S. 498, like those of S. 497 are intended to protect the rights of the husband and not those of the wife. The gist of the offence under S. 498 appears to be the deprivation of the husband of his custody and his proper control over his wife with the object of having illicit intercourse with her. So prima facie the consent of the wife to deprive her husband of his proper control over her would not be material. It is infringement of the rights of the husband coupled with the intention of illicit intercourse that is the essential ingredient of the offence under S. 498. Alamgir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 436: 1959 Supp (1) SCR 464: 1959 Cri LJ 527, 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1958]

[10803] — S. 498 — "Detains" — Scope and meaning of — Willingness of wife is immaterial — Person responsible for wife's willingness is deemed to have detained her

The word "detains" may denote detention of a person against his or her will; but in the context of the section it is impossible to give this meaning to the said word. If the object of the section had been to protect the wife such a construction would obviously have been appropriate; but, since the object of the section is to protect the rights of the husband, it cannot be any defence to the charge to say that, though the husband has been deprived of his rights, the wife is willing to injure the said rights and so the person who is responsible for her willingness has not detained her. Detention in the context must mean keeping back a wife from her husband or any other person having the care of her on behalf of her husband with the requisite intention. Such keeping back may be by force; but it need not be by force. It can be the result of persuasion, allurement or blandishments which may either have caused the willingness of the woman, or may have encouraged, or cooperated with, her initial inclination, to leave her husband. If the willingness of the wife is immaterial and it cannot be a defence in cases falling under the first three categories mentioned in S. 498, it cannot be treated as material factor in dealing with the last category of case of detention mentioned in the said section. Alamgir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 436: 1959 Supp (1) SCR 464: 1959 Cri LJ 527, 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1958]

In re Sundara Das Tevan, 4 Mad HCR 20; Ramaswamy Udayar v. Raju Udayar, AIR 1953 Mad 333; Emperor v. Mahiji Fula, ILR 58 Bom 88: AIR 1933 Bom 489; Emperor v. Ramnarayan Baburao, 39 Bom LR 61: AIR 1937 Bom186; Ballabhdas Moti Ram Gupta v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Bom 178; Prithi Misir v. Harak Nath Singh, ILR (1937) 1 Cal 166: AIR 1936 Cal 450; Bipad Bhanjan Sarkar v. Emperor, AIR 1940 Cal 477: ILR (1940) 2 Cal 93; Banarsi Raut v. Emperor, AIR 1938 Pat 432; Bansi Lal v. Crown, 319 Pun LR 1913, approved

Mobarakshaikh v. Ahmad Nawaz, 48 Cal WN 980; Harnam Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Lah 295: 40 Cri LJ 760, overruled

AIR 1957 Pat 285, affirmed

[10804] — S. 498 — Not established that the accused prevented or obstructed the wife from accompanying her husband or going to his house — It was the wife who refused — Nor shown that enticement was for purposes of illicit intercourse — Offence, therefore, on facts not established. Adikanda Samal v. Madhabananda Nayak, (1979) 4 SCC 488: 1980 SCC (Cri) 108: AIR 1980 SC 1729.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-1979]

[10805] — S. 498 — Policy underlying

The policy underlying the provisions of S. 498 may no doubt sound inconsistent with the modern notions of the status of women and of the mutual rights and obligations under marriage. That, however, is a question of policy with which courts are not concerned. Alamgir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 436: 1959 Supp (1) SCR 464: 1959 Cri LJ 527, 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1958]

[10806] — S. 498 — Sentence — Sessions Judge imposing a sentence of 2 months' S. I. — High Court enhancing it to 6 months' R. I. — Interference by High Court was not justified — Sessions Judge's order restored

It is true that, in enhancing the sentence, the High Court has observed that "women in this country, whether chaste or unchaste, must be protected and that it is the duty of the Court to see that they are given sufficient protection". The consideration set out in this observation is really not very helpful and not decisive because, S. 498 does not purport to protect the rights of women but it safeguards the rights of husbands. Besides, in the present case, it is clear that the woman is of loose moral character, was dissatisfied with the complainant, who is her second husband, and was willing to marry Appellant 1. In such a case, though Appellant 1 is guilty under S. 498, it is difficult to accept the view of the High Court that the sentence of two months' simple imprisonment imposed on him by the trial Court was so unduly or manifestly lenient as not to meet the ends of justice. It would not be right for the appellate Court to interfere with the order of sentence passed by the trial Court merely on the ground that if it had tried the case it would have imposed a slightly higher or heavier sentence. Alamgir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 436: 1959 Supp (1) SCR 464: 1959 Cri LJ 527, 533.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1958]

AIR 1957 Pat 285, reversed on a point

[10807] — S. 498 — Wife found in the house of accused — Accused telling the complainant that he had married her and refusing to let her go with husband — Wife dissatisfied with the husband and going to live with accused willingly — Accused is guilty under S. 498

It may be that the wife was dissatisfied with her husband and wanted voluntarily to leave her husband; but, on the evidence, it has been held that she must have been encouraged or induced not to go back to her husband because she knew that she would find ready shelter and protection with the accused and she must have looked forward to marry him. In fact the accused claims to have married her. Thus there can be no doubt that he intended to have illicit sexual intercourse with her. Alamgir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 436: 1959 Supp (1) SCR 464: 1959 Cri LJ 527, 531, 532.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1958]

S. 498-A — CRUELTY BY HUSBAND OR HIS RELATIVES

Synopsis

(1) Generally — Object, Nature, Scope and Applicability 1135
(2) Ss. 498-A, 304-B & 306 — Relative scope 1136
(3) Abuse of S. 498-A 1140
(4) Ingredients of S. 498-A 1144
  (i) Broadly 1144
  (ii) Husband — Who is 1147
  (iii) Women protected under S. 498-A 1148
  (iv) Relative of husband — Who is 1148
  (v) Cruelty — Meaning of 1150
    1. Broadly 1150
    2. Wilful conduct likely to drive woman to commit suicide 1157
    3. Wilful conduct likely to cause grave injury or danger to health (mental or physical) of woman 1163
    4. Harassment to meet unlawful demand for property or valuable security — Dowry demand 1164
    5. Presumption under Ss. 113-A /113-B, Evidence Act 1167
(5) Implication of or relief to relative of husband 1170
(6) Trial, Proof and Other issues 1177
  (i) Generally 1178
  (ii) Acquittal justified 1180
  (iii) Appeal/Revision 1181
  (iv) Bail 1183
  (v) Circumstantial evidence 1185
  (vi) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation, Charge-sheet, etc. 1186
  (vii) Conviction justified 1188
  (viii) Dying declaration 1190
  (ix) FIR 1193
  (x) Jurisdiction 1193
  (xi) Limitation 1194
  (xii) Quashment 1196
  (xiii) Suicide note 1203
  (xiv) Transfer of case 1203
  (xv) Witnesses 1204
(7) Sentence/Fine/Compensation /Other punishment/relief 1205
(8) Other issues 1209

— S. 498-A See also Ss. 302 and 498-A
See also S. 302 r/w S. 34 or Ss. 306 and 498-A
See also Ss. 302/34 (and Ss. 304-B and 498-A)
See also Ss. 307, 324 and 498-A
See also Ss. 307 and 498-A
See also Ss. 323, 34, 387, 498-A and 506
See also Ss. 323, 406 and 498-A
See also Ss. 323, 506, 498-A, 307 and 504
See also Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A
See also Ss. 406, 498-A and 114
See also Ss. 406, 498-A r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 420 and 498-A
See also Ss. 494 and 498-A
See also Ss. 504, 498-A and 406
— S. 498-A [304-B] See also Ss. 302 and 498-A [304-B]
— Ss. 498-A/34 See also Ss. 84, 306/34 and 498-A/34
See also Ss. 302/34, 304-B/34, 498-A/34 and 201/34 and 498-A
See also Ss. 306/34 and 498-A/34

(1) Generally — Object, Nature, Scope and Applicability

See also under Ss. 304-B and 306, above

[10808] — S. 498-A — Object of — Held, is to combat the menace of dowry death and cruelty (Para 10). Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473: AIR 2005 SC 3100: 2005 Cri LJ 3439.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-7-2005]

[10809] — S. 498-A — Object of — Restated (Para 17). Noorjahan v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 55: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 915: AIR 2008 SC 2131: (2008) 66 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2008]

[10810] — S. 498-A — Object of, restated

The object of introducing Chapter XX-A in IPC was to prevent torture to a woman by her husband or by relatives of her husband. Section 498-A was added with a view to punishing a husband and his relatives who harass or torture the wife to coerce her or her relatives to satisfy unlawful demands of dowry. A hypertechnical view would be counterproductive and would act against the interests of women and against the object for which this provision was added. There is every likelihood that non-exercise of inherent power by the High Court to quash the proceedings to meet the ends of justice would prevent women from settling earlier. That is not the object of Chapter XX-A of IPC. (Para 14). B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848: AIR 2003 SC 1386: (2003) 2 KLT 1062: 2003 Cri LJ 2028.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2003]

[10811] — S. 498-A — Object reiterated — Caution indicated as the provision could be used as a device to achieve oblique motives

Section 498-A IPC was introduced with the avowed object to combat the menace of dowry deaths and harassment to a woman at the hands of her husband or his relatives. Nevertheless, the provision should not be used as a device to achieve oblique motives. (Para 20). Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507: (2008) 62 AIC 155 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2007]

[10812] — S. 498-A — Applicability — Second wife — S. 498-A, held, is attracted even in case of allegation of cruelty to second wife — Therefore, quashment of proceeding under S. 498-A initiated by second wife, by High Court on that ground, set aside — Case restored to be further proceeded with — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 — Quashment — Second wife — S. 498-A IPC, held, is attracted even in case of allegation of cruelty to second wife

The High Court was not justified at all in quashing the proceedings initiated against the appellant under Section 498-A IPC on the ground that Respondent 2 was not "wife" within the meaning of Section 498-A IPC and was not entitled to maintain a complaint under the said provision. (Para 55)

Though challenge was not made by any of the two respondents to the finding recorded by the Single Judge that the complaint lodged by Respondent 2 for alleged commission of offence punishable under Section 498-A IPC is not maintainable because she is not a "wife", absence of challenge either by the State or by the original complainant should not persuade or prevent the Supreme Court from doing justice between the parties by restoring the complaint filed by Respondent 2 under Section 498-A IPC to the file of the Magistrate. (Para 62)

The conclusion arrived at by the High Court is such as to shake the conscience and sense of justice and therefore it is the duty of the Supreme Court to strike down the finding recorded with respect to the offence punishable under Section 498-A, irrespective of technicalities. The judgment of the High Court quashing the proceedings initiated by the Magistrate for commission of the offence punishable under Section 498-A is tainted with serious legal infirmities and is founded on a legal construction which is erroneous. (Para 63)

There may be several reasons due to which the State might not have challenged that part of the judgment of the Single Judge quashing the complaint filed by Respondent 2 under Section 498-A IPC. (Para 58)

So the technical plea that in the absence of an appeal by any of the respondents, quashing of proceedings with respect to the offence punishable under Section 498-A IPC, cannot be set aside, is hereby rejected. (Para 64). A. Subash Babu v. State of A.P., (2011) 7 SCC 616.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2011]

Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699, applied

Chandrakant Patil v. State, (1998) 3 SCC 38: 1998 SCC (Cri) 720, relied on

[10813] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Object behind enactment of said sections of the Penal Code and Evidence Act, explained — Husband — Who is — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 113-B

The absence of a definition of "husband" to specifically include such persons who contract marriages ostensibly and cohabit with such woman, in the purported exercise of their role and status as "husband" is no ground to exclude them from the purview of Section 304-B or 498-A IPC, viewed in the context of the very object and aim of the legislations introducing those provisions. (Para 18)

The essential ingredient constituting the offence of bigamy is the "marrying" again during the lifetime of husband or wife in contrast to the ingredients of Section 498-A which, among other things, envisage subjecting the woman concerned to cruelty. The thrust is mainly on "marrying" in Section 494 IPC as against subjecting of the woman to cruelty in Section 498-A. Likewise, the thrust of the offence under Section 304-B is also on "dowry death". Consequently, the evils sought to be curbed are distinct and separate from the persons committing the offending acts and there could be no impediment in law to liberally construe the words or expressions relating to the persons committing the offence so as to rope in not only those validly married but also anyone who has undergone some or other form of marriage and thereby assumed for himself the position of husband to live, cohabit and exercise authority as such husband over another woman. (Para 9). Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699: AIR 2004 SC 1418: 2004 Cri LJ 892: (2004) 2 KLT 822.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2004]

Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182, impliedly distinguished

Vungarala Yedukondalu v. State of A.P., 1988 Cri LJ 1538: (1988) 1 An LT 1 (AP); State of Karnataka v. Shivaraj, 2002 Cri LJ 2741 (Kant), approved

Heydon's case, (1584) 3 Co Rep 7a: 76 ER 637; Chief Justice of A.P. v. L.V.A. Dixitulu, (1979) 2 SCC 34: 1979 SCC (L&S) 99; Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711; District Mining Officer v. Tata Iron & Steel Co., (2001) 7 SCC 358; Reserve Bank of India v. Peerless General Finance and Investment Co. Ltd., (1987) 1 SCC 424; Seaford Court Estates Ltd. v. Asher, (1949) 2 All ER 155 (CA), relied on

Ramnarayan v. State of M.P., (1998) 3 Crimes 147 (MP), overruled

Bengal Immunity Co. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 661; Goodyear India Ltd. v. State of Haryana, (1990) 2 SCC 71: 1990 SCC (Tax) 223; Parayankandiyal Eravath Kanapravan Kalliani Amma v. K. Devi, (1996) 4 SCC 76: AIR 1996 SC 1963; Ameer Trading Corpn. Ltd. v. Shapoorji Data Processing Ltd., (2004) 1 SCC 702, followed

Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1564: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 544; Surjit Kaur v. Garja Singh, (1994) 1 SCC 407: 1994 SCC (Cri) 259, explained and distinguished

[10814] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B and Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 113-A and 113-B — Object and purpose of introducing these amendments

The degradation of society due to the pernicious system of dowry and the unconscionable demands made by greedy and unscrupulous husbands and their parents and relatives resulting in an alarming number of suicidal and dowry deaths by women has shocked the legislative conscience to such an extent that the legislature has deemed it necessary to provide additional provisions of law, procedural as well as substantive, to combat the evil and has consequently introduced Ss. 113-A and 113-B in the Evidence Act and Ss. 498-A and 304-B in the Penal Code. Brij Lal v. Prem Chand, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 680: AIR 1989 SC 1661.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1989]

(2) Ss. 498-A, 304-B & 306 — Relative scope

See also under Ss. 304-B and 306, above

[10815] — Ss. 498-A, 302/34 and 304-B — Death of housewife by burning — Charge of murder against parents-in-law of the deceased not established — Evidence on record showing that parents-in-law of the deceased subjected her to cruelty leading to the inference that she committed self-immolation unable to bear the cruelty of her in-laws any more — Circumstances probabilising the defence version that the deceased committed self-immolation — There being no allegation of harassment on account of demand of dowry S. 304-B would not apply — In the circumstances of the case, conviction of the appellants altered from Ss. 302/34 to S. 498-A and sentence reduced to the period already undergone. Kanchy Komuramma v. State of A.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 118: 1996 SCC (Cri) 31.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1994]

[10816] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Object behind enactment of said sections of the Penal Code and Evidence Act, explained — Husband — Who is — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 113-B

The absence of a definition of "husband" to specifically include such persons who contract marriages ostensibly and cohabit with such woman, in the purported exercise of their role and status as "husband" is no ground to exclude them from the purview of Section 304-B or 498-A IPC, viewed in the context of the very object and aim of the legislations introducing those provisions. (Para 18)

The essential ingredient constituting the offence of bigamy is the "marrying" again during the lifetime of husband or wife in contrast to the ingredients of Section 498-A which, among other things, envisage subjecting the woman concerned to cruelty. The thrust is mainly on "marrying" in Section 494 IPC as against subjecting of the woman to cruelty in Section 498-Aa. Likewise, the thrust of the offence under Section 304-B is also on "dowry death". Consequently, the evils sought to be curbed are distinct and separate from the persons committing the offending acts and there could be no impediment in law to liberally construe the words or expressions relating to the persons committing the offence so as to rope in not only those validly married but also anyone who has undergone some or other form of marriage and thereby assumed for himself the position of husband to live, cohabit and exercise authority as such husband over another woman. (Para 9). Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699: AIR 2004 SC 1418: 2004 Cri LJ 892: (2004) 2 KLT 822.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2004]

Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182, impliedly distinguished

Vungarala Yedukondalu v. State of A.P., 1988 Cri LJ 1538: (1988) 1 An LT 1 (AP); State of Karnataka v. Shivaraj, 2002 Cri LJ 2741 (Kant), approved

Heydon's case, (1584) 3 Co Rep 7a: 76 ER 637; Chief Justice of A.P. v. L.V.A. Dixitulu, (1979) 2 SCC 34: 1979 SCC (L&S) 99; Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711; District Mining Officer v. Tata Iron & Steel Co., (2001) 7 SCC 358; Reserve Bank of India v. Peerless General Finance and Investment Co. Ltd., (1987) 1 SCC 424; Seaford Court Estates Ltd. v. Asher, (1949) 2 All ER 155 (CA), relied on

Ramnarayan v. State of M.P., (1998) 3 Crimes 147 (MP), overruled

Bengal Immunity Co. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 661; Goodyear India Ltd. v. State of Haryana, (1990) 2 SCC 71: 1990 SCC (Tax) 223; Parayankandiyal Eravath Kanapravan Kalliani Amma v. K. Devi, (1996) 4 SCC 76: AIR 1996 SC 1963; Ameer Trading Corpn. Ltd. v. Shapoorji Data Processing Ltd., (2004) 1 SCC 702, followed

Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1564: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 544; Surjit Kaur v. Garja Singh, (1994) 1 SCC 407: 1994 SCC (Cri) 259, explained and distinguished

[10817] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Accused charged under S. 304-B only — Conviction under S. 498-A where no case made out under S. 304-B — Comparison between Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical, of the woman, held, required to be established for the applicability of S. 498-A — Ss. 498-A and 304-B, held, deal with two distinct offences — Meaning of "cruelty" or harassment" under S. 304-B, held, is same as prescribed in Expln. to S. 498-A — A person charged and acquitted under S. 304-B, held, can be convicted under S. 498-A without that charge being there, if such a case is made out — On a case being established there can be conviction under both the sections

Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical, of the woman are required to be established in order to bring home the application of Section 498-A IPC. Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC cannot be held to be mutually inclusive. These provisions deal with two distinct offences. It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the sections and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Section 498-A gives the meaning of "cruelty". In Section 304-B there is no such explanation about the meaning of "cruelty". But having regard to the common background to these offences, it has to be taken that the meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Section 498-A under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence. Under Section 304-B it is "dowry death" that is punishable and such death should have occurred within seven years of marriage. No such period is mentioned in Section 498-A. A person charged and acquitted under Section 304-B can be convicted under Section 498-A without that charge being there, if such a case is made out. If the case is established, there can be a conviction under both the sections. (Para 7). Kaliyaperumal v. State of T.N., (2004) 9 SCC 157: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1417: AIR 2003 SC 3828: 2003 Cri LJ 4321.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2003]

Akula Ravinder v. State of A.P., 1991 Supp (2) SCC 99: 1991 SCC (Cri) 990, relied on [10818] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Allegations relating to offence under S. 498-A IPC could not be established by prosecution — As regards offence under S. 304-B IPC, in absence of any evidence to suggest that soon before the occurrence, deceased was subjected to torture and harassment, conviction thereunder as recorded by trial court also cannot be sustained — Order of acquittal by High Court, being based on evidence on record and on proper appreciation of evidence, held, proper — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 378 and 386. State of Orissa v. Niranjan Mohapatra, (2005) 9 SCC 578: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1251: AIR 2005 SC 970: 2005 Cri LJ 1427.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-2005]

[10819] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Applicability of S. 498-A — Comparison between S. 498-A and S. 304-B — Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman, held, required to be established for the applicability of S. 498-A — Ss. 304-B and 498-A, held, deal with two distinct offences — Meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" under S. 304-B, held, is same as prescribed in Expln. to S. 498-A — A person charged and acquitted under S. 304-B, held, can be convicted under S. 498-A without that charge being there, if such a case is made out — On a case being established there can be conviction under both the sections

Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established in order to bring home the application of Section 498-A IPC. Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC cannot be held to be mutually inclusive. These provisions deal with two distinct offences. It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the sections and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Section 498-A gives the meaning of "cruelty". In Section 304-B there is no such explanation about the meaning of "cruelty". But having regard to the common background of these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Section 498-A under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence. Under Section 304-B it is "dowry death" that is punishable and such death should have occurred within seven years of marriage. No such period is mentioned in Section 498-A. A person charged and acquitted under Section 304-B can be convicted under Section 498-A without that charge being there, if such a case is made out. If the case is established, there can be a conviction under both the sections. (Para 11). Hira Lal v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2003) 8 SCC 80: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2016: AIR 2003 SC 2865: (2003) 105 DLT 705: 2003 Cri LJ 3711.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2003]

Akula Ravinder v. State of A.P., 1991 Supp (2) SCC 99: 1991 SCC (Cri) 990, relied on [10820] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Comparison between these sections — Held, Ss. 304-B and 498-A deal with two distinct offences — Meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" under S. 304-B is same as prescribed in Expln. to S. 498-A (Para 9). Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473: AIR 2005 SC 3100: 2005 Cri LJ 3439.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-7-2005]

[10821] — Ss. 498-A & 304-B — Distinction between — The two provisions are not mutually exclusive — They deal with different and distinct offences — Person charged and acquitted under S. 304-B can be convicted under S. 498-A even in absence of any charge

Sections 304-B and 498-A are not mutually exclusive. They deal with different and distinct offences. In both the sections, "cruelty" is a common element. Under Section 498-A, however, cruelty by itself amounts to an offence and is punishable. Under Section 304-B, it is the dowry death that is punishable and such death must have occurred within seven years of the marriage. No such period is mentioned in Section 498-A. Moreover, a person charged and acquitted under Section 304-B can be convicted under Section 498-A without a specific charge being there, if such a case is made out. (Para 29). Arun Garg v. State of Punjab, (2004) 8 SCC 251: (2004) 3 KLT 435.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2004]

[10822] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Charge under S. 498-A is maintainable even if accused is acquitted under S. 306

Charges under Sections 306 and 498-A of the Indian Penal Code are independent of each other and acquittal of one does not lead to acquittal on the other. But in order to justify a conviction under Section 498-A there must be available on record some material and cogent evidence. (Para 17). Girdhar Shankar Tawade v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 5 SCC 177: 2002 SCC (Cri) 971: AIR 2002 SC 2078: 2002 Cri LJ 2814: (2002) 4 MPLJ 5: (2002) 4 Mah LJ 5.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2002]

[10823] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Conviction for abetment of suicide and cruelty — Sustain-ability — Letters purportedly written by appellant-accused clearly establishing commission of offences punishable under S. 498-A IPC and S. 3, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — However, considering principles laid down by Supreme Court in its various decisions to sustain conviction under S. 306, held on facts, allegations pertaining to S. 306 not made out — Hence, appellant liable to be convicted under S. 498-A and S. 3, DP Act — While maintaining sentence of 10 years imposed under S. 498-A, sentence in respect of offence under S. 3, DP Act, reduced to 3 years from 5 years — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 7 (Paras 2 and 12 to 14). Kishangiri Mangalgiri Goswami v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 4 SCC 52: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 62: AIR 2009 SC 1808: 2009 Cri LJ 1720: (2009) 2 Guj LR 1074.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2009]

Mahendra Singh v. State of M.P., 1995 Supp (3) SCC 731: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1157, considered and relied on

Kishori Lal v. State of M.P., (2007) 10 SCC 797: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 701; Randhir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 13 SCC 129: 2005 SCC (Cri) 56; Sohan Raj Sharma v. State of Haryana, (2008) 11 SCC 215: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 387, relied on

[10824] — Ss. 498-A and 306 & 107 — Case of cruelty and abetment of suicide — Conviction under S. 306 reversed — Upheld under S. 498-A — Deceased (wife of appellant-accused) objected to extra-marital relationship of appellant with a woman A — Appellant sought permission of deceased to marry A, which was refused by deceased — Consequently, he started torturing deceased both physically and mentally — Allegations that deceased was provoked by appellant to end her life by consuming poison or by hanging herself — Case that three months prior to death of deceased, appellant brought A to his house — That, in the evening prior to date of death of deceased, deceased was assaulted by A, appellant and his family members — On next morning, deceased found hanging in appellant's house — High Court upholding appellant's conviction under aforementioned sections — Sustainability — Held, no direct evidence to show that appellant by his acts instigated or provoked deceased to commit suicide — No act done by him which could be said to have facilitated commission of suicide by deceased — However, fact that cruelty was meted out to deceased, sufficiently proved from evidence on record — Accordingly, conviction of appellant under S. 306 set aside, but his conviction under S. 498-A upheld

The prosecution heavily relied on clause Thirdly of Section 107 IPC because, according to the prosecution, the appellant-accused by way of harassment and torturing the deceased (appellant's wife) at various points of time and by marrying A (woman with whom appellant had extra-marital relationship) for the second time without the permission and against the will of the deceased, intentionally aided the commission of suicide by the deceased. In support of the aforesaid contention, the prosecution relied upon Explanation 2 to Section 107 IPC. The prosecution submitted that prior to the commission of suicide by the deceased, the appellant had, by bringing said A as his second wife to his house, facilitated the commission of suicide by the deceased and thus, the appellant intentionally aided the commission of suicide by the deceased. The evidence on record, however, does not support such a case. (Paras 18 and 19)

It is pertinent to note that the appellant had brought A to stay with him at his house three months prior to the date of the death of the deceased. If the deceased had been so perturbed by the act of the appellant in marrying the said A and in bringing her to his house that she felt impelled to commit suicide, then she could have done so on the very day when A had come to stay with the appellant in his house, as naturally at that point of time her annoyance or dismay with life would have been at its pinnacle. From the period of three months which elapsed in between the incidents of the appellant bringing A to his house and the deceased committing suicide, it can be clearly inferred that it was not the act of the appellant which instigated or provoked the deceased to commit suicide. (Para 20)

The perpetration of physical torture on the deceased on the day prior to the date of the incident which led the deceased to commit suicide is the prosecution case all throughout. It is nowhere the case of the prosecution that the appellant had played any active role either in instigating or aiding the commission of suicide by the deceased for denying to accept A as the wife of the appellant. A, the second wife of the appellant was brought by the appellant to his house about three months prior to the date of the incident of suicide by the deceased and therefore, bringing of the second wife to the house by the appellant cannot be said to have either incited or facilitated the commission of suicide by the deceased. It is also not the case of the prosecution as disclosed from the evidence led. The aforesaid contention is far-fetched and is not established by the facts of the present case. (Para 21)

There is no direct evidence to show that the appellant had by his acts instigated or provoked the deceased to commit suicide and has not done any act which could be said to have facilitated the commission of suicide by the deceased. (Para 22)

Regarding whether a case under Section 498-A IPC is made out against the appellant or not, the prosecution witnesses have in their testimonies stated that the deceased was tortured both physically and mentally by the appellant for the first time after his marriage with the deceased when he was refused permission for marriage with said A by the deceased. On having been refused the permission for his second marriage with A, the appellant again, after a few days requested the deceased to accede to his request for marriage with A, which request was again refused by the deceased. Consequent to the said position and due to the adamant position taken by the deceased, cruelty was meted out to her by the accused, which fact is sufficiently proved from the evidence on record. Therefore, there is no reason to take a different view than what has been taken by the trial court and the High Court as far as Section 498-A IPC is concerned. (Paras 23 and 24)

Accordingly, the conviction of the appellant under Section 306 IPC is set aside but the conviction of the appellant under Section 498-A IPC is upheld. (Para 25). Amalendu Pal v. State of W.B., (2010) 1 SCC 707.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2009]

Girdhar Shankar Tawade v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 5 SCC 177: 2002 SCC (Cri) 971, relied on [10825] — Ss. 498-A, 306 and 304-B — Death of a young wife by consuming aluminium phosphate — Evidence of brother of the deceased that the deceased was subjected to humiliation and mental torture on account of demand of dowry — Absence of sufficient evidence to establish charge under Ss. 306 and 304-B — Hence conviction under those sections set aside — However, there being direct and convincing evidence that the deceased had been humiliated and treated with cruelty on some occasion by the appellant and his mother who died before the trial, conviction of the appellant under S. 498-A upheld. Satpal v. State of Haryana, (1998) 5 SCC 687: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1372: AIR 1999 SC 1476.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1998]

[10826] — Ss. 498-A and 306/304-B r/w S. 34 — Acquittal confirmed — Respondent R, with his father and mother acquitted by trial court from charges under Ss. 306/ 304-B r/w S. 34, while only accused R convicted under S. 498-A — Appeal against acquittal dismissed by High Court in limine — In Supreme Court, acquittal from offence under S. 306 only challenged on grounds that trial Judge had not considered the ingredients of S. 113-A of Evidence Act, 1872 and further he had not given any reason as to why he had acquitted the accused persons under S. 306 IPC particularly when he had convicted Accused 1 for offence under S. 498-A of Penal Code — Held, reasoning of trial Judge that no demand of dowry proved as also no case of abetment to commit suicide is made out, was correct — High Court's approach to dismiss appeal in limine without assigning reasons, however disapproved — CrPC, 1973, S. 378 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The Additional Sessions Judge had given good reasons as to why the presumption would not arise under Section 113-A, Evidence Act. The Additional Sessions Judge has recorded the finding that there was no material to prove that there was any demand of dowry made by the husband or by the father-in-law or by the mother-in-law. The Additional Sessions Judge has also further found that there was no material on record to prove that there was any cruelty meted out to the deceased to commit suicide. (Para 9)

The High Court had not given reasons and had chosen to dismiss the said appeal in limine refusing the leave to file appeal against the acquittal. The course adopted by the High Court cannot be appreciated. Ordinarily, the High Court should have given good reasons even before refusing the leave to file an appeal against the acquittal. That is the established law now. However, sending back the matter again to the High Court would be hazardous as about ten years have elapsed since the death of the deceased. (Para 10)

After overall consideration, the Additional Sessions Judge was correct in acquitting the respondent-accused under Section 306 IPC and the High Court was also correct to refuse the State to file an appeal against the acquittal although the High Court should have given reasons. (Para 11). State of Punjab v. Rajwinder Singh, (2009) 16 SCC 778: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1008.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-5-2009]

(3) Abuse of S. 498-A

See also under S. 482, CrPC, 1973 '(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes', pp. 485 et seq. in Vol. 18, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 2 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[10827] — S. 498-A — Abuse and misuse of — Measures to be taken for prevention of — Duty of courts and investigating agency — Held, legislature to find out ways how the makers of frivolous complaints or allegations can be appropriately dealt with — Till then the courts have to take care of the situation within the existing framework — There is no question of the investigating agency and courts casually dealing with the allegations — There is no scope for any preconceived notion or view — Ultimate objective of legal system is to arrive at the truth, punish the guilty and protect the innocent — Investigating agencies and courts to see that an innocent person is not made to suffer on account of unfounded, baseless and malicious allegations — While dealing with cases based on circumstantial evidence, the law laid down relating to circumstantial evidence has to be kept in view — Constitution of India, Art. 32

The object of Section 498-A IPC is to strike at the roots of dowry menace. But by misuse of the said provision a new legal terrorism can be unleashed. The provision is intended to be used as a shield and not as an assassin's weapon. If the cry of "wolf" is made too often as a prank, assistance and protection may not be available when the actual "wolf" appears. Many instances have come to light where the complaints are not bona fide and have been filed with oblique motive. In such cases acquittal of the accused does not in all cases wipe out the ignominy suffered during and prior to trial. Sometimes adverse media coverage adds to the misery. The question, therefore, is what remedial measures can be taken to prevent abuse of the well-intentioned provision. Merely because the provision is constitutional and intra vires, does not give a licence to unscrupulous persons to wreak personal vendetta or unleash harassment. It may, therefore, become necessary for the legislature to find out ways how the makers of frivolous complaints or allegations can be appropriately dealt with. Till then the courts have to take care of the situation within the existing framework. (Para 19)

It is argued that the investigating agencies and the courts start with the presumptions that the accused persons are guilty and that the complainant is speaking the truth. This is too wide and generalised a statement. Certain statutory presumptions are drawn which again are rebuttable. There is no question of the investigating agency and courts casually dealing with the allegations. They cannot follow any straitjacket formula in the matters relating to dowry tortures, deaths and cruelty. It cannot be lost sight of that the ultimate objective of every legal system is to arrive at the truth, punish the guilty and protect the innocent. There is no scope for any preconceived notion or view. The role of the investigating agencies and the courts is that of a watchdog and not of a bloodhound. It should be their effort to see that an innocent person is not made to suffer on account of unfounded, baseless and malicious allegations. It is equally undisputable that in many cases no direct evidence is available and the courts have to act on circumstantial evidence. While dealing with such cases, the law laid down relating to circumstantial evidence has to be kept in view. (Para 19). Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473: AIR 2005 SC 3100: 2005 Cri LJ 3439.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-7-2005]

[10828] — S. 498-A — Ingredients/prerequisites for presumption of offence under — Whether made out at stage of framing of charge against in-laws — No allegation of wilful conduct of harassment by Appellants 1 and 2 (in-laws) — Allegation that A-3 (husband) wanting the complainant wife to beg apology from, talk with and obey her in-laws as a condition to return back to her conjugal life — Admittedly after 3-7-1994 complainant had never lived with A-1 and A-2 — Complainant alleging dowry demand in her complaint dated 4-4-1995 — The allegation of misbehaviour on the part to A-1 and A-2 and demand of dowry by them, held, was an afterthought and not bona fide — Hence charges quashed against A-1 and A-2 — However, trial directed to continue against A-3 under S. 498-A

Section 498-A IPC was introduced with the avowed object to combat the menace of dowry deaths and harassment to a woman at the hands of her husband or his relatives. Nevertheless, the provision should not be used as a device to achieve oblique motives. (Para 20)

In the complaint dated 8-11-1994 there was not even a whisper of a wilful conduct of Appellants 1 and 2 of harassment of the complainant at their hands with a view to coercing her to meet any unlawful demand by them so as to attract the provisions of Section 498-A read with Explanation thereto. The complaint referred to the talk the complainant purports to have had with her husband, Appellant 3, who is alleged to have told her to come to Bijnore; and if she apologised to his father, kept him happy, obeyed his sister and talked to her father (the complainant's) to give her Rs 50,000 and VCR and bring these articles to Bijnore. The allegation of misbehaviour on the part of Appellants 1 and 2 and the demand of Rs 50,000 and VCR by them made by the complainant in her subsequent statement, dated 4-4-1995, was an afterthought and not bona fide. (Paras 19 to 20 and 9). Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507: (2008) 62 AIC 155 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2007]

[10829] — S. 498-A — Prosecution under — Need for restraint — Duty of Bar and Bench — Social responsibility and obligation to maintain social fibre of family life — Genuine cases of dowry harassment matter of serious concern but exaggerated version of small incidents should not be reflected in the criminal complaints — Allegations to be scrutinised with great care and circumspection, especially against husband's relatives who were living in different cities and never visited or rarely visited the matrimonial home of the complainant — Need for serious relook at entire provision by Parliament recommended

It is a matter of common knowledge that unfortunately matrimonial litigation is rapidly increasing in our country. All the courts in our country including the Supreme Court are flooded with matrimonial cases. This clearly demonstrates discontent and unrest in the family life of a large number of people of society. It is a matter of common experience that most of these complaints under Section 498-A IPC are filed in the heat of the moment over trivial issues without proper deliberations. It is seen that a large number of such complaints are not even bona fide and are filed with oblique motive. At the same time, rapid increase in the number of genuine cases of dowry harassment is also a matter of serious concern. (Paras 30 and 32)

The learned members of the Bar have enormous social responsibility and obligation to ensure that the social fibre of family life is not ruined or demolished. They must ensure that exaggerated versions of small incidents should not be reflected in the criminal complaints. Majority of the complaints are filed either on the advice or with concurrence of the learned members of the Bar who belong to a noble profession and must maintain its noble traditions and should treat every complaint under Section 498-A as a basic human problem and must make serious endeavour to help the parties in arriving at an amicable resolution of that human problem. They must discharge their duties to the best of their abilities to ensure that social fibre, peace and tranquillity of society remains intact. The members of the Bar should also ensure that one complaint should not lead to multiple cases. (Para 33)

Unfortunately, at the time of filing of the complaint the implications and consequences are not properly visualised by the complainant that such complaint can lead to insurmountable harassment, agony and pain to the complainant, accused and his close relations. (Para 34)

The ultimate object of justice is to find out the truth and punish the guilty and protect the innocent. To find out the truth is a Herculean task in a majority of these complaints. The tendency of implicating the husband and all his immediate relations is also not uncommon. At times, even after the conclusion of the criminal trial, it is difficult to ascertain the real truth. The courts have to be extremely careful and cautious in dealing with these complaints and must take pragmatic realities into consideration while dealing with matrimonial cases. (Para 35)

The allegations of harassment by the husband's close relations who had been living in different cities and never visited or rarely visited the place where the complainant wife resided would have an entirely different complexion. Such allegations of the complainant are required to be scrutinised with great care and circumspection. (Para 35)

Experience reveals that long and protracted criminal trials lead to rancour, acrimony and bitterness in the relationship amongst the parties. It is also a matter of common knowledge that in cases filed by the complainant if the husband or the husband's relations had to remain in jail even for a few days, it would ruin the chances of an amicable settlement altogether. The process of suffering is extremely long and painful. (Para 36)

A serious relook at Section 498-A is warranted by the legislature. It is also a matter of common knowledge that exaggerated versions of the incident are reflected in a large number of complaints. The tendency of over implication is also reflected in a very large number of cases. The criminal trials lead to immense sufferings for all concerned. Even ultimate acquittal in the trial may also not be able to wipe out the deep scars of suffering of ignominy. Unfortunately a large number of these complaints have not only flooded the courts but also have led to enormous social unrest affecting peace, harmony and happiness of the society. It is high time that the legislature must take into consideration the pragmatic realities and make suitable changes in the existing law. It is imperative for the legislature to take into consideration the informed public opinion and the pragmatic realities in consideration and make necessary changes in the relevant provisions of law. (Para 37)

A copy of this judgment is directed to be sent to the Law Commission and to the Union Law Secretary, Government of India who may place it before the Hon'ble Minister for Law and Justice to take appropriate steps in the larger interests of society. (Para 38). Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 7 SCC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and K.S. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2010]

[10830] — S. 498-A — Quashing of proceedings by High Court — Allegation of mala fides against informant — Effect of — Allegations of cruelty, dowry demand by appellant wife — On facts, held, allegation of mala fides against informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 10, 9 and 6)

The appellant wife, married Respondent 3, R on 1-7-1998, alleging mental and physical torture for dowry demands made a complaint alleging commission of offences punishable under Section 498-A IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (the Act). The police registered an FIR. In the suit for divorce filed by the husband, Family Court directed maintenance at the rate of Rs 2000 p.m. and the cost of litigation to be paid to the appellant. The appellant's father-in-law filed Miscellaneous Case No. 12 of 2001 questioning correctness of the maintenance order on the ground that the appellant's husband has no share in the ancestral property and maintenance cannot be paid out of it. Charge-sheet was filed on 12-8-2000. An application for discharge in terms of Section 239 CrPC was filed on 28-8-2001. The prayer was rejected on 7-9-2001 by SDJM. The Sessions Judge dismissed the revision application of the respondents. However, by the impugned order, the High Court quashed the proceedings initiated against Respondents 1 to 7, in purported exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Renu Kumari v. Sanjay Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 346.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, distinguished

[10831] — S. 498-A — Validity of — Challenge made to, on ground of its misuse and abuse against accused — Held, was not sustainable — Said provision is legal/constitutional — If a provision of law is misused and subjected to abuse of process of law, it is for the legislature to amend, modify or repeal it, if deemed necessary

By a petition under Article 32 of the Constitution prayer was made to declare Section 498-A IPC to be unconstitutional and ultra vires, or in the alternative to formulate guidelines so that innocent persons are not victimised by unscrupulous persons making false accusations. Further prayer was made that whenever, any court comes to the conclusion that the allegations made regarding commission of offence under Section 498-A IPC are unfounded, stringent action should be taken against the person making the allegations. This, according to the petitioner, would discourage persons from coming to courts with unclean hands and ulterior motives.

Held :

There is no substance in the plea that Section 498-A IPC has no legal or constitutional foundation. (Para 18)

Mere possibility of abuse of a provision of law does not per se invalidate a legislation. It must be presumed, unless the contrary is proved, that administration and application of a particular law would be done "not with an evil eye and unequal hand". Therefore, if a statutory provision is otherwise intra vires, constitutional and valid, mere possibility of abuse of power in a given case would not make it objectionable, ultra vires or unconstitutional. In such cases, "action" and not the "section" may be vulnerable. If it is so, the court by upholding the provision of law, may still set aside the action, order or decision and grant appropriate relief to the person aggrieved. (Paras 12 and 14)

While interpreting a provision, the court only interprets the law and cannot legislate it. If a provision of law is misused and subjected to the abuse of the process of law, it is for the legislature to amend, modify or repeal it, if deemed necessary. (Para 16). Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473: AIR 2005 SC 3100: 2005 Cri LJ 3439.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-7-2005]

A. Thangal Kunju Musaliar v. M. Venkatichalam Potti, (1955) 2 SCR 1196: AIR 1956 SC 246; Budhan Choudhry v. State of Bihar, (1955) 1 SCR 1045: AIR 1955 SC 191: 1955 Cri LJ 374; Mafatlal Industries Ltd. v. Union of India, (1997) 5 SCC 536; Collector of Customs v. Nathella Sampathu Chetty, (1962) 3 SCR 786: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 364; State of Rajasthan v. Union of India, (1977) 3 SCC 592; Commr., H.R.E. v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar of Sri Shirur Mutt, 1954 SCR 1005: AIR 1954 SC 282, followed

Savitri Devi v. Ramesh Chand, CR No. 462 of 2002, held, disapproved

Maulavi Hussein Haji Abraham Umarji v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 6 SCC 672: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1815; Unique Butyle Tube Industries (P) Ltd. v. U.P. Financial Corpn., (2003) 2 SCC 455; Padma Sundara Rao v. State of T.N., (2002) 3 SCC 533, relied on

[10832] — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Abuse of — Apprehensions of father that mother of child would embroil him in prosecution under matrimonial and dowry laws — Role and power of court — Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, Ss. 7, 17 and 39

In the ordinary course the District Court ought to have made provision for visitation rights because even an interim order of custody in favour of one parent should not insulate the minor from the parental touch and influence of the other parent, which is so very important for the healthy growth of the minor and the development of his personality. It is noteworthy that even the respondent father did not claim such rights in his application or in the proceedings before the High Court. (Para 68)

Serious apprehensions about the safety of the father may not be entirely out of place i.e. fear of prosecution under Sections 498-A or 406 IPC or the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, but that does not mean that the courts below could not grant redress against the same. In fact an FIR in respect of such offences has rightly been quashed by the High Court, and which quashment has been upheld by the Supreme Court. (Paras 69 and 81)

For a boy so young in years, a deep-rooted dislike for the father could arise only because of a constant hammering of negative feeling in him against his father. This approach and attitude on the part of the appellant mother or her parents can hardly be appreciated. What the appellant mother ought to appreciate is that feeding the minor with such dislike for his father does not serve his interest or his growth as a normal child. (Para 72)

Telephonic contact and videoconferencing should not be prevented by the appellant. (Para 74)

The stated directions regarding visitation rights are subject to the condition that the respondent does not remove the child from the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court pending final disposal of the application for grant of custody by the Guardians and Wards Court, Delhi. Within the broad parameters of the directions regarding visitation rights of the respondent, the parties shall be free to seek further directions from the court seized of the guardianship proceedings, to take care of any difficulties that may arise in the actual implementation of this order. (Para 77). Ruchi Majoo v. Sanjeev Majoo, (2011) 6 SCC 479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision : 13-5-2011]

(4) Ingredients of S. 498-A

Synopsis

(i) Broadly 1144
(ii) Husband — Who is 1147
(iii) Women protected under S. 498-A 1148
(iv) Relative of husband — Who is 1148
(v) Cruelty — Meaning of 1150
  1. Broadly 1150
  2. Wilful conduct likely to drive woman to commit suicide 1157
  3. Wilful conduct likely to cause grave injury or danger to health (mental or physical) of woman 1163
  4. Harassment to meet unlawful demand for property or valuable security — Dowry demand 1164
  5. Presumption under Ss. 113-A /113-B, Evidence Act 1167

(i) Broadly

See also '(v)1. Cruelty — Meaning of — Broadly', below

[10833] — S. 498-A — Object of — Restated — Essential ingredients of offence under — Enumerated — Averments necessary — Held, for proving offence under S. 498-A IPC, complainant must make allegation of harassment to the extent so as to coerce her to meet any unlawful demand of dowry, or any wilful conduct on part of accused of such a nature as is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health — In present case, no such allegation had been made or otherwise could be found out so as to arrive at opinion that appellants prima facie committed such an offence. Bhaskar Lal Sharma v. Monica, (2009) 10 SCC 604: (2009) 161 DLT 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2009]

[10834] — S. 498-A — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 113-A — Both these provisions include in their amplitude past events of cruelty

Section 498-A IPC and Section 113-A of the Evidence Act include in their amplitude past events of cruelty. Period of operation of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act is seven years; presumption arises as to dowry death when a woman committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of marriage. (Para 11). Hira Lal v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2003) 8 SCC 80: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2016: AIR 2003 SC 2865: (2003) 105 DLT 705: 2003 Cri LJ 3711.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2003]

[10835] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Essential ingredient — To bring home the charge under S. 498-A, held, cruelty is the necessary ingredient which is needed to be proved. State of Maharashtra v. Ashok Narayan Dandalwar, (2000) 9 SCC 257: AIR 2000 SC 3568 (2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2000]

[10836] — S. 498-A — Ingredients of, re-enumerated (Paras 7 to 10). U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 36: 2009 Cri LJ 2974: (2009) 2 KLT 686.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[10837] — S. 498-A — S. 113-A, Evidence Act — Both the provisions include in their amplitude past events of cruelty — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

Section 498-A IPC and Section 113-A of the Evidence Act include in their amplitude past events of cruelty. The period of operation of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act is seven years; presumption arises as to dowry death when a woman committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of marriage. (Para 7). Kaliyaperumal v. State of T.N., (2004) 9 SCC 157: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1417: AIR 2003 SC 3828: 2003 Cri LJ 4321.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2003]

[10838] — Ss. 498-A, 406 and 34 — Applicability — Cruelty to married woman — Allegations of — Ingredients for presumption of offence under — Whether made out — Complaint filed by respondent against husband and his appellant parents — Summons and non-bailable warrants issued against appellants — High Court dismissing application for quashing summoning order — Appeal against — Held, allegations relating to place where marriage took place have nothing to do with offence under S. 498-A IPC — Allegations that A-2 (mother-in-law) kicked respondent and told her that her mother was a liar, may make out some other offence but not one punishable under S. 498-A — Allegations that A-2 poisoned ears of her son against respondent; she gave two used lady's suits of her daughter to complainant; giving perpetual sermons to complainant; threatening her son may be divorced for the second time, held, do not give rise to offences punishable under S. 498-A — No case made out under S. 498-A IPC — Hence, summoning order passed against appellants, except A-2 set aside as proceedings against her could continue under S. 406 IPC only — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 32, 36, 37, 40 and 61)

Respondent M married V, son of the appellants. V was a divorcee who had two children from his first wife. The marriage with the respondent took place on 16-1-2004. Shortly thereafter the relationship between the parties deteriorated. During this entire period including the period after she left her matrimonial home in June 2004, the parties communicated with each other through e-mails.

M filed a complaint under Sections 498-A, 406 and 34 IPC against her husband V and the appellants. An application for grant of maintenance was also filed claiming maintenance of a sum of Rs 2 lakhs per month as also an order of interim maintenance of Rs 2 lakhs per month till the disposal of the case. Her application for grant of interim maintenance was allowed by the Metropolitan Magistrate at the rate of Rs 5000 per month. Non-bailable warrants of arrest were also issued against the appellants as also V. The respondent filed a revision application before the High Court seeking increase in the maintenance. The High Court enhanced the interim maintenance to Rs 50,000 per month. Subsequently the appellants as also V filed an application for quashing the order directing issuance of non-bailable warrants against them. The High Court stayed the order issuing non-bailable warrants against the appellants with an undertaking that V and the appellants would appear before the Magistrate.

The appellants along with V also filed an application for quashing of the summoning order passed by the Magistrate summoning them for attending the trial court. The appellants and their son came to India; they appeared before the Magistrate; they were admitted to bail.

The High Court in criminal revision directed impounding of the passport of V stating that efforts were being made for reconciliation. Talks of reconciliation failed. The High Court modified the said finding stating that the marriage seems to have broken down irretrievably and directed return of the passport to V. Pursuant to the liberty granted by the High Court, the appellants as also V filed an application for permission to go abroad, which was allowed subject to the condition that additional bank guarantees be furnished of Rs 1 lakh for each of the applicants. M filed a criminal complaint under Section 420 IPC against the appellants and V inter alia alleging all material facts relating to the first marriage and divorce, and in particular the fact that the first wife of V in her divorce suit alleged acts of cruelty on the part of her husband had not been disclosed.

(4)(i) Broadly (contd.)

For one reason or the other the appellants having failed to attend the Court of the Metropolitan Magistrate, M filed an application for attachment of the ancestral property of Appellant 1. Interpol also was sounded. Orders were passed for attachment of the property in terms of Section 83 CrPC situated both at Delhi as also the ancestral house of Appellant 1 at Jaipur.

The High Court dismissed the application for quashing the summoning order filed by the appellants. The appellants had thus filed the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal in terms below, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

Parliament by Act 46 of 1983 with a view to combat the menace of dowry deaths and harassment of woman at the hands of her husband or his relatives introduced Section 498-A and Section 304-B in IPC.

Thus, the essential ingredients of Section 498-A are:

1. A woman must be married.

2. She must be subjected to cruelty.

3. Cruelty must be of the nature of:

(i) any wilful conduct as was likely to drive such woman:

(a) to commit suicide;

(b) cause grave injury or danger to her life, limb, either mental or physical;

(ii) harassment of such woman,

(1) with a view to coerce her to meet unlawful demand for property or valuable security,

(2) or on account of failure of such woman or by any of her relation to meet the unlawful demand;

(iii) woman was subjected to such cruelty by:

(1) husband of that woman, or

(2) any relative of the husband.

For constitution of an offence under Section 498-A IPC, therefore, the ingredients thereof must be held to be existing. (Paras 27 and 29)

For proving the offence under Section 498-A IPC, the complainant must make allegation of harassment to the extent so as to coerce her to meet any unlawful demand of dowry, or any wilful conduct on the part of the accused of such a nature as is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health. No such allegation has been made or otherwise can be found out so as to arrive at an opinion that the appellants prima facie have committed such an offence. The complaint petition must also be read with several other documents which form part of the complaint petition. The children from the first wife of V were with M. V affirmed an affidavit so as to enable M to apply for their passports. V, therefore, wanted to have children with them. (Paras 30 to 36)

Based on the e-mails exchanged between the couple and their parents it is evident that the couple had developed incompatibility in respect of various aspects of life including the one as to whether M did a favour to V by marrying him. They also include the children, her going out of the home without informing any senior member of the house, allegation of extramarital affairs against V; her taking of detergent powder evidently to commit suicide; they had been staying in separate rooms, differences in respect of carrying of business, her becoming hysterical at some point of time. V even thought that she had been trying to blackmail him by refusing to go back to India and threatening to commit suicide. The e-mails show allegations, counter-allegations and explanations by M in relation thereto. There are many more e-mails exchanged between the couple as also their parents. However, in none of them had any allegation with regard to cruelty or breach of trust been made. Such allegations are made for the first time in the complaint petition as also in the application for grant of maintenance. (Paras 32 and 36)

The correspondences exchanged between the spouses or by and between V and his in-laws do not disclose any allegation which would amount to criminal misconduct on the part of the appellants. (Para 55)

Ex facie no case has been made out under Section 498-A IPC so far as the appellants are concerned. The allegations relating to the place where the marriage took place have nothing to do with an offence under Section 498-A IPC. Allegations that Appellant 2 kicked the respondent with her leg and told her that her mother to be a liar may make out some other offence but not the one punishable under Section 498-A. Similarly her allegations that Appellant 2 poisoned the ears of her son against the respondent; she gave two used lady's suits of her daughter to the complainant and has been given perpetual sermons to the complainant could not be said to be offences punishable under Section 498-A. Even threatening that her son may be divorced for the second time could not make out the offence under Section 498-A IPC. (Paras 37 and 49)

The jurisdiction of the High Court to quash an order of summoning and/or a criminal proceeding as also the Supreme Court are well known. (Para 40)

Courts at all levels have made endeavours to bring about a settlement between the parties. The High Court in the earlier round of proceedings probably rightly observed that the marriage between M and V has irretrievably broken down. (Paras 49 and 60). Bhaskar Lal Sharma v. Monica, (2009) 10 SCC 604: (2009) 161 DLT 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2009]

Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Noorjahan v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 55: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 915; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297; Kailashi Bai v. Aarti Arya, (2009) 13 SCC 548; Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735; Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461, relied on

Mahila Vinod Kumari v. State of M.P., (2008) 8 SCC 34: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 414: (2008) 10 Scale 97, distinguished

(ii) Husband — Who is

[10839] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Applicability — Existence of valid marriage — Proof and necessity of — Expression "husband" — Meaning and scope of, in respect of said offences — Held, would cover a person who enters into marital relationship and under the colour of such proclaimed or feigned status of husband subjects the woman concerned to cruelty or coerces her in any manner or for any purposes enumerated in Ss. 304-B/498-A, whatever be the legitimacy of the marriage itself — Hence, husband contracting second marriage during subsistence of earlier marriage can be charged under Ss. 304-B and 498-A — Heydon's rule pressed into service — Purposive construction and mischief rule applied

Before the trial court the accused persons put the plea that charge under Section 498-A IPC was thoroughly misconceived as both Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC presuppose a valid marriage of the alleged victim woman with the offender husband. Thus, it was contended (i) that it was required to be shown that the victim woman (appellant) was the legally married wife of the accused (Respondent 1), (ii) that the appellant had married during the lifetime of the first wife of Respondent 1, and (iii) that since the prosecution had failed to establish that the earlier marriage was dissolved legally, Section 498-A had no application. The trial court held that in view of the legal position highlighted by the accused persons vis-à-vis Section 498-A, the charge in that regard was not established. Accordingly, the accused persons were acquitted. The High Court rejected the application for grant of leave filed by the State and the revision filed by the appellant, by cryptic orders.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant submitted that the expressions "husband" and "woman" appearing in Section 498-A IPC are to be read in a manner so as to give full effect to the purpose for which Section 498-A was brought into the statute. The restricted meaning as given by the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Ramnarayan case, (1998) 3 Crimes 147 (MP), does not reflect the correct position of law. On the other hand, contrary views expressed by the Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh High Courts reflect the correct view.

Holding that the High Court was not justified in summarily rejecting the application for grant of leave and remitting the matter back to the High Court for decision on merits,

Held :

The concept of "dowry" is intermittently linked with a marriage and the provisions of the Dowry Act apply in relation to marriages. (Para 18)

If the legality of the marriage itself is an issue, further legalistic problems do arise. If the validity of the marriage itself is under legal scrutiny, the demand of dowry in respect of an invalid marriage would be legally not recognizable. Even then the purpose for which Sections 498-A and 304-B IPC and Section 113-B of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 were introduced, cannot be lost sight of. Legislation enacted with some policy to curb and alleviate some public evil rampant in society and effectuate a definite public purpose or benefit positively requires to be interpreted with a certain element of realism too and not merely pedantically or hypertechnically. The obvious objective was to prevent harassment to a woman who enters into a marital relationship with a person and later on, becomes a victim of the greed for money. (Para 18)

Can a person who enters into a marital arrangement be allowed to take shelter behind a smokescreen to contend that since there was no valid marriage, the question of dowry does not arise? Such legalistic niceties would destroy the purpose of the provisions. Such hairsplitting legalistic approach would encourage harassment to a woman over demand of money. The nomenclature "dowry" does not have any magic charm written over it. It is just a label given to demand of money in relation to marital relationship. The legislative intent is clear from the fact that it is not only the husband but also his relations who are covered by Section 498-A. Hence if a restricted meaning is given, it would not further the legislative intent. On the contrary, it would be against the concern shown by the legislature for avoiding harassment to a woman over demand of money in relation to marriages. (Para 18)

Thus, it would be appropriate to construe the expression "husband" to cover a person who enters into marital relationship and under the colour of such proclaimed or feigned status of husband subjects the woman concerned to cruelty or coerces her in any manner or for any of the purposes enumerated in the relevant provisions — Sections 304-B/498-A, whatever be the legitimacy of the marriage itself for the limited purpose of Sections 498-A and 304-B IPC. Such an interpretation, known and recognized as purposive construction has to come into play in a case of this nature. The absence of a definition of "husband" to specifically include such persons who contract marriages ostensibly and cohabit with such woman, in the purported exercise of their role and status as "husband" is no ground to exclude them from the purview of Section 304-B or 498-A IPC, viewed in the context of the very object and aim of the legislations introducing those provisions. (Para 18). Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699: AIR 2004 SC 1418: 2004 Cri LJ 892: (2004) 2 KLT 822.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2004]

(iii) Women protected under S. 498-A

[10840] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Conviction under S. 498-A when deceased not a legal wife — Sustainability — During lifetime of his first wife K (appellant-accused), S (also appellant-accused) marrying deceased as his second wife — But after marriage, both appellants torturing the deceased, resulting in her committing suicide — Held, alleged marriage of S with deceased, during subsistence of a valid marriage of S with K, is null and void — Hence, conviction under S. 498-A set aside — However, regarding conviction under S. 306, absolutely clear evidence of PWs 1 to 3, that it was on account of torture by both appellants that deceased committed suicide inside house of S in another room — No error committed by courts below, either in appreciation or in their approach, relating to aforesaid evidence — Therefore, no infirmity in conviction of appellants under S. 306 — However, RI for seven years on conviction under S. 306, reduced to five (Para 2). Shivcharan Lal Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 15 SCC 369.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, S.N. Phukan and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2002]

[10841] — S. 498-A r/w S. 34 — Disputed question of fact — Whether complainant was the legally wedded wife of appellant — Non-interference, in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction — High Court by impugned judgment dismissing application of appellant for quashing complaint filed against him under S. 498-A r/w S. 34 IPC, on ground that it involved disputed question of fact — Appellant contending that complainant was not his legally wedded wife as he was already married, and therefore S. 498-A IPC had no application — Held, no interference with impugned judgment called for — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 2, 3, 8 and 9). Koppisetti Subbharao v. State of A.P., (2009) 12 SCC 331: AIR 2009 SC 2684: (2009) 2 KLT 531: 2009 Cri LJ 3480: (2009) 2 APLJ 114 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2009]

Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699, followed

Mayne: Early History of Institution, p. 319; Banerjee: Marriage and Stridhan, p. 345; Mayne's Hindu Law and Usage, cited

(iv) Relative of husband — Who is

[10842] — S. 498-A — Applicability — Held, in order to be charged under S. 498-A, one has to be "relative" of husband by blood, marriage or adoption — Appellant being foster sister of complainant's husband and not belonging to his family or being his "relative" in any manner as referred to in S. 498-A, cannot be tried for offence under S. 498-A — Charge re S. 498-A IPC, quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 11 to 13). Vijeta Gajra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 11 SCC 618: AIR 2010 SC 2712: 2010 Cri LJ 3841: (2010) 92 AIC 76 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2010]

U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 36, followed

R. Ramanatha Aiyar's Advance Law Lexicon, Vol. 4, 3rd Edn., referred to [10843] — S. 498-A — Consort in live-in relationship with husband of complainant — Liability under S. 498-A, if any — Appellant was living with accused husband of complainant, allegedly as his wife — Appellant prayed for discharge, as she could not be made an accused under S. 498-A since she was not a relative of M (husband of complainant) — Held, S. 498-A being a penal provision, deserves strict construction — Neither a girlfriend nor concubine is a relative of husband within meaning of S. 498-A IPC — Appellant discharged — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 227 and 482 (Paras 15 and 16). Sunita Jha v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 10 SCC 190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2010]

U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 36, applied

[10844] — S. 498-A — Persons who may commit offence under — "Relative of the husband" in S. 498-A, whether includes "girlfriend" or "concubine" — Held, status of a relative is conferred only by blood or marriage or adoption — "Girlfriend" or "concubine" being not connected by blood or marriage is not a relative of the husband as per S. 498-A IPC — Meaning of "relative" depends upon the nature of statute — Persons who can commit an offence under S. 498-A are husband and his relatives only, girlfriend (appellant herein) being not a relative cannot be charged under S. 498-A

The question which arose for consideration was whether the term "relative of the husband of a woman" within the meaning of Section 498-A of the Penal Code should be given an extended meaning so as to include "girlfriend" into its ambit.

An FIR was filed under Section 498-A IPC against the husband as well as the appellant, where appellant was referred to as the girlfriend and concubine of the husband. The appellant was not charged for abetment of a crime. Any conspiracy amongst the accused persons had also not been alleged. There were no allegations that appellant had any role to play with regard to demand of dowry. Thus, inter alia, on the premise that FIR did not disclose an offence under Section 498-A IPC, an application for discharge was filed by appellant before the trial court but the same was dismissed. A revision application filed thereagainst was also dismissed by High Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Section 498-A is a penal one. It, thus, deserves strict construction. Ordinarily, save and except where a contextual meaning is required to be given to a statute, a penal provision is required to be construed strictly. (Para 13)

By no stretch of imagination would a girlfriend or even a concubine in an etymological sense be a "relative". The word "relative" brings within its purview a status. Such a status must be conferred either by blood or marriage or adoption. If no marriage has taken place, the question of one being relative of another would not arise. (Paras 18 to 24)

In the absence of any statutory definition, the term "relative" must be assigned a meaning as is commonly understood. Ordinarily it would include father, mother, husband or wife, son, daughter, brother, sister, nephew or niece, grandson or granddaughter of an individual or the spouse of any person. The meaning of the word "relative" would depend upon the nature of the statute. It principally includes a person related by blood, marriage or adoption. (Paras 10 to 12)

It will be assumed that the term "husband" would bring within its fold a person who is said to have contracted a marriage with another woman and subjected her to cruelty. Herein relationship of the appellant with the husband of the first informant, is said to have been existing from before the marriage. Indisputably they lived separately. For all intent and purport the husband was also living at a separate place. The purported torture is said to have been inflicted by the husband upon the first informant either at her in-laws' place or at her parents' place. There is no allegation that the appellant had any role to play in that regard. Hence, appellant's discharge application is allowed. (Paras 16, 17 and 24)

The word "cruelty" having been defined in terms of the Explanation appended to Section 498-A, no other meaning can be attributed thereto. Living with another woman may be an act of cruelty on the part of the husband for the purpose of judicial separation or dissolution of marriage but the same would not attract the wrath of Section 498-A IPC. An offence in terms of the said provision is committed by the persons specified therein. They have to be the "husband" or his "relative". Either the husband of the woman or his relative must have subjected her to cruelty within the aforementioned provision. If the appellant had been instigating the husband of the first informant to torture her, as has been noticed by the High Court, the husband would be committing some offence punishable under the other provisions of the Penal Code and the appellant may be held guilty for abetment of commission of such an offence but not an offence under Section 498-A of the Penal Code. (Paras 8 and 9). U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 36: 2009 Cri LJ 2974: (2009) 2 KLT 686.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

(4)(v)1. Cruelty — Meaning of - Broadly

P.N. Krishna Lal v. Govt. of Kerala, 1995 Supp (2) SCC 187: 1995 SCC (Cri) 466; Noor Aga v. State of Punjab, (2008) 16 SCC 417; T. Ashok Pai v. CIT, (2007) 7 SCC 162; Shivcharan Lal Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 15 SCC 369, relied on

Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699, discussed and distinguished

Rajeti Laxmi v. State of A.P., (2006) 2 APLJ 451: (2007) 1 DMC 797 (AP); Swapnaja v. State of Maharashtra, Criminal Application No. 388 of 2008 decided on 21-4-2008; Ranjana Gopalrao Thorat v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 5 Mah LJ 425: 2007 Cri LJ 3866 (Bom); Capt. Rajinder Tiwari v. State (NCT of Delhi), Criminal Revision Petition No. 872 of 2006 decided on 14-12-2006, affirmed

John Idiculla v. State of Kerala, 2005 MLJ (Cri) 841 (Ker), considered

Random House Webster's Concise College Dictionary, referred to

U. Suvetha v. State, (2008) 3 MLJ (Cri) 787, reversed

(v) Cruelty — Meaning of

Synopsis

1. Broadly 1150
2. Wilful conduct likely to drive woman to commit suicide 1157
3. Wilful conduct likely to cause grave injury or danger to health (mental or physical) of woman 1163
4. Harassment to meet unlawful demand for property or valuable security — Dowry demand 1164
5. Presumption under Ss. 113-A /113-B, Evidence Act 1167

1. Broadly

[10845] — S. 498-A — Applicability — Factual basis to be established — Held, consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical, of the woman is required to be established (Para 16). Noorjahan v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 55: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 915: AIR 2008 SC 2131: (2008) 66 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2008]

[10846] — S. 498-A — Applicability of — Requirements for — Held, consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established for application of S. 498-A (Para 9). Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473: AIR 2005 SC 3100: 2005 Cri LJ 3439.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-7-2005]

[10847] — S. 498-A — 'Cruelty' — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13(1)(i-a) — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — Dowry Prohibition (Amendment) Act, 1984

The word 'cruelty' has not been defined in the Hindu Marriage Act. It has been used in S. 13(1)(i-a) of the Act in the context of human conduct or behaviour in relation to or in respect of matrimonial duties or obligations. It is a course of conduct of one which is adversely affecting the other. The cruelty may be mental or physical, intentional or unintentional. If it is physical it is a question of fact and degree. If it is mental, the enquiry must begin as to the nature of the cruel treatment and then as to the impact of such treatment on the mind of the spouse. Whether it caused reasonable apprehension that it would be harmful or injurious to live with the other, ultimately, is a matter of inference to be drawn by taking into account the nature of the conduct and its effect on the complaining spouse. There may, however, be cases where the conduct complained of itself is bad enough and per se unlawful or illegal. Then the impact or the injurious effect on the other spouse need not be enquired into or considered. In such cases, the cruelty will be established if the conduct itself is proved or admitted. The absence of intention should not make any difference in the case, if by ordinary sense in human affairs, the act complained of could otherwise be regarded as cruelty. Intention is not a necessary element in cruelty. The relief to the party cannot be denied on the ground that there has been no deliberate or wilful ill-treatment. Shobha Rani v. Madhukar Reddi, (1988) 1 SCC 105: 1988 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1988 SC 121: (1988) 1 HLR 169: 1988 BLJR 138.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-1987]

[10848] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Meaning — Held, can either be mental or physical — Cannot be put into straitjacket formula because it is a relative term — What constitutes cruelty for one person may not constitute cruelty for another (Para 24). G.V. Siddaramesh v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 3 SCC 152.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-2010]

V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat, (1994) 1 SCC 337, relied on [10849] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Illicit relationship of a married man with another woman, held, would clearly amount to cruelty — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13(1)(i-a) (Para 7). Laxman Ram Mane v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 13 SCC 125.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2010]

[10850] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Ingredients — Restated — Further held, for the purpose of S. 498-A IPC, harassment simpliciter is not "cruelty" and it is only when harassment is committed for the purpose of coercing a woman or any other person related to her to meet an unlawful demand for property, etc. that it amounts to "cruelty" punishable under S. 498-A IPC (Paras 16 to 18). State of A.P. v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 15 SCC 582: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1123: (2009) 1 ECrN 489 (SC): (2008) 71 AIC 8 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

[10851] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Proof — Proximity test — Also, impact of cruelty not being continuous — Effect — Held, "cruelty" for purpose of S. 498-A is to be established in that context as it may be different from other statutory provisions — It is to be determined/inferred by considering conduct of the man, weighing gravity or seriousness of his acts and to find out as to whether it is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide, etc. — It is to be established that the woman has been subjected to cruelty continuously/persistently or at least in close proximity of time of lodging of complaint — Petty quarrels cannot be termed as "cruelty" to attract provisions of S. 498-A IPC — Causing mental torture to the extent that it becomes unbearable may be termed as cruelty — In present case physical and mental torture alleged up to 1993 but complaint of cruelty lodged in 1997 i.e. after four years of wife (though 7 months' pregnant) leaving matrimonial home — Besides, mental or physical torture was not continuous on part of appellant as there was no complaint against him between 1993 to 1997 i.e. leaving matrimonial home by wife and performing second marriage by husband — Even PW 1, father of complainant wife had not stated any incident of physical or mental torture after 1993, nor any other witness deposed to this effect — Hence, all three courts below erred in not considering the case in correct perspective — Further held, findings recorded by courts below may be relevant for granting relief in a matrimonial dispute i.e. divorce, etc. but could not bring home charge under S. 498-A IPC — Hence, conviction of appellant under S. 498-A set aside (Paras 12 to 28)

Appellant, a government servant was married to complainant on 5-2-1992 as per Hindu rites. However, relationship between husband and wife was not cordial as it was alleged by the wife that she was being tortured mentally and physically by the appellant. The complainant left her matrimonial home in 1993 in spite of the fact that she was seven months' pregnant because she found it impossible to live there, and started residing with her father thereafter. In 1997 she came to know that appellant had married one R. Hence, she filed an FIR against him. Appellant was charged under Section 498-A and Section 494 IPC. The trial court found him guilty and sentenced him to RI for 2 years under Section 498-A, and for 3 years under Section 494. The appeal filed thereagainst was dismissed by the appellate court. The criminal revision filed thereagainst was also dismissed by the High Court by impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Partly allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Manju Ram Kalita v. State of Assam, (2009) 13 SCC 330: (2009) 79 AIC 88 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

Mohd. Hoshan v. State of A.P., (2002) 7 SCC 414: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1765; Raj Rani v. State (Delhi Admn.), (2000) 10 SCC 662: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1518; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473; Girdhar Shankar Tawade v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 5 SCC 177: 2002 SCC (Cri) 971, considered and relied on

S. Hanumantha Rao v. S. Ramani, (1999) 3 SCC 620; V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat, (1994) 1 SCC 337, distinguished

[10852] — Ss. 498-A, 107 and 306 — Presumption under — Criteria for invocation of, reiterated — Meaning of "cruelty" under — In Expln. to S. 113-A expression "cruelty" has same meaning as in S. 498-A IPC — Thus, if degree of cruelty is such as to warrant a conviction under S. 498-A, it may be sufficient for a presumption to be drawn under S. 113-A, Evidence Act, 1872 in harmony with S. 107 IPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A with Expln. thereto

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

There is sufficient evidence to bring home the charge under Section 498-A IPC. The question arising is whether there is sufficient evidence on record to indicate that by any of the acts of cruelty attributed to the petitioner, there was an intention to instigate the victim into committing suicide. There is no getting away from the fact that the victim committed suicide in the 4th year of marriage when she was six months' pregnant. Ordinarily, a woman in an advanced stage of pregnancy would not commit suicide even when treated with cruelty. It is only in extreme circumstances that a woman may decide to take her life and that of her unborn child when she reaches a point of no return and is in a mental state to take her own life. (Paras 19 and 21)

(4)(v)1. Cruelty — Meaning of - Broadly (contd.)

Section 113-A of the Evidence Act establishes a link between an offence under Sections 498-A, 107 and 306 IPC, thereby permitting the court to presume the commission of an offence under Section 107 IPC on the basis of evidence adduced to prove an offence under Section 498-A IPC. Evidence of PWs 2, 3, 7, 9, 11 and 13 sufficient to establish prosecution case against petitioner under Ss. 498-A and 306 IPC. (Para 28)

The element of instigation as understood within the meaning of Section 107 IPC is duly satisfied in this case in view of the provisions of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act, 1872. Since the victim committed suicide in the 4th year of her marriage, such condition is duly satisfied. The second condition is that the husband or such relative of the husband had subjected the victim to cruelty which led to the commission of suicide by the victim. Section 113-A indicates that in such circumstances, the court may presume, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, that such suicide had been abetted by her husband or by such relative of her husband. (Para 25)

In the Explanation to Section 113-A it has also been indicated that for the purpose of the said section, the expression "cruelty" would have the same meaning as in Section 498-A IPC. Accordingly, if the degree of cruelty is such as to warrant a conviction under Section 498-A IPC, the same may be sufficient for a presumption to be drawn under Section 113-A of the Evidence Act in harmony with the provisions of Section 107 IPC. (Para 26)

The dying declaration of the victim can be relied upon, notwithstanding the objections raised regarding its veracity. There is no reason to disbelieve either PW 9, Naib Tahsildar and Executive Magistrate, or PW 11, the doctor who attended to victim in the hospital. A dying declaration has to be treated with caution, since the accused does not get a chance to cross-examine the victim. There is no ambiguity or irregularity as far as the dying declaration is concerned and it has been stated in clear and simple language that the victim had been treated with both mental and physical cruelty and the victim has stated quite candidly how she poured kerosene on her body and set herself on fire. The evidence of PW 13, the younger brother of the deceased, corroborates the story of the prosecution as to the manner in which the victim was treated by the petitioner, which triggered her immediate intention to commit suicide which was the culminating point of ill-treatment meted out to her by the petitioner and his mother. (Paras 22 to 24)

There is no reason to interfere with the judgments of the High Court or trial court. (Para 29). Thanu Ram v. State of M.P., (2010) 10 SCC 353: (2010) 4 UPLJ 102 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2010]

Gangula Mohan Reddy v. State of A.P., (2010) 1 SCC 750: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 917; Randhir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 13 SCC 129: 2005 SCC (Cri) 56; Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2001) 9 SCC 618: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1088; Amalendu Pal v. State of W.B., (2010) 1 SCC 707: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 896; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473, distinguished [10853] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Cruelty — Hurting utterances — No word on record to prove — Deceased, in her suicide note, making allegation against appellant, regarding serious and hurting utterances made by appellant towards deceased — Suicide note not indicating any "hurting" utterances — Court, held, must be in a position to hold that the words felt "hurting" were sufficient enough to amount cruelty under S. 498-A — Supreme Court, being helpless to judge whether the words used by appellant against deceased amounting to cruelty, acquitting the appellant of the charge under S. 498-A. Raj Rani v. State (Delhi Administration), (2000) 10 SCC 662: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1518.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2000]

[10854] — Ss. 498-A & 306 — Cruelty — Suicide — Prosecution must prove that the victim was subjected to cruelty and harassment which fall under Expln. to S. 498-A — Dowry demand and harassment by in-laws of deceased (father-in-law, mother-in-law and sister-in-law) and husband alleged — Prosecution witnesses all interested — Their testimony mostly based not on their personal knowledge but based on what they heard from others and also vitiated by material contradictions and improvements — Hence held, neither admissible nor reliable — Circumstances pointed out against the accused persons not incriminatory — That the accused in the face of murder charge did not attend the funeral of the deceased not unexpected — Letters written by deceased to her mother and that written by deceased's brother to deceased's husband also not showing any dowry demand by the accused — Held, prosecution failed to establish dowry demand and harassment leading to cruelty on the deceased — Hence trial court erred in convicting the accused-appellants — High Court also erred in confirming the judgment and order of trial court without applying its independent mind — Hence appellants entitled to acquittal

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the conviction and sentence,

Held :

In this case the letter written by the deceased to her mother, relied on by prosecution, though indicates that the deceased's relationship with her mother-in-law was not good but it does not, in any manner, either indicate that there was any unlawful demand from her in-laws or pursuant to such demand there was any harassment leading to cruelty. Two other letters brought on record by the defence, one written by the deceased's brother to the deceased's husband and the other written by the deceased to her husband, do not also indicate that there was any demand from the accused-appellants for TV, scooter, fridge, etc. (Paras 11 and 12)

Among the prosecution witnesses, the mother of the deceased, had nowhere stated that the deceased at any point of time had personally told her about demands for TV, scooter, fridge, money and share in father's property. In the absence of such material, more so because of the fact that this witness herself does not say that the deceased told her orally about these demands, and the alleged letters having not been produced, this part of her evidence will have to be treated as not based on personal knowledge but as an opinion of hers, and as such the same is inadmissible in evidence. Therefore, the prosecution cannot rely upon such evidence to base a conviction. Her evidence is of no assistance to the prosecution to establish the fact that there was any demand, much less an unlawful demand at all by the appellants on the deceased. Defence also established omissions and improvements in the course of cross-examination. The trial court seriously erred in placing reliance on inadmissible part of her evidence and ignoring the omissions and improvements. (Para 16)

The allegations of deceased's brother that none of the appellants including the deceased's husband had visited the deceased for nearly seven months after the birth of her second child, which indicated neglect or mental torture to the deceased by the indifferent attitude of her husband, was per se unbelievable having regard to the contents of the letter written by the said witness to the deceased's husband. Moreover, this witness was not very sure whether various demands made by the appellants were towards dowry or towards the birth of a male child. (Para 17)

The circumstance relied on by the prosecution about indifference and neglect on the part of the deceased's husband towards the deceased as made out by the deceased's mother and brother was factually incorrect. The prosecution also failed to establish allegation of pressurising the deceased into demanding a share in her father's property after her father's death. (Para 22)

From the fact that these accused persons did not attend the funeral of the deceased after the bodies of the deceased and her children were released from the hospital, the trial court erred in drawing an inference of guilty conscience of the accused. In such a situation when a murder charge is levelled against an accused, it is hardly possible to expect the accused to be present at such funeral. Therefore, this circumstance also cannot be taken as an incriminating circumstance or a circumstance which corroborates the other evidence led by the prosecution against the accused. (Para 22)

Based on these erroneous inferences drawn on unproved facts and placing reliance on statements of interested witnesses whose evidence has not stood the test of cross-examination, the trial court came to a wrong conclusion as to the guilt of the accused persons. The three letters which though not very proximate in time clearly show that there was no demand as alleged by the prosecution by the accused and the contents of the said letter clearly show that the allegation made after the death of the deceased, of dowry demand or harassment leading to cruelty is unsubstantiated. For all these reasons the trial court committed serious error in coming to the conclusion that the prosecution had established its case against the appellants. (Para 23). Sakatar Singh v. State of Haryana, (2004) 11 SCC 291: AIR 2004 SC 2570: 2004 Cri LJ 2076.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2004]

[10855] — Ss. 498-A, 306 and 323 — Neither suicide nor harassment for dowry/unlawful demand for property made out — Conviction under S. 498-A not sustainable — Deceased found unconscious in her matrimonial home and later dying in hospital — Post-mortem report showing that death was due to asphyxia which could be by opium poisoning — Six bruises also found on her body — High Court in appeal against acquittal, by impugned judgment, finding appellant (husband of deceased) guilty under S. 498-A, while upholding his acquittal in respect of offence punishable under S. 306 — Categorical finding of courts below that suicide was not established — Moreover, marriage of deceased had taken place in 1976, while incident occurred in 1988 i.e. after about twelve years, hence presumption under Ss. 113-A and 113-B, Evidence Act, 1872 not applicable — As far as S. 498-A Expln. (b) was concerned, unlawful demand for property or valuable security was not proved which is a statutory requirement thereunder — Hence, S. 498-A(b), inapplicable — Question whether S. 323 would be applicable not gone into taking into consideration the fact that appellant had already suffered custody of about six months — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 113-A and 113-B (Paras 9 to 14). Gopal v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 11 SCC 314: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1343: AIR 2009 SC 1928: (2009) 75 AIC 1 (SC).

(4)(v)1. Cruelty — Meaning of - Broadly (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2009]

Balwant Singh v. State of H.P., (2008) 15 SCC 497; Hira Lal v. State (Govt. of NCT), Delhi, (2003) 8 SCC 80, relied on
State v. Gopal, 2001 Cri LJ 3873 (Raj), reversed

[10856] — S. 498-A Expln. — Applicability — Cruelty — What constitutes — Woman succumbing to burn injuries in her nuptial home — Trial court and High Court ruling out suicide and finding it to be a case of accidental death — Absence of evidence regarding "grave injury or danger to life, limb or health" of the woman as contemplated under cl. (a) of the Expln. — That being so, Expln. (a) not attracted to the facts of the case — Further, in absence of evidence regarding demand for dowry, harassment by itself would not constitute cruelty within the meaning of Expln. (b) — Thus "cruelty" on facts, not made out — There must be some cogent evidence to bring home the charge under S. 498-A — On facts held, in absence of such evidence, accused cannot be convicted under S. 498-A

The basic purport of Section 498-A is to avoid "cruelty" which is defined by attributing a specific statutory meaning attached thereto. Two specific instances have been taken note of in order to ascribe a meaning to the word "cruelty" as is expressed by the legislatures: whereas Explanation (a) involves three specific situations viz. (i) to drive the woman to commit suicide or (ii) to cause grave injury or (iii) danger to life, limb or health, both mental and physical, and thus involving a physical torture or atrocity, in Explanation (b) there is absence of physical injury but the legislature thought it fit to include only coercive harassment which obviously as the legislative intent expressed is equally heinous to match the physical injury: whereas one is patent, the other one is latent but equally serious in terms of the provisions of the statute since the same would also embrace the attributes of "cruelty" in terms of Section 498-A. (Para 3)

Section 498-A is attributed only in the event of proof of cruelty by the husband or the relatives of the husband of the woman. Admittedly, the finding of the trial court as regards the death negated suicide with a positive finding of accidental death. If suicide is left out, then in that event question of applicability of Explanation (a) would not arise — neither the second limb to cause injury and danger to life or limb or health would be attracted. In any event the wilful act or conduct ought to be the proximate cause in order to bring home the charge under Section 498-A and not dehors the same. To have an event sometime back cannot be termed to be a factum taken note of in the matter of a charge under Section 498-A. (Paras 16 and 18)

Explanation (b) of Section 498-A in no uncertain terms records harassment of the woman and the statute itself thereafter clarifies it to the effect that it is not every such harassment but only in the event of such a harassment being with a view to coerce her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security or is on account of failure by her or any person related to her to meet such demand — there is total absence of any of the requirements of the statute in terms of Section 498-A. (Para 16)

In this case there was inherent contradiction inter se in the evidence of the brother and the cousin of the deceased and as such the same was not reliable. The other piece of evidence viz. three letters written by the deceased to her brother and her cousin, relied on by the courts below in order to come to a finding as regards the guilt under Section 498-A also did not fulfil the requirements of the provisions of Explanation (b) or even a simple demand for dowry. The legislative intent is clear enough to indicate in particular reference to Explanation (b) that there shall have to be a series of acts in order to be a harassment within the meaning of Explanation (b). The letters by themselves though may depict a reprehensible conduct, would not, however, bring home the charge of Section 498-A against the accused. (Para 18)

The statement before the Executive Magistrate by way of a declaration did not lend any assistance in the matter in issue. Dying declarations shall have to be dealt with due care and upon proper circumspection. Though corroboration thereof is not essential as such, but its introduction is otherwise expedient to strengthen the evidential value of the declaration. Independent witnesses may not be available but there should be proper care and caution in the matter of acceptance of the dying declaration as a trustworthy piece of evidence. (Paras 14 and 13)

Charges under Sections 306 and 498-A of the Indian Penal Code are independent of each other and acquittal of one does not lead to acquittal on the other. But in order to justify a conviction under Section 498-A there must be available on record some material and cogent evidence. Presently, there are on record two inconsistent versions of the brother and the cousin, as such no credence can be attributed thereon — the documentary evidence (namely, those three letters), falls short of the requirement of the statute: even on an assumption of the fact that there is no contradiction in the oral testimony available on record, the cousin goes to the unfortunate girl's in-laws' place and requests the husband to treat her well — at best some torture and a request to treat her well. This by itself would not bring home the charge under Section 498-A. Demand for dowry has not seen the light of day. (Para 17)

There was an inherent contradiction inter se leading to the term of credibility of the oral evidence and it is in this perspective that reliance thereon by both the trial court and the High Court stands totally misplaced resulting in utter perversity. Other evidence also did not fulfil the requirements of Section 498-A. Therefore, conviction as recorded by the trial Judge as also by the High Court cannot be sustained. (Paras 13 and 19)

Appreciation of evidence cannot be had under Article 136 but it would be a travesty of justice in our justice delivery system if such a bar is to linger on even on total misappreciation of evidence leading to utter perversity. (Para 13). Girdhar Shankar Tawade v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 5 SCC 177: 2002 SCC (Cri) 971: AIR 2002 SC 2078: 2002 Cri LJ 2814: (2002) 4 MPLJ 5: (2002) 4 Mah LJ 5.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2002]

[10857] — S. 498-A Expln. — "Cruelty" — Concept and effect of, held, varies from individual to individual depending upon his social and economic status — "Cruelty" for the purpose of S. 498-A need not be physical — In a given case, even mental torture or abnormal behaviour may amount to cruelty and harassment

The concept of cruelty and its effect varies from individual to individual, also depending upon the social and economic status to which such person belongs. "Cruelty" for the purposes of constituting the offence under the said section need not be physical. Even mental torture or abnormal behaviour may amount to cruelty and harassment in a given case. (Para 7). Gananath Pattnaik v. State of Orissa, (2002) 2 SCC 619: 2002 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and B. P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2002]

[10858] — S. 498-A Expln. — Ingredients of, explained/interpreted — "Cruelty", meaning of — Husband living with another woman, whether commits "cruelty" under S. 498-A — Held, living with another woman may be an act of cruelty for the purpose of judicial separation or dissolution of marriage but it cannot be stretched to amount to "cruelty" under S. 498-A — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13(1)(i-a)

The word "cruelty" having been defined in terms of the Explanation appended to Section 498-A, no other meaning can be attributed thereto. Living with another woman may be an act of cruelty on the part of the husband for the purpose of judicial separation or dissolution of marriage but the same would not attract the wrath of Section 498-A IPC. An offence in terms of the said provision is committed by the persons specified therein. They have to be the "husband" or his "relative". Either the husband of the woman or his relative must have subjected her to cruelty within the aforementioned provision. If the appellant had been instigating the husband of the first informant to torture her, as has been noticed by the High Court, the husband would be committing some offence punishable under the other provisions of the Penal Code and the appellant may be held guilty for abetment of commission of such an offence but not an offence under Section 498-A of the Penal Code. (Paras 8 and 9). U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 36: 2009 Cri LJ 2974: (2009) 2 KLT 686.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[10859] — S. 498-A Expln. (a) — 'Cruelty' — Includes mental cruelty also — 'Wilful conduct' in Expln. (a) — Meaning — Can be inferred by direct or indirect evidence

Cruelty or harassment need not be physical. Even mental torture in a given case would be a case of cruelty and harassment within the meaning of Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC. Explanation (a) to Section 498-A itself refers to both mental and physical cruelty. Again wilful conduct means, conduct wilfully done; this may be inferred by direct or indirect evidence which could be construed to be such. A girl dreams of great days ahead with hope and aspiration when entering into a marriage, and if from the very next day the husband starts taunting her for not bringing dowry and calling her ugly, there cannot be greater mental torture, harassment or cruelty for any bride. Pawan Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1998) 3 SCC 309: 1998 SCC (Cri) 740: AIR 1998 SC 958: 1998 Cri LJ 1144.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchi, C.J. and A.P. Misra, J. [Date of decision: 9-2-1998]

(4)(v)1. Cruelty — Meaning of - Broadly (contd.)

[10860] — S. 498-A and Expln. (a) thereto — Applicability — Conviction under S. 498-A, justified — Torture of deceased at the hands of appellant-accused (husband and in-laws of deceased) resulting in her committing suicide — Reiterated, for application of S. 498-A, consequences of cruelty [defined in Expln. (a) to S. 498-A], which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical, of the woman, are required to be established — Herein, there were materials to show that deceased was being tortured and ill-treated by appellants — Hence, Expln. (a) to S. 498-A has definite application to the facts herein — Additionally, there was no rebuttal by appellants of presumption under S. 113-A, Evidence Act, where court may presume that suicide by woman was abetted by her husband or his relative — Hence, conviction, held, justified — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A (Paras 6 and 11 to 13). Rajendran v. Commr. of Police, (2008) 17 SCC 501: AIR 2009 SC 855: (2009) 74 AIC 234 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-2008]

Hira Lal v. State (Govt. of NCT), Delhi, (2003) 8 SCC 80: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2016, followed

Balwant Singh v. State of H.P., (2008) 15 SCC 497: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1094, relied on

[10861] — S. 498-A Explns. (a) and (b) — Applicability — Held, basic ingredients of S. 498-A are cruelty and harassment — Further held, in Expln. (b) which relates to harassment there is absence of physical injury but it includes coercive harassment for demand of dowry — It deals with patent or latent acts of the husband or his family members (Paras 14 to 22). Undavalli Narayana Rao v. State of A.P., (2009) 14 SCC 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-2009]

S. Hanumantha Rao v. S. Ramani, (1999) 3 SCC 620; V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat, (1994) 1 SCC 337; Mohd. Hoshan v. State of A.P., (2002) 7 SCC 414: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1765; Raj Rani v. State (Delhi Admn.), (2000) 10 SCC 662: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1518; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473; Girdhar Shankar Tawade v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 5 SCC 177: 2002 SCC (Cri) 971, considered and relied on

[10862] — S. 498-A Explns. (a) and (b) — Conviction — Sustained — Appellant and his mother alleged to have harassed the deceased for bringing in more dowry — *Deceased found dead in her matrimonial home and she was cremated hurriedly without informing her parents about her death — Trial court found that: (i) DW 1 (child of the appellant and the deceased) was a tutored witness; (ii) the child was in bed with her grandmother, and not with her mother, when the deceased was allegedly complaining of a stomach ache; (iii) no medical evidence was led to establish that the deceased was ailing so seriously from before; (iv) independent witness deposed that the room in which her dead body was found, had been opened by lifting the lever from inside and therefore, inferred that it was a case of suicide as otherwise, there was no occasion to bolt the room from inside; (v)*Khararunama executed between appellant and wife showed that the relations between the husband and the wife were not cordial, and that she had been harassed to meet the unlawful demand of the appellant and deceased was compelled to fetch more money from her parents; and (vi) Ext. P-1 showed that it had been executed in order to restrain the family members of the deceased from launching criminal prosecution against the appellant — Hence, charge under S. 498-A held to have been proved against the appellant (Paras 27 to 36)

A complaint was filed by PW 1 complainant (mother of the deceased) against appellant and his mother (husband and mother-in-law of deceased) that they harassed and ill-treated the deceased for bringing more dowry. The relations between the husband and wife were strained and an agreement "khararunama" was executed restraining each of them from alienating immovable property owned by them and the same was to be preserved for their children. However, they had a right to enjoy it usufruct. Subsequent to the execution of the said "khararunama" the deceased restored marital relations with the appellant and they lived together for nine years. During this period the deceased persistently complained about the behaviour of the appellant and his mother, to her mother U, PW 1 and other relatives and the continuation of harassment at the hands of the appellant and his mother.

Deceased was found dead on 5-6-1999. She was cremated on 6-6-1999 hurriedly without being subjected to any post-mortem autopsy and without any information to the family members of the deceased. However, an agreement was reached between parents of the deceased and family members of the appellant that they would not report the matter to the police and for that consideration, the appellant and his mother agreed to transfer the immovable property of the appellant in the name of the only child of the deceased. As a consequence Ext. P-2 dated 15-6-1999 was executed and registered purporting to be a partition deed between the appellant and his minor daughter DW 1.

After some time, it came to the knowledge of the family members of the deceased that the child was not being treated properly, therefore, they approached the appellant's family and made an attempt to take the child in their custody but the appellant did not agree for it. Thus, the mother of the deceased filed the criminal complaint and in exercise of the power under Section 156(3) CrPC, the court directed for investigation. Legal proceedings had also been initiated by the family members of the deceased seeking custody of the child. A civil suit was also filed to restrain the appellant from transferring the immovable property in favour of any other person by any means.

Charges under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC against the appellant and his mother. Trial court found that charges under Section 302 read with Section 34 were not proved. Appellant alone was held guilty under Section 498-A IPC and sentenced to 2 years' RI. High Court by impugned judgment affirmed the conviction and the sentence. Hence, the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Undavalli Narayana Rao v. State of A.P., (2009) 14 SCC 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-2009]

[10863] — S. 498-A Explns. (a) & (b) — Inapplicability — No ingredients of offence allegedly made out on face of the record — Respondent 2 alleged that she was married to the appellant who worked in Saudi Arabia and who had come home on leave for four months and Rs 5 lakhs was given to him as dowry which he spent in buying properties for his family; that initially for about 2-3 months he sent her money for household expenses and was affectionate towards her, but later believing his family members who were spreading wrong information about her conduct stopped to do so — It was further alleged that when he came to India on leave he stayed with his younger brother and when Respondent 2 went there she was driven out, and hence, because of such treatment meted out to her she was suffering both mentally and physically — Held, for application of Expln. (a) of S. 498-A IPC there has to be such conduct on the part of the appellant which could be said to be amounting to cruelty of such a nature as is likely to cause Respondent 2 to commit suicide or to cause any injury to her life — Said ingredients not mentioned either in the FIR or in the charge-sheet and in absence thereof, no case made out — As far as Expln. (b) of S. 498-A is concerned in order to constitute cruelty under the said provision there has to be harassment of the woman with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security or a case is to be made out to the effect that there was a failure by her or any person related to her to meet such demand — When the allegation made in the FIR and the charge-sheet is examined in the present case in the light of the aforesaid provision, no prima facie case even under the aforesaid provision is made out to attract a case of cruelty — Marriage of Respondent 2 had taken place in 1997 when Rs 5 lakhs was alleged to have been given as dowry and in the FIR filed in 2002 there was no allegation that subsequent thereto any harassment was made by the appellant with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property — Thus, neither Expln. (a) nor Expln. (b) of S. 498-A IPC attracted in the present case — Hence, both the FIR as also the charge-sheet liable to be quashed — High Court failed to appreciate the facts in proper perspective, and erred in rejecting appellant's petition for quashing FIR/charge-sheet — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 27 to 33). Shakson Belthissor v. State of Kerala, (2009) 14 SCC 466: (2009) 80 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513, followed

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Drugs Inspector v. Dr. B.K. Krishnaiah, (1981) 2 SCC 454: 1981 SCC (Cri) 487; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567, considered and relied on

Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297; V.V.S. Rama Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 234: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 356, relied on

2. Wilful conduct likely to drive woman to commit suicide

See also under Ss. 304-B and 306, above

[10864] — S. 498-A — Applicability — Suicide attempt by complainant — Inference of cruelty or harassment — Complainant (PW 1) alleging that A-1 (her husband) was pressurising her to bring Rs 50,000 as additional dowry for purchase of lorry and that he used to beat, scold, shout and threaten to kill her, and on certain occasions he had also pressed her neck saying that he would kill her — It was further alleged that A-1's mother (A-2), his second brother's wife (A-3) and her husband's third brother's wife (A-4) also used to help her husband in beating and harassing her and forced her to consume poison twice — It was only after second incident which occurred on 19-4-1996 that FIR was lodged by complainant on 22-5-1996 — Version of complainant that A-1 was pressurising her to bring additional dowry of Rs 50,000 not supported even by her father PW 3 — So far as the allegation of poisoning by the accused to kill the complainant is concerned, the trial court had found the evidence of PWs unreliable — Besides none of the accused attempted to escape after the incident which corroborates the anxiety of Accused A-1 to A-4 about the life of the complainant — Rejecting the prosecution version based on the complaint, Accused A-2 to A-4 were acquitted by the trial court while A-1 was convicted only under S. 498-A but acquitted for S. 307 — Further, as observed by trial court there was no direct evidence, other than the self-serving testimony of PW 1 regarding the alleged beatings or scolding — If really the version of PW 1 that all the accused attempted to kill her by forcibly pouring poison in her mouth, not once but twice, was true she would not have kept quiet without reporting the matter to the police; even after the second incident she kept quiet for a period of one month — Contents of the complaint clearly showed that PW 1 (the complainant) wanted to see that the respondent loses his job in the Police Department, and that merely because PW 1 attempted to commit suicide, it cannot be presumed that it was only on account of harassment or cruelty meted out to her that she made an attempt to commit suicide — Testimony of PW 1 was found unreliable more so, when her relations with the husband were very much strained — Held, in the light of the overall evidence, analysed by the High Court, the order of acquittal of the respondent is well merited and does not call for interference, particularly when the FIR was lodged by the complainant more than one month after the alleged incident of forcible poisoning (Paras 3, 4, 6 to 8 and 26 to 31). State of A.P. v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 15 SCC 582: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1123: (2009) 1 ECrN 489 (SC): (2008) 71 AIC 8 (SC).

(4)(v)2. Cruelty — Meaning of - Wilful conduct likely to drive woman to commit suicide (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

[10865] — S. 498-A — Circumstantial evidence — Death of a housewife by drowning in a well in the courtyard of her in-laws' house — Ill-treatment of the deceased by her in-laws for not bringing sufficient dowry and also for not giving birth to children established — Despite giving birth to two children such ill-treatment continued — Husband also contemplating to remarry — Deceased earlier trying to commit suicide by jumping in the same well but saved by the neighbours — At the time of incident only deceased and the accused were in the house — Sound of quarrelling and shouting of a woman heard by the neighbours — Held, in the circumstances of the case, circumstances clinchingly establish the culpability of the accused — Death by accidentally falling in the well ruled out

The prosecution evidence clearly indicates beyond shadow of reasonable doubt that because of the mistreatment by the accused and the consistent course of cruelty perpetrated on her, she had on the fateful night suffered from the last straw that broke the camel's back. Earlier she had jumped in the same well to put an end to her miserable existence but was saved by the neighbours. Yet the life for her in the household of the accused did not improve subsequently. She was, therefore, driven to once again try to commit suicide by jumping in the very same well in which she had earlier jumped. But on the second occasion on that fateful night when she jumped in the well there was no neighbour to save her and her life got extinguished. Under these circumstances it cannot be said that the accused were not responsible for bringing to a tragic end the life of this young housewife aged 28 years, mother of two children, who having suffered in such a drastic manner at the hands of the accused was driven to take the extreme step of committing suicide. This is neither the case of murder nor the case of accident. On the facts of the present case the prosecution has been able to bring home to the accused beyond shadow of reasonable doubt offence under Section 498-A IPC read with Explanation (a). When she was driven to take such a drastic step all the accused including acquitted accused mother-in-law were in the house and along with them resided the victim and her two minor children. Hence the accused alone must be held responsible for driving her to commit suicide by their misconduct which had led to a quarrel and shouting revealing the voice of a woman as admitted even by the hostile witness who actually heard the same being the next door neighbour. All the circumstances proved by the prosecution clinchingly establish the culpability of the accused themselves and no one else. These established circumstances wholly rule out any reasonable possibility of innocence of the accused from any viewpoint. In other words the chain in the circumstantial evidence is so complete against the accused as to rule out any other hypothesis about their innocence. Balram Prasad Agrawal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 9 SCC 338: 1997 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1997 SC 1830: 1997 Cri LJ 1640.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1996]

[10866] — S. 498-A — Death of housewife by drowning in a well — Ill-treatment meted out to the deceased by her in-laws spreading over years established — Held, in the circumstances of the case, it can be presumed that such ill-treatment continued till she was forced to commit suicide — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114

The evidence of the father of the deceased shows that his daughter's married life in the household of the accused had undergone rough weather all throughout. She was ill-treated both for not bringing dowry amount to the satisfaction of the accused and also for not giving birth to children. Her husband was also contemplating to remarry. The deceased had earlier tried to commit suicide but was saved by neighbours. Even after birth of two sons ill-treatment of his deceased daughter and quarrels with her in-laws continued till the fateful night. It can, therefore, safely be presumed under Section 114 of the Evidence Act that the cruel treatment meted out to the deceased by the accused earlier had continued unabated till the very last when she was forced to commit suicide on that fateful night. Such a presumption of continuance of cruel treatment which is established on record necessarily points an accusing finger to the accused. Such presumption under Section 114 of the Evidence Act has remained unrebutted on record.

It is easy to visualize the unbearable state of affairs on that night when a young housewife having two minor children, the younger one only four and a half years of age, had to jump in the well to end her miserable existence in the house of the accused. Unless the torture to her had become unbearable in the common course of human conduct such a young housewife having commitments to life could not have taken the drastic step to end her life, leaving her infant sons in the lurch and at the mercy of the accused especially when her husband was contemplating a remarriage. Balram Prasad Agrawal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 9 SCC 338: 1997 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1997 SC 1830: 1997 Cri LJ 1640.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1996]

[Ed.: The presumption under S. 113-A could not be raised in this case as the alleged suicide took place seven years after the marriage.]

[10867] — S. 498-A — Ingredients — Suicide by married woman — Prosecution must establish that the accused committed acts of harassment or cruelty as contemplated by the section and such harassment or cruelty was reason for the suicide — No specific charge framed against the accused — Evidence of harassment or cruelty not sufficient for holding that the deceased was driven to commit suicide because of harassment or cruel treatment by the accused — Order of acquittal passed by the High Court upheld — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A. State of Maharashtra v. Ashok Chotelal Shukla, (1997) 11 SCC 26: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1186: AIR 1997 SC 3111: 1997 Cri LJ 3761.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-1997]

[10868] — Ss. 498-A, 107 and 306 and S. 113-A, Evidence Act, 1872 — Abetment of suicide and cruelty — Element of instigation — Establishment of — Conviction confirmed — In appeal High Court acquitting father of husband but confirming conviction of petitioner husband and his mother under Ss. 498-A and 306 — Sustainability — Held, victim committed suicide in 4th year of marriage when she was six months' pregnant — Ordinarily, a woman in an advanced stage of pregnancy would not commit suicide even when treated with cruelty — Only in extreme circumstances may a woman decide to take her life and that of her unborn child when she reaches a point of no return and is in a mental state to take her own life — This proved the element of instigation — Further, S. 113-A, Evidence Act establishes link between offence under Ss. 498-A, 107 and 306 IPC, permitting presumption of commission of an offence under S. 107 on basis of evidence adduced to prove an offence under S. 498-A — Evidence of PWs sufficient to establish prosecution case against petitioner and his mother under Ss. 498-A and 306 r/w S. 113-A, Evidence Act, 1872 — No interference with High Court order called for

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

There is sufficient evidence to bring home the charge under Section 498-A IPC. The question arising is whether there is sufficient evidence on record to indicate that by any of the acts of cruelty attributed to the petitioner, there was an intention to instigate the victim into committing suicide. There is no getting away from the fact that the victim committed suicide in the 4th year of marriage when she was six months' pregnant. Ordinarily, a woman in an advanced stage of pregnancy would not commit suicide even when treated with cruelty. It is only in extreme circumstances that a woman may decide to take her life and that of her unborn child when she reaches a point of no return and is in a mental state to take her own life. (Paras 19 and 21)

(4)(v)2. Cruelty — Meaning of - Wilful conduct likely to drive woman to commit suicide (contd.)

Section 113-A of the Evidence Act establishes a link between an offence under Sections 498-A, 107 and 306 IPC, thereby permitting the court to presume the commission of an offence under Section 107 IPC on the basis of evidence adduced to prove an offence under Section 498-A IPC. Evidence of PWs 2, 3, 7, 9, 11 and 13 sufficient to establish prosecution case against petitioner under Ss. 498-A and 306 IPC. (Para 28)

The element of instigation as understood within the meaning of Section 107 IPC is duly satisfied in this case in view of the provisions of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act, 1872. Since the victim committed suicide in the 4th year of her marriage, such condition is duly satisfied. The second condition is that the husband or such relative of the husband had subjected the victim to cruelty which led to the commission of suicide by the victim. Section 113-A indicates that in such circumstances, the court may presume, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, that such suicide had been abetted by her husband or by such relative of her husband. (Para 25)

In the Explanation to Section 113-A it has also been indicated that for the purpose of the said section, the expression "cruelty" would have the same meaning as in Section 498-A IPC. Accordingly, if the degree of cruelty is such as to warrant a conviction under Section 498-A IPC, the same may be sufficient for a presumption to be drawn under Section 113-A of the Evidence Act in harmony with the provisions of Section 107 IPC. (Para 26)

The dying declaration of the victim can be relied upon, notwithstanding the objections raised regarding its veracity. There is no reason to disbelieve either PW 9, Naib Tahsildar and Executive Magistrate, or PW 11, the doctor who attended to victim in the hospital. A dying declaration has to be treated with caution, since the accused does not get a chance to cross-examine the victim. There is no ambiguity or irregularity as far as the dying declaration is concerned and it has been stated in clear and simple language that the victim had been treated with both mental and physical cruelty and the victim has stated quite candidly how she poured kerosene on her body and set herself on fire. The evidence of PW 13, the younger brother of the deceased, corroborates the story of the prosecution as to the manner in which the victim was treated by the petitioner, which triggered her immediate intention to commit suicide which was the culminating point of ill-treatment meted out to her by the petitioner and his mother. (Paras 22 to 24)

There is no reason to interfere with the judgments of the High Court or trial court. (Para 29). Thanu Ram v. State of M.P., (2010) 10 SCC 353: (2010) 4 UPLJ 102 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2010]

Gangula Mohan Reddy v. State of A.P., (2010) 1 SCC 750: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 917; Randhir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 13 SCC 129: 2005 SCC (Cri) 56; Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2001) 9 SCC 618: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1088; Amalendu Pal v. State of W.B., (2010) 1 SCC 707: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 896; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473, distinguished [10869] — S. 498-A & S. 306 — Applicability — Deceased found dead early morning in the verandah of her matrimonial home — Unnatural death of deceased — Evidence proving physical and mental cruelty meted out to her — She driven out of her matrimonial house and could return only after settlement had been arrived at wherefor intervention of the members of the Panchayat had been sought for — Letters written by deceased expressing her anguish and desire to commit suicide because of abuses and insults heaped upon her, not disputed — PW 1 definitely opining that death was due to poisoning but he was not sure as regards nature of poison — Accidental consumption of poison ruled out on facts, because in case had it been so accused would not have fled from the house and an attempt would have been made to take the deceased to hospital — Held, death by itself may not lead to an inference that cruelty was meted out to the deceased, but in the instant case there were specific allegations which were proved by PWs — Ingredients of offences under S. 498-A and S. 306 having been proved, High Court's judgment convicting the accused for said offences calls for no interference (Paras 25, 27, 28, 29, 30 and 40). Ananda Mohan Sen v. State of W.B., (2007) 10 SCC 774: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 678: 2007 Cri LJ 2770: (2007) 56 AIC 171 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2007]

Harjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 1 SCC 463: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 417; Wazir Chand v. State of Haryana, (1989) 1 SCC 244: 1989 SCC (Cri) 105, relied on [10870] — Ss. 498-A, 306 and 109 r/w S. 34 — Cruelty and abetment of suicide — Whether offences of, made out — Proof of — Extreme mental cruelty meted out to deceased wife (serving as a Lecturer) by economically dependent advocate husband (not settled in practice) — Number of instances of mental torture proved from the evidence of PWs 6, 7 and 8 (neighbour, sister and father of the deceased respectively) — Suicide note/letter written to the father of deceased giving graphic description of the number of instances of constant extreme mental torture and appellant's deriving sadistic pleasure in torturing the deceased — Courts below relying on circumstances enumerated in the suicide note and testimony of PWs 6, 7 and 8 and giving concurrent finding regarding extreme mental cruelty — Appellant created circumstances which left no option for the wife but to take an extreme step of putting an end to her life — Therefore, conviction under Ss. 498-A, 306 and 109 r/w S. 34, upheld (Paras 14 to 17 and 21 to 24). Milind Bhagwanrao Godse v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 3 SCC 699: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 2009 SC 1828: (2009) 76 AIC 224 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1736.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

[10871] — Ss. 498-A and 306/34 — Suicide by a married woman in her in-laws' house within 10 months of her marriage — Cruelty by her husband and mother-in-law alleged — Mother-in-law of deceased telling her that she was a woman of evil luck and had swallowed her baby and she should commit suicide — Husband of the deceased physically assaulting her — On facts, deceased was subjected to abuses, humiliation and mental torture from the very beginning of her married life which forced her to commit suicide — Offence under S. 498-A established — Absence of suicidal note not material — However, accused persons entitled to benefit of doubt as regards charge under S. 306

The deceased committed suicide by hanging in the house of her husband and the in-laws within a year from the date of marriage. It is the case of the prosecution that it was a negotiated marriage and according to the demand of the accused persons and other members of the family of in-laws sufficient dowry including colour T.V., motor cycle, gold ornaments etc. had been given at the time of marriage. The prosecution case is that the deceased who was only 20 years old had been treated cruelly and had been tortured both mentally and physically by the accused. It has been alleged that within a few days after the marriage, the father-in-law of her husband's mother had died and she had treated the deceased cruelly by telling her that she was a woman of evil luck (alakshmi) and because of her evil luck, the father-in-law had died shortly after the marriage. It has also been alleged that after the marriage, the deceased had conceived but there had been an abortion after being admitted in the hospital. The mother-in-law of the deceased caused severe mental pain by telling her in the hospital itself that she was a woman of evil luck and that she had swallowed her baby and she should commit suicide. It has also been alleged that the husband of the deceased often used to come home drunk and physically assault the deceased. Both the husband and his mother had also caused severe mental torture to the deceased by telling that she had brought bridal presents of sub-standard quality and such articles should be taken back and dowry gifts of good quality should be brought. It has been alleged by the prosecution that as a result of such physical and mental torture by the accused persons, the deceased became unhappy and on several occasions when she had come to her father's house, she complained that she had been maltreated and tortured both physically and mentally with cruelty by the husband and mother-in-law in the manner aforesaid. The trial court convicted both the accused persons under Ss. 306/34 IPC and under Ss. 498-A/34 IPC. On appeal the High Court reversed the conviction order and summed up the following circumstances for the purpose of holding that a grave doubt has been raised against the prosecution story:

(i) There is no satisfactory explanation of delay in lodging the FIR.

(ii) There is no dying declaration or suicidal note.

(iii) There is no letter during the subsistence of marriage.

(iv) There is no letter addressed to the mother who used to live outside Calcutta most of the time.

(v) There is no complaint either by the father or father-in-law of the victim.

(vi) There is no evidence regarding the injuries received by the deceased or the maltreatment.

(vii) No specific date has been given when the deceased had allegedly told her mother about the demand for dowry or the maltreatment and no specific date or time has been given for making such demand.

(4)(v)2. Cruelty — Meaning of - Wilful conduct likely to drive woman to commit suicide (contd.)

(viii) Although the adult members of the family of the deceased consisting of four brothers, sisters and brothers-in-law and father are the residents of Calcutta, the deceased had never complained anything to them.

(ix) The neighbour or tenants have not also been examined.

Held :

In the instant case the trial court has come to the finding that the charges levelled against the accused have been proved by indicating cogent reasons therefor. The circumstances stated by the High Court do not stand scrutiny and they are against the weight of the evidence. The Court should be extremely careful in assessing the facts and circumstances of each case and the evidence adduced in the trial for the purpose of finding whether the cruelty meted out to the victim had in fact induced her to end the life by committing suicide. If it transpires to the Court that a victim committing suicide was hypersensitive to ordinary petulance, discord and differences in domestic life quite common to the society to which the victim belonged and such petulance, discord and differences were not expected to induce a similarly circumstanced individual in a given society to commit suicide, the conscience of the Court should not be satisfied for basing a finding that the accused charged of abetting the offence of suicide should be found guilty. But in the facts and circumstances of the case, there is no material worthy of credence to hold that the deceased was hypersensitive and that for other reasons and not on account of cruelty she had lost normal frame of mind and being overcome by unusual psychic imbalance, decided to end her life by committing suicide. The evidence in the case reveals an act of extreme form of cruelty by telling the unfortunate mother that she was vile enough to swallow her own baby and she should commit suicide. There is also evidence in the case that the husband used to come home drunk and abuse her and also used to assault her on occasions. The bridal presents brought by her were branded as goods of inferior quality and she was asked to take the said articles back to her parental home. Such acts, to say the least, were very unkind and a newly married woman is bound to suffer a great mental pain and humiliation. The evidence of the mother clearly establishes that the deceased had been subjected to physical and mental torture all throughout. The husband, instead of giving her solace against the humiliation and abuses hurled by the mother-in-law, either kept silent or expressed his inability to give good counselling to the mother and to protest against act of mental torture and humiliation. On the contrary, he also treated the wife with cruelty by telling her to take the bridal gifts back to her parental home and also by physically assaulting her. Such acts, were quite likely to destroy the normal frame of mind of the deceased and to drive her to frustration and mental agony and to end her life by committing suicide.

Although there are materials on record to indicate that both the accused were also guilty under S. 306 IPC but we are inclined to give them benefit of doubt so far as the charge under S. 306 IPC is concerned and they are acquitted of the said charge. State of W.B. v. Orilal Jaiswal, (1994) 1 SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 107: AIR 1994 SC 1418: 1994 Cri LJ 2104: (1994) 1 BLJR 267: (1994) 1 Guj LH 537. Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1993]

[10872] — Ss. 498-A Expln. (a) and 511 — Cruelty driving the woman to commit suicide — Accused (husband, mother-in-law and father-in-law) asking the victim to end her life by throwing herself in front of running train — Victim attempting to commit suicide accordingly — But that attempt instead of resulting in her death, maiming her — On facts, accused persons' conviction under S. 498-A upheld — S. 511 not attracted — But while reducing the sentence of imprisonment to the period already undergone, fine enhanced to Rs 1 lakh each for all the three accused, payable by way of compensation to the victim

PW 5, daughter of PW 6, was married to A-1 and was living in her husband's house. A-2 and A-3, parents of A-1, were also living in the same house. According to prosecution, though dowry was given at the time of marriage the appellants started harassing the bride after about 4 or 5 months of the wedding for not giving a car and a house as part of the dowry. They used to hurl taunts on her pertaining to the subject, including telling her that she had brought rags instead of wedding costumes. After about a year i.e. on 12-11-1993 a male child was born to her and one and a half years thereafter i.e. on 10-6-1995, she gave birth to another male child. In the month of Nov. 1995, PW 6 paid Rs 20,000 to A-1. On the night of 16-6-1996, when food was served to A-1, it was noticed that one of the items in the meals (salad) contained excessive salt which made A-1 furious and he unleashed abuses on his wife and then he was profusely supported by his mother and later they were reinforced by his father. They went to the extent of suggesting to her "why not end your life in front of one of the trains as many such trains are running nearby". On 17-6-1996, PW 5 went to the railway track and ran into the rail in front of a running train to end her life. But instead of getting killed she was devastatingly maimed. As the doctors expressed the opinion that her testimonial capacity was not seriously impaired, the prosecution examined her as the prime witness in the case. A-1, A-2 and A-3 were convicted by the Sessions Court under Section 116 read with Section 306 IPC, besides Section 498-A. On the first count they were sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for two and a half years and a fine of Rs 10,000 each, and on the second count they were sentenced to imprisonment for two years and a fine of Rs 5000 each. But the High Court while concurring with the findings made by the Sessions Judge, made an alteration by substituting Section 306 IPC with Section 304-B IPC to be read with Section 116 IPC. Commensurate alteration was made in the quantum of sentence by escalating it to RI for five years each.

Held :

Section 511 makes attempt to commit an offence punishable. The offence attempted should be one punishable by the Code with imprisonment. The conditions stipulated in the provision for completion of the said offence are: (1) The offender should have done some act towards commission of the main offence. (2) Such an attempt is not expressly covered as a penal provision elsewhere in the Code. Thus, "attempt" on the part of the accused is the sine qua non for the offence under Section 511. (Paras 10 and 11)

In this case the act attributed to the appellants was that they asked the victim PW 5 to go to the rail track and commit suicide and that act was alleged to have driven her to proceed to the railway line on the next morning to be run over by the train. This act is expressly made punishable under Section 498-A IPC. That being so, the act involved therein stands lifted out of the purview of Section 511 IPC. The very policy underlying Section 511 seems to be for providing it as a residuary provision. The corollary, therefore, is that the accused, in this case, cannot be convicted under Section 511 on account of the acts alleged against him. (Para 12)

There is no reason to interfere with the conviction passed on the appellants under Section 498-A IPC. A-1 has undergone the substantial portion of the sentence of imprisonment imposed on him and the remaining appellants have also undergone a long period of imprisonment by now in connection with this case. But the fine portion of the sentence imposed on the appellants is too insufficient, particularly when such fine was intended to be disbursed as compensation to PW 5. PW 5 should get at least three lakhs of rupees as compensation from the appellants. A-2 and A-3 have now become aged as both have crossed the age of 70. Therefore, the sentence under Section 498-A is modified in the following terms: The sentence of imprisonment imposed on the appellants shall stand reduced to the period which they have already undergone. But the fine part of the sentence is enhanced to Rs one lakh each for all the three appellants. They shall remit the fine amount in the trial court, within three months from today, failing which each of the defaulters shall undergo imprisonment for a further period of nine months. (Para 27). Satvir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2001) 8 SCC 633: 2002 SCC (Cri) 48: AIR 2001 SC 2828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-2001]

3. Wilful conduct likely to cause grave injury or danger to health (mental or physical) of woman

[10873] — S. 498-A — Absence of pain or distress — Effect — Held, High Court was not right in sustaining appellant's conviction under S. 498-A IPC, when there was no specific evidence that deceased wife was subjected to pain or distress — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13(1)(i-a)

The world "cruelty" in common English acceptation denotes a state of conduct which is painful and distressing to another. The legislative intent in Section 498-A is clear enough to indicate that in the event of there being a state of conduct by the husband to the wife or by any relative of the husband, which can be attributed to be painful or distressing, the same would be within the meaning of the section. In the instant case, there is no evidence to support the appellant's conviction under Section 498-A. No outside person has been called to give evidence. The persons who deposed, though interested witnesses, did not suggest cruelty. (Para 25)

Torture is a question of fact. There must be a proper effort to prove it. Even an attempt has not been made in the present case, nor is there any evidence, except an interpolation in the FIR which has already been disbelieved by the High Court. The appellant's conviction under Section 498-A cannot therefore stand. (Paras 26 and 27). Arvind Singh v. State of Bihar, (2001) 6 SCC 407: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1148: AIR 2001 SC 2124: 2001 Cri LJ 2556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2001]

(4)(v)3. Cruelty — Meaning of - Wilful conduct likely to cause grave injury or danger to health (mental or physical) of woman (contd.)

[10874] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Teasing of the deceased wife by appellant husband, ill-treating her for her mistakes which could were pardonable and turning her out of the house, once beating her inside the house at the odd hours of night, held on facts, amounted to cruelty within the meaning of S. 498-A — Hence conviction of appellant under S. 498-A upheld (Para 8). Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2001) 9 SCC 618: AIR 2001 SC 3837.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

[10875] — S. 498-A — "Cruelty" — What amounts to — Deceased wife's annoyance due to a relative's children being looked after in the husband's home, held, does not amount to her being treated cruelly or being harassed (Para 14). Lella Srinivasa Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 9 SCC 713: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1479: AIR 2004 SC 1720.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2004]

[10876] — S. 498-A — Husband or relatives subjecting woman to cruelty — Complaints to Women's Protection Cell — Mental cruelty — Hypersensitivity and panic reaction of complainant-spouse cannot be used to cast blame on and make out a case of mental cruelty — Wife's parents seeking help of Women's Protection Cell in bringing about reconciliation between estranged spouses — No evidence of harassment by the Cell — However in panic husband and family members seeking anticipatory bail — Held, representation made by wife's parents to Women's Protection Cell did not amount to mental cruelty — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13(1)(ia). S. Hanumantha Rao v. S. Ramani, (1999) 3 SCC 620: AIR 1999 SC 1318.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.N. Khare and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1999]

[10877] — Ss. 498-A Expln. and 306 — Mental cruelty — Determination of — Necessary factors that should be taken into account in respect thereof, stated — In the instant case, the continuous taunting or teasing of the deceased by the appellants on one ground or the other amounted to mental cruelty drawing her to end her life

Whether one spouse has been guilty of cruelty to the other is essentially a question of fact. The impact of complaints, accusations or taunts on a person amounting to cruelty depends on various factors like the sensitivity of the individual victim concerned, the social background, the environment, education etc. Further, mental cruelty varies from person to person depending on the intensity of sensitivity and the degree of courage or endurance to withstand such mental cruelty. Each case has to be decided on its own facts to decide whether the mental cruelty was established or not. In the facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court rightly concluded that the continuous taunting or teasing of the deceased by the appellants on one ground or the other amounted to mental cruelty drawing her to end her life. (Para 6). Mohd. Hoshan v. State of A.P., (2002) 7 SCC 414: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1765: AIR 2002 SC 3270.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2002]

[10878] — S. 498-A Expln. (a) — 'Cruelty' — Includes mental cruelty also — 'Wilful conduct' in Expln. (a) — Meaning — Can be inferred by direct or indirect evidence

Cruelty or harassment need not be physical. Even mental torture in a given case would be a case of cruelty and harassment within the meaning of Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC. Explanation (a) to Section 498-A itself refers to both mental and physical cruelty. Again wilful conduct means, conduct wilfully done; this may be inferred by direct or indirect evidence which could be construed to be such. A girl dreams of great days ahead with hope and aspiration when entering into a marriage, and if from the very next day the husband starts taunting her for not bringing dowry and calling her ugly, there cannot be greater mental torture, harassment or cruelty for any bride. Pawan Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1998) 3 SCC 309: 1998 SCC (Cri) 740: AIR 1998 SC 958: 1998 Cri LJ 1144.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchi, C.J. and A.P. Misra, J. [Date of decision: 9-2-1998]

4. Harassment to meet unlawful demand for property or valuable security — Dowry demand

See also under Ss. 304-B and 306, above

[10879] — S. 498-A — Applicability — "Cruelty" — Dowry demand if covered — Acquittal under Dowry Prohibition Act — Effect — A-1 (mother-in-law of deceased) alleged to have set the deceased on fire with the help of appellant-accused (husband of the deceased) and his brother resulting in her death, for non-fulfilment of dowry — To substantiate plea of dowry demand three letters exhibited (Exts. P-2 to P-4) — Submission by appellant that when the High Court had directed acquittal from the charges relatable to Ss. 3, 4 and 6 of Dowry Prohibition Act, on the selfsame evidence, the High Court could not have held him guilty under S. 498-A and further, letters on which the trial court and the High Court placed reliance did not, in any event, show demand of dowry or any valuables — Held, S. 498-A does not specifically speak of a dowry demand but only of unlawful demand for property and valuable articles — In the instant case, there is no evidence on record on this aspect of any such demand — Even in the letters, on which prosecution placed heavy reliance, there is no reference to any demand of dowry — On the contrary, the deceased had objected to her parents not paying for something for which A-1 had spent the money — Evidence also showing that half of the marriage expenses were borne by the appellant-accused and his family — Ext. P-4, on which strong reliance was placed by prosecution not showing any dowry demand but only apprehension of a second marriage — Moreover, said letter was written three years prior to the occurrence — Hence, appellant-accused cannot be held guilty under S. 498-A — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3, 4 and 6 (Paras 2, 5, 8 and 10). Shivanand Mallappa Koti v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 13 SCC 68: AIR 2007 SC 2314: (2007) 57 AIC 140 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-6-2007]

[10880] — S. 498-A — Applicability — Deceased when returned to her parental home six months after "gauna" ceremony informing PW 1 that if he did not give ring and chain to her, accused would kill her — Held, appellant rightly convicted under S. 498-A and sentenced to 3 years' RI and fine of Rs 2000 (Paras 21, 22 and 32). Suresh Kumar Singh v. State of U.P, (2009) 17 SCC 243: (2009) 3 ECrN 451 (SC): (2009) 4 All LJ 662.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[10881] — S. 498-A — Conviction of husband under — Propriety — Husband constantly teasing and harassing his wife as he was wholly dissatisfied with the dowry given at the time of marriage — Demanding more money and some other articles from her parents — Held, charge under S. 498-A fully established — Conviction thereunder upheld (Para 10). Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592: AIR 2004 SC 1990: 2004 All LJ 1448: 2004 Cri LJ 2025.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2004]

[10882] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Ingredients — Restated — Further held, for the purpose of S. 498-A IPC, harassment simpliciter is not "cruelty" and it is only when harassment is committed for the purpose of coercing a woman or any other person related to her to meet an unlawful demand for property, etc. that it amounts to "cruelty" punishable under S. 498-A IPC (Paras 16 to 18). State of A.P. v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 15 SCC 582: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1123: (2009) 1 ECrN 489 (SC): (2008) 71 AIC 8 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

[10883] — S. 498-A — "Cruelty" (as a ground for divorce) — Meaning and proof of — Continuous demands of dowry made on wife in her matrimonial house with the connivance of husband, held on facts, constituted cruelty on the wife entitling her to decree for divorce — Evidence of harassment or of intention to treat with cruelty not essential to establish cruelty — Court would draw inference and decide on the basis of preponderance of probabilities having regard to the nature of conduct of the other spouse and its impact on the complaining spouse in the context of their standard of life — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — Dowry Prohibition (Amendment) Act, 1984 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 13(1)(i-a). Shobha Rani v. Madhukar Reddi, (1988) 1 SCC 105: 1988 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1988 SC 121: (1988) 1 HLR 169: 1988 BLJR 138.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-1987]

[10884] — S. 498-A — Demand by husband of some money from wife having money and assets purely for personal expenses for himself would not constitute a demand for dowry amounting to "cruelty" — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. Shobha Rani v. Madhukar Reddi, (1988) 1 SCC 105: 1988 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1988 SC 121: (1988) 1 HLR 169: 1988 BLJR 138.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-1987]

[10885] — S. 498-A — "Dowry" — Demand of son in adoption — Held, would not amount to dowry demand so as to attract provisions of S. 498-A (Para 20). Bhaskar Ramappa Madar v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 11 SCC 690: 2009 Cri LJ 2422.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2009]

(4)(v)4. Cruelty — Meaning of - Harassment to meet unlawful demand for property or valuable security — Dowry demand (contd.)

[10886] — S. 498-A — Dowry demand — When demand was made — Evidence — Contradiction in evidence as regards timing of the demand held is a material contradiction which goes to the root of the prosecution case

There was also contradiction between the statements of the deceased's mother and deceased's brother in regard to the timing of the demand which is a material contradiction which goes to the root of the prosecution case. (Para 17). Sakatar Singh v. State of Haryana, (2004) 11 SCC 291: AIR 2004 SC 2570: 2004 Cri LJ 2076.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2004]

[10887] — S. 498-A — Ill-treatment of wife by husband for getting money from her mother — Evidence as to — Rejection of, due to inconsistency as to exact demand made by husband — Propriety — Evidence indicating that husband had been making demands and the quantum differed from time to time — Held, it was wholly unreasonable to reject the evidence of witnesses merely on the ground that there was no consistency as to the exact amount demanded by the husband (Paras 10 and 9). State of Karnataka v. K. Gopalakrishna, (2005) 9 SCC 291: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1237: AIR 2005 SC 1014: 2005 Cri LJ 1436.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

[10888] — S. 498-A — Settlement of dowry dispute through Panchayat — Culpability under S. 498-A — Dispute between the deceased and family of the appellants for non-fulfilment of dowry and consequent maltreatment, initially settled through a Panchayat and later through a senior SP by recording a compromise wherein it was stated that "the accused and his family would be responsible for any loss caused to the lady" — Demand for dowry and deliberations before the Panchayat proved — Conviction of appellants under S. 498-A upheld (Paras 31 to 34). Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 283: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 715: AIR 2006 SC 3221: 2006 Cri LJ 4646: (2006) 47 AIC 600 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-2006]

[10889] — S. 498-A — Subjecting woman to cruelty by husband and his relatives — Absence of proof of demand of dowry or harassment by accused — High Court found that only allegation made in FIR was that appellant-accused and his family members started harassing appellant's wife for not bringing more dowry — But there was no demand for dowry, nor was there any specific entrustment of dowry articles to accused as alleged in FIR — Held, offence under S. 498-A not made out (Para 12). Pashaura Singh v. State of Punjab, (2010) 11 SCC 749: AIR 2010 SC 922: (2009) 4 APLJ 122 (SC): 2010 Cri LJ 875: (2010) 2 Guj LR 1817: (2010) 1 ECrN 708 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2009]

[10890] — Ss. 498-A, 306 and 304-B — Conviction of appellant under — Sustainability — Dowry death — On facts, originally five accused faced trial under Ss. 498-A, 306 and 304-B, but trial court convicted only A-3 (mother-in-law of the victim), while acquitting appellant A-1 (husband of the victim) and other co-accused — However, High Court while dismissing appeal of A-3, allowed appeal by State, thereby convicting appellant husband under aforementioned sections — Conviction by High Court rested on the letter written by the deceased to her father, PW 1, referring to the demand of gold ring by her mother-in-law, and that according to High Court, it also related to demand of Rs 10,000 by appellant husband — Validity of — Held, sentence in the letter was read out of context — Deceased had written in the letter that she may have to get a gold ring but wherefrom will she get the money for buying it — There was no reference to any demand of money by the appellant — That being so, High Court was not justified in upsetting the acquittal by trial court

In the letter on which both the trial court and the High Court have relied upon to conclude one way or the other, reference is made to several earlier letters. It specifically refers to the demand by mother-in-law of a gold ring. There is no reference to the present appellant in the letter. (Para 9)

The evidence of PWs 1 to 3 (father, mother and elder sister of the deceased, respectively), is also relevant. PW 1 has stated that except Ext. 19 (letter of the deceased to PW 1), he had not received any letter and the statement in the letter to the effect that the deceased had earlier sent 2/3 letters is correct. If on one hand he says that he had not received any letter, the question of not replying to them does not arise. Similarly, PW 2 has stated that she cannot say whether there was any demand of Rs 10,000 in Ext. 19. PW 3 has accepted that the deceased had written to her father that her mother-in-law was demanding a gold ring in the letter (Ext. 19). (Para 10)

State submitted that there is some reference to money in the letter. The sentence is being read out of context. The deceased had written in the letter that she may have to get a gold ring but wherefrom will she get the money for buying it. Therefore, there is no reference to any demand of money by the appellant. That being so, the High Court was not justified in upsetting the judgment of the trial court. The impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside and that of the trial court is restored. (Para 11). Vijay v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 2 SCC 87: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 674: AIR 2009 SC 1217: (2009) 75 AIC 135 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2008]

[10891] — S. 498-A Explns. (a) and (b) — Applicability — Held, basic ingredients of S. 498-A are cruelty and harassment — Further held, in Expln. (b) which relates to harassment there is absence of physical injury but it includes coercive harassment for demand of dowry — It deals with patent or latent acts of the husband or his family members (Paras 14 to 22). Undavalli Narayana Rao v. State of A.P., (2009) 14 SCC 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-2009]

S. Hanumantha Rao v. S. Ramani, (1999) 3 SCC 620; V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat, (1994) 1 SCC 337; Mohd. Hoshan v. State of A.P., (2002) 7 SCC 414: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1765; Raj Rani v. State (Delhi Admn.), (2000) 10 SCC 662: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1518; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473; Girdhar Shankar Tawade v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 5 SCC 177: 2002 SCC (Cri) 971, considered and relied on

[10892] — S. 498-A Expln. (b) — Repeated dowry demands made and harassment meted out to deceased housewife by accused husband and father-in-law proved — Minor inconsistencies as to precise nature of articles demanded as dowry not significant — Hence conviction and sentence under S. 498-A upheld

In this case there was ample evidence that repeated demands were made inter alia by the accused husband and his father on the deceased wife, her parents and her brother for articles of dowry and money. There is also evidence that deceased made statements after her marriage and right up to the time when she died that she and her parents were being harassed by her husband and his father and his family members for various dowry articles and also for money. There were some inconsistencies regarding the precise nature of the articles demanded but these inconsistencies are of little importance, considering the volume of evidence showing that repeated demands were made for various articles of dowry and money on deceased and her parents. The most telling circumstance was that after the death of the deceased a large number of dowry articles had been taken back by deceased's family members from accused's residence which were admittedly being given as dowry. There is also substantial evidence to show that an amount of Rs 20,000 to Rs 25,000 was demanded from the brother of deceased and her mother by the accused husband for setting up the accused husband in business and they were unable to satisfy these demands. Therefore, the conviction and sentence imposed on the father-in-law and the husband of the deceased under S. 498-A, IPC are confirmed. Wazir Chand v. State of Haryana, (1989) 1 SCC 244: 1989 SCC (Cri) 105: AIR 1989 SC 378: 1989 Cri LJ 809.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and M.H. Kania, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-1988]

5. Presumption under Ss. 113-A/113-B, Evidence Act

See also under Ss. 304-B and 306, above

[10893] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Degree and standard of proof — Held, requirement of proof beyond all reasonable doubts not altered even after introduction of S. 498-A IPC and S. 113-A of Evidence Act — Before recording a finding of guilt court must satisfy itself that deceased was not hypersensitive — Also exaggerated devotion to rule of benefit of doubt must not nurture fanciful doubts or lingering suspicions and thereby destroy social defence — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

The requirement of proof beyond reasonable doubt does not stand altered even after the introduction of S. 498-A IPC and S. 113-A of Indian Evidence Act. Although, the court's conscience must be satisfied that the accused is not held guilty when there are reasonable doubts about the complicity of the accused in respect of the offences alleged, it should be borne in mind that there is no absolute standard for proof in a criminal trial and the question whether the charges made against the accused have been proved beyond all reasonable doubts must depend upon the facts and circumstances of the case and the quality of the evidences adduced in the case and the materials placed on record. The doubt must be of a reasonable man and the standard adopted must be a standard adopted by a reasonable and just man for coming to a conclusion considering the particular subject-matter. State of W.B. v. Orilal Jaiswal, (1994) 1 SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 107: AIR 1994 SC 1418: 1994 Cri LJ 2104: (1994) 1 BLJR 267: (1994) 1 Guj LH 537.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1993]

(4)(v)5. Cruelty — Meaning of - Presumption under Ss. 113-A/113-B, Evidence Act (contd.)

[10894] — S. 498-A — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 113-A — Both these provisions include in their amplitude past events of cruelty

Section 498-A IPC and Section 113-A of the Evidence Act include in their amplitude past events of cruelty. Period of operation of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act is seven years; presumption arises as to dowry death when a woman committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of marriage. (Para 11). Hira Lal v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2003) 8 SCC 80: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2016: AIR 2003 SC 2865: (2003) 105 DLT 705: 2003 Cri LJ 3711.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2003]

[10895] — S. 498-A — S. 113-A, Evidence Act — Both the provisions include in their amplitude past events of cruelty — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

Section 498-A IPC and Section 113-A of the Evidence Act include in their amplitude past events of cruelty. The period of operation of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act is seven years; presumption arises as to dowry death when a woman committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of marriage. (Para 7). Kaliyaperumal v. State of T.N., (2004) 9 SCC 157: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1417: AIR 2003 SC 3828: 2003 Cri LJ 4321.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2003]

[10896] — S. 498-A — Relevant evidence for — Presumption under S. 113-B, Evidence Act, when arises — Dowry death — Statement of deceased about circumstances relating to cause of her death relevant under S. 32(1) Evidence Act — Deceased's statement before her father and sister about dowry demand of her husband and ill-treatment meted out to her on her inability to satisfy the demand would indicate under S. 32(1) Evidence Act the motive for her murder — However, even assuming it to be not covered by S. 32(1) Evidence Act evidence of father and sister of the deceased would be a relevant fact under S. 8 and would raise presumption under S. 113-B for deciding commission of the offence under S. 498-A IPC — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 32(1), 8, 113-B

Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act, 1872 is wide enough to include statements of the deceased regarding circumstances of the transactions which resulted in his death, i.e., the motive behind the criminal act in question. But even if Section 32 does not cover such evidence, the evidence of these witnesses can certainly be treated to be relevant for deciding whether the accused was guilty of offence under Section 498-A of the Indian Penal Code. Thus, even assuming that Section 32 is inapplicable to the facts of this case the narration of the facts of demand for dowry of sofa, motor cycle etc. and non-supply thereof is a piece of evidence to prove motive for committing the offence of murder. Such evidence would be relevant and admissible under Section 8 of the Evidence Act. The deceased informed her father and sister of the ill-treatment meted out to her due to her inability to secure the articles demanded by her husband. Therefore, the evidence of these witnesses cannot be excluded. Further, Section 113-B of the Evidence Act would also apply. State of U.P. v. Ramesh Prasad Misra, (1996) 10 SCC 360: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1278: AIR 1996 SC 2766.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1996]

[10897] — Ss. 498-A, 107 and 306 — Presumption under — Criteria for invocation of, reiterated — Meaning of "cruelty" under — In Expln. to S. 113-A expression "cruelty" has same meaning as in S. 498-A IPC — Thus, if degree of cruelty is such as to warrant a conviction under S. 498-A, it may be sufficient for a presumption to be drawn under S. 113-A, Evidence Act, 1872 in harmony with S. 107 IPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A with Expln. thereto

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

There is sufficient evidence to bring home the charge under Section 498-A IPC. The question arising is whether there is sufficient evidence on record to indicate that by any of the acts of cruelty attributed to the petitioner, there was an intention to instigate the victim into committing suicide. There is no getting away from the fact that the victim committed suicide in the 4th year of marriage when she was six months' pregnant. Ordinarily, a woman in an advanced stage of pregnancy would not commit suicide even when treated with cruelty. It is only in extreme circumstances that a woman may decide to take her life and that of her unborn child when she reaches a point of no return and is in a mental state to take her own life. (Paras 19 and 21)

Section 113-A of the Evidence Act establishes a link between an offence under Sections 498-A, 107 and 306 IPC, thereby permitting the court to presume the commission of an offence under Section 107 IPC on the basis of evidence adduced to prove an offence under Section 498-A IPC. Evidence of PWs 2, 3, 7, 9, 11 and 13 sufficient to establish prosecution case against petitioner under Ss. 498-A and 306 IPC. (Para 28)

The element of instigation as understood within the meaning of Section 107 IPC is duly satisfied in this case in view of the provisions of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act, 1872. Since the victim committed suicide in the 4th year of her marriage, such condition is duly satisfied. The second condition is that the husband or such relative of the husband had subjected the victim to cruelty which led to the commission of suicide by the victim. Section 113-A indicates that in such circumstances, the court may presume, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, that such suicide had been abetted by her husband or by such relative of her husband. (Para 25)

In the Explanation to Section 113-A it has also been indicated that for the purpose of the said section, the expression "cruelty" would have the same meaning as in Section 498-A IPC. Accordingly, if the degree of cruelty is such as to warrant a conviction under Section 498-A IPC, the same may be sufficient for a presumption to be drawn under Section 113-A of the Evidence Act in harmony with the provisions of Section 107 IPC. (Para 26)

The dying declaration of the victim can be relied upon, notwithstanding the objections raised regarding its veracity. There is no reason to disbelieve either PW 9, Naib Tahsildar and Executive Magistrate, or PW 11, the doctor who attended to victim in the hospital. A dying declaration has to be treated with caution, since the accused does not get a chance to cross-examine the victim. There is no ambiguity or irregularity as far as the dying declaration is concerned and it has been stated in clear and simple language that the victim had been treated with both mental and physical cruelty and the victim has stated quite candidly how she poured kerosene on her body and set herself on fire. The evidence of PW 13, the younger brother of the deceased, corroborates the story of the prosecution as to the manner in which the victim was treated by the petitioner, which triggered her immediate intention to commit suicide which was the culminating point of ill-treatment meted out to her by the petitioner and his mother. (Paras 22 to 24)

There is no reason to interfere with the judgments of the High Court or trial court. (Para 29). Thanu Ram v. State of M.P., (2010) 10 SCC 353: (2010) 4 UPLJ 102 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2010]

Gangula Mohan Reddy v. State of A.P., (2010) 1 SCC 750: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 917; Randhir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 13 SCC 129: 2005 SCC (Cri) 56; Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2001) 9 SCC 618: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1088; Amalendu Pal v. State of W.B., (2010) 1 SCC 707: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 896; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473, distinguished [10898] — S. 498-A and S. 113-B, Evidence Act, 1872 — Scope — Held, substantive S. 498-A IPC and presumptive S. 113-B of the Evidence Act, 1872 include in their amplitude past events of cruelty which need to be proved — Appellant was residing in Coimbatore for last 35 years, while the incident occurred at Pallapatti — Evidence inadequate to show that she was party to any demand for dowry or herself demanded any dowry — Rather, testimony of mother of deceased showing she made no dowry demand — In such circumstances, held, her conviction under S. 498-A cannot be maintained and hence set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-B (Paras 3 to 5, 13, 14, 18 and 19). Noorjahan v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 55: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 915: AIR 2008 SC 2131: (2008) 66 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2008]

[10899] — Ss. 498-A, 306/304-B r/w S. 34 — Acquittal confirmed — Respondent R, with his father and mother acquitted by trial court from charges under Ss. 306/304-B r/w S. 34, while only accused R convicted under S. 498-A — Appeal against acquittal dismissed by High Court in limine — In Supreme Court, acquittal from offence under S. 306 only challenged on grounds that trial Judge had not considered the ingredients of S. 113-A of Evidence Act, 1872 and further he had not given any reason as to why he had acquitted the accused persons under S. 306 IPC particularly when he had convicted Accused 1 for offence under S. 498-A of Penal Code — Held, reasoning of trial Judge that no demand of dowry proved as also no case of abetment to commit suicide is made out, was correct — High Court's approach to dismiss appeal in limine without assigning reasons, however disapproved — CrPC, 1973, S. 378 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

The Additional Sessions Judge had given good reasons as to why the presumption would not arise under Section 113-A, Evidence Act. The Additional Sessions Judge has recorded the finding that there was no material to prove that there was any demand of dowry made by the husband or by the father-in-law or by the mother-in-law. The Additional Sessions Judge has also further found that there was no material on record to prove that there was any cruelty meted out to the deceased to commit suicide. (Para 9)

(4)(v)5. Cruelty — Meaning of - Presumption under Ss. 113-A/113-B, Evidence Act (contd.)

The High Court had not given reasons and had chosen to dismiss the said appeal in limine refusing the leave to file appeal against the acquittal. The course adopted by the High Court cannot be appreciated. Ordinarily, the High Court should have given good reasons even before refusing the leave to file an appeal against the acquittal. That is the established law now. However, sending back the matter again to the High Court would be hazardous as about ten years have elapsed since the death of the deceased. (Para 10)

After overall consideration, the Additional Sessions Judge was correct in acquitting the respondent-accused under Section 306 IPC and the High Court was also correct to refuse the State to file an appeal against the acquittal although the High Court should have given reasons. (Para 11). State of Punjab v. Rajwinder Singh, (2009) 16 SCC 778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-5-2009]

[10900] — S. 498-A and Expln. (a) thereto — Applicability — Conviction under S. 498-A, justified — Torture of deceased at the hands of appellant-accused (husband and in-laws of deceased) resulting in her committing suicide — Reiterated, for application of S. 498-A, consequences of cruelty [defined in Expln. (a) to S. 498-A], which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical, of the woman, are required to be established — Herein, there were materials to show that deceased was being tortured and ill-treated by appellants — Hence, Expln. (a) to S. 498-A has definite application to the facts herein — Additionally, there was no rebuttal by appellants of presumption under S. 113-A, Evidence Act, where court may presume that suicide by woman was abetted by her husband or his relative — Hence, conviction, held, justified — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A (Paras 6 and 11 to 13). Rajendran v. Commr. of Police, (2008) 17 SCC 501: AIR 2009 SC 855: (2009) 74 AIC 234 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-2008]

Hira Lal v. State (Govt. of NCT), Delhi, (2003) 8 SCC 80: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2016, followed

Balwant Singh v. State of H.P., (2008) 15 SCC 497: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1094, relied on

(5) Implication of or relief to relative of husband

See also '(4)(iv) Relative of husband — Who is', above

See also under Ss. 304-B and 306, above

[10901] — S. 498-A — Avoidance of irreparable suffering to accused — Direction for — Appellant-accused, father-in-law of victim, was a foreign (British) citizen whose passport had been impounded — Held, High Court rightly dismissed appellant's application seeking to have the prosecution quashed — However, in order to avoid irreparable suffering to him directions issued to ACJM to return passport to appellant on his executing a bond for a sum of Rs 3 lakhs with two solvent sureties to the satisfaction of the said court — Appellant also permitted to appear through counsel except on days when his presence indispensable — Constitution of India, Art. 136. Gian Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1999) 5 SCC 694: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1035.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-1999]

[10902] — S. 498-A — Complicity of father-in-law of deceased — If established — Evidence only disclosing that A-1, husband of deceased used to harass the deceased as he entertained suspicion about her chastity — Held on facts, there was no material to connect appellant father of A-1 with the offence under S. 498-A — Hence appellant entitled to acquittal so far as charge under S. 498-A is concerned (Para 7). K.R. Soorachari v. State of Karnataka, (2005) 11 SCC 214: AIR 2005 SC 2674: 2005 Cri LJ 3082.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2005]

[10903] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Participation in cruelty — On facts, held, proved — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 113-A

PW 4 and PW 5 have deposed that there had been a demand of dowry by the mother-in-law, husband as well as by the father-in-law. PW 3, however, in her deposition, has stated that the deceased complained to her that the mother-in-law was demanding dowry and harassing her for the same and the other two were silent about it. Therefore, the inference is that connivance of the other two also was there when the deceased was being treated, accordingly. Therefore, the cruelty part of S. 113-A meted out to the deceased is proved. Lakhjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 173: 1994 SCC (Cri) 235.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1993]

[10904] — S. 498-A — Death of housewife by drowning in a well — Ill-treatment meted out to the deceased by her in-laws spreading over years established — Held, in the circumstances of the case, it can be presumed that such ill-treatment continued till she was forced to commit suicide — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114

The evidence of the father of the deceased shows that his daughter's married life in the household of the accused had undergone rough weather all throughout. She was ill-treated both for not bringing dowry amount to the satisfaction of the accused and also for not giving birth to children. Her husband was also contemplating to remarry. The deceased had earlier tried to commit suicide but was saved by neighbours. Even after birth of two sons ill-treatment of his deceased daughter and quarrels with her in-laws continued till the fateful night. It can, therefore, safely be presumed under Section 114 of the Evidence Act that the cruel treatment meted out to the deceased by the accused earlier had continued unabated till the very last when she was forced to commit suicide on that fateful night. Such a presumption of continuance of cruel treatment which is established on record necessarily points an accusing finger to the accused. Such presumption under Section 114 of the Evidence Act has remained unrebutted on record.

It is easy to visualize the unbearable state of affairs on that night when a young housewife having two minor children, the younger one only four and a half years of age, had to jump in the well to end her miserable existence in the house of the accused. Unless the torture to her had become unbearable in the common course of human conduct such a young housewife having commitments to life could not have taken the drastic step to end her life, leaving her infant sons in the lurch and at the mercy of the accused especially when her husband was contemplating a remarriage. Balram Prasad Agrawal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 9 SCC 338: 1997 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1997 SC 1830: 1997 Cri LJ 1640.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1996]

[Ed.: The presumption under S. 113-A could not be raised in this case as the alleged suicide took place seven years after the marriage.]

[10905] — S. 498-A — Death of married woman in her matrimonial house due to extensive burn injuries — A-1, deceased's mother-in-law, her maternal grandmother, A-2 daughter of A-1, A-3 husband of A-2 and A-4 (acquitted) husband of deceased and her maternal uncle — No evidence to indicate that deceased was meted out any ill-treatment or there was any dowry demand — Only grievance made in the dying declaration was that she wanted to live separately but her husband was not prepared and on that score, the husband (acquitted) had beaten her in the afternoon on the previous day — It was then stated therein that her grandmother disliked her — These statements in the dying declaration, held, are not sufficient to substantiate the prosecution case that A-1 to A-3 committed offence under S. 498-A (Para 12). Paparambaka Rosamma v. State of A.P., (1999) 7 SCC 695: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1361: AIR 1999 SC 3455.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.P. Kurdukar, K.T. Thomas and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1999]

[10906] — S. 498-A — Ingredients/prerequisites for presumption of offence under — Whether made out at stage of framing of charge against in-laws — No allegation of wilful conduct of harassment by Appellants 1 and 2 (in-laws) — Allegation that A-3 (husband) wanting the complainant wife to beg apology from, talk with and obey her in-laws as a condition to return back to her conjugal life — Admittedly after 3-7-1994 complainant had never lived with A-1 and A-2 — Complainant alleging dowry demand in her complaint dated 4-4-1995 — The allegation of misbehaviour on the part to A-1 and A-2 and demand of dowry by them, held, was an afterthought and not bona fide — Hence charges quashed against A-1 and A-2 — However, trial directed to continue against A-3 under S. 498-A

Section 498-A IPC was introduced with the avowed object to combat the menace of dowry deaths and harassment to a woman at the hands of her husband or his relatives. Nevertheless, the provision should not be used as a device to achieve oblique motives. (Para 20)

In the complaint dated 8-11-1994 there was not even a whisper of a wilful conduct of Appellants 1 and 2 of harassment of the complainant at their hands with a view to coercing her to meet any unlawful demand by them so as to attract the provisions of Section 498-A read with Explanation thereto. The complaint referred to the talk the complainant purports to have had with her husband, Appellant 3, who is alleged to have told her to come to Bijnore; and if she apologised to his father, kept him happy, obeyed his sister and talked to her father (the complainant's) to give her Rs 50,000 and VCR and bring these articles to Bijnore. The allegation of misbehaviour on the part of Appellants 1 and 2 and the demand of Rs 50,000 and VCR by them made by the complainant in her subsequent statement, dated 4-4-1995, was an afterthought and not bona fide. (Paras 19 to 20 and 9). Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507: (2008) 62 AIC 155 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2007]

[10907] — S. 498-A — Prima facie evidence of commission of offence under — Nature, scope and applicability of S. 319 CrPC — Quashment of process issued under S. 319 CrPC — When proper — Magistrate finding prima facie evidence and issuing process under S. 319 CrPC against appellant-accused named in FIR but police in its charge-sheet dropping charges against said accused — High Court not finding any illegality or perversity in issuance of process under S. 319 CrPC — Legality — Held, the process issued under S. 319 is legal and could not be quashed under S. 482 CrPC on ground that police did not file charge-sheet — Prima facie evidence of commission of offence under — CrPC, 1898, S. 351 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 319 and 482 (Paras 36 and 35). Suman v. State of Rajasthan, (2010) 1 SCC 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2009]

[10908] — S. 498-A — Prima facie evidence of commission of offence under — Existence of — Applicability of S. 319 CrPC — Complainant wife alleging that mother-in-law and appellant-accused (sister-in-law) castigating her for insufficient dowry and subjecting her to physical and mental harassment and that appellant-accused instigating complainant's husband to inflict physical torture, that only after about one week after marriage, mother-in-law and appellant telling her that in the marriage, items like scooter, fridge, air conditioner, etc. were not given and marriage party was not served well and that on instigations of mother-in-law and appellant, the husband gave beating with belan and appellant forcibly removed her rings — Complainant's allegations in FIR clearly corroborated in her S. 161 CrPC statement recorded by police and statement of witnesses — Effect — Held, there is prima facie evidence against appellant to proceed under S. 319 CrPC

Respondent 2 wife lodged a complaint under Section 498-A against her in-laws. However, the police after investigation filed a negative final report in respect of the appellant (accused sister-in-law). The Magistrate took cognizance against the accused sister-in-law under Section 319 CrPC.

Dismissing the appeal of the accused sister-in-law,

Held :

A reading of the plain language of Section 319(1) CrPC makes it clear that a person not already an accused in a case can be proceeded against if in the course of any inquiry into or trial of an offence it appears from the evidence that such person has also committed any offence and deserves to be tried with other accused. There is nothing in the language of Section 319(1) CrPC from which it can be inferred that a person who is named in the FIR or complaint but against whom charge-sheet is not filed by the police, cannot be proceeded against even though in the course of any inquiry into or trial of any offence the court finds that such person has committed any offence for which he could be tried together with the other accused. (Paras 17, 14 and 15)

The process issued against the appellant under Section 319 CrPC cannot be quashed only on the ground that even though she was named in the complaint, the police did not file charge-sheet against her. A person who is named in the FIR or complaint with the allegation that he/she has committed any particular crime or offence, but against whom the police does not launch prosecution or files charge-sheet or drops the case, can be proceeded against under Section 319 CrPC if from the evidence collected/produced in the course of any inquiry into or trial of an offence, the court is prima facie satisfied that such person has committed any offence for which he can be tried with other accused. (Paras 27 and 21)

The Magistrate had objectively considered the entire matter and judiciously exercised discretion under Section 319 CrPC for taking cognizance against the appellant. The issue of summons against the appellant was not an abuse of the process of the court. While deciding the application filed under Section 319 CrPC, the Magistrate noticed the allegations made by Respondent 2 in the complaint that her mother-in-law and sister-in-law had castigated her for insufficient dowry and subjected her to physical and mental harassment and that the sister-in-law had instigated the complainant's husband to inflict physical torture upon her, which were supported by the statements recorded by the police under Section 161 CrPC and by the Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC. In her complaint Respondent 2 alleged that after one week of the marriage, her mother-in-law and sister-in-law (the appellant) told her that in the marriage, items like scooter, fridge, air conditioner, etc. were not given and the marriage party was not served well and that on the instigations of the mother-in-law and the appellant sister-in-law, the husband gave beating with the belan and the appellant forcibly removed the rings. (Paras 35, 34 and 32)

The complainant clearly spelt out the role played by the appellant and made a specific mention about this in the letters written to her parents and the Magistrate opined that a prima facie case was made out for issuing process against the appellant. The father and mother of Respondent 2 and four other persons, whose statements were recorded under Section 161 CrPC, clearly spelt out the role played by the appellant in harassing Respondent 2 and instigating the complainant's husband to inflict torture upon her. Despite this, the police did not file charge-sheet against the appellant thinking that she had no occasion to make demand for dowry or harass Respondent 2 because the appellant was living with her husband. Therefore, the trial of the appellant should proceed and should be decided expeditiously. (Paras 35, 33 and 37)

The High Court broadly referred to the factual matrix of the case and held that the orders passed by the Magistrate and Sessions Judge did not suffer from any illegality or perversity warranting interference under Section 482 CrPC. The approach adopted by the High Court is in consonance with the settled law. Although at one stage, the Sessions Judge allowed the revision filed by the appellant and declared that in view of the bar of limitation contained in Section 468 CrPC, the Magistrate could not have taken cognizance against the appellant, the said order was set aside by the High Court and the matter was remitted for fresh disposal of the revision petition. In the post remand order passed by him, the Sessions Judge independently examined the entire record and held that prima facie case was made out for initiating proceedings against the appellant herein under Section 498-A IPC. (Paras 36 and 35). Suman v. State of Rajasthan, (2010) 1 SCC 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2009]

Joginder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 1 SCC 345: 1979 SCC (Cri) 295; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; Lok Ram v. Nihal Singh, (2006) 10 SCC 192: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 532; Michael Machado v. CBI, (2000) 3 SCC 262: 2000 SCC (Cri) 609; Anil Singh v. State of Bihar, (2006) 13 SCC 421: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 708; Mohd. Shafi v. Mohd. Rafiq, (2007) 14 SCC 544: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 889; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, relied on [10909] — S. 498-A — Quashing of charge under S. 498-A IPC against parents-in-law of complainant-wife by High Court on the basis of concession made by the Government Advocate without going through the record, held, was improper — On facts, there was sufficient material on record to frame a charge under S. 498-A against them — Government Advocates must conduct the case in more responsible manner in such cases — High Court also should verify the record before accepting the concession — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482. Deepti v. Akhil Rai, (1995) 5 SCC 751: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1020.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1995]

[10910] — S. 498-A — Relief — Acquittal of appellant — Case of co-accused, who had undergone sentence after the dismissal of her SLP by Supreme Court, standing on same footing — Acquittal therefore recorded in favour of co-accused also — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Para 14). Lella Srinivasa Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 9 SCC 713: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1479: AIR 2004 SC 1720.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2004]

[10911] — S. 498-A — S. 113-B, Evidence Act, 1872 — Conviction of husband but acquittal of relatives of husband — High Court by impugned judgment convicting Appellants 1, 2 and 3 (husband, mother-in-law and brother-in-law respectively) under S. 498-A, while acquitting remaining co-accused finding evidence against them insufficient to sustain conviction — Submission by appellants that there were lots of inconsistencies and improvements in testimonies of PWs, yet High Court chose to direct acquittal only of two persons while upholding the conviction on the self-serving evidence qua the appellants — In FIR thrust of allegations was primarily directed against the acquitted accused persons — Besides, lots of improvements in testimonies of PWs were noticed which primarily related to Appellants 2 and 3 — Hence held, acquittal as directed qua the co-accused persons should have also been done in the case of Appellants 2 and 3 — However, evidence of PWs clearly establishes allegations against Appellant 1 — No infirmity in judgment of High Court upholding his conviction — Considering the fact that he had already undergone custody for thirteen months, sentence reduced to period already undergone — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-B (Paras 10 to 14). Satish Kumar Batra v. State of Haryana, (2009) 12 SCC 491: AIR 2009 SC 2180: 2009 Cri LJ 2447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-2009]

Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281, followed

[10912] — Ss. 498-A, 302/34 and 304-B — Death of housewife by burning — Charge of murder against parents-in-law of the deceased not established — Evidence on record showing that parents-in-law of the deceased subjected her to cruelty leading to the inference that she committed self-immolation unable to bear the cruelty of her in-laws any more — Circumstances probabilising the defence version that the deceased committed self-immolation — There being no allegation of harassment on account of demand of dowry S. 304-B would not apply — In the circumstances of the case, conviction of the appellants altered from Ss. 302/34 to S. 498-A and sentence reduced to the period already undergone. Kanchy Komuramma v. State of A.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 118: 1996 SCC (Cri) 31.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1994]

[10913] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Conviction justified under S. 498-A — Sentence warranted against aged parents-in-law of deceased — Accused-appellants 1 to 4 (father-in-law, husband, brother-in-law and mother-in-law respectively of deceased) alleged to have harassed and ill-treated deceased over dowry demand — Deceased found lying dead in verandah of her matrimonial home, and none of the accused present — Trial court finding accused guilty under Ss. 498-A and 306 — In appeal filed thereagainst, High Court convicting them only under S. 498-A and imposing sentence of one year — Sustainability — Held, there is no material to establish guilt of A-3 i.e. brother-in-law of the deceased, and hence, he acquitted — So far as the other three accused persons are concerned, the accusations have been established by evidence of PWs 3, 4 and 5, documentary evidence, and exhibited letters and the convictions recorded so far as they are concerned, cannot be faulted — However, considering age of the father-in-law and mother-in-law (A-1 and A-4) and period of sentence already undergone by them, while upholding their conviction, sentence reduced to the period already undergone — Conviction and sentence of A-2 maintained (Paras 3 and 11 to 13). Balwant Singh v. State of H.P., (2008) 15 SCC 497: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1094: (2008) 71 AIC 153 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4683.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2008]

M. Srinivasulu v. State of A.P., (2007) 12 SCC 443: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 169; Kaliyaperumal v. State of T.N., (2004) 9 SCC 157, relied on

Balwant Singh v. State, (2001) 1 Shim LC 446 (HP), partly affirmed

[10914] — Ss. 498-A, 306 and 304-B — Conviction of appellant under — Sustainability — Dowry death — On facts, originally five accused faced trial under Ss. 498-A, 306 and 304-B, but trial court convicted only A-3 (mother-in-law of the victim), while acquitting appellant A-1 (husband of the victim) and other co-accused — However, High Court while dismissing appeal of A-3, allowed appeal by State, thereby convicting appellant husband under aforementioned sections — Conviction by High Court rested on the letter written by the deceased to her father, PW 1, referring to the demand of gold ring by her mother-in-law, and that according to High Court, it also related to demand of Rs 10,000 by appellant husband — Validity of — Held, sentence in the letter was read out of context — Deceased had written in the letter that she may have to get a gold ring but wherefrom will she get the money for buying it — There was no reference to any demand of money by the appellant — That being so, High Court was not justified in upsetting the acquittal by trial court

In the letter on which both the trial court and the High Court have relied upon to conclude one way or the other, reference is made to several earlier letters. It specifically refers to the demand by mother-in-law of a gold ring. There is no reference to the present appellant in the letter. (Para 9)

The evidence of PWs 1 to 3 (father, mother and elder sister of the deceased, respectively), is also relevant. PW 1 has stated that except Ext. 19 (letter of the deceased to PW 1), he had not received any letter and the statement in the letter to the effect that the deceased had earlier sent 2/3 letters is correct. If on one hand he says that he had not received any letter, the question of not replying to them does not arise. Similarly, PW 2 has stated that she cannot say whether there was any demand of Rs 10,000 in Ext. 19. PW 3 has accepted that the deceased had written to her father that her mother-in-law was demanding a gold ring in the letter (Ext. 19). (Para 10)

State submitted that there is some reference to money in the letter. The sentence is being read out of context. The deceased had written in the letter that she may have to get a gold ring but wherefrom will she get the money for buying it. Therefore, there is no reference to any demand of money by the appellant. That being so, the High Court was not justified in upsetting the judgment of the trial court. The impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside and that of the trial court is restored. (Para 11). Vijay v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 2 SCC 87: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 674: AIR 2009 SC 1217: (2009) 75 AIC 135 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2008]

[10915] — Ss. 498-A & 306 r/w S. 34 — Conviction reversed — A-1 to A-5 (father-in-law, mother-in-law, husband, brother-in-law and sister-in-law respectively) alleged to have meted out cruelty to deceased abetting her to commit suicide — High Court in appeal against their acquittal by impugned judgment convicted the accused under Ss. 498-A & 306 r/w S. 34 — No circumstance indicated by High Court to connect the appellants (A-2, A-4 and A-5) with alleged crime (A-1 died during pendency of appeal and SLP filed by A-3 was dismissed) — Hence held, their conviction cannot be sustained (Paras 2, 3 and 7 to 9). Shindhu v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 7 SCC 246: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 367: (2009) 81 AIC 177 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[10916] — Ss. 498-A & 406 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Whether allegations in FIR made out the offence of which cognizance could be taken — Allegations against appellant sister-in-law only relating to causing insult, making derogatory remarks and behaving rudely against informant and not pertaining to dowry demand or entrustment and misappropriation of property belonging to her — Allegations of abetment of alleged offences, also not made against this appellant — Held, alleged offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act on facts not made out from such allegations, hence Magistrate not justified in taking cognizance thereof — Proceedings liable to be quashed — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Para 6). Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735: AIR 2005 SC 1989: 2005 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2005]

[10917] — Ss. 498-A, 406 and 34 — Applicability — Cruelty to married woman — Allegations of — Ingredients for presumption of offence under — Whether made out — Complaint filed by respondent against husband and his appellant parents — Summons and non-bailable warrants issued against appellants — High Court dismissing application for quashing summoning order — Appeal against — Held, allegations relating to place where marriage took place have nothing to do with offence under S. 498-A IPC — Allegations that A-2 (mother-in-law) kicked respondent and told her that her mother was a liar, may make out some other offence but not one punishable under S. 498-A — Allegations that A-2 poisoned ears of her son against respondent; she gave two used lady's suits of her daughter to complainant; giving perpetual sermons to complainant; threatening her son may be divorced for the second time, held, do not give rise to offences punishable under S. 498-A — No case made out under S. 498-A IPC — Hence, summoning order passed against appellants, except A-2 set aside as proceedings against her could continue under S. 406 IPC only — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 32, 36, 37, 40 and 61)

Respondent M married V, son of the appellants. V was a divorcee who had two children from his first wife. The marriage with the respondent took place on 16-1-2004. Shortly thereafter the relationship between the parties deteriorated. During this entire period including the period after she left her matrimonial home in June 2004, the parties communicated with each other through e-mails.

M filed a complaint under Sections 498-A, 406 and 34 IPC against her husband V and the appellants. An application for grant of maintenance was also filed claiming maintenance of a sum of Rs 2 lakhs per month as also an order of interim maintenance of Rs 2 lakhs per month till the disposal of the case. Her application for grant of interim maintenance was allowed by the Metropolitan Magistrate at the rate of Rs 5000 per month. Non-bailable warrants of arrest were also issued against the appellants as also V. The respondent filed a revision application before the High Court seeking increase in the maintenance. The High Court enhanced the interim maintenance to Rs 50,000 per month. Subsequently the appellants as also V filed an application for quashing the order directing issuance of non-bailable warrants against them. The High Court stayed the order issuing non-bailable warrants against the appellants with an undertaking that V and the appellants would appear before the Magistrate.

The appellants along with V also filed an application for quashing of the summoning order passed by the Magistrate summoning them for attending the trial court. The appellants and their son came to India; they appeared before the Magistrate; they were admitted to bail.

The High Court in criminal revision directed impounding of the passport of V stating that efforts were being made for reconciliation. Talks of reconciliation failed. The High Court modified the said finding stating that the marriage seems to have broken down irretrievably and directed return of the passport to V. Pursuant to the liberty granted by the High Court, the appellants as also V filed an application for permission to go abroad, which was allowed subject to the condition that additional bank guarantees be furnished of Rs 1 lakh for each of the applicants. M filed a criminal complaint under Section 420 IPC against the appellants and V inter alia alleging all material facts relating to the first marriage and divorce, and in particular the fact that the first wife of V in her divorce suit alleged acts of cruelty on the part of her husband had not been disclosed.

For one reason or the other the appellants having failed to attend the Court of the Metropolitan Magistrate, M filed an application for attachment of the ancestral property of Appellant 1. Interpol also was sounded. Orders were passed for attachment of the property in terms of Section 83 CrPC situated both at Delhi as also the ancestral house of Appellant 1 at Jaipur.

The High Court dismissed the application for quashing the summoning order filed by the appellants. The appellants had thus filed the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal in terms below, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

Parliament by Act 46 of 1983 with a view to combat the menace of dowry deaths and harassment of woman at the hands of her husband or his relatives introduced Section 498-A and Section 304-B in IPC.

Thus, the essential ingredients of Section 498-A are:

1. A woman must be married.

2. She must be subjected to cruelty.

3. Cruelty must be of the nature of:

(i) any wilful conduct as was likely to drive such woman:

(a) to commit suicide;

(b) cause grave injury or danger to her life, limb, either mental or physical;

(ii) harassment of such woman,

(1) with a view to coerce her to meet unlawful demand for property or valuable security,

(2) or on account of failure of such woman or by any of her relation to meet the unlawful demand;

(iii) woman was subjected to such cruelty by:

(1) husband of that woman, or

(2) any relative of the husband.

For constitution of an offence under Section 498-A IPC, therefore, the ingredients thereof must be held to be existing. (Paras 27 and 29)

For proving the offence under Section 498-A IPC, the complainant must make allegation of harassment to the extent so as to coerce her to meet any unlawful demand of dowry, or any wilful conduct on the part of the accused of such a nature as is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health. No such allegation has been made or otherwise can be found out so as to arrive at an opinion that the appellants prima facie have committed such an offence. The complaint petition must also be read with several other documents which form part of the complaint petition. The children from the first wife of V were with M. V affirmed an affidavit so as to enable M to apply for their passports. V, therefore, wanted to have children with them. (Paras 30 to 36)

Based on the e-mails exchanged between the couple and their parents it is evident that the couple had developed incompatibility in respect of various aspects of life including the one as to whether M did a favour to V by marrying him. They also include the children, her going out of the home without informing any senior member of the house, allegation of extramarital affairs against V; her taking of detergent powder evidently to commit suicide; they had been staying in separate rooms, differences in respect of carrying of business, her becoming hysterical at some point of time. V even thought that she had been trying to blackmail him by refusing to go back to India and threatening to commit suicide. The e-mails show allegations, counter-allegations and explanations by M in relation thereto. There are many more e-mails exchanged between the couple as also their parents. However, in none of them had any allegation with regard to cruelty or breach of trust been made. Such allegations are made for the first time in the complaint petition as also in the application for grant of maintenance. (Paras 32 and 36)

The correspondences exchanged between the spouses or by and between V and his in-laws do not disclose any allegation which would amount to criminal misconduct on the part of the appellants. (Para 55)

Ex facie no case has been made out under Section 498-A IPC so far as the appellants are concerned. The allegations relating to the place where the marriage took place have nothing to do with an offence under Section 498-A IPC. Allegations that Appellant 2 kicked the respondent with her leg and told her that her mother to be a liar may make out some other offence but not the one punishable under Section 498-A. Similarly her allegations that Appellant 2 poisoned the ears of her son against the respondent; she gave two used lady's suits of her daughter to the complainant and has been given perpetual sermons to the complainant could not be said to be offences punishable under Section 498-A. Even threatening that her son may be divorced for the second time could not make out the offence under Section 498-A IPC. (Paras 37 and 49)

The jurisdiction of the High Court to quash an order of summoning and/or a criminal proceeding as also the Supreme Court are well known. (Para 40)

Courts at all levels have made endeavours to bring about a settlement between the parties. The High Court in the earlier round of proceedings probably rightly observed that the marriage between M and V has irretrievably broken down. (Paras 49 and 60). Bhaskar Lal Sharma v. Monica, (2009) 10 SCC 604: (2009) 161 DLT 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2009]

Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Noorjahan v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 55: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 915; Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, (2005) 6 SCC 281: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1473; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297; Kailashi Bai v. Aarti Arya, (2009) 13 SCC 548; Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735; Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461, relied on

Mahila Vinod Kumari v. State of M.P., (2008) 8 SCC 34: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 414, distinguished

[10918] — S. 498-A and Ss. 406, 341, 323 & 120-B and Ss. 3 & 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Quashing of complaint under S. 498-A IPC, against appellants (unmarried brother and married sister of complainant's husband) who were neither residing with complainant in her matrimonial home nor visited her — Demand of luxury car, passing of sarcastic remarks (without stating actual wordings), and physical assault alleged against parents-in-law, husband and appellants — Appellant 1 (married sister-in-law of complainant) residing in her own matrimonial home with her husband for more than 7 years, while Appellant 2 was permanent resident of Goregaon, Maharashtra — Appellants never visiting place where alleged occurrence had taken place, and neither living with complainant and her husband at any time — No specific allegation made against appellants in complaint, and none of the witnesses attributing any role to them — Held, their implication was only meant to harass and humiliate husband's relatives — Permitting complainant to pursue complaint would be abuse of process of law — Hence, complaint against appellants quashed — Courts cautioned to scrutinise such vexatious and frivolous complaints with great care and circumspection — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 4, 27, 28, 35 and 38). Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 7 SCC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and K.S. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2010]

(6) Trial, Proof and Other issues

See in detail under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vols. 18, 19 and 20, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

Synopsis

(i) Generally 1178
(ii) Acquittal justified 1180
(iii) Appeal/Revision 1181
(iv) Bail 1183
(v) Circumstantial evidence 1185
(vi) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation, Charge-sheet, etc. 1186
(vii) Conviction justified 1188
(viii) Dying declaration 1190
(ix) FIR 1193
(x) Jurisdiction 1193
(xi) Limitation 1194
(xii) Quashment 1196
(xiii) Suicide note 1203
(xiv) Transfer of case 1203
(xv) Witnesses 1204

(i) Generally

[10919] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Degree and standard of proof — Held, requirement of proof beyond all reasonable doubts not altered even after introduction of S. 498-A IPC and S. 113-A of Evidence Act — Before recording a finding of guilt court must satisfy itself that deceased was not hypersensitive — Also exaggerated devotion to rule of benefit of doubt must not nurture fanciful doubts or lingering suspicions and thereby destroy social defence — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

The requirement of proof beyond reasonable doubt does not stand altered even after the introduction of S. 498-A IPC and S. 113-A of Indian Evidence Act. Although, the court's conscience must be satisfied that the accused is not held guilty when there are reasonable doubts about the complicity of the accused in respect of the offences alleged, it should be borne in mind that there is no absolute standard for proof in a criminal trial and the question whether the charges made against the accused have been proved beyond all reasonable doubts must depend upon the facts and circumstances of the case and the quality of the evidences adduced in the case and the materials placed on record. The doubt must be of a reasonable man and the standard adopted must be a standard adopted by a reasonable and just man for coming to a conclusion considering the particular subject-matter. State of W.B. v. Orilal Jaiswal, (1994) 1 SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 107: AIR 1994 SC 1418: 1994 Cri LJ 2104: (1994) 1 BLJR 267: (1994) 1 Guj LH 537.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1993]

[10920] — S. 498-A — Ill-treatment of wife (deceased) by husband — Proof — Fact that in one of the letters written to her husband the deceased had not complained about ill-treatment — Effect — Held, that was no ground to hold that the deceased was never ill-treated by her husband, particularly in view of the evidence of large number of witnesses in that regard

The High Court observed that in the letter written by the deceased to her husband quite some time back, there is no mention of any ill-treatment meted out to her by the respondent husband, and that no other letter has been produced to show that she had even mentioned in any such letter that she was being ill-treated. This approach of the High Court is highly unreasonable. Merely because in one solitary letter there is no reference to ill-treatment by the respondent, would be no ground to arrive at the conclusion that the deceased was never ill-treated by her husband, particularly in the face of evidence of a large number of witnesses. Therefore, there is no justification for the finding of the High Court that the deceased was not ill-treated by the respondent, or that there was no motive to commit the offence. (Para 12). State of Karnataka v. K. Gopalakrishna, (2005) 9 SCC 291: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1237: AIR 2005 SC 1014: 2005 Cri LJ 1436.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

[10921] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Reason for dispute between husband and wife — Determination of — Evidence of contemporaneous nature, held, plays an important role in such cases — Such evidence is usually found in the form of letters written by the parties to each other or to their friends and relatives or recorded in any other document of contemporaneous nature — Hence held, if really the respondent wife was subjected to cruelty and harassment in the manner alleged by her, she would have written about such treatment to her friends and relatives with whom she might have corresponded — But on facts it was not so — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13(1)(i-a)

In cases where there is a dispute between husband and wife it is very difficult to unravel the true reason for the dispute. After separation when the relationship turns sour, all sorts of allegations and counter-allegations are made against each other. Evidence of contemporaneous nature therefore plays an important role in such cases as it may reveal the thinking and attitude of the parties towards each other at the relevant time. Such evidence is usually found in the form of letters written by the parties to each other or to their friends and relatives or recorded in any other document of contemporaneous nature. If really the respondent wife was subjected to cruelty and harassment in the manner alleged by her, she would have written about such treatment to her friends and relatives with whom she may have corresponded. The reports allegedly made by her to the police may have thrown some light on this aspect of the matter. Such evidence is completely absent in this case. It appears to us that the parties lived happily for many years after the marriage till about the year 1996, whereafter there was some misunderstanding which ultimately resulted in their separation. Why this happened, it is difficult to fathom, but the evidence on record does not convince the Court that the respondent was subjected to torture and harassment by the appellant, and certainly not for the reasons alleged by her. The court is not permitted to conjecture and surmise. It must base its findings on the evidence produced before it by the parties. The enquiry by the court is restricted to the evidence on record and the case pleaded by the parties. It is not permissible to the court to conjecture and surmise and make out a third case not pleaded by the parties only to answer the query such as the one raised herein. (Para 20). Deb Narayan Halder v. Anushree Halder, (2003) 11 SCC 303: 2004 SCC (Cri) 164: AIR 2003 SC 3174.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2003]

[10922] — Ss. 498-A, 304-B and 306 — Relevancy of facts forming part of same transaction — Res gestae — Applicability — Death of deceased neither homicidal, nor suicidal, but accidental and occurring after about ten years of her marriage — *PWs 4 and 5 stating that their deceased sister had told them that her accused husband was torturing her because he wanted them to meet his certain demands — Relying on their evidence accused convicted under S. 498-A — Held, what res gestae means is that a fact which, though not in issue, is so connected with the fact in issue*as to form part of the same transaction that it becomes relevant by itself — For a particular statement to form part of the same transaction utterances must be simultaneous with the incident or substantially contemporaneous, that is, made either during or immediately before or after its occurrence — S. 6 Evidence Act, in facts and circumstances of present case, insofar as admissibility of statements of PW 4 and PW 5 about what the deceased had told them against the accused of the treatment meted out to her is concerned, is not at all attracted — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 6 (Paras 18 to 21)

The dead body of deceased was found in well and cause of her death was asphyxia due to drowning. The deceased was married to accused about ten years before her death. Prosecution alleged that appellant subjected his wife to torture and harassment demanding her to ask her brothers PWs 4 and 5 to arrange a job for him, or to register a house in his name, or to bring Rs 1 lakh so as to enable him to start his business. The incidences of harassment and torture were communicated by deceased to her brothers.

The accused was charged under S. 304-B, S. 306 and S. 498-A IPC, and S. 3 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. The trial court found that death of deceased was neither homicidal, nor suicidal, but accidental. However, relying on testimonies of PWs 4 & 5 accused was found guilty under S. 498-A and S. 3, Dowry Prohibition Act and sentenced to RI for 3 years and fine of Rs 5000 for offence under S. 498-A, and RI for 5 years and fine of Rs 15,000 for offence under S. 3, Dowry Prohibition Act. The High Court in appeal filed thereagainst while maintaining his conviction under S. 498-A, set aside his conviction under S. 3, Dowry Prohibition Act. Hence, the present appeal.

The question that arose was in a case where the accused had been acquitted of the offence punishable under Sections 304-B and 306 IPC, and the death of the wife was neither homicidal nor suicidal but accidental, whether the oral evidence of witnesses about what the deceased had told them against the accused about the treatment meted out to her was admissible under Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act to sustain conviction under Section 498-A IPC.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Bhairon Singh v. State of M.P., (2009) 13 SCC 80: AIR 2009 SC 2603: (2009) 79 AIC 80 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3738.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

Sukhar v. State of U.P., (1999) 9 SCC 507: 2000 SCC (Cri) 419, considered and followed in law but distinguished on facts

Wigmore's Evidence Act; Sarkar on Evidence, 15th Edn., cited

[10923] — Ss. 498-A, 406 and 34 — Complaint petition under — E-mails between couple and parents forming part of — Evidentiary value and importance of — Non-consideration of, by High Court — Effect — Whether correspondence showed any allegation of dowry demand or misappropriation of respondent's wife's stridhan — Held, complaint petition must also be read with several other documents which form part of the complaint petition — In none of them had any allegation with regard to cruelty or breach of trust been made — Allegations made for first time in complaint petition and application for grant of maintenance — Correspondence exchanged between the spouses and between the husband and his in-laws did not disclose any allegation which would amount to criminal misconduct on part of appellants — It was evident that the couple had developed incompatibility — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 3 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 154 to 157 and 482 (Paras 32, 36, 49, 55 and 60)

For proving the offence under Section 498-A IPC, the complainant must make allegation of harassment to the extent so as to coerce her to meet any unlawful demand of dowry, or any wilful conduct on the part of the accused of such a nature as is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health. No such allegation has been made or otherwise can be found out so as to arrive at an opinion that the appellants prima facie have committed such an offence. The complaint petition must also be read with several other documents which form part of the complaint petition. The children from the first wife of V were with M. V affirmed an affidavit so as to enable M to apply for their passports. V, therefore, wanted to have children with them. (Paras 30 to 36)

Based on the e-mails exchanged between the couple and their parents it is evident that the couple had developed incompatibility in respect of various aspects of life including the one as to whether M did a favour to V by marrying him. They also include the children, her going out of the home without informing any senior member of the house, allegation of extramarital affairs against V; her taking of detergent powder evidently to commit suicide; they had been staying in separate rooms, differences in respect of carrying of business, her becoming hysterical at some point of time. V even thought that she had been trying to blackmail him by refusing to go back to India and threatening to commit suicide. The e-mails show allegations, counter-allegations and explanations by M in relation thereto. There are many more e-mails exchanged between the couple as also their parents. However, in none of them had any allegation with regard to cruelty or breach of trust been made. Such allegations are made for the first time in the complaint petition as also in the application for grant of maintenance. (Paras 32 and 36)

The correspondences exchanged between the spouses or by and between V and his in-laws do not disclose any allegation which would amount to criminal misconduct on the part of the appellants. (Para 55). Bhaskar Lal Sharma v. Monica, (2009) 10 SCC 604: (2009) 161 DLT 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2009]

(ii) Acquittal justified

[10924] — S. 498-A — Acquittal justified — Accused charged under Ss. 498-A and 306 IPC convicted by trial court under S. 498-A IPC — High Court, not finding any sufficient material which could establish that the husband "treated his deceased wife with cruelty", acquitting the accused — In view of the absence of any complaint against the husband in the letters written by the deceased, held, oral evidence of the deceased's brother was not adequate to maintain the conviction, under S. 498-A, against the husband — Order of acquittal by High Court not interfered with — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 374 and 386. State of Maharashtra v. Ashok Narayan Dandalwar, (2000) 9 SCC 257: AIR 2000 SC 3568 (2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2000]

[10925] — S. 498-A — Appreciation of evidence — Death of housewife due to burn injuries — Acquittal justified — Medical Officer attached to the hospital where deceased had been taken first deposed that the patient herself had stated that she received the injuries due to bursting of stove — Maidservant deposed in her evidence-in-chief that appellant husband of the deceased used to assault deceased almost daily on instigation of his sister, but in cross-examination it was elicited that she had not stated so in her statement to the police recorded under S. 161 CrPC — Held, such material omission would discredit her version in court — Evidence of other PWs being not of such nature which would establish the cruelty on the part of the husband, appellant cannot be convicted under S. 498-A. Tarun v. State of W.B., (2001) 10 SCC 754: 2001 Cri LJ 4937.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2000]

[10926] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Cruelty — Suicide — Conviction improper — Deceased alleged to have committed suicide by setting herself ablaze because of persistent ill-treatment and cruelty meted out by Accused 1 (husband of deceased) and Accused 2 (mother-in-law of deceased) — Prosecution version primarily resting on three letters dated 3-1-1990, 20-6-1991 and 25-10-1990 written by deceased — However, no allegation of demand of dowry made by accused evident from those letters — On the contrary, letter dated 20-6-1991 showing that her grievance was not regarding demand for dowry but because she was forced to marry against her wish; that she was not willing to get married and wanted to continue her studies — Moreover, she had also stated that she did not want to go to her parental home for Gangamma festival as her husband was taking due care of her — In the other two letters she had written that she was happy and that her in-laws were taking good care of her but somehow she did not wish to live in the marital home — Held, trial court as well as High Court erred in convicting accused under Ss. 498-A & 304-B IPC — They appeared to have picked up one line from one place and another from another place and concluded that there was demand of dowry — Reading the letters in entirety shows that there was, in fact, no mention of any demand for dowry — Impugned judgment set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 113-A and 113-B (Paras 2, 8, 9 and 10). M. Srinivasulu v. State of A.P., (2007) 12 SCC 443: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 169: AIR 2007 SC 3146: (2007) 58 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-2007]

[10927] — Ss. 498-A, 304-B and 306 — Conviction under S. 498-A reversed — Need for material to establish harassment or subjection to cruelty — High Court finding that appellant husband was financing PW 1 father of the deceased, and hence, there was no question of demand of dowry, acquitting him of charges under S. 304-B — However, it convicting him under S. 498-A holding that after giving birth to a child in the normal course she could not have entertained the idea to commit suicide unless she was being harassed by appellant — Testimonies of PWs showing that they spoke about dowry to be basis for suicide — No other material to show as to how the deceased was being harassed or subjected to cruelty — Held, conclusion of High Court that because the deceased committed suicide there must be some harassment and cruelty is insupportable and indefensible — Merely on surmises and conjectures, conviction could not have been recorded — There is a vast difference between "could have been", "must have been" and "has been" — In the absence of any material, the case falls in the first category and as such conviction is impermissible (Paras 5, 8 and 9). Hazarilal v. State of M.P., (2009) 13 SCC 783: (2007) 56 AIC 256 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-6-2007]

[10928] — Ss. 498-A and 306/304-B r/w S. 34 — Acquittal confirmed — Respondent R, with his father and mother acquitted by trial court from charges under Ss. 306/ 304-B r/w S. 34, while only accused R convicted under S. 498-A — Appeal against acquittal dismissed by High Court in limine — In Supreme Court, acquittal from offence under S. 306 only challenged on grounds that trial Judge had not considered the ingredients of S. 113-A of Evidence Act, 1872 and further he had not given any reason as to why he had acquitted the accused persons under S. 306 IPC particularly when he had convicted Accused 1 for offence under S. 498-A of Penal Code — Held, reasoning of trial Judge that no demand of dowry proved as also no case of abetment to commit suicide is made out, was correct — High Court's approach to dismiss appeal in limine without assigning reasons, however disapproved — CrPC, 1973, S. 378 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

The Additional Sessions Judge had given good reasons as to why the presumption would not arise under Section 113-A, Evidence Act. The Additional Sessions Judge has recorded the finding that there was no material to prove that there was any demand of dowry made by the husband or by the father-in-law or by the mother-in-law. The Additional Sessions Judge has also further found that there was no material on record to prove that there was any cruelty meted out to the deceased to commit suicide. (Para 9)

The High Court had not given reasons and had chosen to dismiss the said appeal in limine refusing the leave to file appeal against the acquittal. The course adopted by the High Court cannot be appreciated. Ordinarily, the High Court should have given good reasons even before refusing the leave to file an appeal against the acquittal. That is the established law now. However, sending back the matter again to the High Court would be hazardous as about ten years have elapsed since the death of the deceased. (Para 10)

After overall consideration, the Additional Sessions Judge was correct in acquitting the respondent-accused under Section 306 IPC and the High Court was also correct to refuse the State to file an appeal against the acquittal although the High Court should have given reasons. (Para 11). State of Punjab v. Rajwinder Singh, (2009) 16 SCC 778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-5-2009]

(iii) Appeal/Revision

[10929] — S. 498-A — Cruelty to married woman — Fact finding of absence of — Interference by High Court on presumptions — Not sustainable

The High Court has fallen in grave error while observing that the present appellants "could misappropriate" and "who can practise cruelty". The conclusions to say the least are presumptuous. The learned Additional Sessions Judge by a well-reasoned order had held that there was no material to show that demand for any dowry was made and an attempt was made to rope in many persons. When the High Court was interfering with such conclusions arrived at on facts it ought to have indicated the reasons necessitating such interference. That has not been done and on the contrary on presumptuous conclusions the order of the learned Additional Sessions Judge has been set aside. (Para 9)

(6)(iii) Appeal/Revision (contd.)

The High Court itself has held that there was an attempt to rope in many persons and it did not find any merit or challenge to the discharge of the married sister and the brother. (Para 11)

Hence impugned order of the High Court cannot be maintained and is set aside. (Para 12). Ran Singh v. State of Haryana, (2008) 4 SCC 70: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 2008 SC 1294: 2008 Cri LJ 1941: (2008) 1 KLT 803.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2008]

[10930] — S. 498-A — Delay — Order of High Court reversing acquittal recorded by trial Judge — Inordinate delay in impugning legality of — High Court, convicting the accused under S. 498-A IPC, remanding the matter to trial Judge for considering question of sentence — Accused not assailing the remand order of High Court until the sentence was passed by the trial Judge and thereafter affirmed against him by District Court as well as High Court — Delay in impugning High Court's order, held, not liable to be condoned — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 378 and 386 (Para 1). C. Gopinathan v. Krishnan Ayyappan, (2000) 9 SCC 430: 2001 SCC (Cri) 413.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-2000]

[10931] — S. 498-A — Remand — Matter remitted again by High Court with same direction, if proper — High Court convicting the accused remanding the matter to trial Magistrate to pass appropriate sentence exercising liberty in respect of the applicability of benevolent provisions of the Probation of Offenders Act and consideration of report of District Probation Officer — Magistrate, exercising discretion granted by High Court, sentencing the accused with three years' rigorous imprisonment — Sentence having been affirmed by the Sessions Court, matter remanded again by High Court with same direction — Having regard to the liberty granted by High Court to Magistrate while passing appropriate sentence, held that the Magistrate passed the sentence in accordance with the earlier direction of High Court — Order of High Court remitting the matter again, for considering the same issue, merely on ground of absence of District Probation Officer's report, held, was not justified — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 386, 378 and 360 (Para 3). C. Gopinathan v. Krishnan Ayyappan, (2000) 9 SCC 430: 2001 SCC (Cri) 413.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-2000]

[10932] — S. 498-A — Suicide by housewife by sprinkling kerosene on her body and setting herself on fire — Out of three relevant witnesses PWs 9, 10 and 11, High Court examining veracity of PW 9 with reference to his statement made to the police under S. 161 CrPC, and in view of material omission in the statement under S. 161 CrPC it coming to the conclusion that the witness was not reliable — High Court also brushing aside the evidence of PWs 10 and 11 on the ground that they were closely related and that evidence of PW 10 indicated that his wife and mother-in-law had no joint account in the bank from which the alleged amounts of dowry were drawn — Though High Court's discussion of evidence of PWs 10 and 11 were scrappy, but on being asked to place the evidence of those witnesses before Supreme Court, counsel for the State expressing his inability to procure a copy of the evidence of those witnesses — More than 7 years had elapsed since filing of appeal before Supreme Court — Held, it indicates the callousness with which the State has been pursuing the appeal in the Supreme Court in a matter like this — Though the counsel did pray for adjourning this case in the midst of hearing, but it would not be proper for the Supreme Court to do so because of the failure on the part of the prosecution to place a copy of the evidence before the Court for its appreciation to judge whether the appreciation of evidence made by the High Court was justified or not (Para 6). State of Haryana v. Jasvinder Singh, (2000) 9 SCC 387: 2001 SCC (Cri) 402.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-2000]

[10933] — Ss. 498-A, 306 & 304-B r/w S. 34 — Powers of appellate court under S. 386(b)(i) CrPC — Restriction to appeals against convictions and sentence — Held, S. 386(b)(i) CrPC is confined to cases of appeals against orders of conviction and sentence, and cannot be exercised for reversing an order of acquittal passed in respect of an offence charged, while dealing with an appeal preferred by him against the order of conviction in respect of another offence charged and found proved — Accused-appellant charged under Ss. 498-A, 306 & 304-B r/w S. 34 — However, they acquitted of charges under Ss. 498-A & 306 r/w S. 34 by the Sessions Judge, which order attained finality as no appeal was preferred thereagainst by the State — Appeal filed by the appellants challenging their conviction under S. 304-B r/w S. 34 — Supreme Court refraining from expressing any opinion as to whether the appellants could be held guilty of having committed the offence under S.

498-A or S. 306 IPC on the basis of evidence available on record as their acquittal under the aforesaid charges had attained finality and could not be reversed in the appeal filed by the appellants challenging their conviction under S. 304-B IPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 386(b)(i) (Para 12). Appasaheb v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 9 SCC 721: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 468: AIR 2007 SC 763: (2007) 50 AIC 1 (SC): (2007) 4 KLT 463.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-2007]

State of A.P. v. Thadi Narayana, AIR 1962 SC 240: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 207, relied on [10934] — Ss. 498-A, 406, 323, 506, 148 and 149 — Revision — Reasoned order/Speaking order — Necessity of — In a case pertaining to allegation of harassment for dowry, High Court partly allowing revision by complainant under S. 401 on presumptuous conclusions — Impropriety — On facts, revisional court below passing a well-reasoned order — High Court while interfering with such conclusions arrived at on facts, held, ought to have indicated reasons necessitating interference — That was not done and on the contrary on presumptuous conclusions order of revisional court below was partly set aside — Reasons, held, introduce clarity in an order — On plainest consideration of justice, High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order indicative of an application of its mind — Absence of reasons rendered High Court's judgment unsustainable — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 2 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 399 to 401 (Paras 2 to 4, 9 and 10). Ran Singh v. State of Haryana, (2008) 4 SCC 70: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 2008 SC 1294: 2008 Cri LJ 1941: (2008) 1 KLT 803.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2008]

State of Punjab v. Bhag Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 547, relied on

(iv) Bail

[10935] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Anticipatory bail — Considerations for grant of — Complainant alleging harassment for bringing insufficient dowry — Protection against arrest sought by appellant in terms of S. 438 CrPC — Dismissal by High Court — Sustainability — Held, on facts, High Court completely acted on materials which did not support the conclusions — Directions given by High Court like recovery of dowry articles, etc. need not have been given while dealing with application under S. 438 CrPC — Again, directions for seizing appellant's passport also could not have been given under S. 438 CrPC — Hence, relying on parameters highlighted in Adri Dharan Das case, (2005) 4 SCC 303, directions given that if appellant surrenders before the court concerned and moves for bail, the application shall be disposed of expeditiously preferably on the date it is filed — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 438 (Paras 2, 3, 9 and 12). Mohinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, (2008) 4 SCC 580: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 462: AIR 2008 SC 2068: 2008 Cri LJ 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

Adri Dharan Das v. State of W.B., (2005) 4 SCC 303: 2005 SCC (Cri) 933, relied on

[10936] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B r/w S. 34 — Anticipatory bail — Cancellation of — Propriety — Alleged dowry related offences — High Court by impugned judgment cancelling anticipatory bail granted to appellants (mother-in-law, father-in-law, younger brother of father-in-law and husband of deceased) who were accused of committing offences punishable under Ss. 498-A, 304-B r/w S. 34 IPC and Ss. 3 & 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Held, very cogent and overwhelming circumstances are necessary for an order directing cancellation of bail already granted — In the instant case, nothing was brought on record from which it could be inferred that appellants had not cooperated in the investigation or had in any manner abused concession of bail granted to them — Hence, impugned order unsustainable and set aside — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4

The High Court by the impugned judgment cancelled the anticipatory bail granted to the appellants (mother-in-law, father-in-law, husband and younger brother of father-in-law of the deceased) who were accused of committing offences punishable under Sections 498-A, 304-B read with Section 34 IPC and Sections 3 and 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961.

It was alleged by the father of the deceased that the appellants were torturing the deceased for not meeting dowry demand of Rs 2 lakhs and earlier on 15-7-2006 she had left her matrimonial home intending to commit suicide because she was unable to bear it. However, on intervention of her relatives she was sent back to her matrimonial home.

On the day of occurrence the father-in-law of the deceased was stated to have heard cries of the deceased and on rushing there he found her burning. He tried to douse the fire and the deceased told him that her child aged about fifteen months was lying in the bathroom with burns. Both of them were rushed to the hospital. The child expired on the same day, while the deceased died ten days later in the hospital. In the two dying declarations recorded by the Executive Magistrate the deceased stated that she and her son caught fire accidentally when she was pouring kerosene oil in the lamp which accidentally fell down.

(6)(iv) Bail (contd.)

The Sessions Judge taking into consideration the two dying declarations, statements of the complainant and the witnesses and after perusing the case-diary granted anticipatory bail to the appellants. The High Court by the impugned judgment cancelled the same. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Section 438 of the Code confers on the High Court and the Court of Session, the power to grant "anticipatory bail" if the applicant has "reason to believe" that he may be arrested on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. The expression "anticipatory bail" has not been defined in the Code. But it means "bail in anticipation of arrest". The expression "anticipatory bail" is a misnomer inasmuch as it is not as if bail is presently granted by the court in anticipation of arrest. When a competent court grants "anticipatory bail", it makes an order that in the event of arrest, a person shall be released on bail. There is no question of release on bail unless a person is arrested and, therefore, it is only on arrest that the order granting anticipatory bail becomes operative. The power being rather unusual in nature, it is entrusted only to the higher echelons of judicial service i.e. a Court of Session and the High Court. (Paras 14, 15 and 16)

The wide discretionary power conferred by the legislature on the higher echelons in the criminal justice-delivery system cannot be put in the form of straitjacket rules for universal application as the question whether to grant bail or not depends for its answer upon a variety of circumstances, the cumulative effect of which must enter into the judicial verdict. A circumstance which, in a given case, turns out to be conclusive, may or may not have any significance in another case. The imposition of unnecessary restrictions on the scope of the section which were not to be found in Section 438 of the Code, could make the provision constitutionally vulnerable, since the right of personal freedom, as enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution, cannot be made to depend on compliance with unreasonable restrictions. The courts must keep in mind the guidelines while dealing with an application for grant of anticipatory bail laid down by the Constitution Bench in Gurbaksh Singh case, (1980) 2 SCC 565. Further, the amendment to Section 438 brought about by the CrPC (Amendment) Act, 2005, which is yet to be enforced is more or less in line with the parameters laid down in Gurbaksh Singh case. (Paras 21 to 27)

In the instant case, the High Court committed a serious error in reversing the order passed by the Sessions Judge, granting anticipatory bail to the appellants. The Sessions Judge passed the order after due consideration of the facts and circumstances of the case, in particular, the two dying declarations, one recorded in the presence of the parents of the deceased and the statements of the members of the Women Cell who had dealt with the case when on 15-7-2006, the deceased had left the house with intention to commit suicide and therefore, it cannot be said that the judicial discretion exercised in granting anticipatory bail was perverse or erroneous, warranting interference by the High Court. The order passed by the Sessions Judge was supported by reasons to the extent required for exercise of judicial discretion in the matter of grant of bail. (Para 28)

It may be true that some of the circumstances, noticed by the High Court in the impugned order viz. no reference to lantern in the spot panchnama or the necessity of cleaning the lantern at 4 p.m. and/or availability of an inverter in the house, etc., could have persuaded the Sessions Judge to take a different view but it cannot be said that the factors which weighed with the Sessions Judge in granting bail were irrelevant to the issue before him, rendering the order as perverse. Moreover, merely because the High Court had a different view on same set of material which had been taken into consideration by the Sessions Judge, in our view, was not a valid ground to label the order passed by the Sessions Judge as perverse. It also appears that the High Court has overlooked the distinction of factors relevant for rejecting bail in a non-bailable case in the first instance and the cancellation of bail already granted. Very cogent and overwhelming circumstances are necessary for an order directing the cancellation of bail already granted, which were missing in the instant case. Nothing was brought on record from which it could be inferred that the appellants had not cooperated in the investigations or had, in any manner, abused the concession of bail granted to them. (Paras 29 and 30)

Hence, impugned order setting aside anticipatory bail granted to the appellants unsustainable and set aside. (Para 32). Savitri Agarwal v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 8 SCC 325: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 683: (2009) 80 AIC 116 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2009]

Balchand Jain v. State of M.P., (1976) 4 SCC 572: 1976 SCC (Cri) 689, followed

Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 565: 1980 SCC (Cri) 465; Dolat Ram v. State of Haryana, (1995) 1 SCC 349, relied on

Gurbaksh Singh Sibia v. State of Punjab, AIR 1978 P&H 1: 1978 Cri LJ 20, held, overruled

Balchand Jain v. State of M.P., (1976) 4 SCC 572: 1976 SCC (Cri) 689, held, partly doubted

Adri Dharan Das v. State of W.B., (2005) 4 SCC 303: 2005 SCC (Cri) 933, partly doubted

[10937] — Ss. 498-A, 406, 506 and 323 r/w S. 34 — Cancellation of bail — Grounds — Justifiability of grounds for — High Court cancelling bail for sole purpose of police remand to recover marriage articles in a case of cruelty by in-laws under Ss. 498-A, 406, 506, 323 r/w S. 34 IPC — There being no allegation of misuse of bail granted by Magistrate, said ground for cancellation of bail, held, not sufficient — Therefore, bail granted by Magistrate restored — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 439(2) and 167(2) (Paras 14 and 17). Devender Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2010) 6 SCC 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2010]

CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554, followed

(v) Circumstantial evidence

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — '34. Circumstantial Evidence', pp. 10 et seq. in Vol. 19, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial and under

PENAL CODE, 1860 — SECTIONS 299-304 — CULPABLE HOMICIDE AND MURDER 'D.7. Circumstantial Evidence', in Vol. 2

[10938] — S. 498-A — Circumstantial evidence — Death of a housewife by drowning in a well in the courtyard of her in-laws' house — Ill-treatment of the deceased by her in-laws for not bringing sufficient dowry and also for not giving birth to children established — Despite giving birth to two children such ill-treatment continued — Husband also contemplating to remarry — Deceased earlier trying to commit suicide by jumping in the same well but saved by the neighbours — At the time of incident only deceased and the accused were in the house — Sound of quarrelling and shouting of a woman heard by the neighbours — Held, in the circumstances of the case, circumstances clinchingly establish the culpability of the accused — Death by accidentally falling in the well ruled out

The prosecution evidence clearly indicates beyond shadow of reasonable doubt that because of the mistreatment by the accused and the consistent course of cruelty perpetrated on her, she had on the fateful night suffered from the last straw that broke the camel's back. Earlier she had jumped in the same well to put an end to her miserable existence but was saved by the neighbours. Yet the life for her in the household of the accused did not improve subsequently. She was, therefore, driven to once again try to commit suicide by jumping in the very same well in which she had earlier jumped. But on the second occasion on that fateful night when she jumped in the well there was no neighbour to save her and her life got extinguished. Under these circumstances it cannot be said that the accused were not responsible for bringing to a tragic end the life of this young housewife aged 28 years, mother of two children, who having suffered in such a drastic manner at the hands of the accused was driven to take the extreme step of committing suicide. This is neither the case of murder nor the case of accident. On the facts of the present case the prosecution has been able to bring home to the accused beyond shadow of reasonable doubt offence under Section 498-A IPC read with Explanation (a). When she was driven to take such a drastic step all the accused including acquitted accused mother-in-law were in the house and along with them resided the victim and her two minor children. Hence the accused alone must be held responsible for driving her to commit suicide by their misconduct which had led to a quarrel and shouting revealing the voice of a woman as admitted even by the hostile witness who actually heard the same being the next door neighbour. All the circumstances proved by the prosecution clinchingly establish the culpability of the accused themselves and no one else. These established circumstances wholly rule out any reasonable possibility of innocence of the accused from any viewpoint. In other words the chain in the circumstantial evidence is so complete against the accused as to rule out any other hypothesis about their innocence. Balram Prasad Agrawal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 9 SCC 338: 1997 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1997 SC 1830: 1997 Cri LJ 1640.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1996]

(6)(v) Circumstantial evidence (contd.)

[10939] — Ss. 498-A and 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Guilt not established — Deceased found hanging in a room which was bolted from inside — A-1 (husband of deceased) not in the room — Variance in evidence of the doctor who had earlier given opinion that the deceased died due to asphyxia resulting from hanging and later on stated that the deceased died because of smothering and the dead body was hanged — PW 1 (father of deceased) stating that when they asked the respondent as to why he was demanding gold and motorcycle, he said that he had never asked anything — In cross-examination PW 1 categorically admitting that the deceased never personally informed him about the alleged harassment by the respondent and also that the respondent-accused never demanded any money or gold from him directly or personally — Moreover, he also accepting in the cross-examination that he presumed that the respondent-accused had killed the deceased — No evidence led by prosecution to show where the respondent and the deceased slept on 27-4-1996/28-4-1996 i.e. the intervening night of occurrence — Evidence of PWs not inspiring confidence — PW 3 (brother of father) fairly accepting that he presumed that the respondent-accused was making demands through his wife, the deceased — Further, in respondent's examination under S. 313 CrPC, no incriminating materials put to him — Held, in such circumstances impugned judgment acquitting respondent-accused calls for no interference (Paras 7 and 18 to 26). B. Venkat Swamy v. Vijaya Nehru, (2008) 10 SCC 260.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-2008]

State of Rajasthan v. Raja Ram, (2003) 8 SCC 180: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1965; State of Haryana v. Jagbir Singh, (2003) 11 SCC 261: 2004 SCC (Cri) 126; Kusuma Ankama Rao v. State of A.P., (2008) 13 SCC 257, relied on [10940] — Ss. 498-A and 302 r/w S. 34 — Dowry death — Circumstantial evidence — Conviction — Sustainability — Deceased alleged to have been tortured and assaulted by her husband, mother-in-law and sister-in-law resulting in her death — Dead body of deceased found in her matrimonial home with bleeding injuries on various parts of her body — Death taking place within one year and four months of her marriage — Accused absconding since date of incident — Plea of alibi rejected in absence of any material to substantiate such plea — Held, as rightly noted by High Court, absence of any reasonable explanation for aforementioned circumstances was inculpatory evidence against appellants — Hence, impugned judgment upholding conviction of appellants under Ss. 498-A and 302 r/w S. 34, calls for no interference (Paras 8 to 12). Krishna Ghosh v. State of W.B., (2009) 12 SCC 413: AIR 2009 SC 2279: 2009 Cri LJ 2820.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2009]

Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45; State of Rajasthan v. Raja Ram, (2003) 8 SCC 180: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1965; State of Haryana v. Jagbir Singh, (2003) 11 SCC 261: 2004 SCC (Cri) 126; Kusuma Ankama Rao v. State of A.P., (2008) 13 SCC 257: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 298; Manivel v. State of T.N., (2008) 12 SCC 748: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 924, relied on

Alfred Wills: Wills' Circumstantial Evidence, Chapter VI, cited

(vi) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation, Charge-sheet, etc.

[10941] — S. 498-A — Prima facie evidence of commission of offence under — Nature, scope and applicability of S. 319 CrPC — Quashment of process issued under S. 319 CrPC — When proper — Magistrate finding prima facie evidence and issuing process under S. 319 CrPC against appellant-accused named in FIR but police in its charge-sheet dropping charges against said accused — High Court not finding any illegality or perversity in issuance of process under S. 319 CrPC — Legality — Held, the process issued under S. 319 is legal and could not be quashed under S. 482 CrPC on ground that police did not file charge-sheet — Prima facie evidence of commission of offence under — CrPC, 1898, S. 351 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 319 and 482 (Paras 36 and 35). Suman v. State of Rajasthan, (2010) 1 SCC 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2009]

[10942] — S. 498-A — Prima facie evidence of commission of offence under — Existence of — Applicability of S. 319 CrPC — Complainant wife alleging that mother-in-law and appellant-accused (sister-in-law) castigating her for insufficient dowry and subjecting her to physical and mental harassment and that appellant-accused instigating complainant's husband to inflict physical torture, that only after about one week after marriage, mother-in-law and appellant telling her that in the marriage, items like scooter, fridge, air conditioner, etc. were not given and marriage party was not served well and that on instigations of mother-in-law and appellant, the husband gave beating with belan and appellant forcibly removed her rings — Complainant's allegations in FIR clearly corroborated in her S. 161 CrPC statement recorded by police and statement of witnesses — Effect — Held, there is prima facie evidence against appellant to proceed under S. 319 CrPC — Therefore, trial of appellant-accused should proceed — Prima facie evidence of commission of offence under — Existence of — CrPC, 1973, S. 319

Respondent 2 wife lodged a complaint under Section 498-A against her in-laws. However, the police after investigation filed a negative final report in respect of the appellant (accused sister-in-law). The Magistrate took cognizance against the accused sister-in-law under Section 319 CrPC.

Dismissing the appeal of the accused sister-in-law,

Held :

A reading of the plain language of Section 319(1) CrPC makes it clear that a person not already an accused in a case can be proceeded against if in the course of any inquiry into or trial of an offence it appears from the evidence that such person has also committed any offence and deserves to be tried with other accused. There is nothing in the language of Section 319(1) CrPC from which it can be inferred that a person who is named in the FIR or complaint but against whom charge-sheet is not filed by the police, cannot be proceeded against even though in the course of any inquiry into or trial of any offence the court finds that such person has committed any offence for which he could be tried together with the other accused. (Paras 17, 14 and 15)

The process issued against the appellant under Section 319 CrPC cannot be quashed only on the ground that even though she was named in the complaint, the police did not file charge-sheet against her. A person who is named in the FIR or complaint with the allegation that he/she has committed any particular crime or offence, but against whom the police does not launch prosecution or files charge-sheet or drops the case, can be proceeded against under Section 319 CrPC if from the evidence collected/produced in the course of any inquiry into or trial of an offence, the court is prima facie satisfied that such person has committed any offence for which he can be tried with other accused. (Paras 27 and 21)

The Magistrate had objectively considered the entire matter and judiciously exercised discretion under Section 319 CrPC for taking cognizance against the appellant. The issue of summons against the appellant was not an abuse of the process of the court. While deciding the application filed under Section 319 CrPC, the Magistrate noticed the allegations made by Respondent 2 in the complaint that her mother-in-law and sister-in-law had castigated her for insufficient dowry and subjected her to physical and mental harassment and that the sister-in-law had instigated the complainant's husband to inflict physical torture upon her, which were supported by the statements recorded by the police under Section 161 CrPC and by the Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC. In her complaint Respondent 2 alleged that after one week of the marriage, her mother-in-law and sister-in-law (the appellant) told her that in the marriage, items like scooter, fridge, air conditioner, etc. were not given and the marriage party was not served well and that on the instigations of the mother-in-law and the appellant sister-in-law, the husband gave beating with the belan and the appellant forcibly removed the rings. (Paras 35, 34 and 32)

The complainant clearly spelt out the role played by the appellant and made a specific mention about this in the letters written to her parents and the Magistrate opined that a prima facie case was made out for issuing process against the appellant. The father and mother of Respondent 2 and four other persons, whose statements were recorded under Section 161 CrPC, clearly spelt out the role played by the appellant in harassing Respondent 2 and instigating the complainant's husband to inflict torture upon her. Despite this, the police did not file charge-sheet against the appellant thinking that she had no occasion to make demand for dowry or harass Respondent 2 because the appellant was living with her husband. Therefore, the trial of the appellant should proceed and should be decided expeditiously. (Paras 35, 33 and 37)

The High Court broadly referred to the factual matrix of the case and held that the orders passed by the Magistrate and Sessions Judge did not suffer from any illegality or perversity warranting interference under Section 482 CrPC. The approach adopted by the High Court is in consonance with the settled law. Although at one stage, the Sessions Judge allowed the revision filed by the appellant and declared that in view of the bar of limitation contained in Section 468 CrPC, the Magistrate could not have taken cognizance against the appellant, the said order was set aside by the High Court and the matter was remitted for fresh disposal of the revision petition. In the post remand order passed by him, the Sessions Judge independently examined the entire record and held that prima facie case was made out for initiating proceedings against the appellant herein under Section 498-A IPC. (Paras 36 and 35). Suman v. State of Rajasthan, (2010) 1 SCC 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2009]

(6)(vi) Cognizance, Summons, Investigation, Charge-sheet, etc. (contd.)

Joginder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 1 SCC 345: 1979 SCC (Cri) 295; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; Lok Ram v. Nihal Singh, (2006) 10 SCC 192: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 532; Michael Machado v. CBI, (2000) 3 SCC 262: 2000 SCC (Cri) 609; Anil Singh v. State of Bihar, (2006) 13 SCC 421: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 708; Mohd. Shafi v. Mohd. Rafiq, (2007) 14 SCC 544: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 889; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, relied on

[10943] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Charge-sheet — Filing of — Court cannot direct investigating officer to take opinion of Public Prosecutor for filing charge-sheet — Investigation and prosecution are two different aspects of administration of criminal justice — Formation of opinion as to whether on the material collected a case is made out to place the accused for trial is the exclusive function of the officer in charge of the police station and/or his superior officers — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 169, 170, 173, 2(h), 24 and 482

A young bride committed suicide in her nuptial home within seven months of her marriage. An inquiry under Section 174(3) CrPC was held. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate conducted the inquiry and submitted a report holding that it was conclusively proved that due to mental restlessness she had committed suicide and no one is responsible and hence it was informed that her death was not due to dowry harassment. However, the police continued with the investigation and submitted a challan against the deceased's husband and his mother for the offence under Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC. The deceased's father, the first respondent, was not satisfied with the challan as the deceased's husband's sister, the appellant, and her father were not arraigned as accused. Hence he moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. A Single Judge of the High Court disposed of the petition under Section 482 directing that the papers be placed before the Public Prosecutor "as it is without any further investigation and he shall render an impartial opinion on the matter and thereafter an amended charge-sheet shall be filed in the concerned court". The appellant's father filed a petition before the Single Judge for recalling it on the main ground that neither he nor his daughter (appellant) was heard nor were they made parties in the proceedings. But the Single Judge dismissed the petition on the main premise that Section 362 CrPC contains a bar against recalling any order passed under the Code. Hence the appellant filed the present appeal to challenge both the orders. Allowing the appeals,

Held :

In this case the High Court has committed an illegality in directing the final report to be taken back and to file a fresh report incorporating the opinion of the Public Prosecutor. Such an order cannot stand legal scrutiny. The formation of the opinion, whether or not there is a case to place the accused on trial, should be that of the officer in charge of the police station and none else. There is no stage during which the investigating officer is legally obliged to take the opinion of a Public Prosecutor or any authority, except the superior police officer in the rank as envisaged in Section 36 of the Code. A Public Prosecutor is appointed, as indicated in Section 24 CrPC, for conducting any prosecution, appeal or other proceedings in the court. He has also the power to withdraw any case from the prosecution with the consent of the court. He is the officer of the court. Thus the Public Prosecutor is to deal with a different field in the administration of justice and he is not involved in investigation. It is not in the scheme of the Code for supporting or sponsoring any combined operation between the investigating officer and the Public Prosecutor for filing the report in the court. (Paras 19, 11, 10 and 12). R. Sarala v. T.S. Velu, (2000) 4 SCC 459: 2000 SCC (Cri) 823: AIR 2000 SC 1731: 2000 Cri LJ 2453.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2000]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cri LJ 526; Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18: 46 Cri LJ 413; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97; R. v. Metropolitan Police Commr., (1968) 1 All ER 763: (1968) 2 QB 118: (1968) 2 WLR 893 (CA); Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307; State v. Raj Kumar Jain, (1998) 6 SCC 551: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1485, relied on

(vii) Conviction justified

[10944] — S. 498-A — Dowry death — Conviction of deceased's husband A-4 — Whether justified — PW 7 deposing that deceased had told her that A-4 had demanded a scooter and had scolded deceased for not bringing a cot as dowry — PW 7 also deposing that deceased had shown her the injuries and complained that A-4 had inflicted the injuries on her failure to bring the scooter — PW 2 stating that deceased had told him that her husband and mother-in-law were beating her for not getting the scooter — Held on facts, conviction of A-4 under S. 498-A justified (Para 7). Asokan v. State, (2000) 4 SCC 68: 2000 SCC (Cri) 749: AIR 2000 SC 3444: 2000 Cri LJ 2988.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2000]

[10945] — S. 498-A — Dowry death — Cruelty — Harassment of deceased bride by her husband, father-in-law and mother-in-law for dowry established beyond doubt — Held on facts, deceased was subjected to cruelty within the meaning of S. 498-A and hence conviction thereunder and sentence of 2 years' RI imposed on each accused maintained. Akula Ravinder v. State of A.P., 1991 Supp (2) SCC 99: 1991 SCC (Cri) 990: AIR 1991 SC 1142.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1991]

[10946] — S. 498-A — Husband subjecting his wife to cruelty — Conviction justified — Victim was harassed and treated with cruelty by her husband about a month after their marriage as a result of which she was brought to her paternal house and thereafter, she was again treated with cruelty two months after she had gone back to her matrimonial home on the persuasion of Panchayat — Held on facts, husband liable to be convicted under S. 498-A and sentenced to the period of one year and nine months of imprisonment already undergone by him (Paras 12 and 13). Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 7 SCC 724: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2057.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[10947] — Ss. 498-A and 302 — Conviction justified — Appreciation of evidence — Deceased found dead in her bedroom in matrimonial home — Acquittal of husband reversed by High Court — Sustainability — Held, on appreciation of evidence it cannot be said that it is a case where two views are possible — Evidence of witnesses duly corroborated by medical evidence which opined death due to compression of neck — Plea of alibi of husband also found to be false — Conviction recorded by High Court, upheld — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106

Against an appeal against acquittal, the High Court found the appellant-accused guilty of offences punishable under Sections 498-A and 302 IPC. The deceased wife of appellant was done to death in the bedroom of the matrimonial home of the deceased.

Trial court found the evidence not to be cogent and directed acquittal. The accused took the plea that he had gone to another place for purchase of milk when the offence took place and therefore he was not in any way involved with the crime.

The High Court by the impugned order set aside the acquittal and found the appellant guilty of offences as aforesaid.

Appellant's contention was that two views are possible. On the evidence on record the trial court had taken a view which was a possible one. That taking into account the limited scope for interference with the judgment of acquittal, the High Court should not have interfered in the matter. That there was no motive, no torture or no demand of dowry.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case there are certain material aspects which were lost sight of by the trial court but have been noted by the High Court. The dead body was detected in the morning of 14-2-1994. The parents of the deceased informed the police and not the inmates. The parents were informed by the neighbours and not by the inmates. DW 2 has been disbelieved as he was nearly 70 years of age. It was highly improbable that he was in employment as a watchman. (Para 12)

The trial court had held that the evidence of PWs 6 to 8 regarding pressing marks on the neck and injuries on the forearms of the deceased are not corroborated by the medical opinion. This is factually incorrect. The doctor (PW 2) had categorically stated that he was of the opinion that death was due to result of compression of the neck, and the post-mortem report was accordingly issued. PW 6 has stated that second opinion was sought for and then the report was given. The falsity of alibi is an additional link. (Para 13). Narendra v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 6 SCC 61: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 929: AIR 2009 SC 1881: (2009) 79 AIC 129 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

Trimukh Maroti Kirkan v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 681: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 80, applied

[10948] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Demand of additional dowry — Ill-treatment and harassment of wife by appellant husband — Wife committing suicide by consuming poison — Prosecution case fully established — Concurrent findings of courts below, held, proper — Conviction upheld — Sentence of three years' RI under S. 498-A and seven years' RI under S. 306, held, required no further leniency (Para 7). Moti Lal v. State of M.P., (2004) 2 SCC 469: 2004 SCC (Cri) 573: 2004 Cri LJ 907.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2004]

[10949] — Ss. 498-A and 306 r/w S. 34 — Abetment of suicide — Conviction confirmed — Appreciation of evidence — Death of wife by drowning about one-and-a-half years after marriage — Evidence of brother, father and cousin of deceased regarding cruelty and harassment by accused husband — Photograph of appellant (husband) with a young girl — Trial court convicted appellant — Judgment affirmed by High Court — Appellant contending that deceased had drowned accidentally and mere illicit relationship of husband with another woman did not amount to cruelty to wife — Held, it is difficult to believe that a woman who had been living in the area would have gone to answer call of nature at a place where the water was 9 ft deep and at a confluence of two rivers — Courts below had found case of suicide on account of harassment meted out to deceased on a minute appreciation of evidence — No reason found to hold otherwise (Paras 6 to 8). Laxman Ram Mane v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 13 SCC 125.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2010]

(viii) Dying declaration

See also under SECTIONS 299-304 — CULPABLE HOMICIDE AND MURDER 'D.15. Dying declaration', in Vol. 2

[10950] — S. 498-A and Ss. 302 r/w 34 — Dying declaration — Reliability — Reason for crime mentioned in declaration was demand for dowry which could not be met by the family of the deceased — Acquittal of accused in relation to charge under S. 498-A IPC — Effect of — Held, though the prosecution was not able to sustain the charge under S. 498-A for which standard of proof required is high, the allegation of deceased about being harassed on account of demand for dowry could not be ignored — Dying declarations found to be reliable — On facts, conviction under S. 302 r/w S. 34 IPC based upon the same was proper — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32(1) (Paras 3 and 5). Shanti v. State of Haryana, (2005) 12 SCC 287.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arun Kumar and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-2005]

[10951] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Offence under S. 498-A — Evidence regarding — Admissibility — Dying declaration — Prosecution witness deposing that prior to death, the deceased woman had stated to the witness that she (the deceased) was not treated well by her husband and in-laws for non-fulfilment of balance dowry amount — The said witness further mentioning certain specific acts of such ill-treatment allegedly stated to her by the deceased — Such evidence although admissible in respect of the offence under S. 304-B by virtue of S. 32(1) of Evidence Act, held, not admissible for the offence under S. 498-A — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32(1)

The appellant was tried for the offences punishable under Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC for allegedly subjecting his wife to cruelty and causing dowry death. The trial court acquitted him of the charge under Section 304-B for want of acceptable evidence but convicted him under Section 498-A. The trial court had, on evidence, found that the appellant-accused had taken away the child from the deceased, had disallowed her to sit on his scooter, remained frequently absent from the house and had illicit relationship with his sister-in-law. His acquittal of the charge under Section 304-B was not further challenged but his conviction under Section 498-A was, on being challenged, confirmed by the High Court. Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that the said circumstances did not constitute "cruelty" for the purposes of Section 498-A. He further contended that the findings of the trial court were not based on legal evidence. This contention involved the question whether the deposition of the deceased's sister before the trial court that the deceased had been telling her about: (i) ill-treatment given to her by her husband and in-laws for non-fulfilment of balance dowry, (ii) assaults by her husband, and (iii) taking away of the child from her, etc., was admissible in evidence.

Rejecting the first contention of the appellant but allowing the appeal on the second point,

Held :

The statement of the deceased's sister was taken on record with the aid of Section 32 of the Evidence Act at a time when the appellant was being tried for the offence under Section 304-B and such statement was admissible under Section 32(1) as it related to the cause of death of the deceased and the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in her death. Such a statement is not admissible in evidence for the offence punishable under Section 498-A IPC and has to be termed as only a hearsay evidence. Section 32(1) is an exception to the hearsay rule and deals with the statements or declarations by a person, since dead, relating to the cause of his or her death or the circumstances leading to such death. If a statement which otherwise is covered by the hearsay rule does not fall within the exceptions of Section 32 of the Evidence Act, the same cannot be relied upon for finding the guilt of the accused. (Para 10)

Thus, there was no legal evidence for returning a finding with respect to the alleged cruelty of the accused with the deceased. Therefore, it has to be held that the prosecution has failed to prove, beyond doubt, that the appellant had committed the offence under Section 498-A. It is further held that the present case is a fit one where he is entitled to be given the benefit of doubt. (Para 14). Gananath Pattnaik v. State of Orissa, (2002) 2 SCC 619: 2002 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and B. P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2002]

[10952] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Principles governing, restated — On facts, High Court upholding conviction of appellant-accused by trial court under Ss. 498-A and 304-B IPC — Conviction based on dying declarations — Sustainability — Before Supreme Court, respondent State submitting that statements made by deceased were consistent with regard to appellant-accused pouring acid in the mouth of deceased which resulted in her death — Relying on settled legal principles, held, courts below rightly convicted appellant under Ss. 498-A and 304-B IPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32(1) (Paras 2 and 10 to 12). Varikuppal Srinivas v. State of A.P., (2009) 3 SCC 415: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 136: AIR 2009 SC 1487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2009]

Mohan Lal v. State of Haryana, (2007) 9 SCC 151: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 94, relied on [10953] — Ss. 498-A, 304-B and 306 — Oral evidence of witness about what the deceased had said against accused about treatment meted out to her — Admissibility of, to sustain conviction under S. 498-A IPC — Death of deceased neither homicidal, nor suicidal but accidental, and her marriage with accused taking place about ten years before her death — Only evidence to bring home charge under S. 498-A IPC against accused husband was that of PWs 4 and 5 who stated that their deceased sister had told them that accused was torturing her as he wanted her brothers to arrange job for him or to register a house in his name or cash of Rs 1 lakh to be given to him so that he could do some business — Trial court as well as High Court relying on their evidence to convict accused under S. 498-A — Held, statement of a dead person is admissible in law if the statement is as to cause of death or as to any circumstance of transactions which resulted in her death, in a case in which cause of death comes into question — In present case what was deposed by PW 4 and PW 5 had no connection with any circumstance which resulted in her death — Hence, their evidence about what the deceased had told them against the accused about torture and harassment is inadmissible under S. 32(1) and such evidence cannot be looked into for any purpose — Except S. 32(1) of Evidence Act, there is no other provision under which statement of a dead person can be looked into as evidence — Further, for offence under S. 498-A simpliciter, question of death is not and cannot be an issue for consideration — Hence, evidence of PW 4 and PW 5 cannot be evidence in law to establish such offence and S. 32(1) would not get attracted — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32(1) (Paras 2 to 4 and 11 to 17). Bhairon Singh v. State of M.P., (2009) 13 SCC 80: AIR 2009 SC 2603: (2009) 79 AIC 80 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3738.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, (1984) 4 SCC 116: 1984 SCC (Cri) 487; Inderpal v. State of M.P., (2001) 10 SCC 736: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1049, considered and followed

Woodroffe and Amir Ali: Law of Evidence, 14th Edn.; Ratanlal and Dhirajlal: Law of Evidence, 1982 Reprint, cited

[10954] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Dying declaration — Admissibility of — Held, unless the statement of deceased comes within the purview of S. 32(1) Evidence Act it cannot be admitted in evidence — Such statement must be regarding the cause of death of the deceased or as to any of the circumstances of the transactions which resulted in her death — Where the dying declaration was made to the effect that the deceased wife of appellant got burns accidentally from a stove and the High Court opined that it was not a case of suicide, held, by no stretch of imagination can the statements of the deceased contained in letters written by her earlier, where reference had been made regarding ill treatment in the house of her in-laws, and the statements quoted by the witnesses, who had not spoken of anything seen directly by them, be connected with any circumstance of the transaction which resulted in her death and thereby admitted under S. 32(1) Evidence Act — Order of High Court altering conviction from S. 306 to S. 498-A IPC set aside — Accused acquitted in absence of any evidence against him — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32(1)

Unless the statement of a dead person would fall within the purview of Section 32(1) of the Indian Evidence Act there is no other provision under which the same can be admitted in evidence. In order to make the statement of a dead person admissible in law (written or verbal) the statement must be as to the cause of her death or as to any of the circumstances of the transactions which resulted in her death. (Para 7)

(6)(viii) Dying declaration (contd.)

The High Court while dealing with the appeal found that the offence under Section 306 IPC was not made out as it could not be held that death of the deceased was due to commission of suicide. Nonetheless, the High Court proceeded to consider whether any other offence has been made out and ultimately found the appellant guilty of the offence under Section 498-A IPC. (Para 1)

By no stretch of imagination can the statements of the deceased contained in letters, where reference had been made by her regarding her life in the house of her in-laws, and the statements quoted by the witnesses, who had not spoken of anything which they had seen directly, be connected with any circumstance of the transaction which resulted in her death. Even that apart, the matter herein is concerned with an offence under Section 498-A IPC disjuncted from the offence under Section 306 IPC the question of her death is not an issue for consideration and on that premise also Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act will stand at bay so far as these materials are concerned. (Paras 7, 4 and 5)

Thus, the appellant is acquitted as there is no single piece of evidence which can be admitted in law to be used against him. (Para 8). Inderpal v. State of M.P., (2001) 10 SCC 736.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2000]

[10955] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Suicide by wife along with her 1½-year-old daughter — Two dying declarations — Inconsistency between — High Court acquitting appellant husband and his mother under S. 306, but convicting them under S. 498-A — Propriety of — First dying declaration recorded by Magistrate implicating only the mother of appellant — Doctor certifying that wife was fit to make the statement — Wife admitting the correctness of declaration by affixing her thumb impression thereon — Second declaration (recorded only five minutes after the first one by a Head Constable) implicating appellant and his mother both — No allegation by father of wife and other family members to the effect that the accused treated his wife cruelly or harassed her — Wife was annoyed by the fact that her husband's deceased sister's children were being brought up in the family home — Held, said conduct could not be equated with cruelty or harassment — In view of the inconsistency between the two dying declarations and no other evidence to prove the charge under S. 498-A, husband and his mother acquitted thereunder

In the first dying declaration there is no mention about the appellant having treated the deceased with cruelty or of his having caused harassment to the deceased. In fact, his name does not find place in the relevant portion of the first dying declaration. The first dying declaration was recorded by a Magistrate after taking all necessary precautions. The deceased was in a position to make a statement which was certified by the treating physician who was also present when the statement was recorded. Only five minutes thereafter another statement was recorded by the Head Constable and in that dying declaration allegations have been made against the appellant and facts stated relating to the immediate cause which led the deceased to commit suicide which are attributable to the appellant, though there is a statement that her mother-in-law also used to harass her. (Para 12)

However, the witnesses including the father of the deceased have not supported this case. In fact, the father of the deceased, namely, PW 1, in his deposition stated that misunderstandings arose between his daughter and her husband on account of the fact that the three children of the deceased sister of the appellant were being brought up in the house of the appellant which was objected to by the deceased. If in those unfortunate circumstances the three children of the deceased sister of the appellant were being brought up in his family, one cannot blame the appellant or his parents for having shown compassion towards the children of his deceased sister. If that is what caused annoyance to the deceased, one cannot equate such conduct with cruelty or harassment. Further, there is no reason why on this aspect of the matter the father of the deceased should not speak the truth. In any event, he and his family members were the only persons who could have deposed about the treatment meted out to the deceased. All of them have denied the suggestion that the appellant or his mother-in-law treated the deceased with cruelty. The fact that these witnesses have been declared hostile by the prosecution does not result in the automatic rejection of their evidence. Even the evidence of a hostile witness if it finds corroboration from the facts of the case may be taken into account while judging the guilt of an accused. In any event, if their evidence is kept out of consideration, there is no other evidence to prove the prosecution allegation of cruelty and harassment meted out to the deceased. Having regard to the inconsistency in the two dying declarations, it is not safe to act solely on them to convict the appellant, and for that reason even the mother of the appellant who has since served out her sentence. (Para 14). Lella Srinivasa Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 9 SCC 713: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1479: AIR 2004 SC 1720.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2004]

(ix) FIR

[10956] — S. 498-A — Suicidal death of woman in her in-laws' house within ten months of marriage — Delay in lodging FIR — Held on facts, not unjustified even though FIR could have been lodged by some other adult member of the family. State of W.B. v. Orilal Jaiswal, (1994) 1 SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 107: AIR 1994 SC 1418: 1994 Cri LJ 2104: (1994) 1 BLJR 267: (1994) 1 Guj LH 537.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1993]

(x) Jurisdiction

[10957] — S. 498-A — Pragmatic approach — Complaint filed before court lacking territorial jurisdiction — Respondent wife filing complaint before CJM of Bankura, where she was living and mentioning own and brother's pitiable financial condition — Clear from complaint that beatings and other cruelty meted out in matrimonial home in Calcutta — Appellants filing criminal revision application before High Court challenging jurisdiction of CJM, Bankura to entertain complaint — High Court dismissing the same — Held, on facts, to meet the ends of justice, the complaint under S. 498-A should be treated as if it had been presented before appropriate court in Calcutta and had been transferred to Court of CJM, Bankura — Clarified that no opinion was being expressed on merits — CPC, 1908, S. 24 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 7, 14 and 406, 410

Even if the complaint had been lodged in the appropriate court in Calcutta, the respondent could have made application for transfer of the said case to Bankura which is her usual place of residence so that she can effectively pursue the case on the basis of the complaint lodged by her. In the facts of the case, it appears that such application for transfer, if made, deserves to be allowed. Taking a pragmatic view of the matter, it is felt that the complaint should not be dismissed on the score of jurisdictional impropriety. In the special facts of the case, it is directed that the complaint under Section 498-A would be treated as if the complaint was presented to the appropriate court in Calcutta and the same has been transferred to the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate, Bankura. Such direction is given for ends of justice and to avoid dismissal of the complaint filed in Bankura for want of jurisdiction and filing another complaint in Calcutta and then to get the same transferred to Bankura. (Para 2). Bhudeb Chandra Karmakar v. State of W.B., (2001) 9 SCC 226: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-1996]

[10958] — Ss. 498-A and 323 — Quashing of proceedings — Ground — Lack of jurisdiction of the Magistrate concerned to deal with the matter — Complaint filed under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 against husband and his relations by the wife at place C where she came to stay after leaving her husband's house at place N — All the offences alleged to have taken place at N — Said offences not continuing ones — No part of cause of action arose at place C — Hence, considering Ss. 177 and 178 CrPC, held, the Magistrate at C had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter — Proceedings quashed — Complainant given liberty to file complaint in appropriate court — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482, 177 and 178 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Constitution of India, Art. 136

Respondent 2 (wife of one of the appellants) filed a complaint in the Court of the Magistrate alleging commission of offences punishable under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC and Section 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. The Magistrate directed the police to investigate the case. After investigation, the police filed the charge-sheet. When the matter stood thus, the appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court alleging that the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction even to entertain the complaint even if the allegations contained therein were accepted in toto as no part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the court concerned. The complaint itself disclosed that after 15-4-1997, the respondent left the place N (where she was residing with her appellant husband) and came to the city C. Since all the alleged acts as per the complainant took place at N, the courts at C did not have the jurisdiction to deal with the matter. On the other hand, Respondent 2 submitted that the offences were continuing in terms of Section 178(c) CrPC and, therefore, the court at C had jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case, the inevitable conclusion is that no part of cause of action arose in the city C and, therefore, the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter. (Para 19). Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134: AIR 2004 SC 4286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

(6)(x) Jurisdiction (contd.)

[10959] — Ss. 498-A, 506 and 323 — Territorial jurisdiction — Continuing offence committed in more local areas than one — Complaint under Ss. 498-A, 506 and 323 IPC by wife against her husband, parents-in-law and two sisters-in-law — Allegation of dowry demand, maltreatment and humiliation at the house of her in-laws — Specific allegation against the husband that he had gone to the house of her parents and had assaulted her — Held, cl. (c) of S. 178 CrPC is attracted and the Magistrate at her parents' place also has jurisdiction to entertain the complaint — CrPC, 1973, S. 178(c)

In the instant case the complaint reveals a continuing offence of maltreatment and humiliation meted out to the appellant in the hands of all the accused respondents and in such continuing offence, on some occasions all the respondents had taken part and on other occasion, one of the respondents had taken part. Therefore, clause (c) of Section 178 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is clearly attracted. Sujata Mukherjee v. Prashant Kumar Mukherjee, (1997) 5 SCC 30: 1997 SCC (Cri) 673: AIR 1997 SC 2465: 1997 Cri LJ 2985.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1997]

(xi) Limitation

[10960] — S. 498-A — Cruelty — Currency of offence under, starting point of limitation period for — Held, subjection of a woman to cruelty by her husband or his relatives would cease as soon as she leaves the matrimonial home — Further held, starting point of limitation would be last act of cruelty — CrPC, 1973 — S. 368(2)(c) (Paras 8 and 9). Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735: AIR 2005 SC 1989: 2005 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2005]

Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, (1999) 4 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 629, relied on

[10961] — S. 498-A — Matrimonial offences relating to cruelty of husband on wife are in the nature of continuing offences to which bar of S. 468 CrPC cannot be applied in the interest of justice

It is true that the object of introducing S. 468 was to put a bar of limitation on prosecutions and to prevent the parties from filing cases after a long time, as it was thought proper that after a long lapse of time, launching of prosecution may be vexatious, because by that time even the evidence may disappear. But that consideration cannot be extended to matrimonial offences, where the allegations are of cruelty, torture and assault by the husband or other members of the family to the complainant. It is a matter of common experience that victim is subjected to such cruelty repeatedly and it is more or less like a continuing offence. It is only as a last resort that a wife openly comes before a court to unfold and relate the day-to-day torture and cruelty faced by her, inside the house, which many of such victims do not like to be made public. As such, courts while considering the question of limitation for an offence under S. 498-A i.e. subjecting a woman to cruelty by her husband or the relative of her husband, should judge that question, in the light of S. 473 of the Code, which requires the Court, not only to examine as to whether the delay has been properly explained, but as to whether "it is necessary to do so in the interests of justice". If the power under S. 473 of the Code is to be exercised in the interests of justice, then while considering the grievance by a lady, of torture, cruelty and inhuman treatment, by the husband and the relatives of the husband, the interest of justice requires a deeper examination of such grievances, instead of applying the rule of limitation and saying that with lapse of time the cause of action itself has come to an end. The general rule of limitation is based on the Latin maxim: vigilantibus, et non, dormientibus, jura subveniunt (the vigilant, and not the sleepy, are assisted by the laws). That maxim cannot be applied in connection with offences relating to cruelty against women. Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1993]

[10962] — S. 498-A — Offence under — Nature of — Held, is continuing offence — CrPC, 1973, S. 472

The essence of the offence in Section 498-A is cruelty. It is a continuing offence and on each occasion on which the respondent was subjected to cruelty, she would have a new starting point of limitation. Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, (1999) 4 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 629: AIR 1999 SC 2071.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Venkataswami and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-1999]

[10963] — S. 498-A and S. 113-B, Evidence Act, 1872 — Scope — Held, substantive S. 498-A IPC and presumptive S. 113-B of the Evidence Act, 1872 include in their amplitude past events of cruelty which need to be proved — Appellant was residing in Coimbatore for last 35 years, while the incident occurred at Pallapatti — Evidence inadequate to show that she was party to any demand for dowry or herself demanded any dowry — Rather, testimony of mother of deceased showing she made no dowry demand — In such circumstances, held, her conviction under S. 498-A cannot be maintained and hence set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-B (Paras 3 to 5, 13, 14, 18 and 19). Noorjahan v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 55: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 915: AIR 2008 SC 2131: (2008) 66 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2008]

[10964] — S. 498-A — S. 113-A, Evidence Act, 1872 — Both the provisions include in their amplitude past events of cruelty — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 113-A

Section 498-A IPC and Section 113-A of the Evidence Act include in their amplitude past events of cruelty. The period of operation of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act is seven years; presumption arises as to dowry death when a woman committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of marriage. (Para 7). Kaliyaperumal v. State of T.N., (2004) 9 SCC 157: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1417: AIR 2003 SC 3828: 2003 Cri LJ 4321.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2003]

[10965] — S. 498-A — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 113-A — Both these provisions include in their amplitude past events of cruelty

Section 498-A IPC and Section 113-A of the Evidence Act include in their amplitude past events of cruelty. Period of operation of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act is seven years; presumption arises as to dowry death when a woman committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of marriage. (Para 11). Hira Lal v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2003) 8 SCC 80: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2016: AIR 2003 SC 2865: (2003) 105 DLT 705: 2003 Cri LJ 3711.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2003]

[10966] — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Belated complaint under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Discharge — Legality — Liberal interpretation of S. 473 CrPC in case of offence under S. 498-A in favour of wife — Wife allegedly beaten by husband and in-laws and turned out of matrimonial home on 13-10-1988 — Complaint under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC filed on 18-10-1995 and charge-sheet filed by police (after investigation under Magistrate's order) on 22-12-1995 — Offence under S. 498-A IPC, being a continuing offence, in view of S. 468(3) of CrPC the limitation period for both the offences, held, commenced on 13-10-1988 and ended on 12-10-1991 under S. 468(2)(c) CrPC and the complaint was, therefore, time-barred — Hence, in absence of explanation for the delay, the Magistrate rightly discharged the accused for the offence under S. 406 IPC — However, in respect of offence under S. 498-A IPC, the provisions of S. 473 CrPC should have been liberally construed in favour of the wife — The Magistrate not having adverted to the question whether on the facts and circumstances of the case it was necessary in the interest of justice to take cognizance of the offence, his order of acquittal of the accused in respect of offence under S. 498-A IPC, held, unsustainable — High Court was right to that extent in setting aside the order of acquittal — Magistrate directed by Supreme Court to consider the question of limitation as explained herein — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 468 and 473, 472

On 18-10-1995, the respondent wife filed a complaint under, inter alia, Sections 498-A and 406 of IPC and Section 190(1) of CrPC alleging that she was beaten up by her husband, mother-in-law and sisters-in-law for want of dowry. Under the Magistrate's order, the police investigated the complaint under Section 156(3) CrPC and submitted charge-sheet (final report) under Section 498-A IPC on 22-12-1995. On that report the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC and issued summons to the appellants. The case was posted on 23-4-1996 for framing charges. On that date the Magistrate found the complaint to be time-barred and discharged the appellants. The High Court set aside the Magistrate's order and directed the Magistrate to proceed with the case. In the instant appeal, the following two questions arose before the Supreme Court:

(i) whether the Magistrate can discharge an accused after taking cognizance of an offence by him but before the trial of the case; and

(ii) whether the Magistrate was right in discharging the appellants on the grounds that the complaint was barred by limitation under Section 468 CrPC.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

The reason for engrafting the rule of limitation is that due to a long lapse of time necessary evidence will be lost and persons prosecuted will be placed in a defenceless position. This may even result in miscarriage of justice. (Para 10)

The essence of the offence in Section 498-A is cruelty. It is a continuing offence and on each occasion on which the respondent was subjected to cruelty, she would have a new starting point of limitation. The last act of cruelty was committed against the respondent, within the meaning of the explanation, on 13-10-1988. Having regard to the provisions of Sections 469 and 472, the period of limitation commenced for the offences under Sections 406 and 498-A from 13-10-1988 and ended on 12-10-1991. But the charge-sheet was filed on 22-12-1995. Therefore, it was clearly barred by limitation under Section 468(2)(c) CrPC. (Para 13)

But Section 473 of CrPC enables the court to take cognizance of an offence after the period of limitation, inter alia, if it is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of the case that it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice. The expression "in the interest of justice" in Section 473 does not mean in the interest of prosecution. What the court has to see is "interest of justice". The interest of justice demands that the court should protect the oppressed and punish the oppressor/offender. In complaints under Section 498-A the wife will invariably be oppressed. It is, therefore, appropriate for the courts, in case of delayed complaints, to construe liberally Section 473 CrPC in favour of a wife who is subjected to cruelty if on the facts and in the circumstances of the case it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice. When the conduct of the accused is such that applying the rule of limitation will give an unfair advantage to him or result in miscarriage of justice, the court may take cognizance of an offence after the expiry of the period of limitation in the interests of justice. This is only illustrative, not exhaustive. (Para 14)

In the instant case, the complaint was clearly barred by limitation and no explanation was offered for the inordinate delay. Therefore, in regard to Section 406 IPC, the Magistrate rightly held the complaint to be barred by limitation. But regarding offence under Section 498-A the Magistrate did not advert to the second limb of the second part in Section 473 CrPC. The order of the Magistrate on that aspect is unsustainable. (Para 17). Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, (1999) 4 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 629: AIR 1999 SC 2071.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Venkataswami and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-1999]

Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571, followed

[Ed.: The Supreme Court directed the Magistrate to consider the question of limitation taking note of Section 473 CrPC in the light of the observations made herein. (Para 17)]

(xii) Quashment

See also CrPC, 1973, Section 482 — Inherent Powers of High Court — '(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes', pp. 485 et seq. in Vol. 18, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 2 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[10967] — S. 498-A — Petition for quashing complaint under S. 498-A IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Rejected by High Court — *Marriage between Appellant 1 and complainant taking place on 25-11-1998, and Appellant 1 leaving for USA six months later — Complaint filed on 6-2-2000 — Held, even a cursory perusal of the complaint shows that the case falls within Category (7) highlighted in*Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, viz. "where, a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge" — Hence, said complaint liable to be quashed — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 9, 7, 2, 3 and 5). Sunder Babu v. State of T.N., (2009) 14 SCC 244.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, considered and applied

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310; Priya Vrat Singh v. Shyam Ji Sahai, (2008) 8 SCC 232: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 463, relied on

[10968] — S. 498-A — Quashing of proceedings by High Court — Allegation of mala fides against informant — Effect of — Allegations of cruelty, dowry demand by appellant wife — On facts, held, allegation of mala fides against informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Ss. 3 and 4 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 10, 9 and 6)

The appellant wife, married Respondent 3, R on 1-7-1998, alleging mental and physical torture for dowry demands made a complaint alleging commission of offences punishable under Section 498-A IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (the Act). The police registered an FIR. In the suit for divorce filed by the husband, Family Court directed maintenance at the rate of Rs 2000 p.m. and the cost of litigation to be paid to the appellant. The appellant's father-in-law filed Miscellaneous Case No. 12 of 2001 questioning correctness of the maintenance order on the ground that the appellant's husband has no share in the ancestral property and maintenance cannot be paid out of it. Charge-sheet was filed on 12-8-2000. An application for discharge in terms of Section 239 CrPC was filed on 28-8-2001. The prayer was rejected on 7-9-2001 by SDJM. The Sessions Judge dismissed the revision application of the respondents. However, by the impugned order, the High Court quashed the proceedings initiated against Respondents 1 to 7, in purported exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Renu Kumari v. Sanjay Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 346.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, distinguished [10969] — S. 498-A — Quashing of trial in a complaint alleging harassment by husband and his parents for more dowry — Absence of reasons — Sustainability — Held, order indefensible since disposed of in casual manner without indicating any basis or reasons for exercising jurisdiction under S. 482 — Order set aside and matter remitted for consideration afresh — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Para 14). Samira Khanum v. Mohd. Asfar Towheed, (2009) 4 SCC 49: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 59: AIR 2009 SC 2149: (2009) 2 ECrN 1030 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 2445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, impliedly relied on

[10970] — Ss. 498-A and 323 — Quashing of proceedings — Ground — Lack of jurisdiction of the Magistrate concerned to deal with the matter — Complaint filed under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 against husband and his relations by the wife at place C where she came to stay after leaving her husband's house at place N — All the offences alleged to have taken place at N — Said offences not continuing ones — No part of cause of action arose at place C — Hence, considering Ss. 177 and 178 CrPC, held, the Magistrate at C had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter — Proceedings quashed — Complainant given liberty to file complaint in appropriate court — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482, 177 and 178 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Constitution of India, Art. 136

Respondent 2 (wife of one of the appellants) filed a complaint in the Court of the Magistrate alleging commission of offences punishable under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC and Section 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. The Magistrate directed the police to investigate the case. After investigation, the police filed the charge-sheet. When the matter stood thus, the appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court alleging that the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction even to entertain the complaint even if the allegations contained therein were accepted in toto as no part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the court concerned. The complaint itself disclosed that after 15-4-1997, the respondent left the place N (where she was residing with her appellant husband) and came to the city C. Since all the alleged acts as per the complainant took place at N, the courts at C did not have the jurisdiction to deal with the matter. On the other hand, Respondent 2 submitted that the offences were continuing in terms of Section 178(c) CrPC and, therefore, the court at C had jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case, the inevitable conclusion is that no part of cause of action arose in the city C and, therefore, the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter. (Para 19). Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134: AIR 2004 SC 4286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[10971] — Ss. 498-A, 323 and 506 — Quashment of proceedings under when found to have been initiated only to harass other party — Abuse of process — Family matter — Divorce petition — Conduct of appellant — Quashment of proceedings — Appellant and respondents entering into compromise, on basis whereof appellant obtaining divorce from R-1 who then withdrawing his petition under S. 9, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Appellant, however, partially performing her part of compromise by withdrawing case filed under S. 125 CrPC but not withdrawing petition filed under Ss. 498-A, 323 and 506 IPC and Ss. 3 and 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, as agreed in said compromise — Appellant coming before Supreme Court in appeal on High Court having quashed said petition on ground of lack of territorial jurisdiction, and contending that said compromise had been obtained by coercion and under threats from respondents — Fact that while respondent had performed his part of compromise, appellant had partially performed her part and the fact that she had made a complaint in writing to Family Court where S. 125 CrPC proceedings were pending that said compromise was obtained by coercion and then had withdrawn said complaint, and obtained a divorce on basis of said compromise, held, indicate that criminal complaint from which this appeal arises was filed by appellant only to harass the respondents — In view thereof it would be an abuse of process of court if said criminal proceedings are allowed to continue — Hence, not only appeal dismissed, but said proceedings against respondents quashed — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 (Paras 8 and 9). Ruchi Agarwal v. Amit Kumar Agrawal, (2005) 3 SCC 299: 2005 SCC (Cri) 719.

(6)(xii) Quashment (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2004]

[10972] — Ss. 498-A, 342, 506 and 406 r/w S. 34 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC after dismissal of SLP against framing of charges — Propriety — On facts, proceedings initiated against respondents in accordance with law with the satisfaction of trial court about prima facie case being made out — Accordingly, charges framed against respondents and said action upheld by High Court and the Supreme Court — Respondents again moved High Court under S. 482 for quashing of criminal proceedings — Held, once order was passed by the Supreme Court dismissing SLP, upholding framing of charges against respondents, High Court could not have exercised power under S. 482 quashing criminal proceedings initiated by appellant — Observation of High Court that even after dismissal of SLP by the Supreme Court, it was open for it to consider prayer of accused to quash the proceedings in exercise of inherent powers because "the extraordinary jurisdiction under S. 482 of the Code may be exercised at any stage", not proper — In substance and reality, High Court exercised power of review not conferred by CrPC on a criminal court — Therefore, High Court was clearly in error in exercising power under S. 482 — Hence, without entering into the merits, order set aside with the matter to be decided in accordance with law by an appropriate court — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

Challan was filed against the respondents for offences punishable under Sections 498-A, 506, 406 read with Section 34 IPC and also under Sections 3 and 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. Charges were framed against Respondents 1 to 3 (husband, father-in-law and mother-in-law) and also against brother and sister of Respondent 1. All the accused challenged the action of framing of charge against them in the High Court by filing a revision petition. High Court partly allowed the revision and quashed charges against brother and sister of Respondent 1. It, however, held, that so far as the other respondents were concerned, charges could not be quashed and dismissed the petition.

Being aggrieved by the said order, the respondents approached the Supreme Court by filing special leave petition, but it was dismissed. The respondents then once again filed a petition in the High Court by invoking Section 482 CrPC. The High Court vide the impugned order, allowed the petition holding that there was abuse of process of law by the appellant in initiating criminal proceedings. The proceedings were, therefore, quashed. The said order was challenged in the present appeal.

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

From the facts it is clear that a complaint was lodged by the petitioner against Respondents 1 to 3 as also against the other accused for offences punishable under Sections 498-A, 342 and 406 IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act. (Para 19)

The trial court was satisfied that prima facie case was made out and accordingly charges were framed against Respondents 1 to 3 as well as against the other accused. In a petition challenging that action, the High Court partly allowed the petition and quashed charges against brother-in-law and sister-in-law of the appellant herein but upheld the order of framing of charge against the remaining respondents i.e. Respondents 1 to 3 who, then, challenged the order of the High Court in the Supreme Court by filing SLP which was dismissed. It is thus clear that all the courts including the Supreme Court were of the view that there was prima facie case for framing of charge against the respondents herein. (Paras 20, 21 and 22)

After the order passed by the Supreme Court, Respondents 1 to 3 again moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of criminal proceedings. The High Court in the impugned order noted that earlier the respondents had approached it against framing of charge and the said action was not interfered with even by the Supreme Court. But observing that "a court of law cannot be expected to remain a silent spectator and cannot be made a tool of gratifying personal vengeance of any party", it held that the case in hand was a fit one to exercise inherent power under Section 482 CrPC and accordingly the proceedings were ordered to be quashed. But after the order had been passed by the Supreme Court dismissing the special leave petition, upholding framing of charge against Respondents 1 to 3, the High Court could not have exercised power under Section 482 CrPC quashing criminal proceedings initiated by the appellant. The High Court observed that even after dismissal of SLP by the Supreme Court, it was open for it to consider the prayer of the accused to quash the proceedings in exercise of inherent powers because "the extraordinary jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code may be exercised at any stage". Thereby High Court exercised power of review not conferred by CrPC on a criminal court. (Paras 24, 29 and 30)

On the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the High Court was clearly in error in exercising power under Section 482 CrPC in quashing criminal proceedings against the respondents. The said order, hence, deserves to be set aside. The matter will be decided in accordance with law by an appropriate court. (Para 42)

Moreover, it is well settled that inherent power under Section 482 CrPC must be exercised in rarest of rare cases. (Para 39)

It is clarified that merits of the matter or allegations and counter-allegations by the parties has not been entered into. All observations made have been made only for the limited purpose of deciding the issue. As and when the matter will come before the court, it will be considered on its own merits without being inhibited or influenced by the observations made by the High Court or the Supreme Court in the present order. (Para 43). Sunita Jain v. Pawan Kumar Jain, (2008) 2 SCC 705: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 537: (2008) 64 AIC 212 (SC): (2008) 2 KLJ 304.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2008]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed [10973] — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Quashing of complaint — Considerations — Mala fides — Absurdity — Allegation of theft of bangles by appellant (brother of daughter-in-law of Respondent 1) during raid by police at Respondent 1's house — Respondent 1 arrested on complaint of his daughter-in-law — Held, it is absurd to think that appellant, who was present with police party, would venture to pocket the bangles in their presence — Accompanying police officers have not been made accused in complaint — Complaint wholly lacks bona fides — Complaint has to be quashed if allegations are found absurd and without any basis — When complaint is seen in backdrop of prosecution of Respondent 1 for offences under Ss. 498-A, 406 IPC, absurdity becomes more prominent — Criminal complaint was in retaliation to criminal prosecution which was being faced by Respondent 1 — Complaint quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 2 to 6 and 9 to 13). Manoj Mahavir Prasad Khaitan v. Ram Gopal Poddar, (2010) 10 SCC 673.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[10974] — Ss. 498-A & 406 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Whether allegations in FIR made out the offence of which cognizance could be taken — Allegations against appellant sister-in-law only relating to causing insult, making derogatory remarks and behaving rudely against informant and not pertaining to dowry demand or entrustment and misappropriation of property belonging to her — Allegations of abetment of alleged offences, also not made against this appellant — Held, alleged offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act on facts not made out from such allegations, hence Magistrate not justified in taking cognizance thereof — Proceedings liable to be quashed — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Para 6). Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735: AIR 2005 SC 1989: 2005 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2005]

[10975] — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Quashment of criminal proceedings on initiation of civil proceedings — Permissibility — Held, filing of divorce petition in civil court cannot be a ground to quash criminal proceedings under S. 482 CrPC as it is well settled that criminal and civil proceedings are separate and independent and pendency of a civil proceeding cannot bring to an end a criminal proceeding even if they arise out of same set of facts — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

The present appeal was preferred against the judgment and order of the High Court whereby the High Court in the exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC quashed FIR dated 31-12-2001 lodged at the instance of the appellant. The said FIR was registered by the appellant complainant against the respondent-accused for the alleged offences under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC.

(6)(xii) Quashment (contd.)

In the facts of the case, the appellant had married Respondent 2 on 25-1-2000. Respondents 1, 3, 4 and 5 were the mother-in-law, brother-in-law, maternal father-in-law and the father-in-law of the appellant respectively. The appellant left her matrimonial home on 25-5-2001 with her father and brother. On 31-7-2001, the husband, Respondent 2, filed a petition before the Family Court praying for a decree of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty. On 31-12-2001, the appellant lodged an FIR against the respondents for the alleged offences under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC. The FIR was challenged by the respondents before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC praying for quashing of the same. While the petition under Section 482 CrPC was pending, a final investigation report was submitted on 13-2-2004 in the High Court.

The High Court by the impugned order quashed the FIR on the basis of the report of the investigating officer submitted before it and concluded that no offence under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC was made out by the appellant against the respondents. The High Court also observed that the FIR must be quashed to avoid undue harassment and mental agony to the respondents, more so when the divorce petition was still pending before the Family Court. Hence the present appeal.

Two questions arose in the present case:

(i) Whether the High Court while quashing the FIR in exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC was entitled to go beyond the complaint filed by the complainant; and (ii) Whether the High Court was entitled to look into and consider the investigation report submitted by four officers of the rank of Dy. Superintendent of Police, for quashing the FIR, even before the same could be filed before the Magistrate concerned.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court was not justified in drawing an adverse inference against the appellant wife for lodging the FIR on 31-12-2001 on the ground that she had left the matrimonial home at least six months before that. This is because the High Court had failed to appreciate that the appellant and her family members were during this period making all possible efforts to enter into a settlement so that Respondent 2, the husband, would take her back to the matrimonial home. If any complaint was made during this period there was every possibility of not entering into any settlement with Respondent 2, the husband. (Para 15)

The complaint was filed only when all efforts to return to the matrimonial home had failed and Respondent 2, the husband, had filed a divorce petition under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. (Para 16)

Filing of a divorce petition in a civil court cannot be a ground to quash criminal proceedings under Section 482 CrPC as it is well settled that criminal and civil proceedings are separate and independent and the pendency of a civil proceeding cannot bring to an end a criminal proceeding even if they arise out of the same set of facts. (Para 16)

From a plain reading of the findings arrived at by the High Court while quashing the FIR, it is apparent that the High Court while exercising its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC has gone beyond the allegations made in the FIR and has acted in excess of its jurisdiction and, therefore, the High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR by going beyond the allegations made in the FIR or by relying on extraneous considerations. (Paras 14 and 16). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27, relied on

[10976] — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Quashing of FIR for alleged offences punishable under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Factors to be considered — Perusal of FIR revealing absence of allegation of torture for dowry so as to constitute offence under S. 498-A IPC — But FIR containing allegations relating to offence under S. 406 IPC — If ultimately prosecution is unable to substantiate the plea relating to S. 406 IPC the result would follow — Hence, proceedings so far as relating to offence under S. 498-A IPC only liable to be quashed in exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC — But power under

S. 482 CrPC cannot be exercised in respect of allegations relating to S. 406 IPC — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Paras 9 and 10). Manjula Sinha v. State of U.P., (2007) 12 SCC 503: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 271: (2007) 5 All LJ 245.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2007]

Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359, relied on [10977] — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Quashing of FIR for offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Stage up to which possible — Where charge-sheet already filed and charges also framed, held, question of quashing FIR does not arise — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482 and 154, 211 & 210 (Para 14). Manjula Sinha v. State of U.P., (2007) 12 SCC 503: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 271: (2007) 5 All LJ 245.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2007]

[10978] — S. 498-A and Ss. 406, 341, 323 & 120-B and Ss. 3 & 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Quashing of complaint under S. 498-A IPC, against appellants (unmarried brother and married sister of complainant's husband) who were neither residing with complainant in her matrimonial home nor visited her — Demand of luxury car, passing of sarcastic remarks (without stating actual wordings), and physical assault alleged against parents-in-law, husband and appellants — Appellant 1 (married sister-in-law of complainant) residing in her own matrimonial home with her husband for more than 7 years, while Appellant 2 was permanent resident of Goregaon, Maharashtra — Appellants never visiting place where alleged occurrence had taken place, and neither living with complainant and her husband at any time — No specific allegation made against appellants in complaint, and none of the witnesses attributing any role to them — Held, their implication was only meant to harass and humiliate husband's relatives — Permitting complainant to pursue complaint would be abuse of process of law — Hence, complaint against appellants quashed — Courts cautioned to scrutinise such vexatious and frivolous complaints with great care and circumspection — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 4, 27, 28, 35 and 38). Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 7 SCC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and K.S. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2010]

[10979] — Ss. 498-A and 406 r/w S. 34 — Prima facie case under, when not made out — Quashment — Allegations in FIR not revealing offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 r/w S. 34 against respondent husband and his parents, and not being specific — On facts, said offences, held, are not made out from allegations levelled — Therefore, quashment by High Court upheld — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 79 to 81)

The High Court was justified in quashing the FIR filed by the appellant wife for offences punishable under Sections 498-A, 406 read with Section 34 IPC. (Paras 81 and 78)

The appellant-complainant is a citizen of USA and had all along lived in USA with her son and husband, away from her in-laws. The alleged scene of occurrence was in USA and her in-laws had no say in the matrimonial life of the couple. (Para 79)

The appellant's jewellery was lying in the couple's house in USA and no part of it was with her in-laws as was subsequently stated to be the position in the FIR lodged by the appellant. The particulars of the bank in which the alleged locker from where the husband took the appellant's jewellery were not given in the FIR. The High Court in that view held that no offence under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC was made out against her in-laws on the basis of the allegations made by the appellant in the FIR. (Para 80). Ruchi Majoo v. Sanjeev Majoo, (2011) 6 SCC 479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision : 13-5-2011]

[10980] — Ss. 498-A and 406 r/w S. 34 — Quashing of criminal proceedings initiated under Ss. 498-A and 406 r/w S. 34 IPC — Propriety of — Where there were clear allegations of cruelty meted out to the appellant wife on demand of dowry, High Court's order quashing the proceedings by holding that prima facie no case for offence under S. 498-A IPC was made out against the respondent, held, not sustainable — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Paras 4 and 5). Banhisikha Roy v. Somnath Roy, (2005) 12 SCC 500.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.M. Dharmadhikari and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2005]

[10981] — Ss. 498-A and 494 — Exercise of jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC — Consideration of admitted document — Quashing of FIR — Validity of — On facts, appellant was married to Respondent 1 around 1-12-1993 — However, they were living separately since 1996 — Appellant entered into agreement for divorce as per custom around 24-7-1996, which was registered — She received permanent alimony of Rs 25,000 which was acknowledged by granting stamped receipt therefor — Purported divorce took place accordingly — Respondent 1 married again in 1998 — Appellant filed complaint petition against Respondents 1 to 3 (husband and parents-in-law) in May 2006, inter alia, on premise that first respondent married for the second time — FIR lodged pursuant to the complaint resulted in arrest of respondents — Application for quashing FIR under S. 482 CrPC allowed by High Court — Sustainability — Respondents contending mala fide on appellant's part in view of the fact that complaint petition was filed ten years after divorce — Held, customary divorce may be legal or illegal but the fact that such an agreement was entered into and appellant had received Rs 25,000 by way of permanent alimony, stood admitted — Document was a registered one — Held, if contents of agreement are taken to be correct, indisputably parties were living separately for more than ten years — No case under S. 498-A IPC can be said to have been made out and that too at such a distant point of time is the question, particularly in view of bar of limitation as contained in S. 468 CrPC — Even otherwise it is unbelievable that appellant was really harassed by her husband or in-laws — Also, no allegation was made out in regard to commission of offence under S. 494 IPC so far as Respondents 2 and 3 were concerned — If for exercising its jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC High Court took into consideration an admitted document, there was no legal infirmity therein — If it was a case of customary divorce, question in regard to existence of good custom may have to be gone into in a civil proceeding, but a criminal prosecution shall not lie — It was initiated mala fide — It was an abuse of process of court — Hence, FIR rightly quashed — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 468 and 482 (Paras 2 to 7, 11, 12, 13 and 14). M. Saravana Porselvi v. A.R. Chandrashekar, (2008) 11 SCC 520: AIR 2008 SC 2462: (2008) 68 AIC 192 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3034.

(6)(xii) Quashment (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[10982] — S. 498-A r/w S. 34 — Disputed question of fact — Whether complainant was the legally wedded wife of appellant — Non-interference, in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction — High Court by impugned judgment dismissing application of appellant for quashing complaint filed against him under S. 498-A r/w S. 34 IPC, on ground that it involved disputed question of fact — Appellant contending that complainant was not his legally wedded wife as he was already married, and therefore S. 498-A IPC had no application — Held, no interference with impugned judgment called for — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 2, 3, 8 and 9). Koppisetti Subbharao v. State of A.P., (2009) 12 SCC 331: AIR 2009 SC 2684: (2009) 2 KLT 531: 2009 Cri LJ 3480: (2009) 2 APLJ 114 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2009]

Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699, followed

Mayne: Early History of Institution, p. 319; Banerjee: Marriage and Stridhan, p. 345; Mayne's Hindu Law and Usage, cited

[10983] — Ss. 498-A/323 and 406 — FIR lodged by wife (Respondent 2) under Ss. 498-A/323 and 406 against her husband (Appellant 4) and his relations (Appellants 1 to 3) — Quashing of sought due to settlement between the parties — Refusal by High Court — Propriety — Appellants seeking quashing of FIR due to settlement of disputes between Respondent 2 and appellants as husband and wife agreeing to mutual divorce — Wife supporting quashing of the said proceedings — Thus, where there was almost no chance of conviction, held, it would be improper to decline to exercise power of quashing on the ground that it would be permitting the parties to compound non-compoundable offences — Non-exercise of inherent power to quash the proceedings to meet the ends of justice would prevent women from settling earlier and that would be against the object of S. 498-A — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 r/w Arts. 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India

If for the purpose of securing the ends of justice, quashing of FIR becomes necessary, Section 320 would not be a bar to the exercise of power of quashing. It is, however, a different matter depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case whether to exercise or not such a power. Thus, the High Court in exercise of its inherent powers can quash criminal proceedings or FIR or complaint and Section 320 of the Code does not limit or affect the powers under Section 482 of the Code. (Paras 8 and 15)

It is, however, to be borne in mind that in the present case the appellants had not sought compounding of the offences. They had approached the Court seeking quashing of FIR. (Para 9)

It is well settled that the powers under Section 482 have no limits. Of course, where there is more power, it becomes necessary to exercise utmost care and caution while invoking such powers. Exercise of such power would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case but with the sole purpose to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. (Para 6)

In the present case, the wife filed an affidavit that the FIR was registered at her instance due to temperamental differences and implied imputations. There may be many reasons for not supporting the imputations. In such eventuality, there would almost be no chance of conviction. So it would not be proper to decline to exercise power of quashing on the ground that it would be permitting the parties to compound non-compoundable offences. It would, however, be a different matter if the High Court on facts declines the prayer for quashing for any valid reasons including lack of bona fides. Further, in Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692 it was held that while exercising inherent power of quashing under Section 482, it is for the High Court to take into consideration any special features which appear in a particular case to consider whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. The special features in such matrimonial matters are evident. It becomes the duty of the court to encourage genuine settlements of matrimonial disputes. (Paras 10, 11 and 12)

The object of introducing Chapter XX-A in IPC was to prevent torture to a woman by her husband or by relatives of her husband. Section 498-A was added with a view to punishing a husband and his relatives who harass or torture the wife to coerce her or her relatives to satisfy unlawful demands of dowry. A hypertechnical view would be counterproductive and would act against the interests of women and against the object for which this provision was added. There is every likelihood that non-exercise of inherent power to quash the proceedings to meet the ends of justice would prevent women from settling earlier. That is not the object of Chapter XX-A of IPC. (Para 14). B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848: AIR 2003 SC 1386: (2003) 2 KLT 1062: 2003 Cri LJ 2028.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2003]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10, considered and explained

Surendra Nath Mohanty v. State of Orissa, (1999) 5 SCC 238: 1999 SCC (Cri) 998, distinguished

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; G.V. Rao v. L.H.V. Prasad, (2000) 3 SCC 693: 2000 SCC (Cri) 733, relied on

(xiii) Suicide note

See also under S. 306, above

[10984] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Cruelty — Hurting utterances — No word on record to prove — Deceased, in her suicide note, making allegation against appellant, regarding serious and hurting utterances made by appellant towards deceased — Suicide note not indicating any "hurting" utterances — Court, held, must be in a position to hold that the words felt "hurting" were sufficient enough to amount cruelty under S. 498-A — Supreme Court, being helpless to judge whether the words used by appellant against deceased amounting to cruelty, acquitting the appellant of the charge under S. 498-A. Raj Rani v. State (Delhi Administration), (2000) 10 SCC 662: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1518.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2000]

[10985] — Ss. 498-A, 306 and 109 r/w S. 34 — Cruelty and abetment of suicide — Whether offences of, made out — Proof of — Extreme mental cruelty meted out to deceased wife (serving as a Lecturer) by economically dependent advocate husband (not settled in practice) — Number of instances of mental torture proved from the evidence of PWs 6, 7 and 8 (neighbour, sister and father of the deceased respectively) — Suicide note/letter written to the father of deceased giving graphic description of the number of instances of constant extreme mental torture and appellant's deriving sadistic pleasure in torturing the deceased — Courts below relying on circumstances enumerated in the suicide note and testimony of PWs 6, 7 and 8 and giving concurrent finding regarding extreme mental cruelty — Appellant created circumstances which left no option for the wife but to take an extreme step of putting an end to her life — Therefore, conviction under Ss. 498-A, 306 and 109 r/w S. 34, upheld (Paras 14 to 17 and 21 to 24). Milind Bhagwanrao Godse v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 3 SCC 699: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 2009 SC 1828: (2009) 76 AIC 224 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1736.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

(xiv) Transfer of case

[10986] — S. 498-A — Transfer — Considerations — Impleadment of all parties — Right of accused to fair trial and opportunity to defend — Paramount consideration — Convenience of party — Irrelevant — Proceedings under S. 498-A IPC against husband and five others — Only husband impleaded as respondent in transfer petition

(6)(xiv) Transfer of case (contd.)

while others not made parties thereto — Held, transfer petition liable to be dismissed on that ground alone — Further held, in matrimonial proceedings indulgence is shown to wife and ordinarily proceedings may be transferred to suit her convenience — But a criminal case stands on different footing — Accused may not be able to attend court proceedings at transferred court for various reasons and consequences of non-appearance of accused would be drastic — In criminal proceedings, right of accused to fair trial and proper opportunity to defend himself cannot be ignored for convenience of complainant simply because she happens to be the estranged wife — CrPC, 1973, S. 406 (Paras 4 to 7). Jyoti Mishra v. Dhananjaya Mishra, (2010) 8 SCC 803: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1107.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2010]

[10987] — Ss. 498-A and 323 — Transfer of proceedings — Matrimonial disputes — Grounds for — Wife seeking transfer of petition filed under S. 13 of Hindu Marriage Act by respondent husband, from Mumbai to Etawah on ground that she had a small child who required looking after by her, allowed — But transfer, sought by husband, of criminal case under Ss. 498-A and 323 IPC r/w Ss. 3 and 4 of Dowry Act, filed by wife in Etawah, rejected — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — CPC, 1908 — S. 25 (Paras 2 and 4). Neelam Pravin Singh Bhadoria v. Pravin Singh Ramakant Bhadoria, (2005) 11 SCC 394.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-2005]

[10988] — Ss. 498-A and 406 — Transfer of case — FIR registered, charge-sheet filed and cognizance of alleged offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act taken by Magistrate at Trichy — Acts, which were alleged to have constituted said offences, committed mostly in Mumbai and partly in Chennai but no acts constituting the alleged offences committed at Trichy — Informant also moved application for transfer of petition for dissolution of marriage filed by husband from Family Court, Mumbai, to Chennai — Having regard to relevant aspects, background facts and history of litigation, all cases, criminal and matrimonial, directed to be transferred from Trichy and Mumbai respectively to Chennai — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 406 and 177 (Paras 10 to 14). Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735: AIR 2005 SC 1989: 2005 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2005]

(xv) Witnesses

[10989] — S. 498-A — Cruelty by husband and mother-in-law of newly-wedded wife — Proof of — Related witnesses only — Physical and mental torture proved by mother, elder brother and other close relations of deceased wife — Absence of evidence of neighbours and co-tenants — No adverse inference can be drawn — Testimony of close relations cannot be discarded simply on ground of absence of corroboration by independent witnesses

The High Court has expressed doubts about the genuineness of the case of physical torture and abuses made by the husband and the deceased for the absence of any independent evidence given by the neighbours and co-tenants about such physical assault or the abuses hurled on the wife by the accused. Ordinarily it is not expected that physical torture or the abuses hurled on the wife by the husband and the mother-in-law should be made in such a way as to be noticed by the tenants living in the adjoining portions of the house. It is also not the case of the prosecution that the deceased was physically assaulted so violently that the neighbours came to know about such assault. It is also not the case that abuses used to be hurled loudly so that the tenants had occasions to hear them. It was therefore not necessary to examine neighbour or tenants to prove the prosecution case. In the instant case, the evidence about physical and mental torture of the deceased has come from the mother, elder brother and other close relations. Such depositions by close relations, who may be interested in the prosecution of the accused, need not be discarded simply on the score of the absence of corroboration by independent witness. Whether the evidence of interested witness is worthy of credence is to be judged in the special facts of the case. The acts of cruelty by the accused were expected to be known by the very close relations like mother, brother, sister, etc. The evidence of the mother has been accepted by the trial court as worthy of credence which cannot be discarded in the facts of the case. State of W.B. v. Orilal Jaiswal, (1994) 1 SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 107: AIR 1994 SC 1418: 1994 Cri LJ 2104: (1994) 1 BLJR 267: (1994) 1 Guj LH 537.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1993]

[10990] — S. 498-A — Ill-treatment of wife (deceased) by husband to get money from her mother — Evidence — Non-examination of any witness from the place where wife had her matrimonial home — Rejection of prosecution case as to ill-treatment on the basis of — Propriety — Held on facts, not proper — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 134

The High Court observed that no neighbour from the place G was examined to prove the fact that the deceased was being ill-treated by her husband. The High Court completely lost sight of the fact that the matrimonial home of the deceased was at G and therefore, it was not possible for the prosecution to get witnesses from G who would have supported the case of the prosecution. Moreover, the deceased had gone to G as a newly married daughter-in-law and it was not expected, even if she was ill-treated, to go about in the neighbourhood complaining against her husband. In any event this is not a good enough reason to reject the testimony of such a large number of witnesses who have deposed on this aspect of the case. (Para 11). State of Karnataka v. K. Gopalakrishna, (2005) 9 SCC 291: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1237: AIR 2005 SC 1014: 2005 Cri LJ 1436.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

[10991] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Suicide by wife — Allegations against husband (H) regarding demand of money and physical ill-treatment of wife (W) — Glaring improvements made in evidence — PW 6 (nephew of W) alleged to have seen H beating W when he visited the house of H on the date of the incident — PW 6 informed the same to PW 2 (brother of W) — In complaint lodged by PW 2 after the suicide, no mention about monetary demand and beating — Evidence of PW 3 (neighbour of PW 2) insufficient to prove the case — Improvements made by PWs 3 and 6 in their evidence — No allegation about harassment or demand in letters written by PW 4 at the instance of W to her parents — Statement of PW 5 (wife of one of the brothers of W) was too general in nature to base a conviction or to treat the same as corroborating any other acceptable evidence — Evidence of PW 7 also not assisting the prosecution case — Held, conviction and sentence imposed on accused husband liable to be set aside (Paras 7 to 15). Ashok Vishnu Davare v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 9 SCC 431: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1468.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

(7) Sentence/Fine/Compensation/Other punishment/relief

[10992] — S. 498-A — Appropriate sentence — High Court reducing sentence of one year's RI with fine of Rs 200 imposed by trial court to six months' RI with fine of Rs 1000 — Supreme Court reducing sentence further, to period of RI already undergone, of three months — Constitution of India, Art. 136. Suresh Damu Mistry v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 11 SCC 585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-2005]

[10993] — S. 498-A — Cruelty by husband — Condonation — Sentence reduction — Aggrieved wife forgiving convicted husband during pendency of appeal before Supreme Court — Expressing wish to live peaceably with him — She fearing that if husband forced to undergo sentence for remaining period compromise between them would fail — Held, on facts sentence already undergone by appellant could be treated as being sufficient — Sentence reduced to period already undergone (Para 4). Raghumunda Satya Narayana v. State of A.P., (2000) 9 SCC 59: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1161: AIR 2000 SC 3420 (2): 2000 Cri LJ 2779.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-1-2000]

[10994] — S. 498-A — Denial of benefit of remission scheme — Constitutionality — Remission of sentence — Power to grant remission is a matter of policy and no prisoner has absolute right to remission — Andhra Pradesh Govt. issuing a GO granting remission to a category of prisoners and subject to certain conditions — GO excluding those prisoners who were convicted for life and for crimes against women — Held, GO valid — Further held, in such class or category of orders, there is no justification for any addition or subtraction to facilitate enlargement of the scope and applicability of the order beyond what was specifically intended in the order itself — Appellant, who was convicted under S. 498-A IPC not entitled to the benefit under the scheme — Constitution of India, Art. 15(3) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 432

The Govt. of Andhra Pradesh in the 50th year of Independence issued a GO which inter alia granted remission to prisoners of certain categories and subject to certain conditions. The GO excluded inter alia those prisoners from the scheme of remission who had been convicted for "crimes against women such as Sections 376 and 354 IPC while being sentenced for life". The appellant had previously been convicted of offences under Sections 302, 201 and 498-A IPC and sentenced for life, 4 years and 3 years respectively and for which he was undergoing imprisonment. The appellant's brother filed a writ before the High Court challenging the said GO. Before the High Court the petitioner contended that since the present appellant has not committed a crime against women under Sections 376 or 354 IPC he should be given the benefit of the GO and granted remission. It was further contended that the condition stipulating the exclusion of prisoners having committed crimes against women was discriminatory and violated Article 14. The High Court rejected the contentions of the petitioner and before the Supreme Court the appellant advanced the same arguments.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

The rejection of the plea on behalf of the appellant by the High Court was well merited and supported by sound reasons. The remission to be granted was in respect of only a specified class of convicts and that too "subject to the conditions" specified in the very government order. (Para 7)

The claim for remission cannot be made or countenanced dehors the specific conditions subject to which only it has been accorded and inasmuch as the grant as well as the conditions formed a compendious single common pattern or scheme of concession by way of remission, impregnated with a policy designed in public interest and the safety and interests of the society, either the remission could be availed of only subject to the conditions stipulated or the entirety of the scheme fails as a whole, and there is no scope for judicial modification or modulating the same so as to extend the concession in excess of the very objective of the maker of the order who seems to have been guided by considerations of State policy. In such class or category of orders, there is no justification for any addition or subtraction to facilitate enlargement of the scope and applicability of the order beyond what was specifically intended in the order itself. (Para 7)

The Constitution of India itself has chosen to countenance the claims of women for favourable treatment and acknowledge the fact that sex is a sound classification. The issue in question being one pertaining purely to the area policy and political philosophy of the State, the courts except in the rarest of rare cases, cannot be called upon to adjudicate on the desirability or wisdom of such decisions. (Para 9)

The classification in this regard to keep away convicts of crimes against women from the benefits of remission under the order dated 25-1-2000 cannot be said to violate any reasonable principle or concept of law so as to call for its condemnation in exercise of the powers of judicial review. The classification therefore sounds just, reasonable, proper and necessitated in the larger interests of society and greater public interest and consequently, cannot by any stretch of imagination be branded to be invidious to attract the vice of Article 14 of the Constitution of India. A careful scrutiny of the various excepted class of convicts only shows that the real object is to ensure that those who prey on the community and violate fundamental values of mankind, society and national interest should not get undeserved benefit. (Para 9). Sanaboina Satyanarayana v. Govt. of A.P., (2003) 10 SCC 78: AIR 2003 SC 3074: 2003 Cri LJ 3854.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2003]

[10995] — S. 498-A — Reduction of sentence — When warranted — Sentence of six months' SI imposed against appellant — Appellant and victim found have since remarried and happily living with their families — In the facts and circumstances sentence reduced to period of imprisonment already undergone i.e. two months. B.T. Jayaram v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 530: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 861: AIR 2006 SC 1799: (2006) 41 AIC 931(SC)(2).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2006]

[10996] — S. 498-A — Sentence — Reduction of, when not justified — Merely because in revision before High Court, accused persons had not challenged their conviction and had argued only on the question of their sentence, held, High Court was not justified in reducing the sentence to the period accused had been in jail, without even verifying whether they had undergone any sentence at all and without applying its mind to the facts to ascertain whether it was a fit case for exercise of revisional jurisdiction and modifying the sentence — CrPC, 1973, S. 401

The Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate convicted the respondents (husband and mother-in-law of the victim) for the offence punishable under Section 498-A IPC each and sentenced them to suffer RI for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 1000 and in default in payment of fine to further undergo RI for 3 months each, by holding that the accused persons asked the victim to bring money from her father's house and when she could not arrange for money, all the accused mercilessly beat her and planned to burn her with a burning wooden stick. Appeal preferred by the respondents was dismissed by the Additional Sessions Judge. The respondents then filed revision petition before the High Court. A Single Judge allowed the revision by a cryptic order holding that the counsel for the accused had not challenged the conviction and had argued only on the question of sentence and that in the circumstances, "by maintaining the conviction for the offence under Section 498-A IPC, I modify the sentence and they are sentenced to undergo RI for the period for which they had been in jail and a fine of Rs 1000 each. They shall be released forthwith on deposit of fine".

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court has modified the sentence without recording any reasons and without considering the crime prevalent in the society for unjustified demand of dowry. In any case, before exercising its revisional jurisdiction, the Court ought to have considered the facts and applied its mind as to whether it was a fit case for exercise of its revisional jurisdiction and for reducing the sentence. It has also been pointed out that without verifying the fact that the respondents have not undergone any sentence, the High Court had passed the order of reducing the sentence for the period for which they had been in jail. It is the duty of the court to pass appropriate order of sentence and not raising of any argument by counsel for the accused for acquittal is hardly any ground for reduction of sentence. (Para 7). Narsingh Prasad Singh v. Raj Kumar, (2001) 4 SCC 522: 2001 SCC (Cri) 757: AIR 2001 SC 1828: 2001 Cri LJ 2039.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-4-2001]

[10997] — S. 498-A — Sentence reduced to that already undergone — Appellants 2 to 5 sentenced to imprisonment for one year and to pay fine of Rs 2000 each — They had already been undergoing imprisonment for about 5/6 months and paying stipulated fine — Hence, sentence reduced to period already undergone considering circumstances of the case and fact that at least two of the accused were ladies (Paras 2 to 4). Santoshi v. State of M.P., (2009) 16 SCC 753: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-5-2009]

[10998] — Ss. 498-A & 34 — Compromise — Effect — Appellants along with other three accused convicted under S. 498-A r/w S. 34 by the trial court and sentenced to RI for 2 years — High Court in appeal confirming the said order — SLP filed by the three accused against conviction dismissed by the Supreme Court — No point of distinction in case of appellants vis-à-vis the other three accused — Submission that appellants have been in custody for more than two months and an affidavit has been field by the victim stating that the disputes have been amicably settled — Held, offence under S. 498-A is not compoundable and hence permission cannot be accorded to record the compromise, but effect of the same can be taken into consideration while awarding sentence — Sentence of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone (Paras 1 and 3). Badal Deb v. State of Assam, (2006) 10 SCC 540: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 139.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-2006]

[10999] — Ss. 498-A and 304-B — Conviction under — Sentence warranted — Factors to be considered — Death of the deceased "otherwise than under normal circumstances" — Dowry demand, torture and harassment "soon before" death proved — Sentence of 10 years' RI for offence under S. 304-B but no separate sentence for offence under S. 498-A imposed by the trial court, and affirmed by the High Court — Accused having already undergone nearly eight years of sentence — Hence, while maintaining conviction, custodial sentence reduced to eight years (Paras 3, 8, 11 and 13). Kailash v. State of M.P., (2006) 12 SCC 667: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 359: AIR 2007 SC 107: (2006) 47 AIC 823 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L. S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2006]

[11000] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Conviction justified under S. 498-A — Sentence warranted against aged parents-in-law of deceased — Accused-appellants 1 to 4 (father-in-law, husband, brother-in-law and mother-in-law respectively of deceased) alleged to have harassed and ill-treated deceased over dowry demand — Deceased found lying dead in verandah of her matrimonial home, and none of the accused present — Trial court finding accused guilty under Ss. 498-A and 306 — In appeal filed thereagainst, High Court convicting them only under S. 498-A and imposing sentence of one year — Sustainability — Held, there is no material to establish guilt of A-3 i.e. brother-in-law of the deceased, and hence, he acquitted — So far as the other three accused persons are concerned, the accusations have been established by evidence of PWs 3, 4 and 5, documentary evidence, and exhibited letters and the convictions recorded so far as they are concerned, cannot be faulted — However, considering age of the father-in-law and mother-in-law (A-1 and A-4) and period of sentence already undergone by them, while upholding their conviction, sentence reduced to the period already undergone — Conviction and sentence of A-2 maintained (Paras 3 and 11 to 13). Balwant Singh v. State of H.P., (2008) 15 SCC 497: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1094: (2008) 71 AIC 153 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4683.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2008]

M. Srinivasulu v. State of A.P., (2007) 12 SCC 443: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 169; Kaliyaperumal v. State of T.N., (2004) 9 SCC 157, relied on

Balwant Singh v. State, (2001) 1 Shim LC 446 (HP), partly affirmed

[11001] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Demand of additional dowry — Ill-treatment and harassment of wife by appellant husband — Wife committing suicide by consuming poison — Prosecution case fully established — Concurrent findings of courts below, held, proper — Conviction upheld — Sentence of three years' RI under S. 498-A and seven years' RI under S. 306, held, required no further leniency (Para 7). Moti Lal v. State of M.P., (2004) 2 SCC 469: 2004 SCC (Cri) 573: 2004 Cri LJ 907.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2004]

[11002] — Ss. 498-A and 306 — Sentencing — Non-compliance with S. 235(2) CrPC — Contention in respect of — Order of sentence passed after hearing the counsel for the accused-appellant on the same date on which the verdict of the guilt was pronounced — Not that the appellant sought for an adjournment or grant of further time for making submission on the sentence but the same was refused — Further, no grievance in that behalf made before the High Court — On facts, held, contention as to alleged non-compliance with S. 235(2) CrPC liable to be rejected — CrPC, 1973 — S. 235(2) (Paras 5 and 6). Moti Lal v. State of M.P., (2004) 2 SCC 469: 2004 SCC (Cri) 573: 2004 Cri LJ 907.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2004]

Santa Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 4 SCC 190: 1976 SCC (Cri) 546, explained and distinguished on facts

[11003] — Ss. 498-A and 323 — Non-compoundable offence — Modification of sentence — Effect of compromise regarding compoundable offence — During pendency of appeal, parties entering into compromise and as a result appellants acquitted of offence under S. 323 — Affidavit of complainant, ex-wife of Appellant 1, clearly stating that she had no wish to pursue the case and that she had remarried by then — Held, conviction under S. 498-A to be maintained, but sentence of imprisonment (1 year) to be reduced to period already undergone (Appellants 1 & 2, 8 months and 21/2 months respectively); Appellant 3 to be released on probation under Probation of Offenders Act, so that his job may not be jeopardised — CrPC, 1973, S. 320 — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958, S. 4 (Para 6). Ramchandra Singh v. State of Bihar, (2003) 10 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2002]

[11004] — Ss. 498-A, 406 and 120-B — Matrimonial dispute settled and proceedings quashed — Petition disposed of on the following terms: on the payment of Rs 5,00,000 by respondent to petitioner the proceeding under Ss. 498-A, 406 and 120-B IPC and under S. 9 of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 shall stand quashed — Joint petition for divorce by mutual consent shall be allowed — Rs 3000 per month shall be paid for the welfare of the son till the boy attains majority — On two consecutive defaults in making said payment, the criminal case shall stand revived — CrPC, 1973, S. 125 — CPC, 1908, S. 25. Navpreet Kaur v. Gurkirat Singh, (2008) 17 SCC 485: (2009) 73 AIC 18 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2008]

[11005] — Ss. 498-A and 500 — Punishment — Compromise — Husband suspecting wife of unchastity right from day of marriage and indulging in mud-slinging and character assassination thereafter and lodging false complaint of theft against her — Pursuant to complaint made by respondent-wife, appellant-husband convicted under S. 498-A IPC with fine of Rs 30,000 and under S. 500 with sentence of two months' simple imprisonment and fine of Rs 6000 by High Court — Before the Supreme Court settlement arrived at between the parties whereunder appellant agreeing to pay rupees one lakh to respondent in addition to payment of fine of Rs 6000 under S. 500 as also to pay fine of Rs 30,000 under S. 498-A as ordered by High Court and to file an unqualified apology before the Supreme Court for the mental strain and stress caused by him to the respondent — Appellants' brother also to file an undertaking before the Court to the effect that he will take no proceedings, civil or criminal, against the respondent for any averments, allegations or statements made by her in any proceedings — Respondent would be entitled to withdraw the amounts deposited by appellant — Compliance with the terms of the settlement would conclude all the proceedings — High Court was justified in taking serious view of appellant's conduct towards respondent — This should prove to be an eye opener to those who believe that they can get away by casting aspersions on a woman to serve their ends and to silence her — CrPC, 1973, S. 320. Mukund Martand Chitnis v. Madhuri Mukund Chitnis, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 359: AIR 1992 SC 1804.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1991]

(8) Other issues

[11006] — Ss. 498-A and 304 — Custody of minor — Who should be given — Matters to be taken into consideration in determination of — Effect of pendency of proceedings under Ss. 498-A and 304 IPC against father — Paramount consideration, held, is the welfare of the child and not statutory rights of parents — Statutes and statutory rights although relevant, interpretation of statutory provisions cannot be made sole basis of decision in such cases — The problem has to be solved rather with a human touch — In dealing with such cases, the court is neither bound by statutes nor by strict rules of evidence or procedure nor by precedents — Since in selecting a guardian, the court exercises parens patriae jurisdiction, it must give due weightage to child's ordinary comfort, contentment, health, education, intellectual development and favourable surroundings as well as physical comfort and moral values — Court must ascertain child's wishes — If the minor is old enough to form an intelligent preference, such preference must also be considered, although the final decision would rest with the court — Character of the proposed guardian also requires to be considered — Proper test to determine the suitability of the father to have the custody of the minor, held, is the positive test of welfare of the minor and not the negative test that the father was not unfit or disqualified to have the custody — In the present case, pendency of criminal case under Ss. 498-A and 304 IPC against the father charging him of causing the death of the minor's mother ought to have been taken into consideration by the courts below and then an appropriate order ought to have been passed — The minor son, aged six years, when called in chamber, found to be quite intelligent — He refusing to go or stay with his father and preferring to stay with his grandparents — In such circumstances, father's request for having custody of the minor son, rejected — Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, Ss. 6, 13, 4 and 2 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 26 — Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, Ss. 17(1), (2), (3), 7 and 4(1), (2) and (3)

On the facts and circumstances of the case, both the courts were duty-bound to consider the allegations against the respondent herein and the pendency of the criminal case for an offence punishable under Section 498-A IPC. One of the matters which is required to be considered by a court of law is the "character" of the proposed guardian. A complaint against the father alleging and attributing the death of the mother, and a case under Section 498-A IPC is indeed a relevant factor and a court of law must address the said circumstance while deciding the custody of the minor in favour of such a person. The trial court erred in observing that if the father was convicted it would be open to the maternal grandparents to make an appropriate application for change of custody. Even at this stage, the said fact ought to have been considered and an appropriate order ought to have been passed. (Paras 63, 64 and 59). Nil Ratan Kundu v. Abhijit Kundu, (2008) 9 SCC 413.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2008]

[11007] — Ss. 498-A, 406, 420 and 315 — Inherent powers of High Court under S. 482 CrPC — Scope — Power to award costs if included — Frivolous and vexatious petition — Held, S. 482 CrPC is independent of other provisions — Where no express power is available to do a particular thing but the existence of such power is not negated by the express provisions either, held, High Court can exercise inherent powers for doing justice according to law — Hence, although under CrPC the specific provisions for awarding costs are only Ss. 148(3), 342 and 359 CrPC held, in appropriate cases High Court can award costs for the purposes of S. 482 CrPC albeit this jurisdiction is to be exercised sparingly and judiciously — Maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius" cannot be applied to deny such power to High Court — On facts, High Court's order imposing exemplary costs of Rs 10,000 on each of the applicants while rejecting their frivolous/vexatious application under S. 482, upheld — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482, 148(3), 342, 359, 357, 358 and 227

Consequent to an FIR and investigation pursuant thereto, a charge-sheet was filed against the first informant's husband and five others under Sections 498-A, 406, 420, 315 IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. The case was committed to the Sessions Court. Four of the said five others were subsequently discharged by the trial court under Section 227 CrPC. In the revision case filed by the complainant, the High Court set aside the order of discharge and held that there was sufficient material to frame charges. Accordingly, the trial court framed charges against those four accused persons also. The said four persons then filed a revision case on the ground that there was no prima facie case for framing charges against them. While dismissing this revision case, the High Court observed that the proceedings had been dragged on for eight years and that the revisionists had suppressed the decision of the High Court in the complainants' revision case and had not, despite the High Court's direction to the trial court to finish the trial expeditiously, allowed the trial court to do so. The High Court, therefore, imposed costs of Rs 10,000 each on the appellants to be paid to the informant (complainant), and directed the trial court to dispose of the case within two months. In the instant appeal, the appellants (revisionists before the High Court) contended that the High Court had no jurisdiction to impose costs except as provided under Sections 148(3), 342 and 359 of the CrPC and that the inherent powers of the High Court could not be exercised contrary to the said provisions. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Section 482 CrPC stands independently from the other provisions of the Code and it expressly saves the inherent powers of the High Court. Therefore, to prevent abuse of the process of the court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice, the High Court is empowered to pass "such order" which may include order to pay costs to the informant (complainant) and the language of the section does not in terms place any fetter. This power is not conditioned or controlled by any other section nor is curtailed by any provisions which empower the court to award costs. (Paras 8 and 22)

If there is an express provision governing the particular subject-matter then there is no scope for invoking or exercising the inherent powers of the Court because the Court is required to apply, in the manner and mode prescribed, the provisions of the statute. But the highest court in the State could exercise inherent powers for doing justice according to law where no express power is available to do a particular thing and express power does not negative the existence of such power. It is true that under the CrPC, specific provisions for awarding costs are only Sections 148(3), 342 and 359 of the CrPC. At the same time, there is no specific bar that in no other case, costs could be awarded. Further, in view of provision for awarding costs under Section 59 in non-cognizable cases, it may be inferred that in a cognizable case and in an appeal or revision arising therefrom, the High Court cannot exercise its inherent power for awarding costs dehors the said provisions. But such an inference is not possible in cases where the High Court is exercising powers under Section 482. In cognizable cases also under Section 357 while awarding compensation out of the fine imposed on the accused, inter alia, the Court is required to take into consideration expenses properly incurred in the prosecution. Hence, exercise of such power would, on the contrary, be in conformity and not in conflict with the powers conferred under Sections 148(3), 342 and 357 or 359 of the CrPC. In appropriate cases, where it is necessary to pass such an order, the Court may award costs for the purposes mentioned in Section 482. (Paras 8, 12, 16 and 22)

The operation of the maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius" has to be restricted with regard to the sections which empower the Court to grant costs in certain cases by holding that for the cases mentioned in those sections, the Court cannot exercise its inherent jurisdiction of granting costs or pass an order of granting costs in a method and mode different from what is provided by the said sections. Application of this maxim in the present case would lead to inconsistency and injustice because in cases where the Court finds that a petition under Section 482 is an abuse of the process of law and an unjustifiable petition for some ulterior motive including dragging of the proceedings of the court, it can pass any other order, but not the order for costs. (Para 18). Mary Angel v. State of T.N., (1999) 5 SCC 209: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1296: AIR 1999 SC 2245: 1999 Cri LJ 3513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1999]

*A.T. Sankaralinga Mudaliar v. Narayana Mudaliar, AIR 1922 Mad 502: 23 Cri LJ 583 (FB), overruled

*Lasu Janu Pawar v. Emperor, AIR 1948 Bom 169: 49 Cri LJ 203; P. Veerappa Naidu v. Avudayammal, AIR 1925 Mad 438: 26 Cri LJ 707, impliedly overruled

Pampapathy v. State of Mysore, AIR 1967 SC 286: 1966 Supp SCR 477; Raghubir Saran (Dr.') v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 2 SCR 336; Guardians of West Ham Union v. Churchwardens of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, 1896 AC 477: 75 LT 286; Bombay Civil Fund Act, 1882, Re, Pringle v. Secy. of State for India, (1888) 40 Ch D 288: 60 LT 796, relied on

State of Orissa v. Ram Chander Agarwala, (1979) 2 SCC 305: 1979 SCC (Cri) 462, explained and distinguished

---

— S. 499 See also Ss. 81, 87, 88, 89, 91, 92, 93, 100, 104, 106, 415, 469 and 499

See also Ss. 500 and 499 Exception 8

See also Ss. 500/34 and S. 499 Exception 9

[11008] — S. 499 — "Acting or purporting to act in discharge of his official duty" — Defamatory language used by a Judge to an Advocate — Held, not in discharge of his official duty — Hence S. 197 CrPC not applicable and Sanction for prosecution of the Judge not required — CrPC, 1973 — S. 197

The District Court called for remarks from the appellant, a Munsif Magistrate, on certain allegations made by the respondent, an Advocate, in his application for transfer of a suit pending in the appellant's court. The appellant in his written remarks called the respondent as 'rowdy', 'a big gambler' and 'a mischievous element'. The District Judge read out the appellant's remarks in open court. The respondent then filed a criminal complaint alleging that the remarks amounted to his defamation under S. 499, IPC.

Held :

There was no reasonable nexus between the act complained of, i.e. the defamatory language used by the appellant in his remarks, and the discharge of official duty i.e. to offer his remarks regarding the allegations made in the transfer petition. Therefore, S. 197 was not attracted. B.S. Sambhu v. T.S. Krishnaswamy, (1983) 1 SCC 11: 1983 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 1983 SC 64: 1983 Cri LJ 158.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-1982]

Matajog Dubey H.C. Bhari, (1957) 2 SCR 925: AIR 1956 SC 44, applied

[11009] — S. 499 — Constitutional validity — Defamation — Constitutional validity of S. 499, Penal Code, 1860 in respect of statements made in relation to official conduct of public servants/functionaries — Rule issued — Constitution of India, Arts. 19(1)(a) & (2) (Para 2). N. Ravi v. Union of India, (2007) 15 SCC 631.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2004]

[11010] — S. 499 — Defamation — Acts prima facie not amounting to defamation — Complaint of such acts if mala fide — Determination of — Accused in response to survey conducted by news magazine on subject of sexual habits of people residing in big cities, making a statement endorsing in general premarital sex and posing a question as to whether people in Tamil Nadu were not aware of incidence of sex or premarital sex — Statement not directed at any individual or even at a company or association or collection of persons — Such statement, held, did not constitute prima facie case of defamation of Tamil-speaking women — Moreover, complainants not having suffered any specific legal injury by said statement, held, were not "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of S. 199(1) CrPC, 1973 — Hence, complaints filed by them, held, mala fide — More so when most of them were associated with a particular political party — CrPC, 1973, S. 199(1)

I, a news magazine conducted a survey on the subject of sexual habits of people residing in the bigger cities of India. One of the issues discussed therein was the increasing incidence of premarital sex. Thereafter, the magazine published the views expressed by various persons, including the appellant, a well-known actress. Expressing her personal opinion, she noted the increasing incidence of premarital sex, especially in the context of live-in relationships and called for societal acceptance of the same. Subsequently, D, a Tamil daily reproduced the appellant's statement published in the said magazine. It added that in a conversation with its correspondent, the appellant had defended her views and stated: "The persons who are protesting against my interview, are talking about which culture? Is there anyone who does not know about sex in Tamil Nadu? Is there anyone who does not know about AIDS? How many men and women do not have sex before marriage?" The appellant, however, in a legal notice to the editor of the said daily denied the said statement.

Several persons and organisations, particularly functionaries of a political party PMK filed as many as 23 criminal complaints against the appellant for the offences contemplated under Sections 499, 500, 509, 153-A and 292 IPC read with Sections 4 and 6 of the Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986. Most of the complaints were filed in various districts of T.N. State while one was filed in M.P.

The appellant then approached Madras High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of said proceedings. Taking the view that the questions involved in the complaints required consideration by a trial Judge, the High Court rejected the plea of the appellant. However, the High Court directed all the complaints to be consolidated and tried by CJM at E. Aggrieved thereby, the appellant filed the present batch of appeals by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that: (i) the respondent complainants were not "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC and could not therefore maintain the complaints; (ii) the opinion expressed by the appellant was protected by Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution; (iii) the allegations made in the complaints, even if taken on their face value, did not disclose any offence under the provisions specified therein; and (iv) the criminal proceedings were instituted in a mala fide manner by workers of a particular political party to vilify the appellant and gain undue political mileage.

The respondents supported the order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The Framers of the Constitution recognised the importance of safeguarding the freedom of speech and expression since the free flow of opinions and ideas is essential to sustain the collective life of the citizenry. While an informed citizenry is a precondition for meaningful governance in the political sense, a culture of open dialogue must also be promoted when it comes to societal attitudes. (Para 45)

No doubt, in India, marriage is an important social institution, that there are certain individuals or groups who do not hold the same view. Notions of social morality are inherently subjective and the criminal law cannot be used as a means to unduly interfere with the domain of personal autonomy. Morality and criminality are not coextensive. (Paras 46 and 50)

If the complainants vehemently disagreed with the appellant's views, then they should have contested her views through the news media or any other public platform. The law should not be used in a manner that has chilling effects on the freedom of speech and expression. Dissemination of news and views for popular consumption is permissible under our constitutional scheme. An expression of opinion in favour of non-dogmatic and non-conventional morality has to be tolerated as the same cannot be a ground to penalise the author. (Paras 47, 50 and 45)

References to sex cannot be considered obscene in the legal sense without examining the context of the reference. (Paras 25 and 32)

There are numerous decisions, both from India and foreign countries which mandate that "obscenity" should be gauged with respect to contemporary community standards that reflect the sensibilities as well as the tolerance levels of an average reasonable person. (Para 27)

In the present case, the appellant has merely referred to the increasing incidence of premarital sex and called for its societal acceptance. At no point of time the appellant described the sexual act or said anything that could arouse sexual desires in the mind of a reasonable and prudent reader. Furthermore, the statement has been made in the context of a survey which has touched on numerous aspects relating to the sexual habits of people in big cities. It was published in a news magazine thereby serving the purpose of communicating certain ideas and opinions on the abovementioned subject. In the long run, such communication prompts a dialogue within society wherein people can choose to either defend or question the existing social mores. It is not possible to hold that the statements published as part of the survey were in the nature of obscene communications. (Paras 28 and 24)

The respondents' claim that the appellant's remarks could have the effect of misguiding young people by encouraging them to indulge in premarital sex is a little far-fetched since the appellant had not directed her remarks towards any individual or group in particular. For the sake of argument, even if it were to be assumed that the appellant's statements could encourage some people to engage in premarital sex, no legal injury has been shown since the latter is not an offence. (Para 29)

"Offence" means "an act or instance of offending"; "commit an illegal act" and "illegal" means, "contrary to or forbidden by law". "Offence" has to be read and understood in the context as it has been prescribed under the provisions of Sections 40, 41 and 42 IPC which cover the offences punishable under IPC or under special or local law or as defined under Section 2(n) CrPC or Section 3(38) of the General Clauses Act, 1897. (Para 30)

There is no statutory offence that takes place when adults willingly engage in sexual relations outside the marital setting, with the exception of "adultery" as defined under Section 497 IPC. (Para 31)

Moreover, it is necessary to fully understand the context and the purpose for which references to sex have been made in any given setting. (Paras 32 and 25)

There is no prima facie case of defamation in the present case. There was neither any intent on the part of the appellant to cause harm to the reputation of the complainants as contemplated by Section 499 IPC nor can one discern any actual harm done to their reputation. In short, both the elements i.e. mens rea and actus reus are missing. The appellant's statement published in I is a rather general endorsement of premarital sex and her remarks are not directed at any individual or even at a "company or an association or collection of persons". Even in the remarks published in D which have been categorically denied by the appellant, there is no direct attack on the reputation of anyone in particular. Instead, the purported remarks are in the nature of rhetorical questions wherein it was asked if people in Tamil Nadu were not aware of the incidence of sex. Even if those remarks are considered in their entirety, nowhere has it been suggested that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. (Paras 34 and 35)

The fact that most of the complainants are associated with PMK, a political party does add weight to the suggestion that the impugned complaints had been filed with the intention of gaining undue political mileage. (Para 36)

In respect of the offence of defamation, Section 199 CrPC mandates that the Magistrate can take cognizance of the offence only upon receiving a complaint by a person who is aggrieved. This limitation on the power to take cognizance of defamation serves the rational purpose of discouraging the filing of frivolous complaints which would otherwise clog the Magistrates' Courts. In the given facts of the present case, the complainants cannot be properly described as "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC as there was no specific legal injury caused to any of them. (Para 37)

In the present case, the complainants have alleged defamation in respect of imputations against the character of Tamil-speaking women, which could perhaps be viewed as a class of persons. However, the appellant's remarks did not suggest that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. Even if it were assumed that the news item carried in D caused mental agony to some sections of women in Tamil Nadu, there is no prima facie case for any offence. (Para 43)

Thus, it has to be held that the institution of the numerous criminal complaints against the appellant was done in a mala fide manner. In order to prevent the abuse of the criminal law machinery, it would be appropriate to grant the relief sought by the appellant. In such cases, the proper course for Magistrates is to use their statutory powers to direct an investigation into the allegations before taking cognizance of the offences alleged. It is not the task of the criminal law to punish individuals merely for expressing unpopular views. The threshold for placing reasonable restrictions on the freedom of speech and expression is indeed a very high one and there should be a presumption in favour of the accused in such cases. It is only when the complainants produce materials that support a prima facie case for a statutory offence that Magistrates can proceed to take cognizance of the same. (Para 44)

In conclusion, it is held that the various complaints filed against the appellant do not support or even draw a prima facie case for any of the statutory offences as alleged. Therefore, the impugned judgment and order of the High Court is set aside. (Para 54). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2010]

S. Rangarajan v. P. Jagjivan Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 574; Ranjit D. Udeshi v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 881: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 8; Samaresh Bose v. Amal Mitra, (1985) 4 SCC 289: 1985 SCC (Cri) 523; Gillick v. West Norfolk and Wisbech Area Health Authority, 1986 AC 112: (1985) 3 WLR 830: (1985) 3 All ER 402 (HL); M.S. Jayaraj v. Commr. of Excise, (2000) 7 SCC 552, followed

Proprietary Articles Trade Assn. v. Attorney General of Canada, AIR 1931 PC 94; Thomas Dana v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 375: 1959 Cri LJ 392; Jawala Ram v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1962 SC 1246: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 303; Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2006) 4 SCC 278: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 221; Lata Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 475: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 478, relied on

G. Narasimhan v. T.V. Chokkappa, (1972) 2 SCC 680: 1972 SCC (Cri) 777; Knupffer v. London Express Newspaper Ltd., 1944 AC 116: (1944) 1 All ER 495 (HL), considered

[11011] — S. 499 — Defamation — Ingredients — Proof — Held, there must be an imputation which must be made with the intention of harming or knowing or having reason to believe that it will harm the reputation of the person about whom it is made i.e. offence of defamation is the harm caused to the reputation of a person — Further held, it would be sufficient to show that the accused intended or knew or had reason to believe that the imputation made by him would harm the reputation of the complainant, irrespective of whether the complainant actually suffered directly or indirectly from the imputation alleged (Paras 28 and 29). Jeffrey J. Diermeier v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2010]

[11012] — S. 499 — Defamation — Where an attack on a Judge is libellous, though does not amount to contempt of court, held, it would be open to that Judge to proceed against libeller in an appropriate action

The offence of criminal contempt is vivisected into two categories. One is publication of any matter which scandalises or tends to scandalise the authority of any court etc. etc. Second is the doing of any act whatsoever, which scandalises or tends to scandalise the authority of any court. If an act is not a criminal contempt merely because there was no publication such act would automatically fall within the purview of the other category because the latter consists of "the doing of any other act whatsoever". The latter category is thus a residuary category so wide enough that no act of criminal contempt can possibly escape. The common denominator for both is that it scandalises or tends to scandalise any court. (Para 13)

A defamatory attack on a Judge may be a libel so far as the Judge is concerned and it would be open to him to proceed against the libeller in a proper action if he so chooses. (Para 15). S.K. Sundaram: In Re, (2001) 2 SCC 171: 2001 SCC (Cri) 304: AIR 2001 SC 2374: (2001) 1 KLT 585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2000]

[11013] — S. 499 — Defamation vis-à-vis contempt — Libellous imputation against Judge — When amounts to contempt — Held, the same depends on the gravity of the allegations

Though certain imputations against the Judge may be only libellous against that particular individual, they may at times amount to contempt also depending upon the gravity of the allegations. Therefore, apart from the fact that a particular statement is libellous, it can constitute criminal contempt if the imputation is such that the same is capable of lowering the authority of the court. The gravity of the aforesaid statement must be such as would scandalise the court. (Para 26). Haridas Das v. Usha Rani Banik, (2007) 14 SCC 1: AIR 2007 SC 2688: (2007) 4 CHN 27 (SC): (2007) 3 KLT 587: (2007) 58 AIC 182 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-7-2007]

[Ed.: See also Contempt of Court "4.(a)(3)(ii) Defamation vis-à-vis contempt", pp. 382 et seq. in Vol. 12, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.]

[11014] — S. 499 — Facts judicially noticeable — Observation by High Court that Crime magazine was a "yellow journal" — Held, is an opinion and not a fact which is judicially noticeable for purposes of Ss. 56 and 57 Evidence Act — Moreover, there was nothing in impugned judgment which indicates that any evidence was led, much less considered as to whether Crime magazine is a "yellow journal" and hence Crime magazine could not have been relied upon by appellant in forming a belief that contents thereof were not untrue — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 56 and 57 (Paras 62 to 65). Joseph M. Puthussery v. T.S. John, (2011) 1 SCC 503.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and Gyan Sudha Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2010]

Black's Law Dictionary, 6th Edn., considered

[11015] — S. 499 — Group libel — Forced resignation from office of Judge/Chief Justice of High Court on pressure from the Bar — What procedure to be adopted where Bar Council/Association reasonably and honestly believes the conduct of a Judge/Chief Justice of High Court bad — While in case of proved misconduct or incapacity procedure for removal is provided under Art. 217(1) proviso r/w Art. 124(4) and (5) of constitution, no procedure laid down under the Constitution in case of bad conduct though it also produces deleterious effect on integrity or impartiality of the Judge/Chief Justice — Self-regulation through in-house procedure laid down — Resolution passed by Bar Council against Judge/Chief Justice of High Court alleging bad conduct — Held, Bar Council cannot make scurrilous criticism of conduct of the Judge/Chief Justice and pressurise or coerce him to demit his office — Such action would constitute contempt of court and affect independence of judiciary which is an essential attribute of rule of law and also affect judicial individualism — However, where the Bar honestly doubts the conduct of the Judge/Chief Justice and such doubt is based on authentic and acceptable material, the proper course would be for office- bearers of the Bar Association to meet the Judge in camera and apprise him or approach the Chief Justice of that High Court to deal with the matter appropriately — After due verification and confidential enquiry the Chief Justice of the High Court must consult the Chief Justice of India (CJI) by placing all information with him — Where imputations are against the Chief Justice of the High Court himself the Bar Association should directly approach the CJI — Thereupon the CJI, after taking the Judge/Chief Justice into confidence, if circumstances so permit, will take a decision in the matter which will be final — Until such decision is taken, the Bar should suspend all further action and await response for a reasonable period — Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968 — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, S. 2(c) — Constitution of India — Arts. 217(1) proviso (a) & (b) and 124(4) & (5) and 121. C. Ravichandran Iyer v. Justice A.M. Bhattacharjee, (1995) 5 SCC 457: 1995 SCC (Cri) 953.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-1995]

[11016] — S. 499 — Libel of court and contempt of court — Distinction — Libellous reflection upon the conduct of the Judge, though punishable under the section, can also be proceeded against as contempt of court

A libellous reflection upon the conduct of a Judge in respect of his judicial duties may certainly come under S. 499, Penal Code, and it may be open to the Judge to take steps against the libeller in the ordinary way for vindication of his character and personal dignity as a Judge; but such libel may or may not amount to contempt of court. What is made punishable in the Penal Code is the offence of defamation as defamation and not as contempt of court. It the defamation of a subordinate Court amounts to contempt of court, proceedings can certainly be taken under S. 2, Contempt of Courts Act, quite apart from the fact that other remedy may be open to the aggrieved officer under S. 499, Penal Code. But a libel attacking the integrity of a Judge may not in the circumstances of a particular case amount to a contempt at all, although it may be the subject-matter of a libel proceeding. Bathina Ramakrishna Reddy v. State of Madras, AIR 1952 SC 149: 1952 SCR 425: 1952 Cri LJ 832.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Patanjali Sastri, C.J. and M.C. Mahajan, B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1952]

Surendra Nath v. Chief Justice, 10 Cal 109 and the Matter of Special reference from Bahama Islands, 1893 AC 138, followed

[11017] — S. 499 — Offence of defamation — Limitation of Magistrate's power to take cognizance of — Object of — Requirement of taking cognizance of offence of defamation only upon receiving complaint by a person aggrieved — Object of, held, is to discourage filing of frivolous complaints — CrPC, 1973, S. 199

In respect of the offence of defamation, Section 199 CrPC mandates that the Magistrate can take cognizance of the offence only upon receiving a complaint by a person who is aggrieved. This limitation on the power to take cognizance of defamation serves the rational purpose of discouraging the filing of frivolous complaints which would otherwise clog the Magistrates' Courts. In the given facts of the present case, the complainants cannot be properly described as "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC as there was no specific legal injury caused to any of them. (Para 37). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2010]

[11018] — S. 499 — 'Public good'

Public good is a question of fact. Chaman Lal v. State of Punjab, (1970) 1 SCC 590: 1970 SCC (Cri) 253: AIR 1970 SC 1372: 1970 Cri LJ 1266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1970]

[11019] — S. 499 — Publication — Standing message by telegram if — Contention that sending a telegram does not amount to publication, held, not acceptable — Both before and after transmission message is read by telegraph office staff — It cannot be compared to a sealed letter — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, S. 2(c)

The contention of the learned counsel for the contemnor that sending such a telegram would not amount to publication is unacceptable. A telegraphic message can be transmitted only after the sender gives the contents of the message to the telegraph office which would invariably be manned by the staff of that office. The message after transmission reaches the destination office which also is manned by the members of the staff. From there only the message would be despatched to the sendee. At all those levels the message is open to be read by at least those who are engaged in the process of transmission. A telegraphic message is not like a letter handwritten by the sender and enveloped in a sealed cover to be opened only by the sendee for reading. (Para 24)

It is not now open to the contemnor to contend that there was no publication of the telegraphic communication despatched by him to the Chief Justice of India because when he filed the criminal complaint in the court in implementation of the telegraphic threat hurled to the CJI, he appended a copy of the telegram therewith. Thus, he made it public at his own volition. (Para 26). S.K. Sundaram: In Re, (2001) 2 SCC 171: 2001 SCC (Cri) 304: AIR 2001 SC 2374: (2001) 1 KLT 585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2000]

Supreme Court Bar Assn. v. Union of India, (1998) 4 SCC 409; Gatley on Libel and Slander, "Publication" (Chap. 6); Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 97: 1966 Cri LJ 82, relied on

[11020] — S. 499 — Publication of false statement in relation to the personal character or conduct of a candidate — Statement must be proved to have been reasonably calculated to prejudice the prospects of the defamed candidate's election — Once it is proved the statement was likely to be construed by electorate as referring to personal character or conduct of the candidate, further proof that the electorate had understood the statement to be so not required — Representation of the People Act, 1951, S. 123(4)

Section 123(4) of the Act states that the statement of fact in question must be "reasonably calculated to prejudice the prospects" of the complaining candidate's election. However, unless it is established that the words complained of were capable of being construed as referring to the personal character or conduct of the candidate because of some specific extrinsic facts or circumstances which are pleaded and proved, it is not possible to hold that they were reasonably calculated to prejudice his prospects in the elections. For, in the absence of the knowledge of the special facts on the part of the electorate, the words complained of cannot be held to be reasonably calculated to prejudice such prospects. Once, however, it is proved by laying the foundation of the facts that the words in question were, by virtue of the knowledge of the special facts, likely to be construed by the electorate as referring to the personal character or conduct of the complaining candidate, it may not further be necessary to prove that in fact the electorate had understood them to be so. That is because all that S. 123(4) requires is that the person publishing the complaining words must have intended and reasonably calculated to affect the prospects of the complaining candidate in the election. M.J. Zakharia Sait v. T.M. Mohammed, (1990) 3 SCC 396: (1990) 2 KLT 49.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.M. Sharma and P.B. Sawant, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1990]

[11021] — S. 499 — "Publication" under — Position under S. 123 RP Act distinguished from position under defamation law — Meaning — Republication of facts — Held, publication is an act by which some information is exhibited, displayed, disclosed or revealed before public — In instant case, information about Respondent 1 of having misappropriated funds of a school was already exhibited, displayed, disclosed, made known, revealed and brought to notice of general public residing within constituency when Crime magazine containing such information was previously published and circulated in constituency — Reproduction and distribution of same information within space of a few months cannot amount to "publication" for the purposes of S. 123 RP Act — Representation of the People Act, 1951, S. 123(4) (Paras 53 to 59). Joseph M. Puthussery v. T.S. John, (2011) 1 SCC 503.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and Gyan Sudha Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2010]

State of M.P. v. Ram Raghubir Prasad Agarwal, (1979) 4 SCC 686, relied on

Black's Law Dictionary, 6th Edn., relied on

[11022] — S. 499 — Quashing of proceeding — Application for — Rejection of, by High Court — Propriety — High Court not interfering with the matter as the same was pending at the stage of charge — Accused challenging High Court's order by contending that taking into consideration the allegations as made in the complaint, no offence under S. 499 IPC was made out — Matter requiring detailed consideration — It was desirable that High Court should hear the parties and pronounce a reasoned order — Hence, matter remitted to High Court for disposal afresh — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 482, 228 and 240 (Para 4). Terumo Penpol Ltd. v. NCT of Delhi, (2005) 10 SCC 273: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2005]

[11023] — S. 499 — Quashing of prosecution — Prosecution against Accused 1 and 4 directed to be proceeded with and it would be for them to show that they were protected under one of the exceptions contained in S. 499 the publication in question being undisputed — However, Accused 2 and 3 need not be retained in the array of the accused as their connection with the publication was too remote — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Para 3). Vivek Goenka v. Y.R. Patil, (2000) 9 SCC 87: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1168: 2000 Cri LJ 2791.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-2000]

[11024] — S. 499 — Vulgar criticism of persons filling public position

"Whoever fills a public position renders himself open thereto. He must accept an attack as a necessary, though unpleasant, appendage to his office.... Public men in such positions may as well think it worth their while to ignore such vulgar criticisms and abuses hurled against them rather than give an importance to the same by prosecuting the persons responsible for the same".

"Those who fill a public position must not be too thin skinned in reference to comments made upon them. It would often happen that observations would be made upon public men which they know from the bottom of their hearts were undeserved and unjust; yet they must bear with them and submit to be misunderstood for a time". Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 541: 1956 SCR 476: 1956 Cri LJ 945, 947.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1956]

Seymour v. Butterworth, (1862) 3 F & F 372, 376-77: 176 ER 166, 168-69; R. v. Sir R. Carden, (1879) 5 QBD 1 and Kelley v. Sherlock, (1866) 1 QB 686, 689, relied on

1969 Cri LJ 536 (All), approved

[11025] — Ss. 499 & 500 — Character assassination of a candidate — Doctrine of innuendo — Applicability — How to establish

Where the doctrine of innuendo is applied, it must be clearly proved that the defamatory allegation was made in respect of a person though not named yet so fully described that the allegation would refer to that person and that person alone. Innuendo cannot be proved merely by inferential evidence which may be capable of two possibilities. Manmohan Kalia v. Yash, (1984) 3 SCC 499: AIR 1984 SC 1161.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A. Varadarajan and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1984]

[11026] — Ss. 499 & 500 — Criminal proceedings when should not be quashed — Test — Whether allegations prima facie established the offence and whether prosecution could be allowed to continue in the interest of justice — On facts held, test satisfied, hence High Court erred in allowing the petition for quashing the proceedings — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482

According to the appellant the respondents made false and malicious allegations with intention or knowingly or having reasons to believe that such imputations would harm his reputation; due to these imputations made by them, the reputation of the appellant has been lowered in the eyes of his partners, the staff and the workers of the factory. Hence he prayed for punishing the respondents for the offence under Section 500 IPC. The Magistrate, on the complaint, after taking cognizance of the offence, recorded the sworn statement of the complainant (appellant herein) and held that "there were sufficient grounds to proceed the case against the accused persons for the offence punishable under Section 500 IPC". Hence he issued summons to Respondents 1 to 3. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

For deciding whether the criminal proceedings should be allowed to continue or the same should be quashed, two aspects are to be satisfied: (1) whether the uncontroverted allegations, as made in the complaint, prima facie establish the offence, and (2) whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. On a plain reading of the order of the Magistrate issuing summons to the respondents, keeping in view the allegations made in the complaint and sworn statement of the appellant, it appears that a prima facie case is made out at that stage. There are no special features in the case to say that it is not expedient and not in the interest of justice to permit the prosecution to continue. The Single Judge of the High Court failed to apply this test. The High Court could not say at that stage that there was no reasonable prospect of conviction resulting in the case after a trial. Assuming that the imputations made could be covered by Exception 9 of Section 499 IPC, several questions still remain to be examined — whether such imputations were made in good faith, in what circumstances, with what intention, etc. All these can be examined on the basis of evidence in the trial. Having regard to the facts of the case it must therefore, be held that the High Court committed a manifest error in quashing the criminal proceedings exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. (Paras 8 and 11). M.N. Damani v. S.K. Sinha, (2001) 5 SCC 156: 2001 SCC (Cri) 823: AIR 2001 SC 2037: 2001 Cri LJ 2571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, Chief Editor, Weekly Blitz, (1981) 3 SCC 208: 1981 SCC (Cri) 698; Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310, relied on

Manjaya v. Sesha Shetti, ILR (1888) 11 Mad 477; Sayed Ally v. King Emperor, AIR 1925 Rang 360; Anthoni Udayar v. Velusami Thevar, AIR 1948 Mad 469: 49 Cri LJ 724: (1948) 1 MLJ 420; Baboo Gunnesh Dutt Singh v. Mugneeram Chowdry, (1872) 11 WR 283 SC; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 1988 SC 709, distinguished

[11027] — Ss. 499 and 500 — Defamation by several persons

Where it is alleged that defamation was caused by several persons making different statements it is absolutely necessary that the complaint must specify the word spoken or the statements made by each of the accused. But where the complainant alleges that the several persons made allegations contained in a resolution and that he is prepared to go to trial on that footing the question of the complainant being made to state the statements alleged to have been made by the individual accused does not at all arise. Such a situation will arise only when the case of the complainant is that different statements were made by different accused, who are before the Court. Balraj Khanna v. Moti Ram, (1971) 3 SCC 399: 1971 SCC (Cri) 647: AIR 1971 SC 1389: 1971 Cri LJ 1110.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-1971]

[11028] — Ss. 499 & 500 — Existence/non-existence of prima facie defamatory imputations — Effect — Imputations made in a newspaper report against a reputed hospital that it was engaged in trading in kidneys by stealthily depriving its patients of one of their kidneys when they were admitted for minor operations and also engaging brokers to lure the needy poor to part with one of their kidneys for a hefty sum and later exporting the kidneys to Malaysia — Held, imputations are prima facie defamatory — Even if the imputation is not per se defamatory, the complainant can on evidence establish that — Accused therefore not entitled to discharge at this stage

The only effect of an imputation being per se defamatory is that it would relieve the complainant of the burden to establish that the publication of such imputations has lowered him in the estimation of the right-thinking members of the public. Therefore, the imputations are prima facie libellous.

However, even if the imputation is not per se defamatory, that by itself would not go to the advantage of the publisher, for, the complaining person can establish on evidence that the publication has in fact amounted to defamation even in spite of the apparent deficiency. (Para 10). John Thomas v. Dr. K. Jagadeesan, (2001) 6 SCC 30: 2001 SCC (Cri) 974: AIR 2001 SC 2651: (2001) 106 Comp Cas 619.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2001]

[11029] — Ss. 499 and 500 — Public law right to reputation — "Life" — Broadly construed — Right to one's reputation, held, is a facet of right under Art. 21 — Constitution of India, Art. 21 (Para 3). Sukhwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 559: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-5-2009]

Kamlendra Pratap Singh v. State of U.P., (2009) 4 SCC 437: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 330; Deepak Bajaj v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 16 SCC 14, followed

[11030] — Ss. 499 and 500 — Quashment of complaint — If warranted — Good faith/public good defence — Question whether "Word of Caution" published by appellants (alleged by complainant-educational society to have defamed it) was done in "good faith" and for "public good", is a question of fact which required evidence — Stage for recording evidence had not been reached, and thus, in absence of evidence, findings on issues raised cannot be given — Considering complaint as a whole, High Court rightly held that there was no case for quashing complaint under S. 482 CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 39 to 41)

The ICFAI, Respondent 2 entered into an agreement with Appellant 1, President and CEO of the CFA Institute, which was incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia, US, to conduct its CFA programme in India. However, realising that Respondent 2 was not adhering to required standards and quality of the programme, a notice for terminating the licence was issued to Respondent 2.

A civil suit for permanent injunction restraining Respondent 2 from using trade marks, services, service marks or trade name or any other name or mark which may be identical or deceptively similar to marks of CFA was filed by the appellant in the High Court. An interim relief vide order dt. 4-8-2006 was granted which was to be operative after the end of the current academic session of CFA programme run by the defendants.

On 30-1-2007, Respondent 2, through its sponsored University in Tripura—the Institute of Chartered Financial Analysts of India University, Tripura, issued an advertisement inviting applications for fresh enrolments for award of "CFA" certification. The advertisement being for subsequent programme and in breach of interim injunction the CFA Institute issued a public notice under the caption "A Word of Caution to the Indian Investment Community".

Alleging that the said public notice was defamatory within the meaning of Section 499 IPC, Respondent 2 filed a private complaint against the appellants. The trial court took cognizance of the complaint and issued summons to the appellants. Feeling aggrieved by the summoning order, the appellants preferred a petition before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC which was dismissed by the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal by the accused.

The appellants contended that the said "Word of Caution" published by them was a public duty and thus, a legitimate expression which was also absolutely necessary and in public interest and was singularly covered by the Tenth Exception to Section 499 IPC. It was further contended that the contents of the "Word of Caution" did not in any way lower or cast a reflection on the moral or intellectual character of Respondent 2 and, therefore, Explanation 4 to Section 499 IPC, which imposes restrictions in the law of defamation, is clearly attracted in favour of the appellants. It was thus, pleaded that in the light of Explanation 4 as well as the Tenth Exception to Section 499 IPC, the allegations in the complaint did not constitute an offence of defamation punishable under Section 500 IPC and, therefore, the High Court ought to have quashed the complaint.

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Jeffrey J. Diermeier v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2010]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866 : 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Dinesh Dutt Joshi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 570 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 24; Som Mittal (2) v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574 : (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910 : (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1, relied on

[11031] — Ss. 499 and 500 — Right to privacy vis-à-vis freedom of Press — Proper balancing between the two necessary — Publication of life story or biography of a citizen exposing misdeeds of some public officials — Remedies available in case of infringement of right of privacy — Right to privacy — Held, implicit in Art. 21 — Broad principles laid down; further development to be case-by-case — Publication of any matter concerning privacy of a citizen's own as well as of his family, marriage, procreation, motherhood, child-bearing, education etc. without his/her consent would entitle him/her to damages, except where the publication is based on public records including court records, provided it does not pertain to any female victim of sexual assault, kidnap, abduction etc. — However, publication relating to acts or conduct of public officials in discharge of their official duty, unless shown to have been made in reckless disregard for truth, would not entitle the officials to invoke right to privacy and claim damages — Nor the Govt., local authority and other organs and institutions exercising governmental powers entitled to sue for damages — Nor can the Govt. or its officials impose any prior restraint on publication of the matter in question — Relevance of English and American cases — Impact of Arts. 19(1)(a) and (2) on Ss. 499 and 500, IPC not considered — Constitution of India, Arts. 21 and 19(1)(a) & 2

The first petitioner is the editor, printer and publisher of a Tamil weekly magazine published from Madras and the second petitioner is the associate editor of the weekly. According to them one Auto Shankar (AS for short), who was convicted for six murders and was sentenced to death, had written his autobiography in jail and had handed over the same to his wife with the knowledge and approval of the jail authorities for being delivered to his advocate with the request to publish the same in the petitioners' magazine. The autobiography depicted the close nexus between the prisoner and several IAS, IPS and other officers, some of whom were his partners in several crimes. The petitioners decided to commence serial publication of the autobiography and announced the same in their magazine. Thereupon the Inspector General of Prisons wrote a letter to the first petitioner alleging that the serial in question was not written by AS and asking him to stop publishing the same forthwith. The petitioners then filed writ petition under Art. 32 before the Supreme Court to challenge the letter and asserting the freedom of press and their right to publish the book. Neither AS nor his wife were made parties to the writ petition.

On the pleadings in this petition, the following questions arose:

(1) Whether a citizen of this country can prevent another person from writing his life story or biography? Does such unauthorised writing infringe the citizen's right to privacy? Whether the freedom of press guaranteed by Art. 19(1)(a) entitles the press to publish such unauthorised account of a citizen's life and activities and if so to what extent and in what circumstances? What are the remedies open to a citizen of this country in case of infringement of his right to privacy and further in case such writing amounts to defamation?

(2)(a) Whether the Government can maintain an action for its defamation?

(b) Whether the Government has any legal authority to impose prior restraint on the press to prevent publication of material defamatory of its officials? and

(c) Whether the public officials, who apprehend that they or their colleagues may be defamed, can impose a prior restraint upon the press to prevent such publication?

(3) Whether the prison officials can prevent the publication of the life story of a prisoner on the ground that the prisoner being incarcerated and thus not being in a position to adopt legal remedies to protect his rights, they are entitled to act on his behalf?

Allowing the writ petition,

Held :

The petitioners have a right to publish, what they allege to be the life story/autobiography of AS insofar as it appears from the public records, even without his consent or authorisation. But if they go beyond that and publish his life story, they may be invading his right to privacy and will be liable for the consequences in accordance with law. Similarly, neither the Government nor the officials who apprehend that they may be defamed, have the right to impose a prior restraint upon the publication of the alleged autobiography of AS. The remedy of public officials/public figures, if any, will arise only after the publication and will be governed by the principles indicated herein. However, no opinion need be expressed about the right of the State or its officials to prosecute the petitioners under Ss. 499/500 IPC. This is for the reason that even if they are entitled to do so, there is no law under which they can prevent the publication of a material on the ground that such material is likely to be defamatory of them.

It is not stated in the counter-affidavit that AS had requested or authorised the prison officials or the Inspector General of Prisons, as the case may be, to adopt appropriate proceedings to protect his right to privacy. If so, the respondents cannot take upon themselves the obligation of protecting his right to privacy. No prison rule was brought to the Court's notice which empowers the prison officials to do so. Moreover, the occasion for any such action arises only after the publication and not before.

The right to privacy as an independent and distinctive concept originated in the field of Tort law, under which a new cause of action for damages resulting from unlawful invasion of privacy was recognised. This right has two aspects which are but two faces of the same coin — (1) the general law of privacy which affords a tort action for damages resulting from an unlawful invasion of privacy and (2) the constitutional recognition given to the right to privacy which protects personal privacy against unlawful governmental invasion. The first aspect of this right must be said to have been violated where, for example, a person's name or likeness is used, without his consent, for advertising — or non-advertising — purposes or for that matter, his life story is written — whether laudatory or otherwise — and published without his consent. In recent times, however, this right has acquired a constitutional status.

The freedom of speech flows from the freedom of speech and expression guaranteed by Art. 19(1)(a). But the said right is subject to reasonable restrictions placed thereon by an existing law or a law made after the commencement of the Constitution in the interests of or in relation to the several matters set out therein. Decency and defamation are two of the grounds mentioned in clause (2). Law of torts providing for damages for invasion of the right to privacy and defamation and Ss. 499/500 IPC are the existing laws saved under clause (2). But what is called for today — in the present times — is a proper balancing of the freedom of press and said laws consistent with the democratic way of life ordained by the Constitution. Over the last few decades, press and electronic media have emerged as major factors in our nation's life. They are still expanding — and in the process becoming more inquisitive. Our system of Government demands — as do the systems of Government of the United States of America and United Kingdom — constant vigilance over exercise of governmental power by the press and the media among others. It is essential for a good Government. At the same time, it must be remembered that our society may not share the degree of public awareness obtaining in United Kingdom or United States. The sweep of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and the freedom of speech and expression under our Constitution is not identical though similar in their major premises. All this may call for some modification of the principles emerging from the English and United States decisions in their application to our legal system.

Following broad principles are evolved keeping in mind the above considerations:

(1) The right to privacy is implicit in the right to life and liberty guaranteed to the citizens of this country by Art. 21. It is a "right to be let alone". A citizen has a right to safeguard the privacy of his own, his family, marriage, procreation, motherhood, child-bearing and education among other matters. None can publish anything concerning the above matters without his consent — whether truthful or otherwise and whether laudatory or critical. If one does so, one would be violating the right to privacy of the person concerned and would be liable in an action for damages. Position may, however, be different, if a person voluntarily thrusts himself into controversy or voluntarily invites or raises a controversy.

(2) The rule aforesaid is subject to the exception, that any publication concerning the aforesaid aspects becomes unobjectionable if such publication is based upon public records including court records. This is for the reason that once a matter becomes a matter of public record, the right to privacy no longer subsists and it becomes a legitimate subject for comment by press and media among others. We are, however, of the opinion that in the interests of decency [Art. 19(2)] an exception must be carved out to this rule, viz., a female who is the victim of a sexual assault, kidnap, abduction or a like offence should not further be subjected to the indignity of her name and the incident being publicised in press/media.

(3) There is yet another exception to the rule in (1) above — indeed, this is not an exception but an independent rule. In the case of public officials, it is obvious, right to privacy, or for that matter, the remedy of action for damages is simply not available with respect to their acts and conduct relevant to the discharge of their official duties. This is so even where the publication is based upon facts and statements which are not true, unless the official establishes that the publication was made (by the defendant) with reckless disregard for truth. In such a case, it would be enough for the defendant (member of the press or media) to prove that he acted after a reasonable verification of the facts; it is not necessary for him to prove that what he has written is true. Of course, where the publication is proved to be false and actuated by malice or personal animosity, the defendant would have no defence and would be liable for damages. It is equally obvious that in matters not relevant to the discharge of his duties, the public official enjoys the same protection as any other citizen, as explained in (1) and (2) above. It needs no reiteration that judiciary, which is protected by the power to punish for contempt of court and Parliament and legislatures protected as their privileges are by Arts. 105 and 104 respectively of the Constitution of India, represent exceptions to this rule.

(4) So far as the Government, local authority and other organs and institutions exercising governmental power are concerned, they cannot maintain a suit for damages for defaming them.

(5) Rules 3 and 4 do not, however, mean that Official Secrets Act, 1923, or any similar enactment or provision having the force of law does not bind the press or media.

(6) There is no law empowering the State or its officials to prohibit, or to impose a prior restraint upon the press/media.

The principles above mentioned are only the broad principles. They are neither exhaustive nor all-comprehending; indeed no such enunciation is possible or advisable. This right has to go through a case-by-case development. The concepts dealt with herein are still in the process of evolution. However, the impact of Art. 19(1)(a) read with clause (2) thereof on Ss. 499 and 500 of Indian Penal Code has not been gone into here. That may have to await a proper case. R. Rajagopal v. State of T.N., (1994) 6 SCC 632: AIR 1995 SC 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and S.C. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1994]

New York Times v. United States, 403 US 713: 29 L Ed 2d 822 (1971), approved

Kharak Singh v. State of U.P., (1964) 1 SCR 332: AIR 1963 SC 1295: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 329; Gobind v. State of M.P., (1975) 2 SCC 148: 1975 SCC (Cri) 468; Olmstead v. United States, 277 US 438: 72 L Ed 944 (1927); Time, Inc. v. Hill, 385 US 374: 17 L Ed 2d 456 (1967); New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 US 254: 11 L Ed 2d 686 (1964); Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 US 479: 14 L Ed 2d 510 (1965); Cox Broadcasting Corpn. v. Cohn, 420 US 469: 43 L Ed 2d 328 (1975); Roe v. Wade, 410 US 113: 35 L Ed 2d 147 (1973); Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 120 L Ed 2d 683 (1992); Derbyshire County Council v. Times Newspapers Ltd., (1993) 2 WLR 449: (1993) 1 All ER 1011, HL; Attorney General v. Guardian Newspapers Ltd. (No. 2), (1990) 1 AC 109: (1988) 3 All ER 545: (1988) 3 WLR 776, HL; Leonard Hector v. Attorney General of Antigua and Barbuda, (1990) 2 AC 312: (1990) 2 All ER 103: (1990) 2 WLR 606, PC, considered [11032] — Ss. 499 and 500 — Withdrawal of prosecution for purported defamation of Chief Minister, Ministers and other public officials — Appellants agreeing to telecast clarification in respect of allegedly defamatory telecast, and State agreeing to withdraw prosecution — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 257, 199 and 482. Ramoji Rao v. State of A.P., (2006) 8 SCC 321: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 480: AIR 2006 SC 3384.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L. S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-10-2006]

[11033] — Ss. 499, 500, 501 and 502 r/w S. 34 — Defamation — True report — If defamatory — Publication of news item disclosing accurate and true report of proceedings of Legislative Assembly — Statement of Minister disclosing misappropriation of govt. fund — Name of complainant mentioned as one of the persons involved in such misappropriation — Circumstances disclosing that the news item was published about public conduct of public servants for public good in good faith believing the statement to be true — Order of the Additional Sessions Judge quashing the proceedings in exercise of its revisional power restored — CrPC, 1973, S. 482. Jawaharlal Darda v. Manoharrao Ganpatrao Kapsikar, (1998) 4 SCC 112: 1998 SCC (Cri) 815: AIR 1998 SC 2117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1998]

[11034] — Ss. 499 and 503 — Cognizance of offence taken by the Magistrate without referring the matter to the police under S. 156(3) — Propriety — Held, the Magistrate was justified in doing so where after examining the complainant on oath he was satisfied that prima facie the alleged offence was made out — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 190, 156(3) and 482 (Para 3). Ram Swarup v. Mohd. Javed Razack, (2005) 10 SCC 393: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1549: AIR 2005 SC 2005: 2005 Cri LJ 1725.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2005]

[11035] — S. 499 Expln. 2 — Scope — Tamil-speaking women, if could be viewed as a class of persons covered by Expln. 2

There is no prima facie case of defamation in the present case. There was neither any intent on the part of the appellant to cause harm to the reputation of the complainants as contemplated by Section 499 IPC nor can one discern any actual harm done to their reputation. In short, both the elements i.e. mens rea and actus reus are missing. The appellant's statement published in I is a rather general endorsement of premarital sex and her remarks are not directed at any individual or even at a "company or an association or collection of persons". Even in the remarks published in D which have been categorically denied by the appellant, there is no direct attack on the reputation of anyone in particular. Instead, the purported remarks are in the nature of rhetorical questions wherein it was asked if people in Tamil Nadu were not aware of the incidence of sex. Even if those remarks are considered in their entirety, nowhere has it been suggested that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. (Paras 34 and 35)

The fact that most of the complainants are associated with PMK, a political party does add weight to the suggestion that the impugned complaints had been filed with the intention of gaining undue political mileage. (Para 36)

In the present case, the complainants have alleged defamation in respect of imputations against the character of Tamil-speaking women, which could perhaps be viewed as a class of persons. However, the appellant's remarks did not suggest that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. Even if it were assumed that the news item carried in D caused mental agony to some sections of women in Tamil Nadu, there is no prima facie case for any offence. (Para 43). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2010]

[11036] — S. 499 Expln. 2 — Applicability and scope — Defamation of collection of persons — Expression "Collection of persons"

The language of the Explanation is wide, and therefore, besides a company or an association, any collection of persons would be covered by it. But such a collection of persons must be an identifiable body so that it is possible to say with definiteness that a group of particular persons, as distinguished from the rest of the community, was defamed. Where Explanation (2) is resorted to, the identity of the company or the association or the collection of persons must be established so as to be relatable to the defamatory words or imputations.

It is true that where there is an express statutory provision, as in S. 499, Explanation (2), the rules of the Common Law of England cannot be applied. But there is no difference in principle between the rule laid down in Explanation (2) to S. 499 and the law applied in such cases in England. When, therefore, Explanation (2) to S. 499 talks of a collection of persons as capable of being defamed, such collection of persons must mean a definite and a determinate body. G. Narasimhan v. T.V. Chokkappa, (1972) 2 SCC 680: 1972 SCC (Cri) 777: AIR 1972 SC 2609: (1972) 2 MLJ 61 (SC): 1973 Cri LJ 52.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, D.G. Palekar and S.N. Dwivedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-1972]

1969 Cri LJ 536 (All), approved

[11037] — S. 499 Expln. 2 — Defamation — Locus standi to file complaint — "Some person aggrieved by the offence" — Even if the libellous imputations are not made directly against a person but he has reasons to feel hurt on account of the same, he has locus standi to file a complaint — Where defamatory publications are made against a private limited company, its Director can file the complaint — CrPC, 1973 — S. 199

The collocation of the words "by some persons aggrieved" in Section 199 definitely indicates that the complainant need not necessarily be the defamed person himself. Whether the complainant has reason to feel hurt on account of the publication is a matter to be determined by the court depending upon the facts of each case. If a company is described as engaging itself in nefarious activities, its impact would certainly fall on every Director of the company and hence he can legitimately feel the pinch of it. Similarly, if a firm is described in a publication as carrying on offensive trade, every working partner of the firm can reasonably be expected to feel aggrieved by it. As the hospital against which imputations were published in the present case is a private limited company, it is too far-fetched to rule out any one of its Directors, feeling aggrieved on account of pejoratives hurled at the Company. (Para 13). John Thomas v. Dr. K. Jagadeesan, (2001) 6 SCC 30: 2001 SCC (Cri) 974: AIR 2001 SC 2651: (2001) 106 Comp Cas 619.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2001]

K.M. Mathew v. State of Kerala, (1992) 1 SCC 217: 1992 SCC (Cri) 88, distinguished

[11038] — S. 499 Expln. 2 — Interpretation of — Defamatory article published against a particular Public Prosecutor and police prosecutors of Aligarh and the State of U.P. — Police prosecutors of Aligarh and the State of U.P. are "collection of persons" mentioned in Expln. 2

The language of Expln. 2 is general and any collection of persons would be covered by it. Of course, that collection of persons must be identifiable in the sense that one could, with certainty, say that this group of particular people has been defamed, as distinguished from the rest of the community. The prosecuting staff of Aligarh or, as a matter of fact, the prosecuting staff in the State of Uttar Pradesh, is certainly such an identifiable group or collection of persons. There is nothing indefinite about it. This group consists of all members of the prosecuting staff in the service of the Government of Uttar Pradesh. Within this general group of Public Prosecutors of U.P there is again an identifiable group of prosecuting staff, consisting of Public Prosecutors and Assistant Public Prosecutors, at Aligarh. This group of persons would be covered by Expln. 2 and could, therefore, be the subject of defamation. Sahib Singh Mehra v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 1451: (1965) 2 SCR 823: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 434, 436.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1965]

Relied on in (1972) 2 SCC 680: 1972 SCC (Cri) 777

[11039] — S. 499 Exceptions and S. 52 — Whether accused protected under the Ninth Exception is a question of fact — Onus on accused to prove that he is so protected — Nature of the onus — A journalist, like any other accused person, is obliged to discharge the onus — 'Good faith' and 'public good' — How to establish — Questions of fact and matters of evidence

Per A.P. Sen, J.

It is for the accused to plead Ninth Exception to S. 499, IPC in defence and discharge the burden to prove good faith which implies the exercise of due care and caution and to show that the attack on the character of the appellant was for the public good. Journalists are in no better position than any other person. Even the truth of an allegation does not permit a justification under First Exception unless it is proved to be in the public good. The question whether or not it was for public good is a question of fact like any other relevant fact in issue. If they make assertions of facts as opposed to comments on them, they must either justify these assertions or, in the limited cases specified in the Ninth Exception, show that the attack on the character of another was for the public good, or that it was made in good faith.

Per Chinnappa Reddy, J. (concurring)

In order to attract the Ninth Exception to S. 499 of the Penal Code, the imputations must be shown to have been made (i) in good faith and (ii) for the protection of the interest of the person making it or of any other person or for the public good. In the definition of 'good faith' in S. 52, IPC, the insistence is upon the exercise of the due care and attention. Recklessness and negligence are ruled out by the very nature of the definition. The standard of care and attention must depend on the circumstances of the individual case, the nature of the imputation, the need and the opportunity for verification, the situation and context in which the imputation was made, the position of the person making the imputation, and a variety of other factors. Good faith, therefore, is a matter for evidence. It is a question of fact to be decided on the particular facts and circumstances of each case. So too is the question whether an imputation was made for the public good.

For application of the Ninth Exception to S. 499, IPC to the facts of the present case, several questions arise for consideration depending on the stand taken by the accused at the trial and how the complainant proposes to demolish the defence. Answers to these questions before the plea of the accused is recorded can only be a priori conclusions as 'good faith' and 'public good' are questions of fact and matters for evidence.

Per Islam, J. (dissenting)

Normally proof of an exception lies on the person who claims it; but the definition of the expression "good faith" indicates that lack of good faith has been made a part of the offence which the prosecution has to establish beyond reasonable doubt. On the other hand, the mere proof by the accused of the report to be an authentic document is enough; it will create a doubt in the mind of the court as to the lack of 'good faith' on the part of the accused. Once 'good faith' is proved by the accused, whether the publication was for 'public good' would be a matter of inference. Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, (1981) 3 SCC 208: 1981 SCC (Cri) 698: AIR 1981 SC 1514.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy[2], A.P. Sen[1] and Baharul Islam[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1981]

[11040] — S. 499 Exceptions — Applicability

The question of applicability of the exceptions in S. 499 cannot be considered at the time of entertaining the complaint to determine if a prima facie case is made out under S. 202, CrPC. It is only at the trial that the question of applicability of any of the exceptions in S. 499 or, as well as other defences that can be considered. Balraj Khanna v. Moti Ram, (1971) 3 SCC 399: 1971 SCC (Cri) 647: AIR 1971 SC 1389: 1971 Cri LJ 1110.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-1971]

[11041] — Ss. 499 Exceptions and 500 — Burden of proof — Inherent powers of High Court — Application for quashing complaint petition filed by respondent against appellant under S. 500 IPC dismissed by High Court — Propriety — FIR registered on basis of complaint made by appellant that the respondent had advised one N and one K to damage his nine coconut trees by pouring acid mixed with kerosene on them — However, no charge-sheet was filed within six months, nor extension of time was sought for conducting further investigation — Hence, closure of proceedings ordered by Magistrate — However, said allegations published in various newspapers — Hence, respondent filing private complaint alleging defamation under S. 500 IPC — Application by appellant for quashing said complaint dismissed by impugned order — Held, allegations made in the said complaint petition, make out a case for proceeding against the appellant under S. 500 IPC as thereby imputation concerning the respondent had been made intending to harm or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation would harm his reputation — For the purpose of bringing his case within the purview of Eighth and Ninth Exception appended to S. 499 IPC, it would be necessary for the appellant to prove good faith for the protection of the interests of the person making it or of any other person or for the public good — Well settled that those who plead exception must prove it — Hence, burden of proof that his action was bona fide would, thus, be on the appellant alone — At that stage, however, it would have been premature for High Court to consider the materials placed by the appellant before it so as to arrive at a definite conclusion that there was no element of bad faith on the part of the appellant in making the said complaint before the police authorities — Question as to whether a totally false complaint has been made as against the respondent or not as he was not even in India prior to the date of occurrence, is required to be gone into by the learned trial Judge — No interference with impugned order called for — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 2, 18 to 21, 23 and 24). M.A. Rumugam v. Kittu, (2009) 1 SCC 101: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 2009 SC 341.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2008]

Rajendra Kumar Sitaram Pande v. Uttam, (1999) 3 SCC 134: 1999 SCC (Cri) 393, considered

[11042] — S. 499 Exceptions 1, 8 and 9 — Plea of good faith and public good — Onus on — Privileged communication — Scope of Public good is a question of fact. Good faith has also to be established as a fact.

In order to come within the First Exception to S. 499 of the Indian Penal Code, it has to be established that what has been reported concerning the respondent is true and the publication of the imputation is for the public good. The onus of proving these two ingredients is on the appellant. The appellant totally failed to establish these pleas.

Interest of the person has to be real and legitimate when communication is made in protection of the interest of the person making it.

Good faith requires care and caution and prudence in the background of context and circumstances.

In order to establish good faith and bona fides it has to be seen first the circumstances under which the letter was written or words were uttered; secondly, whether there was any malice; thirdly whether the appellant made any enquiry before he made the allegations; fourthly, whether there are reasons to accept the version that he acted with care and caution, and finally, whether there is preponderance of probability that the appellant acted in good faith.

The plea that the communication to the Civil Surgeon was privileged because as the President of Municipal Committee the appellant had to write to the Civil Surgeon about the work of the complainant, has no evidence to support it. Furthermore, the privilege extends only to a communication upon the subject with respect to which the privilege extends. Chaman Lal v. State of Punjab, (1970) 1 SCC 590: 1970 SCC (Cri) 253: AIR 1970 SC 1372: 1970 Cri LJ 1266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1970]

[11043] — S. 499 Exceptions 1 & 9 — Distinction between — Proof of truth issue of the two ingredients of the First Exception — It is not an ingredient of the Ninth Exception — Plea under the First Exception not taken — It is immaterial to consider whether the accused has proved the truth of the allegations made by him

The first Exception to S. 499 is available to an accused person if it is shown by him that the impugned statement was true and had been made public for the public good.

The proof of truth which is one of the ingredients of the First Exception is not an ingredient of the Ninth Exception. What the Ninth Exception requires an accused person to prove is that he made the statements in good faith.

The proof of truth of the impugned statement is not an element of the Ninth Exception as it is of the First.

Where the accused did not press his plea under the First Exception but relied under the Ninth Exception the High Court was not justified in examining whether the evidence adduced by the accused established the truth of the allegations made in his impugned statements. In dealing with the claim of the appellant under the Ninth Exception, it was not necessary, and indeed it was immaterial, to consider whether the appellant had strictly proved the truth of the allegations made by him. Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 97: (1965) 2 SCR 235: 1966 Cri LJ 82, 87.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, C.J. and Raghubar Dayal and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1965]

[11044] — S. 499 Exception 2 — If provides a defence in contempt proceedings — Contempt proceedings for scandalising the court initiated for contemptuous statements made in affidavits filed before Supreme Court in reply to show-cause notice in contempt proceedings — Defence under law of defamation if can be invoked — Such statements, held, not protected by second exception to S. 499 IPC — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, Ss. 15, 2(c)(i), 8 and 3 to 7

The respondent's proposition based on the second exception to Section 499 IPC is too broad and general and is contrary to the law of contempt as adjudicated by the courts in the country from time to time and the limits prescribed by the Act and the judicial pronouncements. The law of defamation under the Penal Code cannot be equated with the law of contempt of court in general terms. (Para 24)

Even a person claiming the benefit of second exception to Section 499 of the Penal Code, is required to show that the opinion expressed by him was in good faith which related to the conduct of a public servant in the discharge of his public functions or respecting his character so far as his character appears in that conduct. Under the law of contempt, statements made in pleadings, petitions and affidavits of the parties, in a number of cases, have been held defamatory statements amounting to offences under the section unless it is shown that they fall within any of the exceptions. The benefit of the exception even under the law of defamation, much less in contempt proceedings, may not be available if the insinuations are made against an institution of the State and not restricted to the person as an individual or a collection of persons. (Para 24). Arundhati Roy, In Re, (2002) 3 SCC 343: AIR 2002 SC 1375: 2002 Cri LJ 1792.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2002]

Surendra Nath Banerjee v. Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court, ILR (1884) 10 Cal 109: 10 IA 171, held, approved

Bathina Ramakrishna Reddy v. State of Madras, AIR 1952 SC 149: 1952 Cri LJ 832; Sanjiv Datta, In re, (1995) 3 SCC 619, relied on

[11045] — S. 499 Exception 3 — Defamatory remarks in good faith — Meaning of — Article alleging that money passed from the pocket of certain set of people into the pocket of the prosecuting staff — Nothing shown to indicate that the allegations were made after due care and attention — Held, allegations not made in good faith and hence not covered by Exception 3

The tenor of the article does not indicate that the purpose of the appellant in publishing these remarks was 'public good'. According to the article, the appellant would have welcomed the opportunity that would be offered by the case contemplated against him by the public prosecutor to make public the impugned matters. His remarks therefore, could have the tendency to dissuade the said Public Prosecutor from instituting the proceeding for fear of giving greater currency to untrue allegations which be not favourable to him or to the prosecuting staff of that place or in the State, and by themselves could not render any public good. No enquiry could have been started by the Government on such a publication implying the passing of money from the pockets of certain set of people to the pockets of the prosecuting staff. The impugned remarks could certainly lead the readers of article to believe or suspect that the prosecuting staff is corrupt in the discharge of its duties as Public Prosecutors, and are thus bound to affect the reputation of the prosecuting staff adversely. Unless proved otherwise, the presumption is that every person has a good reputation. In this case, the Public Prosecutor and Assistant Public Prosecutor had deposed that they are not corrupt, and according to their knowledge, none at that place, is corrupt in the discharge of his duty. There is no evidence to the contrary. Exception 3 to S. 499, IPC comes into play when some defamatory remark is made in good faith. Nothing has been brought on the record after due care and attention and so, in good faith. Sahib Singh Mehra v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 1451: (1965) 2 SCR 823: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 434, 437.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1965]

[11046] — S. 499 Exception 4 — Defamation — Applicability — Bona fide wrong court mentioned — Defamatory remark regarding complainant Company's debt, not disputed — However, due to bona fide mistake, the name of a wrong court was published i.e. DRT instead of the civil court where the recovery for such debt was pending — Held, the statement in the prospectus that the matter was pending before DRT instead of the City Civil Court, Ahmedabad, per se, could not be said to be defamatory as the fact that a suit was pending for recovery of the huge amount was neither denied nor disputed

In the prospectus, a bona fide mistake had been committed. The fact that such a mistake had been committed stood accepted. The statement that the matter was pending before DRT instead and place of the City Civil Court, Ahmedabad, per se, could not be said to be defamatory as the fact that a suit was pending for recovery of the huge amount was neither denied nor disputed. (Para 14). Maksud Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 692: (2007) 140 Comp Cas 590: (2007) 59 AIC 139 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

[11047] — S. 499 Exception 4 — Publication of proceedings of House of Legislature or Parliament not excepted

The fourth exception says that it is not defamation to publish a substantially true report of the proceedings of a court of justice, but does not make any such concession in respect of proceedings of a court of justice, but does not make any such concession in respect of proceedings of a House of Legislature or Parliament. Jatish Chandra Ghosh v. Hari Sadhan Mukherjee, AIR 1961 SC 613: (1961) 3 SCR 486: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 743, 747.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and S.K. Das, A.K. Sarkar, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1961]

[11048] — S. 499 Exception 5 — Notings in office files — Government entitled to claim privilege or quasi-privilege in respect of — Will not constitute contempt or defamation — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 123 and 162

State communication or acts of State in public interest enjoy privilege or in any case quasi-privilege. The internal notes file of the Government, maintained according to the rules of business, is a privileged document. Therefore, disclosure in such communication made to the court will not constitute either contempt or defamation. If the Government claims privilege or quasi-privilege regarding the notes file, the court will not be justified in rejecting the claim outright. The general principle on which confidentiality of State document should be protected is that if a person is involved in litigation, the courts can order him to produce all the documents he has which relate to the issues in the case. Even if they are confidential, the court can direct them to be produced when the party in possession does not produce them, for the other side to see or at any rate for the court to see. When the court directs production of those documents there is an implied understanding that they will not be used for any other purpose. The production of these documents in ordinary cases is imposed with a limitation that the side for whose purpose documents are summoned by court cannot use them for any purpose other than the one relating to the case involved.

Though the ratio of the Court's decision in Bachhittar Singh case outlines the conservative view in the law relating to privilege, the doctrine of privilege received a shock treatment against the State at the hands of the Supreme Court in S.P. Gupta v. Union of India. It may be said that the legal milestone in Gupta case also needs to retreat a bit. State of Bihar v. Kripalu Shankar, (1987) 3 SCC 34: 1987 SCC (Cri) 442: AIR 1987 SC 1554: (1987) 2 SLJ 96.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Khalid and G.L. Oza, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1987]

[11049] — S. 499 Exception 7 — Grant of opportunity of hearing — Necessity of, prior to passing a judicial order, particularly when such order adversely affects one's reputation — Constitution of India, Arts. 21 and 19

No judicial order can ever be passed by any court without providing a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the person likely to be affected by such order and particularly when such order results in drastic consequences of affecting one's own reputation. The impugned order of the High Court directing enquiry and investigation into allegations against the appellant institution in respect of which not even a complaint/information has been lodged with the police is violative of principles of natural justice. The Director of the appellant institution has been impleaded as a party respondent in the criminal petition and the whole of the allegations in the anonymous petition are levelled against the appellant and in such a situation it was imperative for the High Court to put the appellant on notice before passing the impugned order. The appellant undoubtedly is aggrieved by the impugned order and, therefore, entitled to invoke the jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution. (Paras 51 to 53). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171, distinguished on facts

— S. 499 Exception 8 See also Ss. 500 and 499 Exception 8

[11050] — S. 499 Exception 8 — Extent of privilege as to marital communications

Rathi, daughter of appellant received from her husband Poonan certain letters, containing alleged defamatory matters as to appellant who filed a complaint under S. 500, IPC Respondent's preliminary objection was that uttering of a libel by husband to his wife was not 'publication' which was an essential ingredient of S. 499, IPC

The principle in Wenhak case is one of public policy in England where in the eye of the law, husband and wife are one.

The exceptions to S. 499, IPC, are exhaustively dealt in that provision itself. The courts will not extend the scope of special exceptions by resorting to the rule peculiar to English common law that husband and wife are regarded as one. M.C. Verghese v. T.J. Poonan, (1969) 1 SCC 37: AIR 1970 SC 1876: 1970 Cri LJ 1651: 1968 KLT 904.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.C. Shah, V. Ramaswami and A.N. Grover, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1968]

[11051] — S. 499 Exceptions 8 and 9 — Lawful authority — Communication of defamatory matter to District Panchayat Officer — Allegation that complainant was keeping bawdy house in his locality — Conviction of accused upheld — Distinction between Exceptions 8 and 9

The appellant was prosecuted on a complaint filed by R of the offence of defamation under S. 500, IPC. The appellant and R were neighbours. The defamatory matter was contained in a communication addressed by the appellant who is a member of the police force to the District Panchayat Officer. In this "application" the appellant alleged that the complainant was a woman of loose character who was having illicit connection with goondas, her paramours coming to her frequently at nights and that her immoral activities reflected badly on the locality in which the appellant lived.

Held, in order to establish a defence under Exception 8, the accused would have to prove that the person to whom the complaint was made had lawful authority over the person complained against, in respect of the subject-matter of the accusation. If the District Panchayat Officer or the Panchayat had such lawful authority, the last paragraph of the offending communication would have justified such a plea. But there is no basis at all for this argument in view of the clear provisions of the Punjab Gram Panchayat Act, 1952 under which statute alone Panchayats have jurisdiction.

Under S. 38 of the Punjab Gram Panchayat Act the criminal jurisdiction of a Gram Panchayat is confined to the trial of offences specified in Schedule 1-A of that Act.

Prostitution is not an offence under the Penal Code and the keeping of a disorderly or bawdy house is not an offence within Schedule 1-A to which offences alone the criminal jurisdiction of Panchayats extends.

Nor is there more substance in the invocation of the 9th Exception. It posits that the person to whom the communication is made has an interest in protecting the person, making the accusation. In other words, besides the bona fides of the person making the imputation, the person to whom the imputation is conveyed must have a common interest with the person making it which is served by the communication.

The point of difference between Exceptions 8 and 9 is that whereas in the former the person to whom the complaint is made must have lawful authority to deal with the subject-matter of the complaint and take proceedings against that person, there is no such requirement in Exception 9 where it is sufficient if a communication is made to a person for the protection of one's own interest in which the other also has an interest. This is clearly brought out by the illustrations to the Exception. It cannot be seriously suggested that the communication now in question satisfies this test. Kanwal Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 1317: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 479: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 345, 346.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-1962]

Harrison v. Bush, (1855) 5 E & B 344, relied on

— S. 499 Exception 9 See also Ss. 500/34 and S. 499 Exception 9

[11052] — S. 499 Exception 9 — Ingredient of

The ingredients of the Ninth Exception are: first, that the imputation must be made in good faith; secondly, the imputation must be for protection of the interest of the person making it or of any other person or for the public good. Good faith is a question of fact. So is protection of the interest of the person making it. Public good is also a question of fact. The person alleging good faith has to establish as a fact that he made enquiry before he made the imputation and he has to give reasons and facts to indicate that he acted with due care and attention and was satisfied that the imputation was true. The assent is on objective satisfaction. Sukra Mahto v. Basdeo Kumar Mahto, (1971) 1 SCC 885: 1971 SCC (Cri) 372: AIR 1971 SC 1567: 1971 Cri LJ 1168.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1971]

[11053] — S. 499 Exception 9 — Plea of good faith — Absence of personal malice is only a relevant fact — Accused will nevertheless have to show that he acted with due care and attention

Absence of personal malice may be a relevant fact in dealing with the appellant's plea of good faith, but its significance or importance cannot be exaggerated. Even in the absence of personal malice, the appellant will have to show that he acted with due care and attention. Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 97: (1965) 2 SCR 235: 1966 Cri LJ 82, 89.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, C.J. and Raghubar Dayal and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1965]

[11054] — S. 499 Exception 9 — "Protection of interest" — Meaning

The protection of interest contemplated in the Ninth Exception is that communication must be made bona fide upon a subject in which the person making the communication has an interest or duty and the person to whom the communication is made has a corresponding interest or duty. Merely because a proceeding is pending it will not be open to a person to impute the statements made by him in an earlier case. There was no question of title involved. Even if title is involved that by itself will not entitle a person to make a defamatory statement and then take the plea that it was for the protection of interest. Protection of interest of the person making the imputation will have to be established by showing that the imputation was itself the protection of the interest of the person making it. Sukra Mahto v. Basdeo Kumar Mahto, (1971) 1 SCC 885: 1971 SCC (Cri) 372: AIR 1971 SC 1567: 1971 Cri LJ 1168.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1971]

[11055] — S. 499 Exception 9 & S. 52 — Good faith — Proof of — For getting the benefit of Exception Ninth the accused must show that the belief in his impugned statement had a rational basis — Question of good faith to be considered on facts and circumstances of each case

The element of honesty which is introduced by the definition prescribed by the General Clauses Act is not introduced by the definition of IPC; and one is governed by the definition prescribed by S. 52 of IPC. So, in considering the question as to whether the appellant acted in good faith in publishing his impugned statement, it has to be enquired whether he acted with due care and attention. There is no doubt that the mere plea that the accused believed that what he stated was true by itself, will not sustain his case of good faith under the Ninth Exception. Simple belief or actual belief by itself is not enough. The appellant must show that the belief in his impugned statement had a rational basis and was not just a blind simple belief. That is where the element of due care and attention plays an important role. If it appears that before making the statement the accused did not show due care and attention, that would defeat his plea of good faith. But it must be remembered that good faith does not require logical infallibility.

In deciding whether an accused person acted in good faith under the Ninth Exception, it is not possible to lay down any rigid rule or test. It would be a question to be considered on the facts and circumstances of each case — what is the nature of the imputation made; under what circumstances did it come to be made; what is the status of the person who makes the imputation; was there any malice in his mind when he made the said imputation; did he make any enquiry before he made it; are there reasons to accept his story that he acted with due care and attention and was satisfied that the the imputation was true? These and other considerations would be relevant in deciding the plea of good faith made by an accused person who claims the benefit of the Ninth Exception. Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 97: (1965) 2 SCR 235: 1966 Cri LJ 82, 88.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, C.J. and Raghubar Dayal and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1965]

Followed in (1971) 1 SCC 885: 1971 SCC (Cri) 372

[11056] — Ss. 499 Exception 9 & S. 500 — Impugned statement for public good and in good faith — Offence under S. 500 not established. Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 97: (1965) 2 SCR 235: 1966 Cri LJ 82.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, C.J. and Raghubar Dayal and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1965]

[11057] — S. 499 Exceptions 9 and 1 — Requirements of both "good faith" and "public good" must be satisfied for the application of Exception Ninth

There is no doubt that the requirements of good faith and public good have both to be satisfied, and so, the failure of the appellant to prove good faith would exclude the application of the Ninth Exception in his favour even if the requirement of public good is satisfied. Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 97: (1965) 2 SCR 235: 1966 Cri LJ 82, 86.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, C.J. and Raghubar Dayal and V. Ramaswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1965]

— S. 499 Exception 10 See also Ss. 500 and 499 Exception 10

[11058] — S. 499 Exception 10 — Defence of caution issued in good faith — Applicability — Held, it must be proved that the statement/publication was intended in "good faith" to convey a caution to one person against another; that such caution was intended for the good of the person to whom it was conveyed, or of such person in whom that person was interested, or for the "public good" (Para 32). Jeffrey J. Diermeier v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2010]

[11059] — S. 499 Exception 10 and S. 500 — Burden of proof — Plea that appellant acted in "good faith" and for "public good" — Held, mere plea that the accused believed that what he had stated was in "good faith" is not sufficient and he must justify the same by adducing evidence — However, he is not required to discharge that burden by leading evidence to prove his case beyond a reasonable doubt — Onus is discharged the moment he proves the same on preponderance of probability — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 101 and 102 (Paras 37 and 38). Jeffrey J. Diermeier v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2010]

[11060] — S. 499 Exception 10 and S. 500 — "Good faith" and "public good" — Proof — Held, where to the charge of defamation accused invokes aid of S. 499 Exception 10, "good faith" and "public good" have both to be established by him — However, it is neither feasible nor possible to lay down a rigid test for deciding whether an accused person acted in "good faith" and for "public good" under the said Exception — Said question has to be considered on the facts and circumstances of each case, having regard to the nature of imputation made, the circumstances in which it came to be made and status of person who makes the imputation as also status of person against whom the imputation is allegedly made (Paras 37 and 39). Jeffrey J. Diermeier v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2010]

[11061] — S. 499 r/w Ss. 107/34 — Miscarriage of justice — Factual error — Alleged harassment of Accused 6 by her husband and father-in-law published in newspaper at instance of Accused 6 and her father (Accused 5) — Criminal complaint for defamation filed against editor, publisher, reporter, newspaper (Accused 1 to 4 respectively) and Accused 5 and 6 by appellant (father-in-law of Accused 6) and husband of Accused 6 (who committed suicide during pendency of complaint) — Subsequently at request of appellant proceedings against Accused 6 dropped — High Court by impugned judgment quashing complaint against Accused 1 to 4 on ground that since proceedings against principal tortfeasors Accused 5 and 6 had been dropped, whole genesis of complaint had vanished — However, factually proceedings were dropped only against Accused 6 — Held, inadvertent factual error about dropping of proceedings against Accused 5 had influenced the Court to great extent, resulting in miscarriage of justice — Hence, matter remanded to High Court for consideration afresh — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 4, 7, 11 and 12). S.D. Kathuria v. N. Ravi, (2010) 13 SCC 771.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2009]

— S. 500 See also Ss. 34, 120-B, 177, 181, 191, 192, 425 and 500

See also Ss. 120-B, 177, 181, 191, 192, 425 and 500

See also Ss. 120-B, 465, 466 and 500

See also Ss. 182, 211 and 500

See also Ss. 295-A and 500

See also Ss. 297 and 500

See also Ss. 399 and 500

See also Ss. 498-A and 500

See also Ss. 499 and 500

See also Ss. 499, 500, 501 and 502 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 499 Exception 9, 500

See also Ss. 499 Exception 9, 500 and 52

[11062] — S. 500 — Complaint alleging offence under S. 500 filed by petitioner against 7 accused — Summons issued by Magistrate to all the accused — Magistrate's order challenged by accused-respondents 3 to 6 without impleading accused-respondent 2 as party — Notice under S. 251 given to all the accused — Petition filed under S. 482 for quashing the criminal proceedings and the notice under S. 251 — High Court finding that facts of the case did not disclose the offence of defamation against respondent 2 even taking the allegations in the complaint as correct on its face value and accordingly by its order quashing the proceedings against him — Held, order does not warrant interference of Supreme Court — Constitution of India — Article 136 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482. Dhanwanti Vaswani (Dr.) v. State, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 329: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1040: AIR 1993 SC 1206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-1991]

[11063] — S. 500 — Complaint alleging that appellant in an interview published in a magazine made statements outraging religious feeling of Marwari community and alleging that the members of that community were not a class belonging to India, having no faith and love towards India and being traitors and enemies of India — Held, allegations do not disclose offence under S. 500 and hence Magistrate not justified in issuing process against the appellant. Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1996]

[11064] — S. 500 — Managing Editor, Chief Editor or Resident Editor — Criminal complaint under S. 500 against, for publication of libellous matter in their newspapers — Maintainability — Complaint alleging that Managing Editor/Chief Editor/Resident Editor had knowledge of and were responsible for publishing defamatory matter in their newspaper publications — "Editor" not coming forward to admit responsibility for selecting the alleged defamatory matter published — In such circumstances, the said complaint, held, maintainable — Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, Ss. 7, 1(1), 5, 8-A and Preamble

The appellants were either Managing Editor, Chief Editor or Resident Editor of their respective newspaper publications. Separate criminal complaints were filed against them under Section 500 IPC alleging that in their newspaper publications, libellous matter was published and that they had knowledge of, and were responsible for such publication and thus they had committed the offence of defamation besides other allied offences. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offences and issued summonses to the appellants. The appellants unsuccessfully challenged under Section 482 CrPC their prosecution on the ground that in view of Section 7 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867 (for short "the Act"), they were not liable to be prosecuted and that the person whose name was printed on the newspaper as the "Editor" of that publication alone was so liable.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held:

There is no statutory immunity for the Managing Editor, Resident Editor or Chief Editor against any prosecution for the alleged publication of any matter in the newspaper over which these persons exercise control. (Para 16)

Sections 7, 1(1), 5, 8-A and the preamble of the Act clearly show that there could be a presumption against the Editor whose name is printed in the newspaper to the effect that he is the Editor of such publication and that he is responsible for selecting the matter for publication. Though, a similar presumption cannot be drawn against the Chief Editor, Resident Editor or Managing Editor, nevertheless, the complainant can still allege and prove that they had knowledge and they were responsible for the publication of the defamatory news item. Even the presumption under Section 7 is a rebuttable presumption and the same could be proved otherwise. That by itself indicates that somebody other than the Editor can also be held responsible for selecting the matter for publication in a newspaper. (Paras 20 and 14)

In the instant appeals, the complainant in each case has alleged that the appellants who are either Managing Editor, Chief Editor or Resident Editor had knowledge and were responsible for publishing defamatory matter in their respective newspaper publications. Moreover, in none of these cases, the "Editor" had come forward and pleaded guilty to the effect that he was the person responsible for selecting the alleged defamatory matter published. It is a matter of evidence in each case. If the complaint is allowed to proceed only against the "Editor" whose name is printed in the newspaper against whom there is a statutory presumption under Section 7 of the Act, and in case such "Editor" succeeds in proving that he was not the "Editor" having control over the selection of the alleged libellous matter published in the newspaper, the complainant would be left without any remedy to redress his grievance against the real culprit. Section 319 CrPC although is there but such powers are circumscribed by limitations. (Para 22). K.M. Mathew v. K.A. Abraham, (2002) 6 SCC 670: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1480: AIR 2002 SC 2989: (2002) 3 KLT 282.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-2002]

State of Maharashtra v. Dr. R.B. Chowdhari, AIR 1968 SC 110: (1967) 3 SCR 708: 1968 Cri LJ 95; Haji C.H. Mohammad Koya v. T.K.S. M.A. Muthukoya, (1979) 2 SCC 8; K.M. Mathew v. State of Kerala, (1992) 1 SCC 217: 1992 SCC (Cri) 88, distinguished

[11065] — S. 500 — Prosecution of Editorial Board of a weekly for publishing defamatory article — Presumption under S. 7 of Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867

Members of the Editorial Board of a weekly were prosecuted for publishing a defamatory article against a public servant. The name of A was printed as the editor of the weekly. The declaration in Form I, showed the name of A not only as the printer and publisher but also as the editor.

Held, the presumption under S. 7 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867 will attach to A as having selected the material for publication in the newspaper.

In the circumstances not only the presumption cannot be drawn against the others who had not declared themselves as editors of the newspaper but it is also fair to leave them out because they had no concern with the publishing of the article in question. State of Maharashtra v. Dr. R.B. Chowdhari, AIR 1968 SC 110: (1967) 3 SCR 708: 1968 Cri LJ 95, 96.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M. Hidayatullah and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1967]

[11066] — S. 500 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Private complaint alleging commission of offence under S. 500 by appellant — Magistrate prima facie coming to conclusion that allegations in the complaint might come within the definition of 'defamation' under S. 499 IPC and could be taken cognizance of — Held, at this stage Supreme Court's interference by quashing the complaint not called for — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482, 200, 196 — Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 136

It is not the province of the Supreme Court to appreciate at this stage the evidence or scope of and meaning of the statement. Certain allegations came to be made but whether these allegations do constitute defamation is a matter to be considered by the Magistrate at a later stage. At this stage, the Supreme Court cannot embark upon weighing the evidence and come to any conclusion to hold, whether or not the allegations made in the complaint constitute an offence punishable under Section 500. It is the settled legal position that a court has to read the complaint as a whole and find out whether allegations disclosed constitute an offence under Section 499 triable by the Magistrate. The Magistrate prima facie came to the conclusion that the allegations might come within the definition of 'defamation' under Section 499 IPC and could be taken cognizance of. But these are the facts to be established at the trial. The case set up by the appellant are either defences open to be taken or other steps of framing a charge at the trial at whatever stage known to law. Prima facie at this stage it is not a case warranting quashing of the complaint. Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1996]

[11067] — S. 500 — Sanction to file a complaint — Form of — Sanction to file a complaint under S. 500 for making defamatory remarks against a particular Public Prosecutor and other prosecuting staff of the State — Validity of sanction — CrPC, 1898 — S. 198-B (3)

The sanction conveyed by the Home Secretary for making a complaint under S. 500, IPC against the appellant with respect to the defamatory article containing defamatory remarks against the Assistant Public Prosecutor, Aligarh and other prosecuting staff against the Government in respect of their conduct in the discharge of public functions. The sanction was therefore with respect to defamation of two persons: (i) Assistant Public Prosecutor Aligarh; and (ii) other police prosecuting staff of Government of Uttar Pradesh which would be the entire prosecuting staff in the State. There was therefore nothing wrong in the form of sanction. Sahib Singh Mehra v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 1451: (1965) 2 SCR 823: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 434.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1965]

[11068] — S. 500 — Sentence — Reckless defamatory comments in newspapers — Six months' simple imprisonment and a fine of Rs 200 — Sentence is not severe — A deterrent sentence is called for

The press has great power in impressing the minds of the people and it is essential that persons responsible for publishing anything in newspapers should take good care before publishing anything which tends to harm the reputation of a person. Reckless comments are to be avoided. When one is proved to have made defamatory comments with an ulterior motive and without the least justification motivated by self-interest, he deserves a deterrent sentence. Sahib Singh Mehra v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 1451: (1965) 2 SCR 823: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 434, 438.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1965]

[11069] — S. 500 — Whether defamatory allegations should contain the actual words — Whether English Law on libel applicable

The propositions laid down in English decisions dealing with libel that the actual words alleged to be used must be stated in the indictment cannot be applied on all forms when dealing with the cases of defamation by spoken words under S. 499, IPC. It will be highly desirable no doubt if the actual words stated to have been used by an accused and which are alleged to be defamatory are reproduced by the complainant. The actual words used or the statements made may be reproduced verbatim by the complainant if the words are few and the statement is very brief. But in cases where the words spoken are too many or the statements made are too long, it will be the height of technicality to insist that the actual words and the entire statements should be reproduced verbatim. A complaint cannot be thrown out on the mere ground that the actual words spoken or the statements made have not been stated in the complaint. From the point of view of accused also it is necessary that the matter alleged to be defamatory in the complaint must be so stated as to enable them to know the nature of the allegations that they have to meet. Balraj Khanna v. Moti Ram, (1971) 3 SCC 399: 1971 SCC (Cri) 647: AIR 1971 SC 1389: 1971 Cri LJ 1110.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-1971]

[11070] — Ss. 500 and 182 — Cognizance of offence under S. 500 not barred by failure of public servant to proceed under S. 195 CrPC, 1898 for offence under S. 182 IPC

As regards the charge under S. 500, Penal Code, it seems fairly clear both on principle and authority that where the allegations made in a false report disclose two distinct offences, one against the public servant and the other against a private individual, that other is not debarred by the provision of S. 195 from seeking redress for the offence committed against him.

But, it must be remembered that though S. 195 does not bar the trial of an accused person for a distinct offence disclosed by the same facts and which is not included within the ambit of that section, it has also to be borne in mind that the provisions of that section cannot be evaded by resorting to devices or camouflages. The test whether there is evasion of the section or not is whether the facts disclose primarily and essentially an offence for which a complaint of the Court or of the public servant is required. In other words, the provisions of the section cannot be evaded by the device of charging a person with an offence to which that section does not apply and then convicting him of an offence to which it does, upon the ground that such latter offence is a minor offence of the same character, or by describing the offence as being one punishable under some other section of the Indian Penal Code, though in truth and substance the offence falls in the category of sections mentioned in S. 195, CrPC Merely by changing the garb or label of an offence which is essentially an offence covered by the provisions of S. 195 prosecution for such an offence cannot be taken cognizance of by misdescribing it or putting a wrong label on it. Basir-ul-Haq v. State of W.B., AIR 1953 SC 293: 1953 SCR 836: 1953 Cri LJ 1232.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, Vivian Bose and B. Jagannadhadas, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1953]

Satish Chandra v. Ram Dayal, AIR 1921 Cal 1: 22 Cri LJ 31 and Hori Ram v. Emperor, AIR 1939 FC 430, approved

See also AIR 1962 SC 876: 1962 (1) Cri LJ 770; AIR 1966 SC 1775: 1966 Cri LJ 1491

[11071] — Ss. 500 and 499 Exception 8 — Applicability of Exception 8 to S. 499 — Allegation in complaint that the accused persons made a complaint to the Treasury Officer containing false imputation to the effect that the complainant had come to the office in a drunken state and abused the Treasury Officer — Magistrate directing the Treasury Officer to hold enquiry and submit a report — Report of the Treasury Officer indicating that a departmental enquiry had been initiated and the complainant was found guilty — Held, in the circumstances Exception 8 to S. 499 attracted — No case of defamation made out — Order of issuance of process and the proceeding itself quashed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 482 and 204. Rajendra Kumar Sitaram Pande v. Uttam, (1999) 3 SCC 134: 1999 SCC (Cri) 393: AIR 1999 SC 1028: 1999 Cri LJ 1620.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1999]

[11072] — Ss. 500 & 501 — Defamation of the Governor — Essentials explained — Secretary to Government according the sanction — Authorization by the Governor before the sanction is essential — Governor cannot leave the decision relating to authorization to Government — Decision must first be taken by him — Thereafter he is free to accord or not to accord the sanction — Sanction by the Secretary without proper authorization is illegal and prosecution is without jurisdiction — CrPC, 1898, S. 198-B(3)(a). Gour Chandra Rout v. Public Prosecutor, Cuttack, AIR 1963 SC 1198: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 447: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 194, 98.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K. Subba Rao, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-1962]

See fully CrPC, 1898, S. 198-B(3)(a)

[11073] — Ss. 500 and 501 r/w S. 34 — Transfer of criminal case — Allegations in complaints filed at different places almost the same — Case should be tried by same court — Case remitted to High Court for directions accordingly — CrPC, 1973 — S. 407. P.R. Behere v. Ganpatrao Shrinivasrao Chavan, 1990 Supp SCC 139: 1990 SCC (Cri) 540(1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1988]

[11074] — Ss. 500/34 and S. 499 Exception 9 — Expression "acting or purporting to act in discharge of his official duty" — Test — There must be a reasonable connection between the act and discharge of official duty — For this purpose allegations in complaint relevant — Counter-affidavit containing alleged defamatory statement filed by the accused, a Govt. officer, only as a defence to the allegations made in the writ petition in connection with transfer of the complainant — Held, accused was acting in discharge of his official duties — It is for the criminal court to decide the question of necessity of sanction — Opinion of sanctioning authority in this regard immaterial — CrPC, 1973 — S. 197

The complainant was subordinate to the accused persons. He filed two writ petitions under Art. 226 of the Constitution in connection with his promotion and transfer. The accused persons filed counter-affidavit making certain averments. The complainant filed two complaints before the Chief Judicial Magistrate for offence under Ss. 500/34 IPC alleging that in the said counter-affidavit the accused persons had made defamatory statements. The Chief Judicial Magistrate took cognizance of the offence complained of and issued process and summoned the appellants to face the trial. The appellants filed two petitions under S. 482 CrPC in the High Court for quashing the complaints on the ground that the Chief Judicial Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence in the absence of any sanction under S. 197 CrPC by the Government and also on the ground that they were entitled to the benefit under the Ninth Exception to S. 499 IPC. The High Court dismissed both the petitions. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The counter-affidavit was filed on behalf of the accused-appellants in their defence to the allegations made in the writ petition by the respondent. Therefore whatever imputations that have been made in the counter-affidavit were made certainly while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of the official duties. The imputations which according to the complainant amounts to defamation cannot in any manner be said to be not in connection with the official duty. The appellants made these alleged imputations only by virtue of their office while filing the counter-affidavit.

In order to apply the provisions of S. 197 CrPC two conditions must be fulfilled; one is that the offence mentioned therein must be committed by a public servant and the other is that the public servant employed in connection with the affairs of the Union or a State is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Central Government or the State Government, as the case may be. The object of the section is to provide guard against vexatious proceedings against judges, magistrates and public servants and to secure the opinion of superior authority whether it is desirable that there should be a prosecution. If on the date of the complaint itself it is incumbent upon the court to take cognizance of such offence only when there is a previous sanction then unless the sanction to prosecute is produced the court cannot take cognizance of the offence. Naturally at that stage, the court taking cognizance has to examine the acts complained of and see whether the provisions of S. 197 CrPC are attracted. If the above two conditions are satisfied then the further enquiry would be whether the alleged offences have been committed by the public servant while acting or purporting to act in discharge of his official duties. If this requirement also is satisfied then no court shall take cognizance of such offences except with the previous sanction. For this purpose the allegations made in the complaint are very much relevant to appreciate whether the acts complained of are directly concerned or reasonably connected with official duties so that if questioned the public servant could claim to have done these acts by virtue of his office, that is to say, there must be a reasonable connection between the act and the discharge of official duties. It is in this context that the words "purporting to act in discharge of official duties" assume importance. The public servant can only be said to act or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties if his act is such as to lie within the scope of his official duties. Director of Inspection & Audit v. C.L. Subramaniam, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 615: 1995 SCC (Cri) 121: AIR 1995 SC 866.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1994]

Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, (1955) 2 SCR 925: AIR 1956 SC 44: 1956 Cri LJ 140; Pukhraj v. State of Rajasthan, (1973) 2 SCC 701: 1973 SCC (Cri) 944; State of Maharashtra v. Dr. Budhikota Subbarao, (1993) 3 SCC 339: 1993 SCC (Cri) 901, followed

Hori Ram Singh (Dr.) v. Emperor, AIR 1939 FC 43: 40 Cri LJ 468: 43 CWN 50: 1939 FCR 159, approved

— S. 501 See also Ss. 499, 500, 501 and 502 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 500 and 501

— S. 501 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 500 and 501 r/w S. 34

— S. 502 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 324, 504 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 499, 500, 501 and 502 r/w S. 34

— S. 503 See also Ss. 383, 384, 503 and 506
See also Ss. 499 and 503

[11075] — S. 503 — Prohibition against land grabbing — Scope of — Held, the legislation deals with all types of land grabbing, whether the land is public or private — The Act is a self-contained code and provides for a comprehensive mechanism which is substantially different from previous legislation, namely, Andhra Pradesh Land Encroachment Act, 1905, for eviction of land grabbers and adjudication of related disputes without requiring parties to seek remedy before regular courts — The definition of land grabber also includes those who abet land grabbing or finance activity of land grabbing, etc. and successors-in-interest of land grabber — Andhra Pradesh Land Grabbing (Prohibition) Act, 1982 (12 of 1982), Ss. 2(d), (e) and 4 (Paras 12 and 20). Mandal Revenue Officer v. Goundla Venkaiah, (2010) 2 SCC 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-2010]

Govt. of A.P. v. Thummala Krishna Rao, (1982) 2 SCC 134, relied on

Special Courts Bill, 1978, In re, (1979) 1 SCC 380, referred to [11076] — Ss. 503, 506, 447 and 426 — Inherent powers of High Court — Exercise of, held on facts, was called for — Quashing of complaint filed against appellant by Respondent 3 — Complaint alleging that appellant abused Respondent 3 with name of his caste, demolished the compound wall of his plot, and intimidated him — Held, according to S. 3(1)(x) of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 the complainant ought to have alleged that the appellant-accused was not a member of the Scheduled Caste or a Scheduled Tribe and he (Respondent 3) was intentionally insulted or intimidated by the accused with intent to humiliate in a place within public view — When the basic ingredients of the offence are missing in the complaint, then permitting such a complaint to continue and to compel the appellant to face the rigmarole of the criminal trial would be totally unjustified leading to abuse of process of law — Further, Respondent 3 was not even in possession of the suit property on the date of incident which fact had not been disputed — In such circumstances allegation made in the complaint, that the appellant demolished the wall are totally baseless and without any foundation — Criminal complaint was prima facie false and frivolous and filed with an oblique motive — Hence, High Court ought to have exercised its jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC and quashed the complaint — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(1)(x) — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Paras 3 to 6, 11 and 27). Gorige Pentaiah v. State of A.P., (2008) 12 SCC 531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2008]

Connelly v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 1964 AC 1254: (1964) 2 WLR 1145: (1964) 2 All ER 401 (HL); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Humphrys, 1977 AC 1: (1976) 2 WLR 857: (1976) 2 All ER 497 (HL); R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259, considered and relied on

— S. 504 See also Ss. 302, 307, 143, 148, 504 and 149
See also Ss. 302, 323 and 504
See also Ss. 302, 452 and 504
See also Ss. 323, 504, 506, 117, 366-A and 373
See also Ss. 323, 506, 498-A, 307 and 504
See also Ss. 324, 427 and 504
See also Ss. 332, 353, 504 and 506
See also Ss. 341, 326, 504, and 506 r/w S. 34 and Ss. 324 and 325 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 354, 323, 504 and 506
See also Ss. 406, 420, 468, 471, 504, 506, 382 and 120-B
See also Ss. 452, 323, 504, 506, 420

[11077] — S. 504 — Intentional insult to provoke breach of peace — Ingredients of offence — Accused 1 and 2 who respectively were seller and purchaser of land, alleged to have asserted to complainant (who claimed to be real owner of property) that they would obtain possession of property under sale deeds and complainant could do whatever he wanted — Held, such an assertion did not amount to insult with intent to provoke breach of peace — Offence under S. 504 was therefore not made out (Para 29). Mohd. Ibrahim v. State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2009]

[11078] — Ss. 504, 498-A and 406 — Anticipatory bail — Factors to be taken into consideration for grant of, held, are the gravity of the offence and the need for custodial interrogation — The mere fact of taking of cognizance or filing of charge-sheet, held, is not by itself a bar against grant of anticipatory bail — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 438

The appellants herein were husband and wife. They were accused by their daughter-in-law of offences punishable under Sections 504, 498-A and 406 IPC and Sections 3/4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act. Their application for anticipatory bail under Section 438 CrPC was rejected by the Patna High Court. They filed the instant appeal by special leave. After hearing the parties the Supreme Court was inclined to grant the anticipatory bail but the respondent State raised a legal objection that since the trial court had taken cognizance of the offence, Section 438 could not be used for granting anticipatory bail even by the Supreme Court and the only remedy available to the appellants was to approach the trial court and surrender, and thereafter apply for regular bail under Section 439 CrPC.

Rejecting the State's objection and allowing the appeal,

Held :

The object of Section 438 is to prevent undue harassment of the accused persons by pre-trial arrest and detention. The gravity of the offence is an important factor to be taken into consideration while granting such anticipatory bail so also the need for custodial interrogation, but these are only factors that must be borne in mind by the courts concerned while entertaining a petition for grant of anticipatory bail and the fact of taking cognizance or filing of a charge-sheet cannot by itself be construed as a prohibition against the grant of anticipatory bail. The courts i.e. the Court of Session, High Court or Supreme Court have the necessary power vested in them to grant anticipatory bail in non-bailable offences under Section 438 CrPC even when cognizance is taken or a charge-sheet is filed provided the facts of the case require the court to do so. (Para 7). Bharat Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2003) 8 SCC 77: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1953: AIR 2003 SC 4662.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 1 SCC 667: 1996 SCC (Cri) 198, explained

[11079] — Ss. 504 and 506 — Issue of process — Prerequisites as to — Issuance of summons in relation to offences under Ss. 504 and 506 IPC, in absence of any reference or prima facie finding as to alleged threat in impugned order, held, not justified — Proceedings initiated in relation to those offences, quashed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 204, 200 and 482

In the order passed by the Magistrate, there is no whisper about the threat alleged to have been given by the appellant to the complainant nor the Magistrate recorded even a prima facie finding as to such threat. The High Court also, in the impugned order, does not refer to such intimidation. On the contrary, the High Court observed that the allegations were sufficient to summon the appellant for causing death of F under Section 304 IPC. Thus, on the facts and in the circumstances of the case, no summons could have been issued to the appellant for the commission of offences punishable under Sections 504 and 506 IPC. Hence, the proceedings initiated against the appellant for the offences punishable under Sections 504 and 506 IPC are quashed. (Paras 18, 19 and 38). Mahadev Prasad Kaushik v. State of U.P., (2008) 14 SCC 479: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 834: AIR 2009 SC 125: (2008) 72 AIC 131 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 368 (SC): (2009) 1 All LJ 96.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2008]

— S. 504 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 323, 384, 504 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 324, 504 r/w S. 34

— S. 504 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 147, 148, 341, 504, 506, 324, 326 r/w S. 149

— Ss. 504/34 See also Ss. 341, 323, 504/34 and 120-B

— S. 505 See also Ss. 124-A and 505

— S. 505(2) See also Ss. 153-A and 505(2)

See also Ss. 153-A(1)(a) and (b) and 505(2)

— S. 506 See also Ss. 120-B, 420, 468, 471 and 506

See also Ss. 120-B r/w 326, 342, 417, 465, 473, 506 and 307

See also Ss. 302, 120-B, 307 r/w Ss. 149, 397, 147, 506 and 449

See also Ss. 302, 201 and 506

See also Ss. 302, 307, 148, 149, 364, 342, 506, 201 and 120-B

See also Ss. 302 and 506

See also Ss. 302, 506, 324, 426, 427, 435, 143, 144, 147 and 148

See also Ss. 302/34, 120-B and 506

See also Ss. 323, 34, 387, 498-A and 506

See also Ss. 323, 382, 420, 465, 468, 471, 120-B, 506 and 34

See also Ss. 323, 504, 506, 117, 366-A and 373
See also Ss. 323, 506, 427, 354 and 452
See also Ss. 323, 506, 498-A, 307 and 504
See also Ss. 332, 353, 504 and 506
See also Ss. 354, 323, 504 and 506
See also Ss. 363, 368, 506 and 507 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 365/411, 494 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 120-B, 342 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 302, 304, 120-B, 354, 312, 343, 201, 506, 109 and 34
See also Ss. 376, 323, 342 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 354 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 366 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323, 366 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 460, 325 and 506
See also Ss. 376 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 506 and 511
See also Ss. 376/149, 375, 148, 452, 342, 323, 366 and 506
See also Ss. 376(2)(g), 506, 149 and 148
See also Ss. 376(2)(g) and 506 Pt. II
See also Ss. 383, 384, 503 and 506
See also Ss. 384 and 506
See also Ss. 395, 447 and 506
See also Ss. 396, 506, 341 and 379
See also Ss. 406, 420, 468, 471, 504, 506, 382 and 120-B
See also Ss. 436, 447, 427, 147 and 506
See also Ss. 452, 232, 427, 506 and 147 to 149
See also Ss. 452, 323, 504, 506, 420
See also Ss. 498-A, 323 and 506
See also Ss. 498-A, 342, 506 and 406 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 498-A, 406, 323, 506, 148 and 149
See also Ss. 498-A, 506 and 323
See also Ss. 503, 506, 447 and 426
See also Ss. 504 and 506

[11080] — S. 506 — Sentence — Trial Magistrate convicting appellant under Part II of S. 506, and directing his release under S. 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act on execution of personal bond of Rs 700 — Additional Sessions Judge releasing him by altering his conviction to that under Part I of S. 506, and awarding a fine of Rs 50 — Whether Additional Sessions Judge can deprive benefit given by the trial Magistrate without any cogent reason

Where the trial Magistrate released the appellant on probation of good conduct under S. 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act even though the appellant had been found to be guilty of the graver offence under Part II of Section 506, Indian Penal Code, the Additional Sessions Judge should not deprive the appellant of that benefit without some cogent grounds when the Additional Sessions Judge had partly allowed the appeal of the appellant and found him to be guilty of a lighter offence. Ramnaresh Pandey v. State of M.P., (1974) 3 SCC 380: 1973 SCC (Cri) 1030: AIR 1974 SC 35: 1974 Cri LJ 153.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.R. Khanna, V.R. Krishna Iyer and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-1973]

[11081] — Ss. 506 and 384 — Appropriate sentence — A-1 sentenced to SI for 1 year and fine of Rs 1000 for offence under S. 384, and to SI for 1 year and fine of Rs 500 for offence under S. 506 IPC, with default stipulation — A-1 aged about 83 years and suffering from various ailments and was under continuous medical supervision — Property which was subject-matter of dispute returned by him to complainant, and compensation amounting to Rs 50,000 in terms of High Court order also paid — Hence, instead of sentencing him to undergo substantive sentence, held, interest of justice would be satisfied if fine is increased from Rs 1000 to Rs 3000 under S. 384 and from Rs 500 to Rs 2000 for offence under S. 506 (Paras 24 and 25). Karipi Rasheed Ahmed v. State of A.P., (2009) 17 SCC 515.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.S. Panta and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2009]

— S. 506 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 341, 326, 504, and 506 r/w S. 34 and Ss. 324 and 325 r/w S. 34
See also Ss. 376, 342 and 506 r/w S. 34
— S. 506 r/w S. 120-B See also Ss. 306 and 506 r/w S. 120-B
— S. 506 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 147, 148, 341, 504, 506, 324, 326 r/w S. 149
— Ss. 506/34 See also Ss. 307 and 506/34

[11082] — Ss. 506/452/323/34 r/w S. 120-B — Discharge — Private complaint — Discharge of 3 out of 4 accused persons perusing same evidence against all of them — Propriety of — Trial court discharging all the accused persons (Respondents 1-4) against whom a complaint under Ss. 506/452/323/34 r/w S. 120-B IPC was filed by the petitioner's husband — Sessions Court dismissing petitioner's revision petition against Respondents 1-3, but allowing it only as against Respondent 4 — High Court upholding order passed by the courts below — Under the circumstances, when there was no justification to proceed against Respondents 1-3, held, courts below were justified in discharging them — Matter, held, was not liable to be interfered with under Art. 136 — Constitution of India, Art. 136 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 245, 227, 397 and 482

The learned Additional Sessions Judge has considered both oral and documentary evidence. It is no doubt true that referring to the statements of the complainant and his wife, the learned Additional Sessions Judge has said that their evidence is positive. But, on scrutiny and after examination of evidence, both oral and documentary, he did not find any justification to proceed with the criminal case against Respondents 1-3. On perusal of the impugned order, it appears that the complainant was bearing some ill will against one of the respondents. It has also been pointed out that the names of Respondents 1-3 have not been anywhere mentioned by the complainant. Further, neither the medical examination has been got done nor the photographs of the alleged breaking of the door have been placed on the record. Under the circumstances, Additional Sessions Judge rightly dismissed the revision petition against Respondents 1-3 after considering both oral and documentary evidence. (Para 4). Surjit Kaur v. D.S. Kapoor, (2001) 9 SCC 468.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2001]

— S. 506 Pt. II See also Ss. 34/302/324 and S. 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 302, 307, 324, 323, 427, 453, 506 Pt. II, S. 147 r/w S. 149 and S. 148

See also Ss. 333, 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 354, 452, 323, 506 Pt. II r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 376(2)(g) and 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 379, 468, 471, 420 and 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 384 and 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 395, 427, 506 Pt. II and S. 34

See also Ss. 448 and 506 Pt. II

See also Ss. 452, 354, 323, 506 Pt. II r/w S. 34

— S. 506-B See also Ss. 420, 467, 471, 323, 506-B and 120-B

— S. 507 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 363, 368, 506 and 507 r/w S. 34

— S. 509 See also Ss. 354 and 509

[11083] — S. 509 — Insulting the modesty of a woman — Act of slapping on the posterior of a woman in the presence of a gathering comprising the elite of society, considered in the light of sequence of events involving overtures, words used and gestures made — Held, prima facie constituted offence under S. 509. Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059: AIR 1996 SC 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1995]

[11084] — S. 509 — Offence under — Ingredients of, restated — Grievance with publication of a statement calling for social acceptance of premarital sex made by appellant, held, does not make out said offence

I, a news magazine conducted a survey on the subject of sexual habits of people residing in the bigger cities of India. One of the issues discussed therein was the increasing incidence of premarital sex. Thereafter, the magazine published the views expressed by various persons, including the appellant, a well-known actress. Expressing her personal opinion, she noted the increasing incidence of premarital sex, especially in the context of live-in relationships and called for societal acceptance of the same. Subsequently, D, a Tamil daily reproduced the appellant's statement published in the said magazine. It added that in a conversation with its correspondent, the appellant had defended her views and stated: "The persons who are protesting against my interview, are talking about which culture? Is there anyone who does not know about sex in Tamil Nadu? Is there anyone who does not know about AIDS? How many men and women do not have sex before marriage?" The appellant, however, in a legal notice to the editor of the said daily denied the said statement.

Several persons and organisations, particularly functionaries of a political party PMK filed as many as 23 criminal complaints against the appellant for the offences contemplated under Sections 499, 500, 509, 153-A and 292 IPC read with Sections 4 and 6 of the Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986. Most of the complaints were filed in various districts of T.N. State while one was filed in M.P.

The appellant then approached Madras High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of said proceedings. Taking the view that the questions involved in the complaints required consideration by a trial Judge, the High Court rejected the plea of the appellant. However, the High Court directed all the complaints to be consolidated and tried by CJM at E. Aggrieved thereby, the appellant filed the present batch of appeals by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that: (i) the respondent complainants were not "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC and could not therefore maintain the complaints; (ii) the opinion expressed by the appellant was protected by Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution; (iii) the allegations made in the complaints, even if taken on their face value, did not disclose any offence under the provisions specified therein; and (iv) the criminal proceedings were instituted in a mala fide manner by workers of a particular political party to vilify the appellant and gain undue political mileage.

The respondents supported the order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

In order to establish the offence under Section 509 IPC it is necessary to show that the modesty of a particular woman or a readily identifiable group of women has been insulted by a spoken word, gesture or physical act. Clearly this offence cannot be made out when the complainants' grievance is with the publication of what the appellant had stated in a written form. (Para 23). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2010]

[11085] — S. 509 — Validity — Conviction under, held, involves moral turpitude — Hence where such conviction attained finality, although the amount of fine imposed was below Rs 2000, dismissal of the convict-worker from service, held, proper — Supreme Court's suggestion in Pawan Kumar case for making provision for not treating the punishment of fine up to Rs 2000 or so as conviction for entry and retention in government service not applicable to such a case — However, order of the Division Bench of the High Court modifying the order of dismissal to one of discharge with payment of gratuity left undisturbed — Further held, the Single Judge had erred in directing the reference under the ID Act for adjudication of the dismissal — Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, S. 10. J. Jaishankar v. Govt. of India, (1996) 6 SCC 204: 1996 SCC (L&S) 1372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-1996]

Pawan Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1996) 4 SCC 17: 1996 SCC (Cri) 583, distinguished

— S. 511 See also Ss. 57 and Ss. 65, 116, 119, 129 and 511

See also Ss. 302, 376 and 511

See also Ss. 347, 161, 167, 385 and 511

See also Ss. 354 and 511

See also Ss. 375, 376 and 511

See also Ss. 376, 506 and 511

See also Ss. 376 and 511

See also Ss. 376 and 511 or S. 354

See also Ss. 376, 511, 363 and 366

See also Ss. 376, 511, 451 and 354

See also Ss. 376 r/w Ss. 302 and 511

See also Ss. 376(2)(f) and 511

See also Ss. 409 and 511

See also Ss. 420, 471, 474, 467, 468, 417 and 511

See also Ss. 498-A Expln. (a) and 511

[11086] — S. 511 — An attempt in order to be criminal need not be the penultimate act. Lachman Singh v. State of Haryana, (2006) 10 SCC 524: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 123: AIR 2006 SC 2763: 2006 Cri LJ 4041.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L. S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2006]

Sarju Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1965 SC 843: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 766; State of Maharashtra v. Balram Bama Patil, (1983) 2 SCC 28: 1983 SCC (Cri) 320; Girija Shankar v. State of U.P., (2004) 3 SCC 793: 2004 SCC (Cri) 863; Vasant Vithu Jadhav v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 9 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1323; State of M.P. v. Saleem, (2005) 5 SCC 554: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1329, relied on

[11087] — S. 511 — Attempt — Smuggling of currency notes outside India

H and G were seen carrying a tin box near the Pakistan border on September 25, 1961 at a little distance from the village Valtoha, when a customs-cum-police raiding party reached there. H and G, having noticed the raiding party, turned round and started running towards the house of H. The raiding party entered the house and caught H and G in the act of concealing the box in a heap of wheat. In the tin box was found a sum of Rs 1,40,000 in 14 bundles of currency notes of Rs 100 each. H made a confessional statement. The Collector of Customs convicted the accused under S. 8(2), read with Ss. 23-A and 23-B of the Act and ordered the confiscation of the offending currency notes. He also imposed a penalty of Rs 5000 on H and Rs 500 on G, on the finding that the currency notes were clearly attempted to be exported illegally out of India.

Held, no doubt the appellant's contention was that his village was 10 miles away from the border but that fact was immaterial as long as other circumstances prove that an attempt had been made to smuggle out the currency.

There is ample independent evidence in this case that H, the appellant and G were seen together going towards the border with a tin case in their hands and when they saw the nakabandi they immediately turned round and ran away; they were chased into the house of the appellant where they found the appellant secreting the tin box in the heap of wheat in his house. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt by the appellant and G to smuggle the currency notes. Hazara Singh v. Union of India, (1973) 3 SCC 401: 1973 SCC (Cri) 312: AIR 1973 SC 62: 1974 Cri LJ 391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-1972]

[11088] — S. 511 — Attempt and preparation — Distinction

There is a thin line between the preparation for and an attempt to commit an offence. Undoubtedly, a culprit first intends to commit the offence, then makes preparation for committing it and thereafter attempts to commit the offence. If the attempt succeeds, he has committed the offence; if he fails due to reasons beyond his control, he is said to have attempted to commit the offence. Attempt to commit an offence, therefore, can be said to begin when the preparations are complete and the culprit commences to do something with the intention of committing the offence and which is a step towards the commission of the offence. The moment he commences to do an act with the necessary intention, he commences his attempt to commit the offence.

A person commits the offence of "attempt to commit a particular offence" when (i) he intends to commit that particular offence; and (ii) he, having made preparations and with the intention to commit the offence, does an act towards its commission; such an act need not be the penultimate act towards the commission of that offence but must be an act during the course of committing that offence. Abhayanand Mishra v. State of Bihar, AIR 1961 SC 1698: (1962) 2 SCR 241: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 822, 824.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1961]

In re Mac Crea, ILR 15 All 173; Queen v. Peterson, ILR 1 All 316; R. v. Padala Venkatasami, ILR 3 Mad 4: 1 Weir 543, approved

In re Riasat Ali, ILR 7 Cal 352: 8 Cal LR 752, In re Amrita Bazar Patrika Press, AIR 1920 Cal 478: 21 Cri LJ 98 and Queen v. Ramsarun Chowley, 4 NWP 46: 26 LJMC 134, overruled

In re Munirathamma Reddi, AIR 1955 Andb 118; 1955 Cri LJ 917, Limited

AIR 1959 Pat 328, affirmed

R. v. M'Pherson 1857 Dears & B 197 and R. v. Collins, (1864) 9 Coc. 497, dissented

Affirmed and applied in (1974) 3 SCC 357: 1973 SCC (Cri) 1007

[11089] — S. 511 — Attempt and preparation — Stages in commission of crime reiterated

There are different stages in a crime. First, the intention to commit it; second, the preparation to commit it; third, an attempt to commit it. If at the third stage, the attempt fails, the crime is not complete but the law punishes for attempting the same. An attempt to commit crime must be distinguished from an intent to commit it or preparation of its commission. (Para 6). Sagayam v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 4 SCC 454: 2000 SCC (Cri) 819: AIR 2000 SC 2161: 2000 Cri LJ 3182.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2000]

[11090] — S. 511 — "Attempt at evasion of any duty" — "Attempt" what constitutes — Compared with "preparation" — On facts, "proved" that the accused attempted to export silver out of India by sea in contravention of FERA, 1973, Imports & Exports (Control) Act, 1947 and Customs Act, 1962 thus constituting offence within Section 135(1)(a) — Proof may be by direct evidence or by circumstantial evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 3 — Customs Act, 1962, S. 135(1)(a)

At about midnight a jeep, driven by Respondent 1, and a truck stopped near a bridge at a creek and while the accused started removing some bundles from the truck and placing them aside on the ground, the customs officers who were following them on the basis of definite information, rushed to the spot and accosted the persons present there. At the same time, the sound of the engine of a mechanised seacraft from the side of the creek was heard by the officers. Thereafter, two residents of the area were called for and in their presence silver ingots were recovered from the two vehicles. Some ingots were also found near the footpath leading to the creek. From the personal search of Respondent 1, a pistol, a knife and currency notes were found. On questioning he gave false name and address. It was found that the accused were not dealers in silver. The trial Court convicted the accused under S. 135(1)(a) read with S. 135(2) of the Customs Act for attempting to smuggle out of India silver ingots worth about Rs 8 lakhs in violation of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, the Imports and Exports (Control) Act and the Customs Act. But the Additional Sessions Judge acquitted them on the ground that the facts proved by the prosecution fell short of establishing that the accused had 'attempted' to export silver in contravention of the law. The High Court upheld the acquittal.

Held :

Per Sarkaria, J.

What constitutes an attempt is a mixed question of law and fact, depending largely on the circumstances of the particular case. Attempt defies a precise and exact definition. There is a distinction between 'preparation' and 'attempt'. Attempt begins where preparation ends. Broadly speaking, all crimes which consist of the commission of affirmative acts are preceded by some covert or overt conduct which may be divided into three stages. The first stage exists when the culprit first entertains the idea or intention to commit an offence. In the second stage, he makes preparations to commit it. The third stage is reached when the culprit takes deliberate overt steps to commit the offence. Such over act or step in order to be 'criminal' need not be the penultimate act towards the commission of the offence. It is sufficient if such act or acts were deliberately done, and manifest a clear intention to commit the offence aimed, being reasonably proximate to the consummation of the offence. Such act must be an act during the course of committing that offence.

The penal provisions in the present case have been enacted to suppress the evil of smuggling precious metal out of India. Therefore, these provisions should be construed in a manner which would suppress the mischief, promote their object, prevent their subtle evasion and foil their artful circumvention. A narrow interpretation of the word "attempt", therefore, in these penal provisions, which will impair their efficacy as instruments for combating this baneful activity, has to be eschewed.

Thus construed, the expression "attempt" within the meaning of these penal provisions is wide enough to take in its fold any one or series of acts committed, beyond the stage of preparation in moving the contraband goods deliberately to the place of embarkation, such act or acts being reasonably proximate to the completion of the unlawful export. In the present case, beyond the stage of preparation, most of the steps necessary in the course of export by sea, had been taken. The only step that remained to be taken towards the export of the silver was to load it on a seacraft for moving out of the territorial waters of India. But for the intervention of the officers of law, the unlawful export of silver would have been consummated. The clandestine disappearance of the seacraft when the officers intercepted and rounded up the vehicles and the accused at the creek, reinforces the inference that the accused had deliberately attempted to export silver by sea in contravention of law.

The definition of 'proved' in S. 3, Evidence Act does not draw any distinction between circumstantial evidence and other evidence. The circumstances in the present case established such a high degree of probability that a prudent man ought to act on the supposition that the respondents were attempting to export silver from India in contravention of law. The circumstances are, therefore, sufficient proof of that fact in issue.

Accused-Respondent 1, is sentenced to suffer one year's rigorous imprisonment with a fine of Rs 2000 and, in default, to suffer six months' further rigorous imprisonment. Accused-Respondents 2 and 3 (the drivers and cleaners of the truck), are each sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment with a fine of Rs 500 and, in default to suffer two months' further rigorous imprisonment.

Per Chinnappa Reddy, J. (concurring)

In order to constitute 'an attempt' first, there must be an intention to commit a particular offence, second, some act must have been done which would necessarily have to be done towards the commission of the offence, and, third, such act must be proximate to the intended result. The measure of opportunity is not in relation to time and action but in relation to intention. In other words, the act must reveal, with reasonable certainty, in conjunction with other facts and circumstances and not necessarily in isolation, an intention, as distinguished from a mere desire or object to commit the particular offence, though the act by itself may be merely suggestive or indicative of such intention, but that it must be, that is, it must be indicative or suggestive of the intention.

The fact that the truck was driven up to a lonely creek from where the silver could be transferred into a sea-faring vessel was suggestive or indicative, though not conclusively, that the accused wanted to export the silver. It might have been open to the accused to plead that the silver was not to be exported but only to be transported in the course of inter-coastal trade. But, the circumstance that all this was done in a clandestine fashion, at dead of night, revealed, with reasonable certainty, the intention of the accused that the silver was to be exported. State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Yakub, (1980) 3 SCC 57: 1980 SCC (Cri) 513: AIR 1980 SC 1111: 1980 Cri LJ 793: 1980 Cri LR (SC) 251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria[1] and O. Chinnappa Reddy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1980]

[11091] — S. 511 — Attempt or preparation — Export of fertiliser bags from M.P. to Maharashtra without a valid permit — Trucks intercepted at sales tax barriers in M.P. eighteen miles from Maharashtra border — Invoices and other records seized from truck drivers confirming the despatch — Held it was a case of attempt to export fertilisers and not merely a preparation — Fertilizers (Movement Control) Order, 1973 — Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Ss. 7 and 3

In these cases two trucks carrying fertilisers without a valid permit were proceeding from Indore (MP) to Maharashtra. They were intercepted at sales tax barriers situate at a distance of 18 miles from the border of Maharashtra State. The documents seized from the truck drivers contained invoices and other records but they did not include a permit issued under the Fertilizers (Movement Control) Order, 1973. Consequently, the truck drivers, the cleaners and the coolies were prosecuted under the Fertilisers (Movement Control) Order, 1973 read with Ss. 3 and 7 of the Essential Commodities Act. In both the cases, the trial Magistrate held that the prosecution had failed to prove that the accused were attempting to export the fertilisers and he therefore acquitted them. On the State preferring appeals against acquittal under S. 378(3) CrPC, the High Court declined to grant leave.

Held :

In the commission of an offence there are four stages viz. intention, preparation, attempt and execution. The first two stages would not attract culpability but the third and fourth stages would certainly attract culpability. The respondents in each case were actually caught in the act of exporting fertiliser bags without a permit therefor from Madhya Pradesh to Maharashtra. If the interception had not taken place, the export would have become a completed act and the fertiliser bags would have been successfully taken to Maharashtra State in contravention of Fertiliser (Movement Control) Order. It was not therefore, a case of mere preparation viz. the respondents trying to procure fertiliser bags from someone or trying to engage a lorry for taking those bags to Maharashtra. They were cases where the bags had been procured and were being taken in the lorries under cover of sales invoices for being delivered to the consignees and the lorries would have entered the Maharashtra border but for their interception at the sales tax barrier. Surely, no one can say that the respondents were taking the lorries with the fertiliser bags in them for innocuous purposes or for mere thrill or amusement and that they would have stopped well ahead of the border and taken back the lorries and the fertiliser bags to the initial place of despatch or to some other place in Madhya Pradesh State itself. They were therefore clearly cases of attempted unlawful export of the fertiliser bags and not cases of mere preparation alone. State of M.P. v. Narayan Singh, (1989) 3 SCC 596: 1989 SCC (Cri) 670: AIR 1989 SC 1789. Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1989]

[11092] — S. 511 — "Attempt to commit an offence" — Meaning — Distinguished from "intention to commit an offence" and "preparation to commit an offence" — When does the said attempt commence, explained

In every crime, there is first, intention to commit, secondly, preparation to commit it, thirdly, attempt to commit it. Thus, a culprit first intends to commit the offence, then makes preparation for committing it and thereafter attempts to commit the offence. If the attempt succeeds, he has committed the offence; if it fails due to reasons beyond his control, he is said to have attempted to commit the offence. (Para 9)

An attempt to commit an offence is an act, or a series of acts, which leads inevitably to the commission of the offence, unless something, which the doer of the act neither foresaw nor intended, happens to prevent this. An attempt may be described to be an act done in part-execution of a criminal design, amounting to more than mere preparation, but falling short of actual consummation, and, possessing, except for failure to consummate, all the elements of the substantive crime. In other words, an attempt consists in it the intent to commit a crime, falling short of, its actual commission. It may consequently be defined as that which if not prevented would have resulted in the full consummation of the act attempted. (Para 10)

An attempt to commit a crime is to be distinguished from an intention to commit it, and from preparation made for its commission. Mere intention to commit an offence, not followed by any act, cannot constitute an offence. The will is not to be taken for the deed unless there be some external act which shows that progress has been made in the direction of it, or towards maturing and effecting it. Intention is the direction of conduct towards the object chosen upon considering the motives which suggest the choice. Preparation consists in devising or arranging the means or measures necessary for the commission of the offence. It differs widely from attempt which is the direct movement towards the commission after preparations are made. Preparation to commit an offence is punishable only when the preparation is to commit offences under Section 122 IPC (waging war against the Government of India) and Section 399 IPC (preparation to commit dacoity). The dividing line between a mere preparation and an attempt is sometimes thin and has to be decided on the facts of each case. There is a greater degree of determination in attempt as compared with preparation. The illustrations given in Section 511 clearly show the legislative intention to make a difference between the cases of a mere preparation and an attempt. (Paras 9 and 10)

Thus, an attempt to commit an offence can be said to begin when the preparations are complete and the culprit commences to do something with the intention of committing the offence and which is a step towards the commission of the offence. The moment he commences to do an act with the necessary intention, he commences his attempt to commit the offence. (Para 9). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[11093] — S. 511 — Attempt to commit an offence — Why made punishable — Explained

Section 511 is a general provision dealing with attempts to commit offences not made punishable by other specific sections. It makes punishable all attempts to commit offences punishable with imprisonment and not only those punishable with death. (Para 8)

An attempt is made punishable, because every attempt, although it falls short of success, must create alarm, which by itself is an injury, and the moral guilt of the offender is the same as if he had succeeded. Moral guilt must be united to injury in order to justify punishment. As the injury is not as great as if the act had been committed, only half the punishment is awarded. (Para 8). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[11094] — S. 511 — "Attempt to commit an offence" — Why made punishable — Explained

Section 511 makes punishable all attempts to commit offences punishable with imprisonment and not only those punishable with death. An attempt is made punishable, because every attempt, although it falls short of success, must create alarm, which by itself is an injury, and the moral guilt of the offender is the same as if he had succeeded. Moral guilt must be united to injury in order to justify punishment. As the injury is not as great as if the act had been committed, only half the punishment is awarded. (Para 8). Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 3 SCC 602: 2004 SCC (Cri) 840: AIR 2004 SC 1874: 2004 Cri LJ 1804.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2004]

[11095] — S. 511 — "Attempt" to commit crime — Meaning — When does the said attempt commence — "Attempt" to commit crime distinguished from "intention" to commit crime and "preparation" to commit crime

In every crime, there is firstly, an intention to commit, secondly, preparation to commit it, and thirdly, attempt to commit it. Thus, a culprit first intends to commit the offence, then makes preparation for committing it and thereafter attempts to commit the offence. If the attempt succeeds, he has committed the offence; if it fails due to reasons beyond his control, he is said to have attempted to commit the offence. (Paras 8 and 9)

An attempt to commit an offence is an act, or a series of acts, which leads inevitably to the commission of the offence, unless something, which the doer of the act neither foresaw nor intended, happens to prevent this. An attempt may be described to be an act done in part-execution of a criminal design, amounting to more than mere preparation, but falling short of actual consummation, and, possessing, except for failure to consummate, all the elements of the substantive crime. In other words, an attempt consists in it the intent to commit a crime, falling short of, its actual commission or consummation/completion. It may consequently be defined as that which if not prevented would have resulted in the full consummation of the act attempted. (Para 10)

Thus, an attempt to commit an offence can be said to begin when the preparations are complete and the culprit commences to do something with the intention of committing the offence and which is a step towards the commission of the offence. The moment he commences to do an act with the necessary intention, he commences his attempt to commit the offence. (Para 9)

An attempt to commit a crime is to be distinguished from an intention to commit it; and from preparation made for its commission. Mere intention to commit an offence, not followed by any act, cannot constitute an offence. The will is not to be taken for the deed unless there be some external act which shows that progress has been made in the direction of it, or towards maturing and effecting it. Intention is the direction of conduct towards the object chosen upon considering the motives which suggest the choice. Preparation consists in devising or arranging the means or measures necessary for the commission of the offence. It differs widely from attempt which is the direct movement towards the commission after preparations are made. Preparation to commit an offence is punishable only when the preparation is to commit offences under Section 122 IPC (waging war against the Government of India) and Section 399 IPC (preparation to commit dacoity). The dividing line between a mere preparation and an attempt is sometimes thin and has to be decided on the facts of each case. There is a greater degree of determination in attempt as compared with preparation. The illustrations given in Section 511 clearly show the legislative intention to make a difference between the cases of a mere preparation and an attempt. (Paras 9 and 10). Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 3 SCC 602: 2004 SCC (Cri) 840: AIR 2004 SC 1874: 2004 Cri LJ 1804.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2004]

[11096] — S. 511 — Conditions for applicability of S. 511 — "Attempt" to commit an offence is an essential condition — When the attempt itself constitutes an offence under IPC, S. 511 is not attracted

Section 511 makes attempt to commit an offence punishable. The offence attempted should be one punishable by the Code with imprisonment. The conditions stipulated in the provision for completion of the said offence are: (1) The offender should have done some act towards commission of the main offence. (2) Such an attempt is not expressly covered as a penal provision elsewhere in the Code. Thus, "attempt" on the part of the accused is the sine qua non for the offence under Section 511. (Paras 10 and 11)

In this case the act attributed to the appellants was that they asked the victim PW 5 to go to the rail track and commit suicide and that act was alleged to have driven her to proceed to the railway line on the next morning to be run over by the train. This act is expressly made punishable under Section 498-A IPC. That being so, the act involved therein stands lifted out of the purview of Section 511 IPC. The very policy underlying Section 511 seems to be for providing it as a residuary provision. The corollary, therefore, is that the accused, in this case, cannot be convicted under Section 511 on account of the acts alleged against him. (Para 12). Satvir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2001) 8 SCC 633: 2002 SCC (Cri) 48: AIR 2001 SC 2828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-2001]

[11097] — S. 511 — Conviction for attempt to commit the main offence, though not charged — Applicability — Conviction for attempt to commit offence although attempt not separately charged — Maintainability — Held, settled legal position is that if accused is charged of a major offence, but is not found guilty thereunder, he can be convicted of minor offence, if facts established indicate that such minor offence was committed — When a person is charged for an offence, he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence, although attempt is not separately charged — In the instant case, if it appeared to Court that S. 376 IPC was not applicable but a lesser offence under S. 376 r/w S. 511 IPC was made out, the Court was not prevented from taking recourse to and punishing accused for commission of such lesser offence — CrPC, 1973, S. 222 (Paras 17, 18 and 20). Pandharinath v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 14 SCC 537: (2009) 80 AIC 240 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: 1998 SCC (Cri)) 76; Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar, (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556; Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358, relied on

[11098] — S. 511 — Preparation and attempt — Attempt to cheat — Accused making false representation to complainant that he could duplicate currency notes — Complainant delivering currency notes to accused — Held, offence of attempt to cheat complete

In fact the making of the false representation is one of the ingredients for an offence of cheating under S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. So also the delivery of property is another of such ingredients. Both these ingredients took place in this case and the accused brought them about. Therefore it cannot be said that the accused had only made a preparation and not an attempt to commit the offence. Bashirbhai Mohamedbhai v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 979: (1960) 3 SCR 554: 1960 Cri LJ 1383, 1384: 62 Bom LR 908.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and A.K. Sarkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1960]

[11099] — S. 511 — R. 2(3) and R. 3 read with Ss. 20 and 29 of A.P. Forest Act, 1967 — 'Forest produce in transit' — Meaning of — Loading of 28 logs of red sanderswood and storage of 118 red sanderswood on the road margin for loading into the lorry covered — Distinction between preparation and completion of the act of forest offence bears no relevance — In absence of any permit issued by the competent authority, persons found in possession of such sanderswood rightly convicted by the trial court under R. 3 read with Ss. 20 and 29 — Confiscation of lorry also upheld — Forest Act, 1927, Ss. 26 and 41. State of A.P. — Andhra Pradesh Sandalwood and Red Sanderswood Transit Rules, 1969, R. 2(3) and R. 3 read with Ss. 20 and 29 of A.P. Forest Act, 1967. State of A.P. v. Korrapati Subrahmanyam, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 483: 1995 SCC (Cri) 400: AIR 1995 SC 961.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.C. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-1995]

Chennupati Vazeer v. State of A.P., (1980) 2 Andh LT 391, overruled

Govt. of A.P. v. C. Satyanarayana Raju, (1993) 1 Andh LT 147, approved

[11100] — Ss. 511 and 420 — Attempt and preparation — On facts, held, the case to be one of attempt to cheat and not of mere preparation

The appellant was an employee in charge of soda lime department of a company and co-appellant was the supplier of limestone to the said firm. Four bags of limestone were needed every day. The procedure in respect of the supply was that the co-appellant used to bring the bags to the appellant and present a challan to him. Thereupon he would send the challan to P.W. 2, who used to initial it and send it back to the appellant. Thereupon he would put a seal on it as also his signature and the co-appellant would present that challan to the concerned department and receive payment for the supply made.

The Managing Director of the company had heard certain complaints that the appellant was in the habit of signing the challan without actually receiving the goods. He therefore asked P.W. 2 to make a physical verification of the limestone to be received on March 4, 1968. On that day the appellant sent the challan to P.W. 2 for his signature through P.W. 3. P.W. 2 initialled it and went down to verify the stock. As the four bags of limestone were not there he asked the appellant who stated that the quantity received had been spent. On questioning, he changed his statement and said that he might have signed the challan through mistake. The co-appellant was then sent for and he denied having received any challan or having made any supply of limestone on that day. But when he was told that he would be sent to the police, he produced the challan which bore P.W. 2's initials. On these facts the prosecution was instituted and the conviction and sentence imposed.

Held, in the present case the challan had been prepared and the initials of P.W. 2 obtained. That was a most important and crucial step towards cheating. Towards this end both the accused cooperated. Thereafter it only remained for the appellant to affix the stamp and put his signature. Co-appellant could then have presented it to the company's office and received payment. This is a definite step towards the commission of the offence of cheating though it is not the penultimate step. The acts of the accused did not stop at the stage of preparation but had reached the stage of attempt. Sudhir Kumar Mukherjee v. State of W.B., (1974) 3 SCC 357: 1973 SCC (Cri) 1007: AIR 1973 SC 2655: 1973 Cri LJ 1798.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and A. Alagiriswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1973]

[11101] — Ss. 511/201 — Attempt to cause disappearance of evidence by issuing a false death certificate to facilitate cremation — Accused, a doctor, issuing two death certificates — One showing doubt about cause of death and other disclosing a false cause of death — False certificate allegedly issued after dead body had been sent for post-mortem and a case of murder registered against the husband of the deceased — No evidence to show that such false certificate was used for facilitating the cremation or issued earlier — Held, even assuming that the false certificate had been issued by the accused, no case of attempt to commit an offence under S. 201 made out. Balai Chandra Biswas v. State of W.B., (1994) 1 SCC 423: 1994 SCC (Cri) 536: AIR 1994 SC 914: 1994 Cri LJ 1035.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1993]

— Ss. 511/376 See also Ss. 302 and 511/376

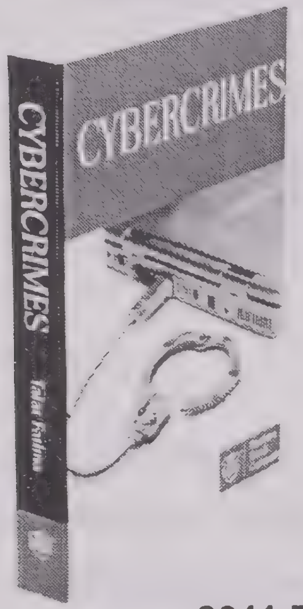
END OF VOLUME 3

Purchased:
Approval: WAP
Gratis:
Acc No.: 027190
Price: 2600
"Narayan Rao Melgiri"
National Law Library
Bangalore

Just Released



CYBERCRIMES

Dr. Talat Fatima

2011 Edition
Price: ₹ 495

The present book • highlights the novel problems faced by the legal world in this cyber age; • identifies criminal infractions online; • explores the legal issues and measures for the arraignment of cyber criminals; and • analyses the legal complexities associated with the presence of foreign elements in a global cybercrimes scenario.

It covers current topics and challenges, such as, SMS-spoofing, hacking by Trojan Horse, Logic Bomb; threat to privacy by Cookies, Web bug, Veri-Chip, spyware; and liability of intermediaries, ISPs, corporations for violation of privacy, obscenity, theft, etc.; and misuse of Electronic signatures etc.

Statutes covered in the book include:

Indian

- Criminal Procedural Code, 1973
- Evidence Act, 1872
- Indian Penal Code, 1860
- Information Technology Act, 2000, as amended by the Information Technology Act, 2008

UK

- Computer Misuse Act, 1990
- Forgery and Counterfeiting Act, 1981
- Obscene Publications Act, 1959
- Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984
- Regulation of Investigatory Power Act, 2000

US

- Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, 1986
- Digital Millennium Copyright Act, 1998
- Electronic Communications Privacy Act, 1986

Price quoted herein is subject to change without prior notice.

EBC Eastern Book Company®

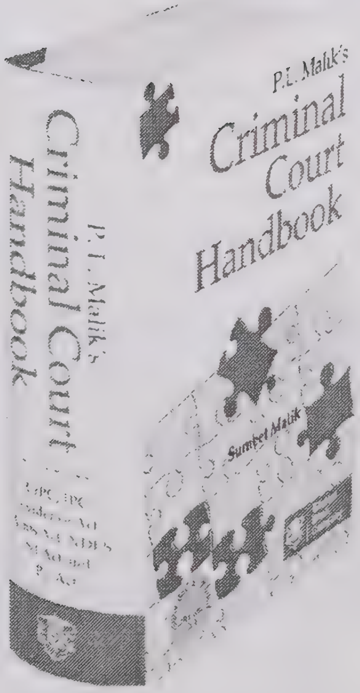
For details please call us:
Customer helpline: 0522-4033601
General: 0522-4033600 (30 lines), 4033666 (30 lines)
Fax: 0522-4033633 | Email us at: sales@ebc-india.com
Mail us at: 34, Lalbagh, Lucknow-226001
Buy online at: http://www.ebcwebstore.com

An Unparalleled, Classic Work with NEW IMPORTANT AMENDMENT!

P.L. Malik's

Criminal Court Handbook

Sumeet Malik



20th Edition, 2011
Price: ₹ 990

Malik's Criminal Court Handbook has always enjoyed a special place among legal classics. Thorough and dependable, it contains a wealth of material on the three major Acts. The book also includes the Arms Act, 1959; Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988; Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 and relevant extracts of Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. The book has been thoroughly updated and amended upto the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2010 [Act 41 of 2010].

Reviews

"The compiler has taken much pains and every care to make the work useful to the legal profession and that one would be proud of having it in his library." – All India Reporter

"The discussion throughout is clear, lucid and brief. This is an immensely useful reference book and guide to all those who deal with this subject especially to the Bar and the Bench as well as to the Police administration." – Kerala Law Times

Price quoted herein is subject to change without prior notice.

Eastern Book Company®

For details please call us:
Customer helpline: 0522-4033601
General: 0522-4033600 (30 lines), 4033666 (30 lines)
Fax: 0522-4033633 | Email us at: sales@ebc-india.com
Mail us at: 34, Lalbagh, Lucknow-226001
Buy online at: http://www.ebcwebstore.com

SUPREME COURT ON

NARCOTICS AND DRUGS

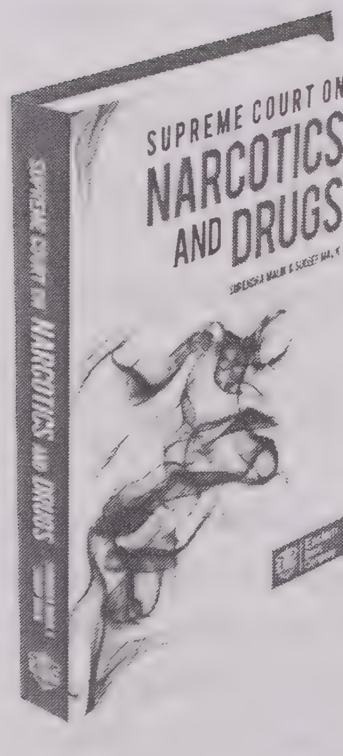
SURENDRA MALIK & SUDEEP MALIK

Supreme Court case law on Narcotics and Drugs from 1950 till date with complete statutory law and rules on the subject

The Digest provides the most comprehensive, analytical and systematic coverage of the entire case law laid down by the Supreme Court on the subject. The complete text of the NDPS Act, 1985 and NDPS Rules, 1985 has also been included.

The Digest follows the arrangement of the widely accepted and used SCC index system. Rulings are systematically placed under both topic and statutory headings. Annotations, Bench strength and cross-references are also provided. Synopses, Digest notes and docket numbers are given to further facilitate research.

The Digest will be indispensable to Judges, Lawyers, Law Firms, Government departments, Pharmaceutical Manufacturers, FDA departments, Drug Controller, Drug Inspectors, Medical Health Departments etc.



2011 Edition
Price: ₹ 750

Price quoted herein is subject to change without prior notice.

EBC Eastern Book Company®

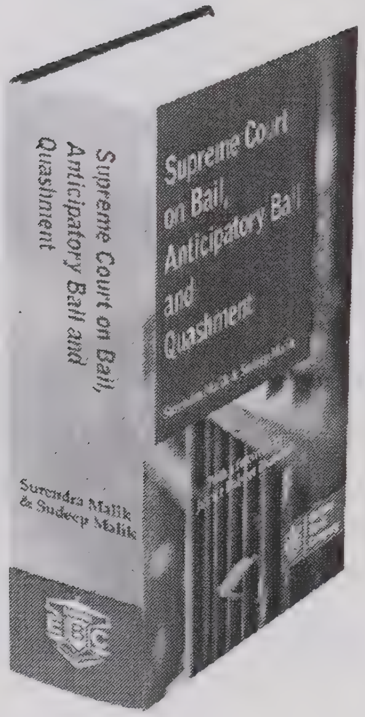
For details please call us:
Customer helpline: 0522-4033601
General: 0522-4033600 (30 lines), 4033666 (30 lines)
Fax: 0522-4033633 | Email us at: sales@ebc-india.com
Mail us at: 34, Lalbagh, Lucknow-226001
Buy online at: http://www.ebcwebstore.com

Supreme Court on

Bail, Anticipatory Bail and Quashment

Surendra Malik & Sudeep Malik

Foreword by
Hon'ble Mr. Justice Dalveer Bhandari
Judge, Supreme Court of India



2011 Edn., R/P 2011
Price: ₹ 1150

The Digest contains the entire case law of the Supreme Court since 1950 on the subject under the following provisions:

- Main CrPC provisions relating to Bail, Anticipatory Bail and Quashment i.e. Ss. 437 to 439 and 483, CrPC
- Allied CrPC provisions on the subject such as S.167 CrPC, etc.
- Special Bail provisions under NDPS Act, TADA, POTA, FERA, etc.

The Digest follows the arrangement of time tested Supreme Court Cases Index system. An addendum brings the case law covered up-to-date. The book includes complete text of the two leading judgments on the subject, namely 1) Shri Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 565 and 2) Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre v. State of Maharashtra, (2011) 1 SCC 694.

Price quoted herein is subject to change without prior notice.

Eastern Book Company®

For details please call us:
Customer helpline: 0522-4033601
General: 0522-4033600 (30 lines), 4033666 (30 lines
Fax: 0522-4033633 | Email us at: sales@ebc-india.c
Mail us at: 34, Lalbagh, Lucknow-226001
Buy online at: http://www.ebcwebstore.com

NATIONAL LAW SCHOOL OF INDIA
UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
NAGARABHAVI, BANGALORE - 560 072.
This book must be returned by the date stamped below

T830
11/6/11

19/5/2014
1955

P.T.O.

Subscribe Now!

Supreme Court Cases™
(Criminal)

Supreme Court Cases™ (Cri) provides extensive coverage of all reportable and non-reportable cases of the Supreme Court of India on criminal matters, including many cases not reported elsewhere. Supreme Court Cases™ (Cri) is widely regarded by both practitioners and academics as the most reliable source of reference for Supreme Court criminal cases.

Chief Editor:

Surendra Malik

M. (Columbia), Gold Medallist,
e, Supreme Court

ual Subscription for 2012

ok Post† .. ₹ 1625
d. Post .. ₹ 1829

by Book-Post is at subscriber's risk

umes Available

1970 to 2010 and
011 (in 64 volumes)
on request

Prices are subject to change without prior notice.

Cl. No. 345.54 MAL-III
Author MALIK

345.54
MAL-III

027190

SUPREME COURT DIGEST SERIES

Supreme Court on Criminal Procedure Code & Criminal Trial in 3 large volumes
2011 Edition | ₹ 4500 per set

Supreme Court on Contract and Specific Relief
in 3 volumes
Vols. 1 & 2 – 2009 Edn. | ₹ 900 each
Vol. 3 – 2011 Edition | ₹ 750

Supreme Court on Consumer Protection
in 2 volumes
Surendra Malik & Sudeep Malik
Vol. 1 – 2009 Edition | ₹ 750
Vol. 2 – 2011 Edition | ₹ 750

Supreme Court on Contempt of Court
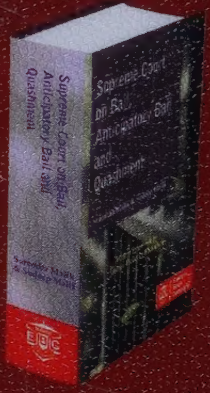
in 2 volumes
Surendra Malik & Sudeep Malik
Vol. 1 – 2009 Edition | ₹ 775
Vol. 2 – 2011 Edition | ₹ 425



Supreme Court on
Bail, Anticipatory Bail and Quashment
Surendra Malik & Sudeep Malik
2011 Edition, R/P 2011 | ₹ 1150

Supreme Court on
OBC Reservation
Ashok Kumar Thakur v. Union of India
Surendra Malik & Sudeep Malik
2008 Edition | ₹ 650

Supreme Court on Arbitration
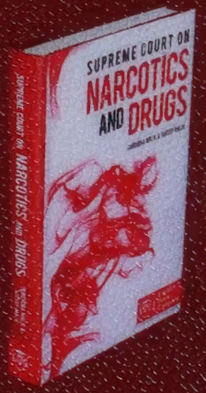
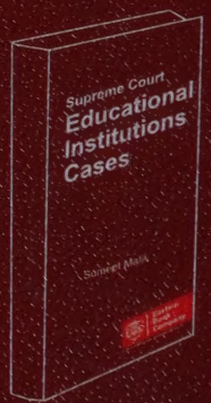
Surendra Malik
2001 Edn. W/S 2003 | ₹ 625



Supreme Court on
Narcotics and Drugs
Surendra Malik & Sudeep Malik
2011 Edition | ₹ 750



Supreme Court
Educational Institutions Cases
in 3 volumes
Sumeet Malik
9th Edition, 2012 | In Press

Eastern Book Company
India's leading law information provider

ebcwebstore.com
The largest number of legal titles online!

ISBN: 93-5028-242-9
EAN
AB/242
9 789350 282427